Samples of commercially packed ripe olives of the Manzanillo variety were recently tested in a series of feeding experiments by the bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture. The growth of the 50 laboratory animals given these olives as a part of their regular diet indicated that they were receiving an abundance of vitamin A. This is the vitamin essential for growth and well being at all ages, for successful reproduction, and for resisting bacterial infection.

Food for the Family Table

By NELLIE MAXWELL

While fresh eggs are plentiful and reasonable in price, the angel cake is more often served.

For those who enjoy a delicate cake, not too sweet, the angel food is the most popular. It is a cake which may be given to children freely, and sponge cake is another. Angel Food.—Sift one cup of pastry flour three times with one-eighth of a teaspoonful of cream of tartar. Measure one cupful of egg whites and one cupful of sugar. Add a pinch of salt to the egg white and one-eighth of a teaspoonful of cream of tartar, beat them until stiff but not dry, add the sugar, a very little at a time, flavor with a teaspoonful of vanilla and fold in the sifted flour and cream of tartar in the same way. Pour into an ungreased tube pan, place in a slow oven and bake at least an hour and a half. The secret of the texture and tenderness of the cake is in the baking. When baked it should be light and almost like an omelet in tenderness.

Melba Pastry.—Take one cupful of oven-dried crumbs, when a golden brown put through a food chopper. Mix well with one-third of a cupful of sugar, one teaspoonful of cinnamon and four tablespoonfuls of butter. Line a large pie plate with the mixture and bake in a slow oven for 20 minutes. Allow the crust to cool, then pour in the cooled filling.

Banana Custard.—Slice three ripe bananas. Cook two beaten eggs, one-fourth cupful of cake crumbs and one cupful of milk two minutes or until the custard lightly coats the spoon. Add two teaspoonfuls of lemon rind and stir in the bananas. Pour into a greased baking dish, set in a pan of hot water and bake until the pudding is set. Cover with a meringue and brown.

Gooseberry Pie.—Cover two cupfuls of gooseberries with cold water, heat to the boiling point and drain at once. Cool, add one cupful of sugar, two tablespoonfuls of flour well blended with it, a pinch of salt. Put into a lined pastry tin, dot with bits of butter, cover with another crust and bake in a hot oven at first, then reduce the heat and bake for about 35 minutes. A very pretty as well as an appetizing dessert may be prepared by slicing jelly roll and placing a rose of whipped cream, sweetened and flavored, piped in the center with a pastry tube.

The personality in food is supplied in various ways, first its appearance, next its taste, then, of course, its food value, which appeals to the calorie counter. When food is dull, lacking in color, tasteless, is insipid, look to the little spanish pepper to give zest to your dishes.

The flavor of the pimiento is not its only attraction; the color adds brilliance to an otherwise dull dish. The little pepper comes packed in several sizes so that if one serves two, a small bottle is provided, and when it is to be the chief ingredient there is the seven-once can. For stuffing, one may use any desired mixture. The peppers should be drained, placed in muffin pans, and they are ready to be filled.

Pimientos Stuffed, With Mushroom Sauce.—Cook one small onion (chopped), one stalk of celery also chopped in two tablespoonfuls of fat beat and bake for about 35 minutes.

up at her fine Nebula—the Great Andromeda Nebula it is called.

"But I've got away from my subject! I was going to tell you about Algal."

"Yes, with all his queer names."

"Algal, and some other little stars nearby, make up the Medusa's head which I carried in my hand when I rescued the fair Andromeda. But Algal improved after he got up in the sky."

"Have you time to hear another little story about me?"

"I'm sure I have." Cosmo was asleep and Harry was anxious to hear all he could from this interesting Perseus.

"That said that I made the Milky Way when I stirred up so much star dust in the heavens in my hurry to perform the deeds I had set out to do."

"The brave deeds, you mean."

Perseus smiled. "I'd rather the praise come from some one else and not from me. Of course the story that I made the Milky Way is nothing more than a fanciful story, but it is a pleasing one for me to tell."

"I don't want you to think I'm contented so I'll talk some more about Algal. I don't want you to have a bad idea of him. Nor do I want you to feel sorry for him. He has a companion and they have an excellent time traveling around. Sometimes he is brighter than his companion and sometimes his companion is brighter than he is."

"That's the way it is with humans, too," Harry told Perseus.

"Well, one of the reasons Algal was given such a bad reputation was because he is a winking star, and the Arabians thought winking was very, very shocking."

"Oh, Cosmo is awake now!"

do you know that I fell right in love with Andromeda when I saw her? I flashed the head of Medusa in front of the sea monster who was just reaching for her so that he was turned to stone. Then I took Andromeda away with me, and here we live in the sky, right near each other and happy."

"That's a peach of a story," Harry said.

"Andromeda deserved all I could do," Perseus went on. "Some time when you're down on your Earth look

Sailor Hat in Fashion Picture

By JULIA BOTTOMLEY

Well, well, well, who would 'a' believed it—the sailor hat has come to life again! Not so surprising, come to think of it, rather to be expected seeing that fashion is so frankly delving into the past for inspiration—recreating, as it were, just one old timer after another and labelling them as 1930 modes.

So it is that the new straw sailors are among the proudest displays in the very most voguish shops. Women arriving from abroad are wearing them, too. Now that the sailor hat is the next play in the game of fashion, it behooves every woman who would lead in styles that are swankiest, to lose no time in choosing (for the types are many) the sailor which becomes her best.

Two of the newest sailors are shown in the picture. The model at the top to the right is in the very smart lightweight rough straw, which though arriving late in the season is proving a keen competitor to the smooth linen-like exotic straws. The sailor below in the illustration features a mushroom brim—watch mushroom brims, they are coming "in," according to latest Paris reports.

Not that the revival of the sailor is in any way retarding the popularity of the little beret. On the contrary, berets of every description are flourishing to the extent that there is no limit to the number finding way into midday's wardrobe—a beret to match each costume.

Of course every collection includes a crocheted angora beret or two, as pictured, most likely in white, for white accessories are "the thing," although the pastel angoras also are chic with summer sports outfits. Berets crocheted of chenille are very good style. Others of linen thread, being washable, have captured the fancy of the practical summer girl.

Wearing black velvet berets, too! They are ever so jaunty and when with sheer colorful chiffons and the smart pastel silks, they are as effective as can be. In discussing berets, it will never do to omit the handsome wearable types of fine milan straw. These are certainly good looking worn with the tailored silk suit.

Still there are more to follow. The gardenia beret, for instance, with two snowy gardenias posed perky at the topmost point of its peaked crown.

Dyeing Rugs

Rugs may be dyed at home with any of the standard dyes. Clean and dampen the rug first, then lay it flat over newspapers to prevent the dye from staining the floor, and apply the hot dye with a scrub brush. Any color may be used, depending on the shade desired, but the original color must be considered. For example, a soft red applied over a tan rug may make a rich warm shade of brown, or applied over a bright green will give an attractive gray green.

until tender. Add one-half pound of round steak (ground), salt, pepper, and a dash of cayenne to season, and cook five minutes; remove from the heat, add three-fourths of a cupful of cooked rice, one slightly beaten egg; mix well and fill the peppers. Bake until brown.

Pimiento Canapes.—Split the six pimientos after draining, using a seven-once can. Sprinkle the inner surface with salt and cayenne. Place a rectangular slice of cheese lengthwise of the pepper and roll up. Skewer with toothpicks securely. Roll in flour, cook in a small amount of fat three minutes or until the cheese melts and the flour browns. Serve on oval slices of toast well buttered and hot.

Evening Story for the Children

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

"I hope you know," said the Constellation Perseus, "that my star Algal is the most noted of variable stars."

Harry was glad Perseus did not wait for an answer, for up to this moment, if the truth were known, he was not sure that he had even so much as heard of Algal.

Evidently Perseus thought he knew for he went right on with his talking. "In the old days they thought Algal was rather unlucky in spite of his brightness. Alpha, to be sure, is his brightest star, and Alpha lives in a regular starry meadow."

"Why did they think Algal an unlucky star?" Harry asked.

"You see Algal's name means Demon, and his light varies which is the reason he is called a variable star. Algal has also been called the Double Eye."

"What queer names."

"They are a bit queer," Perseus admitted. "By the way, you know about Medusa, don't you?"

"Yes—but I'd just as soon hear it again." Harry was thinking how many myths he remembered just as soon as they were told to him again.

"Medusa," commenced Perseus proudly, "was one of three Gorgon sisters. If you looked at one of them you were turned to stone. That was the old tale. They had snakes for hair."

"I remember. I always thought they were horrible."

"Andromeda was the daughter of Cassiopea—you'll notice I'm not far from Andromeda and she is just below Cassiopea whom you've met—I want you to keep your direction. You've heard how vain Cassiopea was. Well, her daughter was punished, too, for her mother's vanity.

She was chained to a rock so a sea monster could come and capture her."

"I think that was mean to punish a daughter for her mother's vanity."

"I didn't think it was fair, so when I came along with Medusa's head which I had taken without looking at her face, I decided then and there I'd do something for Andromeda."

"I was going to help her in the first place because I felt sorry for her, but up at her fine Nebula—the Great Andromeda Nebula it is called."

JACOB, A SELFISH MAN, TRANSFORMED

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 28:1-22; 31:1-16. GOLDEN TEXT—"For what is a profit if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" (Matthew 16:26.)

PRIMARY TOPIC—Learning to Be Unselfish. JUNIOR TOPIC—Learning to Be Unselfish. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Does It Mean to Be Honest? YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Learning from Experience.

I. Jacob's Birth (25:21-26). In answer to Isaac's prayer, a son was given unto him. Before Jacob's birth God revealed unto Isaac the fact that he should have the place of pre-eminence. "The elder shall serve the younger." In this God reversed the ordinary law concerning the position of the elder son. The act of holding hold of Esau's heel as he was born, indicated Jacob's nature. His name Jacob means "supplanter."

II. Jacob's Schemes (25:27-34; 29:1-29). 1. He secured Esau's birthright (25:27-34). It was right for Jacob to have the birthright since it was according to God's plan as revealed to Isaac, but his scheme to get it was reprehensible. He took advantage of his brother's weakness to drive a sharp bargain.

2. Secured his father's blessing (27:1-29). (1) Was requested to be forgiven for his father. (2) Rebekah's scheme (v. 5-33). It was God's plan that Jacob should be at the head, but he did not need the sin of Jacob and his mother to bring it about.

III. Jacob's Flight to Haran (ch. 29). Jacob's deceit and cunning got him into trouble. He was compelled to flee from his outraged brother. He was a "heaven" to reap what he had sown.

1. Jacob's vision at Bethel (28:10-16). Jacob not only had to flee to save his life, but he had to leave home and mother. When night overtook him, he was obliged to sleep in a field with a stone for a pillow. It was under these circumstances that the Lord gave him the wonderful vision at Bethel. (1) He saw a ladder reaching from earth to heaven (v. 12). Jesus Christ is the ladder, connecting earth and heaven (v. 13). (2) He saw angels of God upon the ladder (v. 12). These angels were divine helpers to render needed assistance along life's way. (3) The Lord standing above the ladder (v. 13-17). To show Jacob that the ladder did not reach merely into space, God appeared and talked with him. He declared that He was the God of Abraham and of Isaac, thus assuring Jacob that the same favor that was over his fathers was over him (v. 13). b. He renewed the covenant as to the land. Though Jacob was now fleeing from the land, the covenant would not fall (v. 13). c. He assured him of a numerous seed (v. 14). d. The divine presence with Jacob (v. 15). Though he had sinned, God was with him. e. Jacob should be brought again into the land (v. 15).

2. Jacob's vow (v. 18-22). His vow included three things. (1) Dedication of himself to God (v. 18). (2) Establishment of worship (v. 19). (3) Consecration of his substance (v. 22).

IV. Jacob's Return to Canaan (chaps. 31-33). 1. The Lord instructs him (31:1-2). Twenty years have elapsed since his experiences at Bethel. These years were spent in Padan-aram with his mother's people. Here he served Laban for twenty years. Though it was the purpose of God for him to return, he took clandestine leave of Laban. Laban pursued him in anger, but God appeared to Laban and forbade him to lay hands upon Jacob.

2. Jacob upon the way (Gen. 32). Though Jacob fled from Laban's pursuit, a more formidable enemy faced him in the person of Esau. (1) Jacob meeting the angels (v. 1). (2) Jacob praying (v. 9-12). Not receiving a reply from Esau, Jacob cast himself upon God in prayer. (3) The angel wrestling with Jacob (v. 24-32). He continued to wrestle until the approach of morning, not knowing that it was God in human form wrestling with him. God humbled him by dislocating his thigh. When thus humbled, he quit wrestling and clung to God. He got the blessing when he confessed his weakness, laid hold upon God. (4) A new name (v. 28). He was no longer Jacob, the "supplanter," but Israel, a "prince of God." His new name was given him after he had a new nature.

Finding God If we cannot find God in our home or mine, upon the roadside or the margin of the sea, in the bursting seed or opening flower, in the day duty and the night musing, I do not think we should discern Him more in the grass of Eden or beneath the moonlight of Gethsemane.—James Martineau.

Gratitude to God Gratitude to God makes even a temporal blessing a taste of heaven.—Romaine.

To Get Rid of Pantry Insects

Cleaning Crevices With a Skewer as a Precaution Against Cereal Beetles.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

There are more than forty different beetles and moths that infest grains and other dry stored foods. Many of them are chiefly troublesome in granaries and warehouses and on railroad cars used for transporting such goods. Some of them occasionally invade kitchens and storerooms in private dwellings. Among those most frequently found are the cadelle beetle, the mealworm beetle, the confused flour beetle, and the saw-toothed grain beetle. These beetles feed on flour, grain products, dried fruits, seeds, nuts, spices, tobacco and other starchy and woody materials. Some prefer one food and some another, while some are quite general feeders.

The bureau of entomology of the United States Department of Agriculture explains that these beetles can live on very small quantities of dry cereal that they find in cracks, corners, and crevices of flour bins, pantries, and kitchen cabinets. So it behooves the housewife to see that no food material is lodged in such places to invite these unwelcome visitors. The girl in the illustration is shown cleaning the corners of a cabinet with a skewer to remove any cereal, including flour or bread crumbs, lodged there.

The Indian meal moth is another of the cereal pests that makes a loose webbing sometimes found in cereal boxes. Cleanliness and heat are the best methods of ridding the kitchen and storeroom of meal beetles and moths. All infested material should be burned. All bags and containers in which foods are to be stored should be sterilized. Clean all lint and dust from shelves where the insects might live. Use plenty of hot water and soap in cleaning. If you are closing the house during the warm months, even for a few weeks, it is better to throw away small amounts of cereal than to store it with the likelihood that it may become infested and give trouble all through the pantry or storage closet.

Germany Produces a New Locomotive

A big surprise was accorded the members of the world power conference in Berlin when the new super-pressure locomotive (above) was shown there. It is radically different from the common steam engine. The new engine has 2,500 horse power, steam pressure of 120 atmospheres and steam temperature of 500 degrees celsius. The feature of the super-pressure engine is that it saves 45 per cent in heating material.

Thin, Pale, Weak

"I HAD been through a bad spell of sickness which left me very weak," says Mrs. Virginia Spruce, of Stapleton, Va. "I was pale and felt lifeless, and my strength did not return."

"I spent most of my time on the bed. I was very nervous, and the least thing upset me. I did not have strength enough to lift a broom. At times I would have had headaches, which would hurt me until I could hardly see."

"Someone asked me why I did not try Cardui. I had read of it, so I thought I would see what it would do for me. It was really remarkable how I came out. My strength returned, and my health was better than it had been in years. I gained in weight about ten pounds. My color was good, and I ceased to suffer from headaches. I have told my friends about Cardui because I was benefited after taking it."

4-H Clubs Are Real Instructors

Farm boys and girls, through their 4-H Clubs, were told by Mr. James C. Stone, Vice-chairman, Federal Farm Board, that it is fully as important for a farmer to know how to market crops efficiently as it is to produce them efficiently.

Addressing the annual National 4-H Club Camp being held in Washington under the auspices of the Extension Service, U. S. Department of Agriculture, Mr. Stone said that cooperative action seems to offer the best solution of the farm marketing problem and that the 4-H Clubs can do more than any other agency in helping the Farm Board to make the program of the Agricultural Marketing Act a successful service to the future farmers of America.

"The 4-H Clubs," Mr. Stone explained, "teach you boys and girls how to become better farmers and home makers, encourage you to take part in neighborhood affairs and be of service to others, develop a spirit of teamwork among you and train you in leadership, one of the great needs of agriculture today. All of this is most excellent and serves to make life on the farm more attractive."

"But while you have been learning to produce well and efficiently, you have given little thought to efficient marketing. Fancy premiums received for prize animals or products exhibited at county and state fairs, you will quickly learn as practical farmers, are not the prices paid in the markets for similar commodities. If you wish to get a fair return for your effort you will find that just as much or more attention must be given to marketing of your crop as to producing it."

"For the most part farmers in the past have been content to produce to the limit and let someone else do the marketing. They have continued to grow and sell blindly, without regard to what their neighbors are doing, with the result that agriculture has not kept pace financially with other industries, which have become highly organized."

"The Farm Board was created to help correct this disparity. Congress said the way for agriculture to gain economic equality is through cooperation on the part of farmers. Our Board is trying to help the farmers get organized so that they, acting together, may control the production and marketing of their crops and thereby get a fair price for them. It is our opinion that cooperation is the only thing that offers real hope for agricultural prosperity."

"Cooperation among farmers that is being promoted by the Farm Board is nothing more than a broadening of the teamwork you young people are doing in your 4-H Clubs. We feel that substantial progress is being made. The job is not one to be done overnight. In the long run success depends on the willingness of farmers to cooperate."

"Members of 4-H Clubs know the advantages of cooperation in their work, they know how to lead others and also they know how to follow leadership. They can be of great assistance to the Farm Board in developing this program which will enable farmers, through collective action, to put agriculture on a sound financial basis. We feel that the future prosperity of American agriculture rests largely in the hands of the 4-H Clubs and are confident you will get behind the cooperative movement just as enthusiastically and with just as much determination to succeed as you have your other club projects."

Wood distillation produces about 65 known chemicals.

Bald heads can't be helped, perhaps, but there is no excuse for a bald lawn. Nobody has more poor relatives than a scrub sire or deserves less sympathy. Boys' clubs raise better boys as well as better crops and better livestock.

What cotton farmers need most are supplements to cotton, not substitutes. If "order is Heaven's first law," many farmers are far from Heaven in many ways.

Labor-saving equipment is the broom that helps to sweep drudgery out of farm homes.

Chemists foresee an age in which substitutes will be found for every need, if natural resources fail.

Soils, like tools, wear out; they must be renewed. Winter legumes will help do it. Try hairy vetch and Austrian winter peas.

Eastview News

Mr. Clarence Taylor and family were visiting relatives and friends here last week end.

Mr. J. A. Dobbs and family were the all-day guests of Mr. Charlie Mims and family last Friday.

Mrs. Ara Morrison of Birmingham is visiting her mother, Mrs. Sallie Strength, of Eastview, this week.

Rev. A. C. Nelson returned home Sunday from Blue Ridge, N. C., where he had attended an interdenominational Missionary Conference.

The revival will begin here next Saturday, July the 12th, and run the following week. The entire public has a cordial invitation to attend and worship with us.

There will be a meeting here next Friday evening for the purpose of completing the work started about two weeks ago on the yards and to make other needed arrangements for the revival.

School Transportation Is A Major Need

County Superintendent B. Lawrence of this place reports that a recent conference of the County Superintendents of Education held at the state university featured strongly the importance of proper transportation for rural school children, recommended studies of the various systems of handling the problem, and called attention to the growing demand for well-organized, modern schooling within reach of every country home.

School reports from the sixty-seven counties this year will show that 70,000 children are transported to school in Alabama at a cost of $1,500,000. Yet no legislature in the history of the state has made any appropriation with this service in mind. Consequently, the increasing demand for high school training and for graded schooling, which can be found in the open country only in consolidated centers, has set up a rapidly growing expense that depletes funds needed for salaries of teachers and for school terms of a standard length. Nearly every county has been forced to add school trucks in small or large number; and the problem of financing a minimum school term becomes keener each year.

Legionaires Demand Improved Rural Schooling

Farley Moody Post No. 34. American Legion, with headquarters at Tuscaloosa, will submit to the state convention of the American Legion at Montgomery on July 28-30 a most progressive program for rural school improvement. The ex-soldiers, with the memories of keen embarrassment and handicap which the unlettered "buddies" experienced during the war, are demanding that Alabama legislators furnish adequate training to every county in the state.

Specifically, the Legion program demands a nine-month school term in every district free of all tuition seven months of which term shall be strictly compulsory, with buildings and transportation made adequate to put modern schooling within reach of every child. The resolutions cite some of the bad conditions existing: for instance, many rural terms below seven months, rural people forced to pay in tuition to extend terms more than $475,000 per year, many thousands of rural children out of reach of any school offering the grade of work needed. They call attention to the fact that nine months is the standard minimum school term in all civilization, that tuition and supplements are ridiculous in a modern state, and express impatience with less than the best in Alabama.

The resolutions end with a demand for prompt "correction of a shameful condition." The Legion convention will be asked to consider the Tuscaloosa proposals and to set up machinery for presenting them properly to the state legislature.

State Capitol News

Charges alleging an $11,000,000 deficit in the State's finances were exploded by Governor Bibb Graves in an address delivered before the Alabama Association of County Commissioners at the Exchange Hotel June 25. Governor Graves pointed out that during the past year and for the present year the State is decreasing and not increasing its indebtedness. He also called attention to the fact that farm property and equipment acquired by the State for its convict system by the present administration more than offsets in value the balance against the treasury at the beginning of the present fiscal year.

On October 1, 1928, there were outstanding warrants for the amount of $3,640,070.42, while cash on hand was $1,049,780.03, leaving a deficit at that time of $2,600,000 in round numbers.

This condition was brought about by the fact that the legislature of 1927 made a number of appropriations for immediate and pressing needs effective at once, while the new revenue bill to raise the money did not go into effect until October 1, 1927. The appropriations referred to included $600,000 to extend school terms, and the expenses of the legislative session, about $600,000. These and other appropriations, made nine months before the revenue bill went into effect, together with buying property for convicts since then, contributed to the unfavorable balance on October 1, 1928. During the last fiscal year, ending September 30, 1929, the State put into its Treasury $500,000 more than it took out. There was paid into the Treasury for the year $49,634,103.08, while total warrants drawn during the period were $49,131,206.77. At the beginning of the present year, October 1, 1929, outstanding warrants totalled $2,810,789.71, and cash on hand $723,395.62, cutting the unfavorable balance to $2,100,000. A further reduction will be made during the present year, the Governor said.

The present administration has invested about $2,500,000 in property to take care of convicts, of which $750,000 was put into Moffett Farm, the new model prison farm near Atmore. These increased convict expenditures were necessitated by removal of convicts from the mines, which gave the present administration a greater problem than any previous regime has had to cope with. Governor Graves pointed out that the convict property is all paid for and represents an asset to the State which is showing results.

Another reason cited by the Governor for the existing financial condition was the doubling of Confederate pensions, which hits the general fund during the four years of his administration for approximately $3,000,000, over and above what the one-mill soldier tax brings in. During the last complete year of the Brandon administration, ending September 30, 1926, pension payments totalled $1,399,374, and the one-mill soldiers tax produced $989,455.95, leaving a balance of $409,918.05 to be paid out of the general fund. During the first full year of the Graves administration, ending September 30, 1926, pension payments were $2,289,802.50, while the one-mill tax brought in $1,081,978.75, leaving $1,207,823.75 which went for pensions from the general fund for that year. The pension list is rapidly decreasing, and that year it will take only about $600,000 from the general fund. The total from the general fund for pensions for the four years will approximate $3,000,000. Pension payments and appropriations by the Legislature hit the Treasury hardest during the first year of the administration, and created the debt which is being cut down as the administration draws to a close.

"We knew that it would put us into the hole to do it," Governor Graves said in speaking of the increase in pensions. "But many of the veterans needed shelter, they needed food and medicine and they were too proud to ask for it. And I'm here to take criticism with the Legislature for saving the lives of those Confederate veterans before it was too late."

J. A. NIVENS ANNOUNCES FOR SHERIFF

Is Outstanding Citizen And Business Man Of Chilton County

The News, this week, contains the announcement of Hon. J. A. Nivens, as a candidate for the office of Sheriff of Chilton County, subject to the action of the Democratic Primary, August 12th, 1930. This announcement will no doubt be received by the entire citizenship of the county with a great deal of satisfaction, for Mr. Nivens is one of the outstanding citizens and business men of the county and a man who possesses a splendid character and who believes in high ideals and clean living. He has lived in this county for many years and has made friends among those whom he has come in contact either in social or business dealings. Beyond question Mr. Nivens is particularly fitted and qualified for the high office of Sheriff of our county. He is a man who can be counted upon to do his full duty, without injecting personal or political prejudice, into the conduct of the office. His temperament is such that the placing of authority and power in his hands will not cause him to lose sight of the feelings, rights and liberties of his fellow man. His genuine respect and belief in law and order guarantees to the people of this county that they may safely confide in him, and that when they do, criminals and law violators will not be tipped off, and allowed to escape, and make a mockery of the law and duly constituted authority, provided for its enforcement.

Mr. Nivens is a married man and he and his family have lived in Clanton for many years. He is a Baptist and has always been a liberal contributor to religious causes and has advocated all movements designed for the upbuilding of his town and county. The News believes that the entire citizenship of the county, who believe in sane and sensible enforcement of the law and who wish to see the office of Sheriff conducted in a dignified manner will receive Mr. Nivens' announcement with a great deal of satisfaction and that they will go into the Democratic Primary and vote for him, and the other Democratic candidates, on August 12th, 1930.

COW BELONGING TO J. D. BROAD- HEAD KILLED BY LIGHTNING

During the rain and strong wind last Saturday afternoon, which brought with it quite a bit of lightning, a cow belonging to J. D. MOORE'S STORE WILL REOPEN IN NEW BLDG

Will Occupy Remodeled Store Where Hodges Store Was Located

The bankrupt stock and controlling interest of Moore's Store has been purchased by H. T. Simms of this place according to an announcement made this week, and the place of business reopened last Monday, after being closed for some time.

It was also learned that the stock and fixtures of the store will be moved to the building which was formerly occupied by the W. Z. Hodges Dry Goods Company, on Main Street, as soon as the building is completed, it now being rebuilt throughout, following a recent fire there.

Mr. Simms will have as his associate, Glenn W. Moore, the former owner of the store, who will be assisted by Benson Sims, son of the present owner. The style of the firm name has not yet been announced, and it was stated that they have a very important announcement to make to the public in the very near future. It is the intention of the new drug store to carry a complete line of drug sundries, patent medicines, newspapers, magazines, and will be headquarters for music. They will specialize in the ice cream and soda fountain business also, it was stated. They intend to move into their new home somewhere near the first of August.

GRESHAM LOWERY ON PRO- GRAM STATION WBRC B'HAM

4-H MEMBERS GO TO CAMP THURSDAY 24

Letters Have Been Mailed To All Members Giving Instructions

The following letter has been mailed to all members of the 4-H Clubs in Chilton County regarding the camp:

Dear Club Members:

Are You Ready For The Big Camp?

We will go to camp Thursday morning, July 24th and break camp Saturday afternoon, July 26th. I am asking that the boys who disobeyed camp rules last year, especially the three or four who gave trouble, not to come to camp this year. We want to have the best camp we have ever had, and want only boys who are willing to obey camp regulations.

I want all the boys to meet at my office between 8:00 and 9:00 o'clock (cont. to back page—first section)

MEETING AT TEMPLE CHURCH JULY 20 TO 27

Rev. Arthur Bell and family will be here to conduct a revival at Temple church for one week, July 20 to 27.

This will be his last meeting at this place as he has been elected Supt. of the Illinois District Council and they are requiring all his time. He desires to see all his friends who have stood by him through the years of his ministry here. The public is cordially invited to all our services. Preaching, prayer, good gospel singing and special song numbers will have place in the meeting.

Let us come, hear and go away with refreshing and blessing on our souls.

CLANTON DEFEATED MONTE- VALLO HERE LAST TUESDAY

Clanton defeated Montevallo last Tuesday afternoon in a well played baseball game on the high school diamond here. The Clanton team piled up seven while the visiting team managed to bring in two. This game Tuesday afternoon marks the fifth straight victory for the Clanton team.

Apparently the baseball fans of Clanton, that is, all of them are not interested in the games that are played by the local team, judging from the small crowd that made up the spectators at the game here Tuesday afternoon. The Clanton team wishes that all who can see these games, as they are not amateur games, but are real tight baseball games played between teams that are worth seeing. On next Thursday afternoon the Clanton team will go to Calera to play the Calera team, and on the following Thursday afternoon Calera will play here.

Miss Avis Grantham of Troy, and Miss Lucille Sherwood of Brundidge, are spending several days in Clanton as guests of friends.

SHRINERS WILL STAGE PARADE HERE JULY 24

Parade To Precede Outing At Lay Dam For Montgomery Shriners

Montgomery Shriners and their ladies are promised another treat by the officers of the Alcazar Temple, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, it was announced by Potentate Raymond P. Reeves and Rabban Thomas M. Robertson, who, with members of the entertainment committee spent Saturday in Clanton conferring with the Clanton Shrine Club and inspecting sites for the outing.

Thursday, July 24, has been selected as the date for this outing and Lay Dam will be the scene of festivities which will include a barbecue and a dance.

The Alabama Power Company, thru Noble Richard Hobbie, has tendered Alcazar their facilities at Lay Dam, says Potentate Reeves, "and the arrangements and accommodations there are ideal for the entertainment planned under the auspices of the Clanton Shrine Club."

"A motor caravan will leave Montgomery for Clanton early in the afternoon and a parade staged on our arrival there. After the Clanton stop, we will drive on to Lay Dam where a six o'clock barbecue will be served under the supervision of our own culinary artist, Noble 'Dutch' Hartley. This means 'real food.'"

"From seven to ten an orchestra will provide dance music at the open air pavilion, the motorcycle starting its return trip immediately after the dance."

"Motorcycle officers and service cars will accompany the caravan, and as the concrete highway eliminates all dust, the trip can be made under almost ideal conditions as to safety and pleasure, also no time will be lost from business as Thursday afternoon is a half holiday. The detailed program and schedule will be published at an early date."

ONE DRAWS FINE IN MAYOR'S COURT HERE LAST MONDAY

Will Bohannon, negro, was fined fifteen dollars and costs last Monday morning in Mayor Hart's court here, on charges of public drunkenness, according to information. The verdict also carried with it that Bohannon could either work 27 days on the city streets to pay the fine.

"Another case was brought before Mayor Hart. The case of the Town of Clanton versus Ed Little, charged with using abusive language in the presence of females. The case was continued, it was stated."

Mr. and Mrs. Paul C. Smith, Jr., and children, Mary Elizabeth, Clifford and Peggy of Birmingham have been spending several days here as guests of the former's mother, Mrs. Mamie C. Smith, and family, and Mr. and Mrs. Vesker Martin at Lay Dam.

FEDERAL CENSUS FOR ALABAMA IS GIVEN OUT

Chilton County Shows Increase Of 1,913 Over The 1920 Census

The Census Bureau has just announced the population census for Alabama which shows a net gain of 296,253 over the 1920 census. Fifteen counties in the State show a loss during the past ten years while fifty-two show a gain. The loss was principally in the Black Belt Section.

The population by counties follows:

County	1920	1930 Gain
Autauga	18,908	19,655 77
Baldwin	20,730	28,282 7,552
Barbour	20,730	28,282 7,552

Harding Memorial Is Completed

This is the magnificent Harding memorial at Marion, Ohio, which now stands completed and ready for dedication. It was erected at a cost of $300,000, requiring eight years to finish. The bodies of President and Mrs. Warren G. Harding have been interred in the sarcophagus since 1927.

Wonderful Sensitivity of the Eye

Boston.—If man paid for optical energy at the rate charged for electricity for domestic use, his vision would cost him less than one trillionth of a trillionth of a cent per second. This energy used every second for seeing is the millionth part of the millionth of an erg. It takes about 1,000 ergs to lift a thirtieth of an ounce half an inch.

Dr. Charles Sheard, director of physics and biophysical research of the Mayo foundation at Rochester, Minn., made these revelations of minute quantities before the American Optometrist association in convention here.

"The retina of the eye," he said, "is one of the most sensitive energy receivers and detectors known. It may be thought of as a radio receiver, although it does not respond to stimulation by ordinary waves, for it is a very selective set and is tuned to radiant energy of wave lengths within a single octave, lying between four and eight ten millionths of a meter or yard. These waves, like radio waves, travel at a speed of 186,000 miles a second and are the shorter sisters of the much taller ones we have christened radio.

"The sensitivity of the eye is extraordinary. Employing the Einstein equation of the energy required to cause the expansion of a single electron with a ray of green light, we may conclude that a single energy quantum for green light is sufficient to excite vision.

"This is saying that the liberation of a single electron in the retina by a green or blue light can excite the sensation of vision in the brain. A millionth of a millionth of an erg per second is the energy or power necessary for vision.

"Since it requires the millionth part of the millionth of an erg to cause the emission of one electron at the retina and thus to set up the sensation of vision, then we know that if these thousand ergs to which we have referred could be used up at the rate of a millionth part of the millionth of an erg and if there were no dissipation or loss of energy an eye would have something of the order of a million years of vision. Indeed, it seems almost incredible and inconceivable.

"But the millionth of a millionth of an erg is a mighty small amount of energy. No more startling, however, than the statement made by an American Nobel prize winner in physics, when he says that the number of electrons contained in the quantity of electricity which courses through an ordinary incandescent lamp and for which one should pay, if such were possible, one hundred thousandth of a cent is so large that if all of the several million inhabitants of Chicago were to begin to count out these electrons and were to keep counting them at the rate of two a second, and if none of them were ever to stop, sleep or die, it would take them just 20,000 years to finish the task."

"Makes Good" Without Hands

In a raiding party, he said, out to destroy a nest of machine guns. As he went forward, a grenade in each hand, he was stunned by the high explosives of a heavy barrage and both of the grenades exploded with terrific force in his hands.

After his discharge from a war hospital in this country, McGonegal said he realized he could not allow the loss of his hands and forearms, just below the elbow, to wreck his life, and he lost no time learning to manipulate the hooks which must serve him in their stead. Sometimes he would stay up until two or three o'clock in the morning practicing and he still learns new tricks with the hooks every day.

He drives a machine without any extra appliances or devices, about 17, 000 miles a year. He pilots a plane and, although the Department of Commerce thus far has refused him a pilot's license, he says he will put up a fight before he gives up the determination to have a pilot's license just for his own personal pleasure in flying. He fishes, hunts, swims and rides horseback.

As he talks he nonchalantly reaches into a vest pocket for a cigarette, dexterously lights the match, picks a piece of lint from his coat sleeve stops for a moment to reach for the telephone, mops his brow with a handkerchief (the first day as postmaster was a bit hectic), handles paper and letters as easily as a person with two hands, writes and in every way proves that he has not allowed his affliction to cramp his style.

LIGHTS OF NEW YORK

By WALTER TRUMBULL

Greater New York is divided into five boroughs. According to the latest census reports, Brooklyn, Queens, Richmond and the Bronx have gained in population, while Manhattan has lost. The loss is reported as 18 per cent.

There is an old and wealthy gentleman in this city, for whose opinions most of us have a deep regard. He predicted to me that the day would come when nobody would live on the island of Manhattan. He said that within a comparatively few years, Manhattan would be entirely given over to business, and that workers all would be brought in from outside by tunnels, bridges and viaducts. He thought this would especially be true when they developed airplanes to the point where they could land on small spaces.

The cartoons were hung in the window and subscribers walked by and looked at them, just as they now look at the electric and window bulletins displayed by New York papers.

This window display stirred the artistic soul of the sixteen-year-old A. W. Brown. He went home, drew some pictures, and took them down to the paper. One was accepted and hung in the window, beside the regular cartoon. That was a big day for a famous illustrator of the future. More of his work was accepted and finally, when the St. Louis chalk-plate process came in, enabling small papers to make and publish illustrations of their own, Brown was hired as an artist. His salary was $4 per week.

75 years, now receiving $50, increased to	60
Veterans serving 70 days or more:
Veterans having one-tenth disability	$12
Veterans having one-fourth disability	15
Veterans having one-half disability	18
Veterans having three-fourths disability	24
Veterans having total disability	30
Total disability, where regular aid of an attendant is required	50
Pensions based on age, 70 to 90 days' service:
62 years	$12
65 years	15
72 years	24
75 years	30

Increases will commence on the date of receipt of the application by the pension bureau. No increase will be allowed except on new application.

WORK

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK

Dr. President Coolidge is quoted as saying that "One of the greatest mysteries in the world is the success that lies in conscientious work."

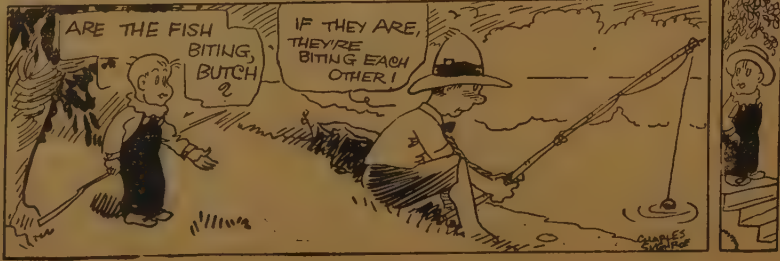

Mr. Coolidge is an incurable worker who illustrates in his own life the theory which he promulgated. It was regular, persistent work which made him a successful lawyer, which raised him to the governorship of Massachusetts, and which ultimately landed him in the Presidential chair. He has depended less upon pull and oratory and personal influence to get him preferment than

SUCH IS LIFE — As Usual

By Charles Sughrue

Consider the poor fish!

A TRUE sportsman is as careful about his pipe tobacco as he is about his lures. Why distress the poor fish and taint the pure air with a strong pipe when Sir Walter Raleigh's favorite smoking tobacco costs so little, and is so mild and fragrant? The success of the Sir Walter Raleigh blend is due to the use of very choice Burleys, which, although mild, lack neither body nor flavor. The quality is uniform, and the gold foil wrap retains all the natural freshness and fragrance.

POULTRY

SWAT FLIES AND SAVE THE CHICK

Use of Traps and Destruction of Breeding Places Urged.

By G. T. KLEIN, Extension Poultryman,
Kansas State Agricultural College.

Chickens may be of the opinion that flies are good to eat, but when the truth is known, flies are their worst enemies. For flies carry to them that most dreaded of chicken diseases—the tapeworm.

To prevent chicks from eating flies is not easy. Sour milk feeding during the summer months is one of the greatest hazards. If it is fed, the milk should not be too sour, and a small amount of milk fed at a time.

The vessels should be washed once a day and kept clean and sanitary. Wet manure should be fed in very small quantities during hot weather. It should not be allowed to sour. Keeping the house clean and sanitary and dark much of the time makes it unattractive to flies.

The use of fly traps and the destruction of breeding places will help to reduce the trouble from tapeworms.

Tapeworm remedies should be used on most flocks. A combination of kamala and nicotine sulphate is the best remedy to use, although it should not be used unless the birds are infested with worms and then the flocks should be wormed during the late summer or early fall.

Keeping Mash Sanitary
Will Prevent Disease

Often small contrivances will do a great deal of good in helping to prevent the spread of disease. One of the most important is to put a revolving board or stick above open mash hoppers. This can be arranged so that if a bird hops upon it, it will turn around. This will prevent the chicks from getting into the hopper and thereby avoid much trouble from droppings.

Self-feeders are usually built with projecting roofs that answer the same purpose. If droppings are kept from the mash hoppers this will be less wasted feed and at the same time there will be less trouble from both disease and parasites.

Desirable Weights for Many Chicken Breeds

Leghorn cockerels should weigh one pound at six to seven weeks, one and a half pounds at nine weeks, and close to two pounds at twelve weeks. Pullets should weigh two pounds at fifteen weeks, and three and one-third pounds at twenty-four weeks.

Heavy breeds such as Rocks, Rhode Islands, Wyandottes and Orpingtons should weigh one pound each at seven weeks, a pound and a half at nine weeks, and over two pounds at twelve weeks. Pullets should average two and a half pounds at fifteen weeks, and over four pounds at twenty-four weeks.

These figures were obtained after many experiments at the New Jersey state college of agriculture.

Poultry Hints

Clean, dry litter in the hen house adds greatly to the hen's comfort.

Chickens are kept on about 90 per cent of the farms of the United States.

A pullet that eats two bites while her sister is eating one is worth just twice as much.

If the cleanings from the poultry house are left where the chicks can scratch in them the droppings from one diseased chick may cause the death of dozens of others.

A good ration for geese would be equal parts of yellow corn meal, wheat bran, wheat middlings, ground oats to which add 15 per cent of meat scraps, one-half per cent of fine table salt.

Get new blood of a high-producing flock every year. See that they are not related.

Duck eggs are incubated at the same temperature as chickens, rather lower than higher if anything. The difference is that they require more moisture.

There is a difference of opinion in regard to rape pasture for hens. It is generally agreed that it darkens the egg yolk. Rape pasture is usually intended for young stock only.

Duck eggs are generally hatched in machines that have moisture carrying trays. Some go so far as to sprinkle them daily.

Poultry flocks are culled in the summer to remove the slacker hens, and in the fall to select the best individuals as future breeders.

Do not forget the old saying, "A stitch in time saves nine." If you are losing an abnormal number of pullets from disease or other causes, find out immediately what is the cause of it

Closer Culling
Low Producers

Three Things to Do to Make All Dairy Herds More Profitable.

(By O. E. Read, Chief of the Bureau of Dairy Industry, U. S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.)

There are three things we can do to make our dairy herds more profitable. Cull the low producers; feed the others according to what they can produce when well fed; then breed intelligently. Let's consider what we can accomplish by culling the low producing cows from our dairy herds.

Studies, by the bureau of dairy industry, United States Department of Agriculture, of the production, feed cost, and income records of cows on test in dairy herd improvement associations, have shown that the elimination of the lowest producers from the dairy herd not only increases the average production per cow, but always results in increasing the cash income over cost of feed per cow. Therefore, if any dairyman is dissatisfied with the income which he makes over cost of feed, he can always increase that income per cow by culling a little closer.

Surplus of Dairy Products.

At present, when the surplus of dairy products in this country is abnormally high, and when prices are correspondingly low, closer culling is one of the ways of getting better results immediately. Our figures indicate that culling the lowest producing 1 per cent of the dairy cows in this country would not lower the milk and butter fat production as much as 1 per cent; but only one-fifth of 1 per cent; and that culling the lowest producing 10 per cent of our cows would not lower the milk and butter fat production 10 per cent, but only 5 per cent.

Some people say that it is not good policy to blame the low producers when there is a surplus of dairy products in this country. I am not interested in whether it is the low producers or whether it is the high producers that cause the surplus, but I am mightily interested in the fact that the culling of the low producing cows from our dairy herds has upon the pocketbook of the dairy industry.

Family Cow Profitable.

However, not every low producing dairy cow in the United States represents a loss. There are farms where the family cow lives principally on feed that would otherwise be wasted, and she may be cared for by labor that could not earn as much in any other way. We are talking now about the commercial dairy.

In the commercial dairy there seems to be little danger that the culling will be too severe. If all our commercial dairy herds were culled as they should be culled, the production of milk could be so controlled that it could be kept constantly in balance with consumption. That, of course, would be the ideal situation.

However, to bring about such an ideal state of affairs, the dairyman must have production, feed cost, and income records of his cows. How is he going to get such figures? As far as I know, the most practical way to get such information, at a cost he can afford, is through the work of the Dairy Herd Improvement associations, or similar organizations of dairymen.

Carrying Capacity of Many Pasture Crops

That sudan grass furnishes more feed from July 1 until the first frost than any four other pasture crops and also yellow and white sweet clovers also afford abundant pasture but do not furnish as much feed as the other pasture crops and are not equally resisted—these are the indications of a five-year experiment on the carrying capacity of five pasture crops at the end of the second year of work, J. W.
Wilson, director of the state agricultural experiment station at South Dakota state college, announced recently.

Cattle, sheep and hogs were used in the investigations to determine the number of each that could be grazed on one acre of white sweet clover, yellow sweet clover, alfalfa native pasture and sudan grass. The results indicate that under the same soil and weather conditions one acre of each pasture is sufficient for the following number of 550-pound steers: alfalfa, two head; white sweet clover, three head; yellow sweet clover, three head; sudan grass, three head; and native pasture, with brome grass predominant, two head.

Simple Plan to Kill
Pests or Squash Vine

If a squash vine wilts within a few hours, a vine borer has reamed out the stem near the ground. This borer always works near the roots. The best way to control it is to cover about every second joint of each stem as it grows so roots will form at the joints.

The vine will live even though the borers do get at the main stem near the first root. This covering should be done now so the vine will have many roots a little later in the season when the borers are the worst.

Ordinary squash bugs are hard to kill with poison dusts or sprays. They will crawl under a shingle at night, however, and two or three shingles placed near the center of the vine will act as traps for them. The bugs can be crushed in the early morning before they begin to move. Their shiny brown, clustered eggs on the under side of the leaves should be crushed also.

Black Locust Good for Posts and Poles

Has High Rank as Durable
Wood for Use in Ground.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture)

Black locust, because of its high rank as a durable wood for use in the ground, is in demand for fence posts, stakes and poles, says the forest service, United States Department of Agriculture.

Black locust makes rapid growth on good soils and will grow on poor and dry soils. It is easily propagated. In good soils or in regions natural favorable to the tree, plantings of black locusts have returned substantial net profits in periods of ten to twenty years.

Its strong spreading root system makes black locust a valuable tree for checking soil erosion in gullies and on steep hillsides.

Black locust, however, has a serious enemy known as the locust borer and the menace of this insect should be carefully considered before choosing black locust as a tree to plant, the forest service says. Since the borer is a sun-loving insect, on good soils or in locations of more vigorous growth, where weeds, underbrush, or other trees produce sufficient shade on the trunks of the trees the borer causes little or no injury. No practicable control measure for treating infested forest plantations is known.

The increasing scarcity of chestnut for posts, poles, and stakes has done much to stimulate interest in the possibilities of growing and in the planting of black locust, according to the forest service.

Farmers' Bulletin No. 1628-F, "Growing Black Locust Trees," just issued by the United States Department of Agriculture, contains data on the profitable culture of this species. Single copies may be obtained free from the Office of Information, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Nitrogen Not Favored for Buckwheat Plant

Buckwheat should be sown on land that is not very rich in available nitrates. This means that the land should not contain much humus or be land where the humus is not in a form to give much available nitrogen, such as a newly plowed sod. On rich land it makes too much growth of tops with a small amount of grain, and also it will keep up a growth too late in the fall to give a good quality of grain.

The buckwheat plant is inclined to bloom for grain while it continues to make growth of tops, or vegetative growth. The seed may be drilled in or broadcasted and harrowed, but drilling is the most satisfactory. It is sown at the rate of about a bushel to five pecks per acre. Buckwheat has no soil building qualities when grown for a grain crop.

Sweet Clover Does Not Thrive on Sour Soils

Sweet clover does not grow satisfactorily on sour soils. However, where the subsoil is sweet, it is possible to get sweet clover to grow by giving it enough lime to get a start. L. W.
Kephart, agronomist of the United States Department of Agriculture, has simplified the application of limestone in small quantities with the development of a plan whereby 400 to 500 pounds of hydrated lime is mixed with the inoculated seed for each acre. The mixture is then sown through the fertilizer attachment of a grain drill.

In this way the lime in its finest state is brought into close contact with the seed and becomes immediately available to the seedlings. When the plant is once established its roots go down to the deeper soil where lime is available.

Old Lady by No Means
Ready for the "Snell"

Out near Palm Springs, says the Los Angeles Times, an old negro woman, who thinks she is over ninety, and who was a slave at the outbreak of the Civil war, lives alone in a little cabin. One day she got a toothache and sent for a dentist.

The dentist went to the cabin prepared to yank the offending tooth and get away in a hurry but Aunt Sally made him wait until she had fortified herself with a concoction of corn juice and wine. Then when the tooth was out she went into consultation as to whether to have a plate made, or run a plate?

"But why a plate?" asked the dentist. "Remember, you're over ninety."

"What of it?" demanded Aunt Sally. "Maybe you don't know it, but I goes to night school and I got to look right."

Clever Texas Thief

Patrolman G. N. Garcia of the El stranger asked the time. The latter proffered a cigar in return for the smoke on duty," said Garcia. "Well, thank you, officer." "You're welcome." The stranger departed a minute afterward and Garcia discovered the polite visitor had picked his holster of a bright, shiny, pearl-handled revolver.

Don't Believe in It

Blinks—I don't think women take much stock in that "suffering in Jinks—And from the way they slip off their feet-killing pumps at the suffering in the dark, either.

Children will fret, often for no apparent reason. But there's always one sure way to comfort a restless, fretful child. Castoria!

Harmless as the recipe on the tastes. But its gentle action soothes a youngster more surely than some powerful medicine that is meant for the stronger systems of adults.

That's the beauty of this special children's remedy! It may be given the tiniest infant—as often as there is any need. In cases of colic, diarrhea, or similar disturbance, it is invaluable. But it has everyday uses all mothers should understand. A coated tongue calls for a few drops to ward off constipation; so does any suggestion of bad breath. Whenever children don't eat well, don't rest well, or have any little upset—this pure vegetable preparation is usually all that's needed to set everything to rights. Genuine Castoria has Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the wrapper. Doctors prescribe it.

THE CHILTON COUNTY NEWS

J. B. ATKINSON, PUBLISHER

Published every Thursday at Clanton, Alabama in the interest of Clanton and the entire Chilton County

BILLY SMITH Editor

Entered in the postoffice of Clanton, Alabama, as second class matter under the Act of Congress of March, 1897.

Will the Mandates of the Constitution be Ignored by The Next Legislature?

The Constitution of the State of Alabama says that, "It shall be the duty of the legislature at its first session after the taking of the decennial census of the United States in the year nineteen hundred and ten, and after each subsequent decennial census to fix by law the number of representatives and apportion them among the several counties of the state according to the number of inhabitants in them respectively." This is an exact quotation from the Constitution adopted in 1901.

The legislature of 1911 ignored this plain mandate of the Constitution. It was again ignored by the legislature of 1923 which was the first session after the 1920 census. While the legislative sessions held between these dates were technically not charged with this duty they could have performed it. Likewise the legislature of 1927 could have performed this duty that was neglected by its predecessor, but it did not do it.

The writer, while a member of the 1927 legislature, made an effort to carry out this provision of the organic law and prepared a bill to that end. It was presented to the Governor and received his O. K., but he requested that it be not introduced until after the passage of the revenue bill. The revenue bill was not passed until the closing days of the session, and it was then too late to get action on the re-apportionment bill, and it was not introduced.

Since that time a new census has been taken. It tends to further show the inequality of the present representation in the legislature.

The Constitution says that the number of representatives from each county shall be apportioned according to the number of inhabitants. That a revision of the apportionment should be made is shown by the fact that Henry County with a population of 22,823 has two members of the House while the adjoining county of Houston with a population of 45,920 has only one. Lowndes with a population of 22,811 has two members of the legislature and one member of the senate. Wilcox, the home of Judge Miller who is making the race for Governor, with a population of 24,880 has two representatives and a senator, while Cullman with a population of 41,341 has only one representative and a third of a Senator. Etowah has a population of 63,377 and has two representatives and half a Senator. Dallas has a population of 55,092 and has three representatives and a Senator. Perry county has two representatives with a population of 1,621 less than Blount which has only one.

A new apportionment based on the 1930 census would give the following counties one member each: Autauga, Baldwin, Barbour, Bibb, Blount, Bullock, Butler, Cherokee, Chilton, Choctaw, Clarke, Clay, Cleburne, Coffee, Colbert, Conecuh, Coosa, Crenshaw, Dale, Elmore, Escambia, Fayette, Franklin, Geneva, Green, Hale, Henry, Lamar, Lawrence, Lee, Lowndes, Macon, Marengo, Marion, Monroe, Perry, Pickens, Pike, Randolph, Russell, St. Clair, Shelby, Sumter, Tallapoosa, Washington, Wilcox and Winston.

The following would have two each: Calhoun, Chambers, Covington, Cullman, Dallas, DeKalb, Houston, Jackson, Lauderdale, Limestone, Marshall, Morgan, Talladega and Walker.

The following would have three each: Etowah, Madison and Tuscaloosa.

Montgomery would have 4, Mobile 5, and Jefferson 13. In this arrangement the following counties would lose one member each: Barbour, Bullock, Butler, Clarke, Dallas, Elmore, Hale, Henry, Tallapoosa, Lee, Lowndes, Marengo, Perry, Pike, Russell, Sumter and Wilcox; total 17.

The counties that would gain are: Covington one, Cullman one, DeKalb one, Etowah one, Houston one, Jefferson six, Limestone one, Madison one, Marshall one, Mobile two, Tuscaloosa one; total 17.

It is easy to see the injustice of the present apportionment, and it is also very clear that it is a condition that will be hard to change.

That it would be difficult to get a bill of this kind passed is shown by the fact that the counties that would lose have at present 35 members, all of whom would naturally vote against a change. Nineteen additional votes would be all that is necessary to block it. These could be easily secured and especially if the Governor should oppose re-apportionment.

It would be interesting to know how the candidates for Governor stand on this proposition.

Fireworks No Longer Hold First Place In Casualties

Next year when warnings are issued against Fourth of July carelessness and recklessness, less emphasis will be put on fireworks and more upon other forms of celebration. The Fourth of July just passed shows, since the count of injured and killed has been completed, that fireworks played a minor role in causing injury and death among celebrants.

This year the holiday celebration cost more than 200 lives. Of those, 14 were taken by fire works, 107 by autos and 65 by drownings, with the rest due to miscellaneous causes.

Our safety campaigns have nearly all hinged on fireworks. Yet fireworks, it appears, are about one-eighth as dangerous as automobiles and about one-fifth as dangerous as plunges at the bathing beach.

The answer can be summed up in one word—carelessness. Long-continued educational work has reduced the fireworks hazard to a minimum, but the motorist and the bather still fail to take the proper precautions. Until they do, the Fourth of July will remain as the deadliest holiday on our calendar.

"ROUND TOWN"

—by Doug

Opinions expressed in this column by this writer have no connection with the general policies of this paper, being wholly those of the writer, in the manner they are written.

The question is this week, to write or not to write. The thought that prompted that question is nothing more than the weather, which is something that we have plenty of, but is certainly most uncertain, and gets the blame for many things.

Speaking of things getting the blame for other things, I am of the opinion that there are folks who are taking advantage of this so-called little depression in finances, to make excuses for not paying their bills as they should. They have got the money, but won't turn it loose, telling their creditors about the hard times. They ought to go on and turn some of it loose so some of us folks who need a little now and then can have some of it.

This warm weather coupled with hard times, it is a wonder that some people don't go crazy grumbling about it. But I bet it times were exceptionally good and the weather pleasant, some folks would just have to grumble anyway. Funny things, these humans.

I said last week that Clanton could boast of a golf links. Well, now Clanton can boast of a gun and trap club. Renfro Jones, of the Farmers Hardware Company, is president of the club and Malle White, is serving as secretary and treasurer—and, they shot every Thursday afternoon. The club has about a dozen members now. Maybe it would pay some fellows to find out just who are members of this gun club, because they get lots of shooting practice there, and you might like to stay on the good side of them. Especially if a fellow is inclined to be an "iceman"—if you know what I mean.

Well, I wonder what our movie censor is going to do about the picture, "Party Girl" showing here tonight and tomorrow. They came near having a young man in Birmingham about that picture, much to the satisfaction of the owner of the theatre showing it. He sure got a lot of publicity free of cost and I'll bet the house was packed at each showing, just because somebody tried to prevent the picture from showing there and branding it as "vulgar." As I said before, funny things, these humans.

The editor of the C. G. N. received several telephone calls last week about the Dixie Cafe invitation, which was left out of last week's paper. That just showed me that folks still like to eat, and don't mind being served in style, gratis. Mr. and Mrs. Sam Powers out at Lay Dam were the fortunate ones last week, so they were sent a special invitation to eat Sunday as guests of the cafe.

"Clantonians, Let's Talk Clanton."

I am mighty pleased with the efforts of our city officers in putting forward to keep the negroes from congregating on the sidewalk down near the railroad on Saturday nights. I understand he had to make about twenty trips down there to break it up, and by now I hope it will stop. Still, that very thing ought to be looked after.

Dr. Marcus and his family ought to be a long ways from home by now, headed toward Los Angeles. They left Saturday in their car and here's wishing them luck—good luck. Dr. said he couldn't do without his C. G. N., so he had the News sent to him way out in Los Angeles while he is on his vacation.

And I hear that Clanton is to have another Boy Scout organization soon. And I think it is time. Maybe some of our older "boys" will want to join, they seem to be scouting around a lot—especially at night.

This week's column is rotten. I know, but I had a most wonderful dream about my brunette girl friend last night, and I kind of feel dreamy this morning and in no mood to cuss and discuss. I spoke of this morning—you perhaps would like to know just when this column is written each week. That is something I couldn't be exact about. Sometimes it is written anywhere from eight o'clock to twelve o'clock at night, sometimes at seven o'clock in the morning, but very seldom, and again it may be written just at lunch time. But there is one thing that is certain about it. I sure have to be careful because there seems to be so many folks in Clanton whose conscience hurts them so much, that even if I refer to buildings, nights or the like, without specifying any particular one, they are ready to get sore. Tighten that chip down a little on your shoulder and it won't be so easy knocked off. And remember—a good way to tell on yourself is to be like the hit dog—he hollers.

"Clantonians, Let's Talk Clanton."

Towns Progress Through Organization and Co-operation

The story is told of a stage driver who was such an expert with his long whip that he was able to pick a horse fly off of a horse's ear with the whip, without touching the horse's ear. Passengers on his stage used to ask him often to give a demonstration of his skill.

One day the stage passed by a large tree in which was hanging a large hornets' nest, about which was flying a number of hornets.

"Let's see what you can do with the hornets," one passenger suggested. "Nope," the whip expert said, "nothing doing, them fellers is organized."

Organization is but another word for co-operation. It has come to be the biggest word in the business world today. On all sides, business is organizing that it may better co-operate.

Cooperation is necessary for community development. Towns like Clanton must have the united effort and resource of everyone in them to make the best of their opportunities. Division and factions but divided the effort and resource and reduce the possibilities of success.

Clanton needs the cooperation of every man in it in the big program of community development that must be kept in mind if Clanton is to progress.

Let's all get together and all work together and all pull for our town.

State Will Always Be Democratic Says Lieut. Gov. Davis

is of more importance than the gratification of personal ambitions of any man. It brought applause from the audience and after the address was concluded Governor Davis received the congratulations of supporters, who predicted that he would be the leader in the Bessemer section in the primary.

Friends of Governor Davis arranged the rally and the audience was referred to as the second largest that had been addressed by Governor Davis since the campaign began. Governor Davis discussed only highlights in his platform and devoted the greater portion of his time to an appeal for party unity and solidarity and for such a vote in the primary as will give notice to the world that democrats are determined that their State shall remain in the democratic column and that it will return to congress a solid democratic delegation in the November election.

Governor Davis said the people of the nation are tired of the republican party, are disgusted with its failures and are determined to take the government from control of republicans and put it into the hands of democratic leaders. He predicted the success of the party in the nation in November and declared it would be the forerunner of a great democratic victory in the election two years hence, when another President will be named by the American people. He urged all Alabama democrats to participate in the party primary, thus giving assurance to democrats of States where bitter political battles are fought every two years that Alabama remains solidly democratic and is determined to present to the nation a democratic delegation in the National Congress. A democratic congress will dispose of the Muscle Shoals problem in a short time and the nation's investment will be used for the benefit of the American people, Governor Davis said. He declared that Muscle Shoals would have been put to work many months ago if the development had not been located in a democratic State.

Democrats should not sulk in their tents because a majority of the State democratic committee saw fit to bar as candidates those who voted against or opposed the democratic ticket in 1928, Governor Davis said. He mentioned that 27 of the 50 members of the State committee voted to establish the rules and declared that a majority should rule, thus complying with the democratic doctrine of majority vote.

He predicted that those who refused to return to the democratic party will ultimately land in the republican party, saying that third party movements have always failed and that the democratic party has witnessed the birth and death of more than 20 political parties while it has remained strong and healthy.

"One man has dictated actions of the republican party in Alabama for many years," said Governor Davis, referring to O. D. Street, although the name was not called. "Why should any democrat ignore the policy of 27 men, who constitute a majority of the State democratic executive committee, and join one man, who controls the republican party?" he asked.

Hoover prosperity was condemned by Governor Davis and when he declared that "Alfred E. Smith is a matter of history and Herbert Hoover a matter of regret" loud applause came from the audience. He said he preached no doctrine of hate and hopes for four years of prosperity and contentment in Alabama after the success of the democratic party in the November election.

1. That no promise of tax reduction, tax increase, or appointment had ever been made or authorized, but economy must be practiced and unnecessary jobs must be abolished.
2. That labor and capital will be accorded fair treatment.
3. That any person having business with the State will be heard and partisanship will be forgotten in handling State business.
4. That nothing will be done to prevent progress in education and public health work and an adequate support of the State's eleemosynary institutions.
5. That every effort will be made to maintain good will and contentment and to advance the interest of all classes of citizens.

Governor Davis paid his respects to Judge B. M. Miller, one of his opponents, and declared that efforts to link him (Davis) with the Ku Klux Klan or to make him a part of the Graves administration were not justified by the facts. He denied that he was ever a member of the plan and stated that he had never had any part in the conduct of State affairs since Bibb Graves became Governor. He said Governor Graves should have credit for his successes and alone should be held responsible for failures during the four year term now coming to a close.

W. S. Welch, member of the Legislature with Governor Davis in 1915, made a short address in which he said he had never seen such unanimous support for any candidate in the Bessemer district as that now given to Governor Davis. He predicted an era of great progress for Alabama when Davis becomes Chief Executive.

Dr. J. W. Winter introduced Governor Davis.

Governor Graves Attacks Accusations In Address

against "those who would discredit his name" in an address at the annual banquet of the Alabama association of Commissioners at the Exchange Hotel.

With a voice that rang, Gov. Graves directed his hearers to take back to the people in the 64 counties they represented the message "that the state is not bankrupt," that it is not increasing its indebtedness but is reducing it and that with a little faith Alabama will realize the industrial greatness predicted for it by Roger Babson, the statistician.

In the beginning of the defense of his administration Gov. Graves requested as a favor that the commissioners write down figures for the last fiscal year of his administration—the year 1928-29 which closed Sept. 30, 1929.

"I think the people realize," he said, "that as Governor I have never discussed anything that was not of interest to the state, I have never replied to anything of an individual nature. But the credit of the state is being placed in jeopardy and it is solely in the interest of the state that I make these statements."

The statement he was about to give for that year—everything that was spent he said, summed up everything spent and every cent received.

The statement follows:

To cash on hand Oct. 1, 1928	$ 1,049,780.03
Cash received fiscal year 1928-29	49,634,103.08
Outstanding warrants Oct. 1, 1929	2,810,789.71
Totals	$3,494,672.82
By outstanding warrants Oct. 1, 1928	$ 3,040,070.43
Warrants drawn fiscal year 1928-29	49,131,206.77
Cash on hand Oct. 1, 1929	723,395.62
Total	$3,494,672.82

Gov. Graves called attention to the fact that during the last fiscal year from Oct. 1, 1928 to Sept. 30, 1929, there was paid into the treasury $49,634,103.08 and that the total warrants drawn during that period, which is the total expenses of the state was $49,131,206.77.

"In other words," he declared, "the state put into the treasury over $500,000 more than its total expenses, which means that the state was $500,000 ahead of last year."

Turning then to the fiscal year of 1927-28 Gov. Graves declared that on Oct. 1, 1928 the outstanding warrants totaled $3,640,000 and the cash on hand was $1,049,000 leaving a debt that year of $2,600,000 in round numbers, he said.

"The state will this fiscal year continue to decrease and not increase its indebtedness," he said. "This indebtedness of $2,600,000 was brought about in this way. The legislature met in January 1927, and made many of its appropriations effective at once—for instance, $600,000 to extend the school terms and its own expenses, which were about $600,000 whereas the revenue bill or the means by which we were to raise the money did not go into effect until the first of October following."

"The result of the appropriation running about nine months before the revenue bill started left us on Oct. 1, 1928 $2,600,000 in debt, as shown in the auditor's statement. During the following year, it would have been cut at least in half because our out-go is very much decreased in pensions and in purchases of road materials for convicts to work on roads, building penitentiaries and enlarging old ones to take care of the increase in convict population."

"The investment of about $2,500,000 in property to care for convicts, of which $750,000 alone was put into Moffett Farm at Atmore, is almost as much as the $2,600,000 deficit," Gov. Graves said. This property, however, he said, is all paid for and won't have to be bought again. From the Moffett farm, he said, has been shipped $400,000 worth of Irish potatoes and potatoes valued at about $30,000 more have been saved to feed convicts. The farm also sold about $40,000 worth of strawberries and canned and stored in the immense refrigeration plant berries that were unfit to ship.

Defends Prison Farms

"There's been a great deal said about the convicts competing with the farmers," he said. "Why the convict department raised less than 1800 bales of cotton last year but the convict mills spun 10,000 bales."

"If it is wrong to make a bale it's wrong to spin a bale. It's just as reasonable to say that a convict can't eat cornbread because it will put the price of meal up."

Gov. Graves pointed out that the Atmore farm had only 220 acres in strawberries, while total acreage in Alabama was about 39,000 acres. He asked how such a small part of the crop could possibly deflate the price.

He pointed out that only short-time convicts, or men sentenced to not over six months, were sent to the farm where they receive expert instruction that will better equip them for farming when they get out.

Gov. Graves then turned again to a discussion of the state deficit. He apparently confined his remarks to figures that were of the general fund and did not mention the trust fund in which an additional deficit of around $300,000 has been reported by the State Auditor.

Explains Deficit

"In order to show an $11,000,000 deficit for this administration," he said, "they have adopted a system of figuring that shows a deficit on Oct. 1, 1929, the end of Governor Brandon's last full year of $5,384,630.64. That system of bookkeeping is evidently adopted for the purpose of showing that this administration had a deficit of $11,000,000."

"The truth is Brandon did not leave any deficit at all. The state was not $5,500,000 in debt on the first of October, 1926, and that state was not in debt as much as $2,100,000 the first of last October. The way they arrive at these figures is that one minute after midnight on the morning of Oct. 1, they credit every educational institution so much the common schools so much and every other appropriation down the line, and when they credit these several accounts they debit the general fund that amount to balance the books. As a matter of fact, none of them are due and are only to be paid throughout the whole year. Technically, the taxes and licenses are due at the same time, but none of them are paid right then, but are paid throughout the whole year."

The revenue laws have operated better than were expected, he said, except the depression of the last few months. Another reason for the debt of his administration he said, was the doubling of the amount of pensions for Confederate veterans. During the first year of his administration the public was told that the doubling of the Confederate pensions would mean a deficit of $3,000,000, he said, and in the first year of his administration the state paid out $2,300,000.

"We knew," he said, "that it would put us in the hole to do it. But many of the veterans needed shelter, they needed food and medicine and they were too proud to ask for it. And I'm here to take the criticism with the Legislature for saving the lives of those Confederate veterans before it was too late."

Th pension list is fast decreasing he said, and this year it will take only $500,000.

We're Running Ahead

"Alabama," he shouted, "is ahead in assets over what it was four years ago, because the convict property more than covers the deficit. Alabama is $3,000,000 ahead in lives of Confederate veterans. We're running ahead now, and if conditions were normal we might reduce the deficit to a greater extent, because of spending $1,300,000 a year for pensions, we are spending only $500,000 now."

Gov. Graves closed his address with a plea to the commissioners to take the message home.

"I have not raised your taxes," he said. "I have hitched the big mules to the wagon. Have faith in one another. Help them to believe in you and see the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth in this campaign year."

NOTE.—On two items the reporter was not clear.

First, as to pension expenditures dropping from $1,300,000 the first full year to $500,000 the closing year, this is the drop in the General Fund's share. The total drop is from $2,300,000 to $1,600,000. This difference is nearly the same.

The second error of the reporter was that potatoes on hand were $30,000 in value. This should have been 3,000 bushels.

More than $4,000 in currency was found stitched in a second hand sofa sold at auction in Dublin.

When Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Colwell of London were committed to jail for fighting in the street the husband requested that his wife's term be deferred until he had completed his.

A contract has been let for cutting the hair of poorhouse inmates in Belfast, at one-fourth the regular price.

Left in a mud bath all day by a beauty parlor attendant who forgot her, Mrs. Elizabeth Paine of London has sued for $25,000 damages.

Robert McClure of Dublin testified that he put methylated spirits in his pigs' food to make them sleek.

Mrs. Ida Dunning has succeeded her father as sexton of a church in London and will dig all the graves.

SENATOR WATT T. BROWN

Widely Known Mine Owner, Banker
And Legislator Seeks Promotion

(Reprinted from The Birmingham News, Birmingham, Ala.)

(Editor's Note: This is one of a series of sketches the News is running about candidates for leading offices in Alabama.)

Many years of public service are brought by Watt T. Brown to his present candidacy for the Democratic nomination for Governor. He has been before the public eye in more ways than any of the six aspirants for the office, and at present is president pro-tem of the State Senate and Alabama member of the National Democratic Executive Committee.

Outstanding among his endeavors have been those on behalf of vocational education. He was in the midst of several fights which led to the passage by Congress of the Smith-Lever and Smith-Hughes legislation on behalf of rural education. The Alabama School of Trades at Gadsden is largely his work, and he is now chairman of the school's board of trustees.

Mine Owner And Banker

Mr. Brown was born in 1865 on a farm near Kymulga, Talladega County, Alabama. Later the family moved to Ohatchie, Calhoun County, where he lived until he was 18. He then opened a small store at Ragland. From this, his first business venture, he entered into the operation of coal mines, in which he has been engaged until the present. He was the organizer of the Bank of Ragland, and has varied business interests.

His first public office was that of alderman in his home town. He was also mayor of Rayland 10 years. He served also as one of the registrars of St. Clair County and as member and later chairman of his county Democratic Executive Committee.

Engages In State Politics

Mr. Brown's career in state politics began in 1902 with his election to the House of Representatives. He was the first Democratic representative from St. Clair County in 12 years. During this term he was instrumental in getting a law enacted exempting cotton mills from taxation for 10 years and another law permitting a good roads issue for St. Clair County. This latter marked the beginning of his interest in good roads.

In 1908, Mr. Brown broadened his political interests further by representing the Seventh District in the Alabama delegation to the Democratic National Convention which nominated Bryan.

Mr. Brown was elected to the State Senate in 1910, again in 1918, and again in 1926. In the alternate terms he was not eligible to run because of the custom in the Sixth District of alternating between the Etowah and St. Clair Counties in the selection of the State Senator. In the 1910 term, Mr. Brown was chairman of the Senate Education Committee. He put through the bill establishing the School of Trades and also was instrumental in enacting into law the rural library bill.

In the 1918 session, Mr. Brown was author of several bills enacted into law. One of them drafted the present pension laws and raised the amount of pensions for Confederate soldiers and their widows. Another provided state funds to match the federal appropriation under the Smith-Lever bill. In the present Legislature, of which he is president pro-tem of the Senate, he put through a joint resolution asking for a full investigation of school textbooks in the State.

Active For Education

In the meantime, Mr. Brown had been active in other ways in his efforts for education. In co-operation with Senator Underwood, he called a meeting in Birmingham in 1913 of the heads of schools concerned in aid to agriculture, the trades and mechanical arts. He acted as chairman of this meeting, which authorized the drafting of a bill for presentation in Congress by Under-

Are You Perplexed By One Of These Common
Beauty Problems?

I ALWAYS answer personally every beauty inquiry I receive, but so many of you have written to me about the same beauty problems that today I want to answer a few of these typical questions here. I know that many of you who have not written to me yet also must be bothered with the same problems:

E. B. writes: "The skin on my eyelids and under my eyes is drawn and dry. What can I do about this?"

Reply: Never go to bed without applying plenty of tissue cream or skin food all around your eyes. This cream will be absorbed during the night, and will help the oil glands in your skin to perform their natural function of keeping your skin soft and lubricated. Nothing shows age so quickly as this dried-up condition of the eyelids, and nothing is so easy to prevent if you will use tissue cream or skin food every night.

M. R. P. inquires: "What can I do about my elbows? They are becoming rough and hard."

Reply: Brush your elbows with a firm but not too stiff hand brush when you bathe. This will remove the little hardened bits of skin that tend to form. Every night put a bit of skin food or tissue cream into the palms of your hands and rub it into your elbows. This will keep your skin soft and smooth. Then, before going out in the evening apply powder lotion to your elbows.

T. D. S. writes: "My skin is very dry, and I am afraid that frequent bathing, especially during cool weather, will take too much oil out of my skin."

Reply: Be sure to use a pure, mild soap. Then after your bath always rub your body with muscle oil. This will stimulate your skin, and help to prevent it from becoming too dry.

M. S. G. asks: "How can I prevent a shiny nose?"

Reply: Shiny noses often occur because the skin is inclined to be oily. After cleansing your skin thoroughly with cleansing cream, wash your face with warm water and a pure, mild soap. Then tighten your pores with a mild astringent before applying foundation cream, powder and rouge. A good astringent will tighten up your skin and prevent too much oil coming out on your face to spoil the lovely, smooth effect for which you are striving.

Besides this external treatment, oily skins usually require some definite treatment from the inside. Incorrect diet has much to do with oily skins, and as a rule cutting down on sweets and starches will help to cure this condition. I would not advise you to begin a strenuous diet without first consulting your doctor, but you can safely use a little care in selecting your food.

wood. This bill carried all the essential points later embodied in the Smith-Hughes and Smith-Lever legislation.

During a meeting of the Southern Education Association in Louisville, Ky., in 1914, after delivering a speech on rural leadership, Mr. Brown was appointed chairman of a committee to draft a resolution, later unanimously adopted by the association, which had for its purpose putting several bills through Congress now on the statute books, such as co-operative marketing, cheaper money for men of small means, referring in the main to farmers; a wise system of vocational education both for city and country.

Mr. Brown's Objectives

Four major objectives, says Mr. Brown, have dominated his business and political life; increased educational facilities, and an improved educational system of the State; an adequate and progressive method of constructing and maintaining public roads and highways; development of the State's resources, and last, but not least, opportunity for sufficient training in the trades, to enable masses of the people to share more equally in the prosperity incidental to such development.

On November 12th, 1902, Mr. Brown was married at Ashville, Ala., to Mrs. Lila Inzer Freeman, daughter of Col. and Mrs. John W. Inzer. Col. Inzer was the youngest member of the Inzer session Convention and its last survivor. There are three children. Mr. Brown is a member of the Methodist Church and the Knights of Pythias.

FLAG 153 YEARS OLD

Flag Day, on June 14, commemorated the anniversary of the adoption of the Stars and Stripes as the national emblem by act of Congress 153 years ago.

During the Revolutionary War a number of unofficial flags of various designs appeared among the regiments of the Continental army. A flag adopted in 1775, had 13 alternate red and white stripes, representing the 13 colonies, but carried the British crosses of St. George and St. Andrew in a blue canton, to indicate that allegiance to the King had not been renounced. Even after the Declaration of Independence in 1776 this flag was displayed by forts and ships for several months.

But on June 14, 1777, Congress officially adopted a new flag, in the following resolution:

"Resolved that the flag of the 13 United States be 13 stripes, alternate red and white; that the Union be 13 stars, white in a blue field, representing a new constellation.

When Vermont and Kentucky were admitted to the Union two stripes were added to the flag, making 15. But it was seen that the addition of a stripe for each state would spoil the symmetry of the flag, so in 1818 Congress provided that in future there should be only the original 13 stripes, but that a star should be added for each new state.

The pretty tradition that Betsy Ross made the first flag according to a design suggested by Washington has been popularly accepted, but historians doubt its authenticity.

Since its establishment in 1896, the observance of Flag Day has become widespread and is the occasion for patriotic exercises, in which reverence for the flag and all it stands for is inculcated. The Order of Elks has adopted a most inspiring ritual for its Flag Day ceremonies.

A Lincoln girl sued a boy friend who squeezed her so hard as to break three ribs. Those Nebraska lads pet—and how.

OPPORTUNITY SCHOOLS OPENED LAST MONDAY

Reports from the Opportunity schools over the county this week stated that fourteen white schools and nine colored schools opened for classes last Monday morning, with fair attendance.

It is hoped that more will enroll before the week is out. A detailed report will be published in next week's issue.

THE HORSE IN AMERICA

It is natural to think of Indians of the early days riding furiously on their horses and ponies as they did during the long period of Indian Wars, in which the Redskins battled with United States troops in the West.

But the Indian got his first horses of modern times from the white man, according to J. W. Gidley of the National Museum, who declares that at the time of the discovery of America the Western hemisphere was horseless. All the horses that exist here today are descendants of those brought by Europeans.

Going back to the Pleistocene or Ice Age, however, fossils show that many horses roamed over both North and South America, these being almost of modern type, similar in appearance to horses of the present. How they came to disappear has not been explained.

Going still further, remains are found of many varieties of primitive horses in America, some not larger than a shepherd dog, with three and even four toes. The earliest horses of all had five toes, the primitive number for all animals having a backbone, but no remains of five-toed horses have been found on this continent so far. The eyes of some of the early breeds were far down on the head, midway between the ears and the nose. The oldest horses were no larger than a fox.

The magnificent Percherons and other large breeds of today were they able to understand, would look upon their ancestors with as great contempt as certain humans feel for the theory that we are evolved from arboreal progenitors.

The Mazaroff Mystery

By J. S. FLETCHER

THE STORY

Mervyn Holt is engaged by a man calling himself Mazaroff as a traveling companion. After a short tour they put up at the Woodcock inn on Marradale moor. They meet, casually, Mrs. Elphinstone and Sheila Merchison. Mazaroff tells Holt they are his wife and daughter and that his real name is Merchison. That night Mazaroff falls to return to the inn and his disappearance is unexplained. Holt meets Sheila and tells her of Mazaroff's disappearance. They go to her cousin's (Vernon Courthope's) shooting box hoping to find some word of Mazaroff. There they meet Mr. Armitrade and Doctor Ecclestone. Holt is questioned by Police Sergeant Manners and a reporter, Bonnas. Mazaroff's murdered body is found. Crole, Mazaroff's lawyer, and Maythorne, private detective, arrive. Valuable diamonds that Mazaroff usually carried are missing. Mrs. Elphinstone scoffs at the idea that Mazaroff is Merchison and produces apparent proofs of his death. A gun, stolen from Musgrave, is found at the scene of the murder. Evidence at the inquest proves Mazaroff was Merchison. His will leaves all to Holt.

"You and the deceased gentleman were very close friends, I think?" he said quietly. "Such close friends that he leaves you all his money—a vast fortune!—and appoints you sole executor of his last will and testament—and yet never even mentions the matter of his good intentions and your extraordinary luck to you!" he said, with what was almost a sneer. "You're sure about your memory?"

"I'm sure of something else than my memory!" I retorted hotly. "I know nothing whatever about Mazaroff's will. I never knew he'd made one. And I'm very sure that if his will is found, and I have to handle his money, I shall just transfer it to whom it belongs—to his widow and daughter."

But Crole had got a hand on my arm by that time, and was dragging at me.

"Sit down, Holt, you d-d young ass!" he muttered strenuously. "Sit down!—leave this to me." He, too, got on his legs—his voice sounded suave and placatory as he turned to the coroner.

"I think, sir, that this has scarcely anything to do with the object of this inquiry. I suggest that the inquest be adjourned until—"

"I'm about to do that," broke in the coroner. "During the next few days, more light will doubtless be thrown on all these matters." He turned to the open-mouthed jurymen. "This day fortnight, gentlemen, and in the meantime—"

I paid no heed to the coroner's platitudes about keeping open minds—my own mind was in a whirl of indignation against Mrs. Elphinstone's solicitor. But when I turned in her direction, I saw that Mrs. Elphinstone herself had crossed over from her seat and was talking earnestly to me. Presently he came up to me, with a half-amused, half-ingratiating smile.

"You're a bit hot-tempered, Mr. Holt," he said. "Come, come—I was only speaking professionally, you know—professional manners, after all, are—"

"Confoundedly offensive, sir, if that's a specimen of them!" I retorted. "You were inferring that—"

"Now, now, I wasn't inferring anything!" he interrupted soothingly. "The interest of my client to consider, I say again, it's an odd thing that Mazaroff or Ecclestone didn't mention his will to you. But the whole thing's odd." He went on, looking round, "and what I suggest is that we legal gentlemen and the parties concerned just have a talk, if we can find a place to talk in."

I took them into the private sitting room which Mazaroff and I had chartered and I still retained—the three solicitors, Mr. and Mrs. Elphinstone, and Sheila. The solicitors did most of the talking that followed: it was all about the chances of recovering the missing will and the possibilities of settling up the original draft—which was wholly in Mazaroff's handwriting and also bore his signature—if no recovery was made. The discussion didn't interest me. I resolved, after what I had heard, that I should never touch one penny of the dead man's money.

Suddenly Crole smote the table at which he was sitting. "Who murdered this man?" he exclaimed, with emphasis. "That's the question! Who murdered him, and why? He was a man of mystery, evidently. And as I've asked before—as he murdered as Mazaroff, or as Merchison? I think we may have to go back—perhaps a long way. But it seems to me that the murder must be cleared up, as a start."

Just then Maythorne came in, closing the door behind him.

"Gathered anything?" asked Crole. "Well—something," answered Maythorne. "No secret about it, either. Mazaroff tells us that a certain man named Parslave, Ralph Parslave, better known as Ratty, who lives in a cottage on the outskirts of Birnside, has never been home since the day of that fair. He's a man who lives by himself and seems to be a sort of odd-job man; occasional drover, game-watcher, rat-catcher—"

"Everybody knows Ratty Parslave!" interjected Sheila. "He's a local celebrity."

"Just so," said Maythorne. "Well, the police have ascertained that he came in here, in company with other men, drovers and so on, returning from the fair, on the evening of the murder. He was one of the company to which Mazaroff stood drinks and cigars. Of course the police have already got a theory—they think that Parslave, who, they say, has been in what they call trouble before, saw Mazaroff make a display—unconsciously—of his money. They think he slipped out of the barroom, perhaps with no very definite intention; that chancing to pass the open door of this private room he saw Musgrave's gun hanging on those hooks, stepped in, took it down and cleared off with it; that he afterward followed Mazaroff across the moor, shot him dead, and robbed him; after that throwing the gun away where it was found, and clearing out with the proceeds of his crime. That, I say, is the police theory."

"And what do you think of it?" asked Wetherby.

"It's a good theory—from a policeman's point of view," said Maythorne. "There may be a great deal in it. But speaking for myself, I should like to know more about the dead man's personal, private history, recent as well as past. One matter in particular needs clearing up. He told Mr. Holt that he wanted to see some man here at Marradale. Who was that man? Did he see him?"

Nobody of course, could answer that question, and the conference broke up. We buried Mazaroff—or Merchison—that afternoon, very quietly, and in the evening Webster drove Crole, Maythorne and myself to Black Gill Junction, where we caught the night mail for London. For Maythorne was unusually keen on seeing the officials at the Imperial Banking Corporation of South Africa, and on finding out all he could about Mazaroff in general, and the receipt for the registered letter indorsed "B.L. D. 1," in particular. At half past ten next morning we were all three closeted with an important personage of the bank, who, as soon as he knew our business, became keenly interested about Mazaroff and the circumstances of his death. I believed he was going to prove a valuable aid, but as soon as he saw the receipt and its date he shook his head.

"Ah!" he said. "The man who would deal with Mazaroff's account and letters, at the date of this receipt, is no longer here. He was Mr. Armitrade—he left us six months since, to become manager of Courthope's."

I think it was greatly to my credit that I controlled my features and the rest of me when this sudden announcement was made, neither staring nor starting at the mention of Armitrade's name. Even Crole, old and hardened man of law that he was, could not refrain from a very slight start of surprise. Maythorne, of course, showed no surprise; his face, always cheerful and bright, betrayed nothing.

"I know Courthope's—by reputation," he remarked. "Then—yourself can't tell us anything very much about Mazaroff?"

"I can tell you what I know," replied our informant, evidently quite willing to talk. "We know Mazaroff as a very wealthy man who had extensive dealings in trading affairs, and latterly in diamonds and other precious stones, in the East, and in South Africa. He kept his principal account at our Cape Town headquarters, but for years he has had a smaller account here as well. Lately, he transferred his Cape Town account here; he also realized all his various properties and paid the proceeds in English securities."

"Then you hold a considerable sum of his?" suggested Crole. "We understand that it is about eight hundred thousand pounds?"

"About that, I dare say," assented the manager, almost indifferently. "Rather more, I fancy. Oh, yes—a wealthy man! And the will, you say, is lost?"

"Missing temporarily, we hope," said Crole. "But Postlewhite has the original draft, in Mazaroff's own handwriting, and signed by Mazaroff. Can you tell us anything of Mazaroff personally?"

"Next to nothing," answered the manager. "He called here, just once, some time after his arrival in London. I saw him—in this very room. He wasn't here five minutes. He said he was just going for a tour in the north of England, and would look in on his return, a few weeks hence. And—that's all."

A few minutes later we all left. And once outside the great door of the bank, Crole gave Maythorne a sharp glance.

"Um!" he said. "Armitrade!"

"Just so!" said Maythorne. "As you say—Armitrade!"

"A man might have reasons, when a man he knows is murdered under his very nose, for not coming forward to say that he knows him," observed Crole. "But—I think, considering everything, that if I'd been in Armitrade's position the other day I should have said, 'I know this man—he's so-and-so, and I'll tell you all I know about him.' Eh?"

"I'll tell you what I think," Maythorne said. "Armitrade is the man whom Mazaroff wanted to see at Marradale moor! Now then—did he know him? Holt doesn't know—nobody knows—at least, nobody that we've heard of. But—Armitrade's the man! Armitrade, as we've just heard, did all Mazaroff's business at the bank weeks, just left—it was into Armitrade's hands that the registered letter of which I've got the receipt in my pocket would fall. We must have a little talk with Armitrade. But before that—" he paused and waved his hand to a passing taxicab—"before that we're going to examine Mazaroff's rooms and belongings at the Hotel Cecil."

The three of us were presently in the rooms wherein I had first met the dead man. Maythorne made some discoveries that were of use, if of no great apparent moment. In an old trunk he found some schoolbooks; on the desk of each was written the name Andrew Merchison, with dates: these he handed to Crole.

"There's no doubt whatever that he was Merchison," said Crole, turning these things over. "It's not likely that he'd have kept these books else. These will come in handy to show to Mrs. Elphinstone. But I wish there were more papers."

Maythorne, however, found some papers—in a letter case that lay in a drawer, unlocked, in Mazaroff's writing table. These were letters—private letters, all, with one exception, written recently from Cape Town by a Mr. Herman Kloof, who appeared to be a close personal friend of Mazaroff. There was next to nothing about business affairs in them—they were chiefly filled with gossip, club gossip, personal details, and such matters: the sort of stuff exchanged by old cronies. But they had this value, observed Maythorne—he now had a name and address in Cape Town to which he could cable for certain information about the dead man.

The one letter not written by this Mr. Herman Kloof was in the same case that held the Kloof letters, but in an envelope which bore on its flap the impressed seal of the Imperial Banking Corporation of South Africa, with the address of the London branch. Maythorne immediately drew attention to the postmark, and date: the letter had been posted in London on the previous 3rd of January.

"From Armitrade to Mazaroff, without doubt," said Maythorne. Then his face fell.

"Written in cipher?" he exclaimed. The sheet of notepaper was almost filled with writing. But to us it was all so much unmeaning jargon: we could make neither head nor tail of it. There were, however, certain things on the sheet of paper which were plain enough. The paper itself was the ordinary letter paper of the bank, with its title and address engraved at the top of the front page. The letter began in understandable English: "Dear Mr. Mazaroff. And it ended in plain English—Yours faithfully, John Armitrade. But all that went between a hotch-potch of cabalistic words and figures, was so much double Dutch to all three of us.

"A cipher!" repeated Maythorne. "Mazaroff, of course, would have a key. In his pocketbook, no doubt, and therefore stolen. Well—it's more evident than ever that we must have a little conversation with Mr. John Armitrade."

We left the hotel. Maythorne immediately hurried off to the nearest telegraph office: he was keen on cabling to Mr. Herman Kloof for some highly necessary news of Mazaroff. And as it was then well past noon, Crole and I turned into Romano's for some lunch.

"This is a queer business, Holt," said Crole as we settled down in a comfortable and quiet corner. "I mean—what we've found out this morning."

"For a few minutes only," I replied. "What sort, is he?" he asked. "You'd have thought that he'd have come forward and said that he'd had business dealings with Mazaroff. Instead—not a word!"

"He looks the sort of man who would probably reply to that that Mazaroff's death was no concern of his," I suggested. "He gives one that impression."

"Aye, well," remarked Crole, "we shall just have to find out a few things—leave it to Maythorne."

I left Crole after lunch and went home to my quiet afternoon tea, and a quiet evening, and I went to bed early. And at nine o'clock next morning, in came Maythorne.

"Had a cable late last night from Cape Town," he announced. "Mr. Herman Kloof is in London—at the First Avenue hotel. Come along—we'll collect Crole, and interview Kloof, at once."

RECOGNIZE HEROES OF PEACE

By RABBI F. M. ISSERMAN, St. Louis.

WHY should we only dedicate days of memorial to the honor of those who served their country on the battlefield? Why have we not days of memorial for those who lost their lives serving their country, less dramatically, but yet as effectively, and in the same sacrificial spirit?

Is a country only served on the battlefield? Are there not other services equally important and demanding as much heroism, as much devotion and as much consecration?

Why could not Memorial day be expanded so that the heroes of peace shall be placed on a par with the heroes of the war, so that the coal miner who loses his life to make our homes warm, our children healthy and to furnish power to our mills and factories, shall receive the recognition due to his sacrifice?

Are not the mothers who lose their lives bearing new life into the world deserving of just as much national approbation as those boys who fell on the battlefield? Do not these mothers reveal the same heroism?

What of the scientists who in their laboratories inoculate themselves with deadly germs and quietly and unobtrusively fall victims to their cottage and their desire to serve their countrymen? Shall they be ignored when only the man who bears arms is recognized?

Our Memorial day is a good institution, but its present narrow scope should be widened to include all those who have served their country well. By doing this we shall encourage good citizenship in times of peace as well as dramatic martyrdom in time of war.

"DOLLAR WISDOM" GREAT NEED

By ELMER BROWN, Chancellor New York University.

To use the dollar wisely is half the wisdom of our daily life. Money is a tool, a weapon, a power. In the rearing of children, we try to limit their possession of dangerous implements until they are old enough to use them with caution and foresight.

Similarly, it would be a gain to public safety if money might come into the hands of only those with the moral maturity and intelligence to use it wisely. The dollar is sifting out the souls of men, and on a gigantic scale, beyond all precedent, it is sifting out the soul of America.

Higher education is spreading abroad among our people at an unusual rate. In 1923, 11 per cent of the men and women of college age were in college, compared to 4 per cent in 1915.

Graduates have for four years or more been in daily contact with values that could not be measured in money.

They have dipped rather deeply into pure sciences, in which the interest lies in the discovery of truth regardless of its application to money-making inventions. They have made some acquaintance with beauty, as expressed in letters, music and the other arts. These experiences may help them to put money values in their place as related to the other values of human life.

FASCISM BOUND TO FALL

By PROF. NILES CARPENTER, University of Buffalo.

Communism, Fascism and Puritanism fail because coercion breeds resistance and lets loose bigotry, persecutions, self-righteousness and sadistic cruelty. There are four possible ways in which religion may be related to the social order. The first is theocracy, but may be dismissed as impracticable in the face of Christendom. A second form of religious attitude toward society is otherworldliness or retreat from the actualities of everyday life. A third is to suppress religion, but this, too, has failed in the past.

Fascism is a religion of the state essentially as zealous and bloody as the Moloch worship of the ancient world. A society that is governed by masters who are controlled merely by their own sordid desires and egotistic whims is not likely to survive.

The fourth alternative is a society animated by a regard for ideals and aspirations that are beyond matter-of-fact demonstrations. No man can prove the existence of these ideals or these spiritual forces. It can be said, however, that they are universal to human experience and that today, no less than in remotest antiquity, they give meaning, purpose and strength to human life.

GOOD IN EXAGGERATED EGO

By B. E. SUNNY, Executive Illinois Bell Telephone Co.

It's far better for a young man starting out in the world to have an exaggerated ego than an inferiority complex. If I had to choose between a young man of extraordinary ego and one with an inferiority complex, I should choose the former.

While aggressiveness and conceit may be unpleasant, the aggressive man is likely to make others think. Napoleon and Roosevelt were examples of the egoist. One would not have become emperor of France and the other would not have built the Panama canal if they had been timorous.

I have sympathy for the studious, retiring young man who is afflicted with an inferiority complex, but I urge him to rid himself of it. It will be a heavy burden on his consciousness. If we don't fit into the world as it is, we are failures.

DANGER IN LEISURE HOURS

By DR. W. K. COOPER, Past General Secretary Y. M. C. A.

Churches and other character-building agencies have not kept pace with commercialized amusements in making the most of youth's leisure time. The unparalleled resources of this country, together the inventive genius of our people and their tireless industry, have produced two blessings which may carry with them elements of danger. The average young man of today will spend not more than 40 hours per week in earning a living. He will have not less than that amount of time free to engage in pleasure, study or whatever he will.

The church and the character-building agencies have quite overlooked this unusual opportunity to deal with youth at this most important point, while commercial amusements have taken full advantage of it.

Provisions Necessary for Week-End Trip

There is now one motor vehicle for every five persons in the United States, according to the United States bureau of public roads, or one for every family. There is no doubt but that a great number of families of moderate means who would not have dreamed of taking frequent week-end outings a few years ago are now able to enjoy the possession of a car and the opportunity to use it for recreation in the open air.

Considerable distance may be covered in a Saturday-noon to Sunday-night trip, or more leisurely driving to favorite nearby picnic or camping grounds may be preferred. From the mother's point of view such outings are a blessed release from the former drudgery of Sunday spent cooking and clearing up the biggest dinner of the whole week. Everybody enjoys them, and with a little planning they may be both easy and inexpensive.

In planning what food must be carried, as three or four meals will probably be eaten on the road, the prime consideration is the keeping quality. Unless some sort of traveling refrigerator is taken along, it is best to select for the second day's meals foods that do not require being to be palatable or safe to eat. A small camp cooking kit is a very satisfactory part of the week-end equipment. It should include a frying pan and a saucepan, a coffee or tea pot, and some plates and cups suitable for serving hot foods and beverages.

For the first picnic supper one may choose among the entire range of fresh cooked meats or chicken, or if the weather is cool, bring hamburger patties or chops to broil over the camp fire. Salad ingredients like tomatoes, lettuce, celery and cucumber may be carried, to be put together when wanted, or potato salad made at home and brought in a glass jar or cardboard carton. Except for tomatoes and cucumbers, which keep well because of their skins, none of these foods should be planned for the second day. The more perishable fruits, such as berries, cherries, fresh pineapple cut up and put in a glass jar, or fresh apple sauce, are best the first day. Hot coffee and ice cold milk may be brought from home in thermos bottles. If lemon juice is squeezed and sweetened ready for mixing into lemonade it will be a refreshing beverage to serve. If sandwiches are wanted, have them the first day. Loaf cake, cup cakes and cookies all travel well, especially if put in a tight tin box.

For a camp fire dinner the second day, the bureau of home economics suggests fried dried beef and scrambled eggs. Both the "makins" for this dish can be safely transported without ice. Let the boys of the family help to cook this dish. With it have tomatoes or cucumbers, and buns, either plain or toasted, as they will not dry out as much as loaf bread. Fruit for dessert on the second day may be oranges or whole pineapple, cut up in sections when wanted. Some of the cake from the day before may be left.

A good hot dish for supper the second day will appeal to everybody. A vegetable chowder may be made of potatoes, bacon, or salt pork, canned or dried milk, onion, and celery if possible. Or one of the excellent canned chowders, reheated on the spot, may be depended on, with crackers as the breadstuff. Cheese may be served at this meal, with the crackers, and marmalade or jam. Hot-tied grape juice will be good for a fruit drink the second day.

In the picnic kit, in addition to whatever cooking utensils are liked, one might keep permanently a bottle opener, can opener, bread knife, table knives, forks, spoons; plates and cups of metal, or paper; paper napkins and waxed lunch paper; salt, pepper, loaf sugar, a small can of evaporated milk—and a box of matches for the camp fire.

Seeing Big League BASEBALL

By BILLY EVANS
Sportswriter, Big League Umpire
and General Manager of the
Cleveland Indians

Why people throw pop bottles at ball games to show their disgust at the umpire's decisions is beyond me. And while I'm on the pop bottle subject, let me say that of all the despicable and cowardly acts in any way associated with our national game, I regard the practice of bottle throwing as the worst. All the more despicable because there is no provocation for it whatever. All the more cowardly because the thrower believes himself unseen by his intended victim. Let the fan howl his head off at a decision he doesn't like—or at any player he doesn't like. That's his privilege, as long as he doesn't carry it too far and add low insult. But let that be enough.

When I was hit by a bottle at St. Louis and badly injured, I came near being avenged right then and there. The indignation of the fair-minded fans who don't approve of such tactics manifested itself when they threatened the very life of the unfortunate culprit who had hit me. It was necessary to send in a riot call to get him safely out of the park.

Yes, I learned who it was that threw the bottle. So many people in discussing the happening, ask me if I did. A few days after my accident I was lying in my hospital bed, my aching head in an ice pack, when one of the sisters came to my bedside to inquire how I was. It was my first rational moment since entering the hospital. It was Sister Josephine talking to me—gentle Sister Josephine, whose acts of mercy and tenderness, whose kindness to me, I shall never forget. I feel I owe my life to the care given me by the Sisters of Charity.

And then she told me that some of the flowers in my room had been sent by a family that called to inquire about me every day. It was the family of the boy who had thrown the bottle—for it was a boy who had done it. They were very solicitous about me and the boy wanted so badly to see me. But I was in no condition to see anyone. Talking with anyone directly involved in the affair could not be anything but harmful to me, the doctors said. So they refused to let anyone see me. They wanted to know if I wouldn't consent to drop the case against the boy.

"Tell them that the case is not in my hands. It is in the hands of Mr. Johnson and the American league," I had Sister Josephine tell them.

But each day a bunch of beautiful flowers would come, brought by the boy who had hit me. And each day he pleaded—so the nurses told me—to be allowed to see me so he might ask my forgiveness. And I was getting better all the time, so one day I said to Sister Josephine, after she had

Pirate Outfielder is Well Schooled in Baseball Game

Adam Comorosky, outfielder with the Pittsburgh Pirates, was well schooled before he earned a permanent berth with the Bucs. His hitting has been a great help to the Pirates in the 1930 pennant chase.

In 1925, Comorosky, a native of Pennsylvania's coal belt, starred with the Waynesboro club of the Blue Ridge league. The next year he graduated to Williamsport of the N. Y. P. league. Then the Pirates got him and sent him to Wichita for a season and the next year advanced him to Indianapolis. Adam learned so fast he didn't need a full year at Indianapolis and was brought in to the Bucs late in the 1928 season.

Since that time he has been more or less of a regular, although it was hard breaking in at first with the told me that the boy was again waiting, "let him come in, then."

And so they brought him to me. He came over to my bed and fell to his knees and sobbed his troubled heart out. I was moved to tears myself. "Nothing but a kid," I thought. "Just an unthinking boy and now a mighty sorry boy."

He told me how terribly sorry he was. Would I get well? Could I ever forgive him for the terrible thing he had done? And that was embarrassing to me in the extreme.

But that was not all. Still the flowers came and then, one day, the family's lawyer, prepared to come to an agreement on a "cash settlement."

"I don't want any money," I told him. "You can't pay me for my weeks in the hospital, and money can't compensate me for the fact that I was almost killed, but for the sake of the boy, I'll intercede with my boss, B. B. Johnson, president of the American league, and if he's willing to call it off, I am."

And that's what I did. Mr. Johnson didn't like it one bit, but there was no prosecution.

Good Health Rate for Army Posts in Hawaii

The report of Maj. Gen. M. W. Ireland, surgeon general of the United States army, declares that Hawaii has proved to be the healthiest spot of all the world where American troops have been stationed. The records of the Hawaiian department headquarters bear out that assertion fully. Both in the number of admissions to hospitals and in number of deaths per thousand troops, Hawaii's rate is the lowest of any army post or station. The proportion of communicable disease cases is also very low there. Due to the mild climate the troops are able to be out of doors every day in the year and, indeed, could be under canvas most of that time without any hardship. Only the occasional heavy tropical rains, and never cold weather, interrupt the normal outdoor routine of military drill and practice. Mothers and fathers whose sons are serving in the army in Hawaii may feel satisfied that their boys are in what Uncle Sam considers the most healthful spot anywhere under his flag.

The day after the smash he told his advisor: "I am like the man who wrote a letter for publication endorsing a patent medicine."

Growing to Order

The public asks for more A&P

The tales Americans are the proudest of are those of poor boys who rose to greatness, and of modest business ventures that became great industries.

Like many early American businesses, A&P was once small but hopeful—a single little store. About all A&P could call its own in 1859 was its red painted front and the belief that women like good food at low prices.

The first A&P store was a busy store—so busy that a second store was added, then a third; and . . . the little business grew up. It became a leader among food merchants, slowly and naturally, unaided by vast capital or mergers.

Ask yourself why A&P grew . . . It grew because the public accepted and encouraged A&P's methods of doing business. The A&P store in your neighborhood is there because great numbers of women want it there.

A&P is a little store that made good.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

Called in special session by President Hoover, the senate last week began consideration of the London naval treaty. Only 58 members—nine more than a quorum—answered the roll call the first day. During the week some were returned to the National Capital, while several others departed on various missions.

A message from the President opened the proceedings. He urged ratification of the treaty, which he explained and defended at considerable length. Mr. Hoover said that on January 1 last the ratios of the three naval powers in ships actually built were: The United States, 100; Great Britain, 113, and Japan, 65, while under the treaty they will be: United States, 100; Great Britain, 102.4, and Japan, 63.6.

With regard to the criticism that the American delegation accepted an agreement providing three fewer eight-inch gun cruisers than our navy general board had declared the irreducible minimum, the President said that this objection "revolves around less than 3 per cent of our whole fleet." And the question as to this 3 per cent of tonnage, he added, is whether "30,000 tons of ships armed with eight inch guns are better than 38,000 tons armed with a 6 inch gun," a question upon which "our high naval authorities are divided."

"Every solitary fact which affects judgment upon the treaty is known," said the President in conclusion, "and the document itself comprises the sole obligation of the United States. If we fall now the world will be again plunged backward from its progress toward peace."

THE administration forces continued confident that the pact would be ratified, but they were given much concern by the determined attempt to have the President transmit to the senate the suppressed documents which he had declined to give up. Senator McKellar of Tennessee led this fight and was supported not only by other opponents of the treaty but also by some who had announced their intention of voting for ratification.

"The demand we are making is a demand of right on the part of the equal of the Executive in treaty making," said Senator McKellar, "and consequently cannot be incompatible with the public interest."

On the other hand, Senator Reed of Pennsylvania, one of the delegates to London, who has had access to the secret documents, more than intimated that they contain picturesque animadversions by Ambassador Charles G. Dawes upon Prime Minister MacDonald and other British statesmen, the disclosure of which would necessitate recall of the ambassador and otherwise play havoc with Anglo-American relations.

Senator Robinson of Arkansas, another delegate, hinted the same thing, saying: "Some of these messages contain references to other governments which if disclosed might make us ridiculous. Such resentments might be created in other countries that the treaty would not be ratified by them."

Finally a modified resolution was adopted by a vote of 53 to 4 requesting the President to submit to the senate all documents bearing on the treaty.

"If not incompatible with the public interest" to do so. It also asked the President to make recommendations as to their use.

GOVERNMENT activities for the relief of veterans of all wars are now co-ordinated. Under a law enacted by congress last before it adjourned, the President issued an executive order which provides for the grouping of the veterans bureau, which has been an independent agency handling only matters connected with veterans of the World War, the pension bureau, which has been under the Interior department and has handled pensions for veterans of the Civil, Spanish and earlier wars, and the national home for disabled volunteer soldiers, which has been under the War department, under a new veterans administration. The President designated Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, for several years director of the veterans bureau, as veterans administrator in charge of the new organization at a salary of $12,000. The three agencies which are co-ordinated will retain their separate identities within the veterans administration and a new director will be appointed for the veterans bureau. Present officials of the pension bureau and of the soldiers home will retain their positions.

IN THE hard wheat belt many of the farmers are not taking kindly to the efforts of the farm board to bring about reduction of wheat acreage and change to other crops. When the board's reduction mission went to Hays, Kan., in furtherance of its purpose, Gov. Clyde M. Reed of the Sunflower state appeared as a spokesman for the opponents of the plan, which he said was unfair to the hard wheat belt where conditions prevented the growing of other crops to advantage. Charging that present wheat prices are not justified by world conditions, he called upon the farm board to exercise the powers granted it by the agricultural marketing act to protect the wheat farmer.

Replying to Governor Reed's institution of farm board "inaction," Chairman Legge said that wheat "already had received in the board's stabilization operation twice its proportionate share" of the $500,000,000 relief fund.

STATISTICS prepared by the old dry bureau under Doran show that prohibition enforcement during its last fiscal year under the Treasury department resulted in the arrest of 98,186 persons and the seizure of 24,373 stills. The figures showed an increase of approximately 7,000 in the number of stills seized.

CHICAGO paid warm tribute Friday to Rear Admiral Byrd, who was the guest of the Press club, of which he is a member. After a parade and a luncheon at the Press club, there was a huge reception and banquet at the Stevens hotel in which many of the city's leading organizations cooperated. Governor Emmerson welcomed the intrepid explorer on behalf of the state of Illinois.

MRS. HOOVER returned to the White House from the Rapidan river lodge last week greatly improved in health by her weeks in the seclusion of the camp. However, though she seemed to have recovered from the effects of her fall in the Executive mansion more than three months ago, it was said in Washington she planned to go back soon to the camp and remain there most of July.

Consideration for Mrs. Hoover's health. It is reported, has caused the President to halt the arrangements for his projected trip through the West, and indeed it may be abandoned altogether in favor of a quiet stay at some place on the New England coast. The home of John Hays Hammond at Gloucester, Mass., has been suggested. It is known that some of the Republican party leaders have advised Mr. Hoover not to make the western trip.

JEAN MERMOZ, the French pilot who flew from Africa to Brazil recently, tried to make the return trip with two companions and a load of mail. He made excellent progress until about half way across the Atlantic on the way to Dakar. Then an oil leak developed that became so serious he was forced to descend to the water. He had been in constant radio communication with patrol boats and one of them was on hand to rescue the flyers and the mail.

COMPLETED census tabulations give the population of New York city as 9,955,034, an increase of 1,394,986 since 1920. Issuance of these figures revive the dispute as to the biggest city in the world. London continues to claim the title, although London proper has only 4,605,000 inhabitants. "Greater London," including the surrounding communities that are ruled by the metropolitan police, has a total population of about 7,815,000.

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER celebrated his ninety-first birthday quietly at Pocantico, the only variation from his usual daily routine being a small party in the evening. The oil magnate's only public expression indicated his great satisfaction in the kind feeling for him displayed by everybody everywhere.

NO SOONER had the French troops left the Rhineland than the so-called Fascists of Germany broke loose with a series of outrageous attacks on the former separatists there and in the Palatinate and on all who were known to have been friendly to the troops of occupation. Men and women were assaulted and their homes and shops wrecked, despite the efforts of the police. Of course the German government could not be considered directly responsible for the disturbances, but the French ambassador to Berlin discussed with Foreign Minister Curtius measures to suppress the revengeful fury of the German radicals.

GREAT BRITAIN'S administration of her mandate in Palestine is severely criticized in a report of the League of Nations mandate commission which investigated the riots in the Holy Land. The methods of the British are called dilatory and slack and they are said not to have carried out their obligations.

MEMBERS of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's family are in daily expectation of word from him from the spirit world, for that famous writer and spiritualist departed this life at his home in Sussex. The creator of Sherlock Holmes left with Lady Doyle his finger prints and a secret code word so that she and their son Adrian may guard against impostors.

Another noted foreigner who died last week was Cardinal Vanutelli, dean of the sacred college.

Maj. Gen. W. C. Neville, commandant of the marine corps, died after an illness of several months. He served with distinction in the Spanish war, the Boxer rebellion, at Vera Cruz and in the World war.

R. J. BLAIR and Frank Trotter, pilots of the Goodyear-Zeppelin, were victors in the national elimination balloon race that started from Houston, Texas. They traveled about 850 miles, coming down at Greensburg, Ky.

Air Route Islands

A Vista in Barbados, West Indies.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

THREE island domains that seem destined to take on new importance with the development of air traffic were passed over by the Graf Zeppelin on its recent triangular voyage from Europe to South America, to North America, and back to Europe.

The Cape Verde Islands were sighted first. They lie far from the usual ship lanes and are visited by few travelers. One globe-trotter pronounced them "the most uninteresting place I have visited."

It is true that the Cape Verde Islands do not compare with the exquisite Canaries, nearer Europe, in beauty, human interest, faunal features, or salubrious breezes. Baidok or ignores them. Yet, now that they are taking on new importance as land falls on aerial routes, the islands may be rescued from innocuous obscurity.

The naturalist would find on one of the islands a seabird unknown elsewhere and a plant-eating lizard. The student of economic geography would be interested to work out the reason why the inhabitants of one of the group, Brava, have developed a land-owning propensity which leads them into constant legal wrangles, while a spirit of "come what may" and indifference to ownership of anything infests the other islands.

The islands recently developed their trade to a point where the state department established a new consulate on the island of Sao Vincente (St. Vincent).

St. Vincent is one of the 14 islands of the group which form a crescent about 300 miles west of Dakar, the easternmost city on the African continent. Porto Grande, capital of St. Vincent and one of the few large port towns in the islands, is built in a well protected location with high mountains at its back and in front the massive bulwark of the island of St. Anthony almost shutting in a wide, deep harbor from the sea.

Total Area is Small.

The 14 islands could be placed on the state of Rhode Island and only a few rugged edges would extend over the borders. Sao Thiago (St. Jago), the largest of the Cape Verdes, is slightly smaller in area than the city of Los Angeles, while the smallest island is measured by square yards.

All the larger islands are inhabited, the majority of the population being quartered in compact villages and towns built in small recesses in the steep mountainsides, overlooking the sea. But it is in the interior of the larger islands that one finds the real native life of the Cape Verde. It is said that the ancestors of these people of the interior once lived along the seashore. But for a hundred years after Spain took control of the islands the Cape Verdes were plundered by pirates. During this period the inhabitants fled to the valleys from which they seldom emerged except to trade. Most of these valley people are black but one often notes Portuguese features. They speak a poor quality Portuguese which is difficult for the European to understand.

Like Greenland, the name Cape Verde is deceptive. It was taken from Cape Verde, Africa, and in good English means "Green Cape," but there is little on the islands to suggest that the Cape Verdes deserve to be called "Cape Green Islands." Here and there along the shore and in a few interior valleys are patches of fertile land, but rocks and sand claim the greater portion of the area. Fresh water has always been a luxury, lack of which has caused serious famines in the past.

That the natives make the best of their barren islands is indicated by the fact that they produce indigo, coffee, castor beans, fruits, tobacco, poultry, potatoes and yams. Salt is also an important product. Many of the inhabitants who are not employed in agriculture or shipping, are good fishermen and adept in making rum, curing fish and manufacturing straw hats and seats.

Barbados Densely Inhabited. Quite different is Barbados, one of the most interesting and less well-known of Great Britain's possessions in the Western Hemisphere. Pear-shaped, solitary, farthest east of the West Indies, Barbados generally is accounted the most healthful of the group, even though it is the most populous country in the world, per square mile, except China; and although George Washington carried to his grave the marks of the smallpox contracted on a visit there.

The island—there is but one despite the misleading plural name—is but an eighth the size of our Rhode Island, but has twice as many inhabitants per square mile as our smallest and most densely populated state.

Seldom does a volcano become an asset. But volcanic eruptions have contributed largely to the fertility of Barbados. When the sun was obscured throughout one day in May 1912, the Barbadians were panic stricken; but when the gentle rain of black dust subsided, the deposit was found to be ashes from an eruption of St. Vincent's Soufriere, nearly 100 miles to the west, and an enrichment for the soil.

Hot, Dusty Bridgetown. Bridgetown, the island capital, is a hot, dusty city of about 30,000 people. It is especially busy on Fridays when planters flock to town for business and buying. Its cathedral was built principally by funds obtained from a lottery authorized by the legislature, after the original building had been blown down by a hurricane in 1780.

Labor is so plentiful that men compete with beasts of burden. But this condition was greatly improved by the use of considerable Barbados labor in building the Panama canal.

The third important island visited by the Graf Zeppelin was Porto Rico. But it was really San Juan, the capital city, rather than the island to which the great air liner paid its respects. After cruising over the city, it turned sharply northward and put out over the Atlantic.

San Juan has a population of more than 114,000 and has nearly doubled in size since the island came under American control. It was from San Juan that Ponce de Leon set sail, like another Jason in search of the Golden Fleece, for the fulfillment of his charming, if boyish, dream of finding the Fountain of Youth, which, we all recall, resulted in the discovery of the southernmost end of the United States.

San Juan was a settlement half a century before St. Augustine, Fla., the oldest town in the United States, came into being, and a full century before the Pilgrims landed at Plymouth Rock. It began to take on the semblance of a city. More than two and a half centuries before the United States began to build the White House in Washington, Spain started the construction of the Casa Blanca, the governor's palace.

Closing Of Bank Subject Of Probe

State Auditor Takes Up Trail Of Assistant Cashier From Vincent

Asst. Atty. Gen. J. W. Brassell said yesterday afternoon that he will begin today an investigation of the closing of the Citizens Bank of Vincent last week, following the disappearance of Assistant Cashier W. C. Welch, who had charge of the institution.

Mr. Brassell was specifically assigned some months ago by Atty. Gen. Charlie C. McCall to conduct inquiries into all bank failures occurring in the State. It is in line with this assignment that the assistant attorney general will begin his investigation today at Vincent.

Announcement was made yesterday by Walter K. McAdory, chief of the State Law Enforcement Department, that he has assigned State Officer J. W. McClung to the duty of locating the missing assistant cashier, Mr. Welch. Officer McClung has been in Sumpter County aiding in investigation there of the disorders that began on July 4, and cost the lives of six people.

Judge R. L. Faucett, assistant to the State superintendent of banks, who has been in Vincent looking over the bank's affairs, returned to Montgomery yesterday. State bank examiners who have been checking up on the book, and records of the bank were expected to wind up their audit last night.

EXAMINER REPORTS

Vincent, Ala., July 14.—State Bank Examiner B. S. Gay said today that a shortage of more than $17,000 has been found in the accounts of the Bank of Vincent which closed its doors last Thursday and whose cashier, W. C. Welch, has been missing since that time.

Gay said no charges had been placed against Welch, and that Circuit Solicitor Arthur Hardegree had received a letter from the cashier's father at Dadeville, Ala., stating that his son would return to Vincent "when the excitement has subsided."

The bank was capitalized at $10,000 and had deposits of approximately $20,000.

B'ham Man Is Found Dead In Parked Auto

Tuscaloosa, Ala., July 13.—With a bullet wound in his right temple and an automatic pistol clutched tightly in his hand, Arthur Erickson, 30, of 1518 Fourth Avenue, West, Birmingham, was found dead in his automobile on the old Birmingham road, 33 miles north of here, early Sunday morning.

The body was found by W. E. and C. M. Hall, who were passing along that road shortly before 5 a. m. Sunday.

Dr. S. T. Hardin, coroner at Tuscaloosa, was told by several persons that a man was seen parked in a car late Saturday night at or near the place where Erickson's body was found. They said the man apparently was sleeping.

Erickson was an employee of the Birmingham Electric Company. The body was taken to a West Blocton undertaker, where funeral arrangements were made.

News In Brief

For the first time in the history of banking, a single institution, the Chase National Bank of New York reports total deposits in excess of $2,000,000,000.

American taxpayers pay more than $927,000,000 a year to care for sufferers from tuberculosis and heart disease and assist those who are physically handicapped, it is reported.

The death rate of the Nation has been cut in half since 1900 and in the case of some diseases, notably diphtheria, it has been reduced 95 per cent, it was announced in a revised report of the joint committee on health problems of the American Medical Association and the National Educational Association.

Confirming the honeybee's reputation for diligence, the U. S. Department of Agriculture recently learned that a bee will sometimes fly as much as 8 miles and return with its minute load. Under some circumstances a single pound of honey would represent approximately 18,000 trips of 16 miles each, or nearly 300,000 miles of flight by bees.

A child in a family of $2,500 a year income class, by the time he reaches the age of 18 years, has cost approximately $7,425, according to estimates founded on statistical studies of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company. The sum includes the cost of being born and of food, clothing, shelter, public school education, medical care, recreation and other miscellaneous expenditures for 17 years.

A ring lost by his wife in 1918 was found when Conrad Schwartz of Hesseville, Ind., plowed his orchard.

Excerpts From L & N
Employees Magazine

The longest war memorial in the world, according to the L & N Employees' Magazine for July, is the million dollar concrete highway bridge spanning the bay between Biloxi and Ocean Springs, Miss., parallel with the L & N Railroad bridge. The Mississippi counties of Jackson and Harrison, with Federal aid, and was recently dedicated as a memorial to those from the two counties who served in the World War.

William H. Timmons, age 72, of 722 S. 43rd St. Louisville, Ky., who for the past 40 years has served the L & N Railroad as gateman and train announcer at Union Station, Louisville, has been granted a pension by that company.

Other veteran L & N employees who have been retired on pension, as announced in the L & N Employees' Magazine for July, are: August P. Heller, freight handler, 1815 W. Kentucky St., Louisville, Ky., 29 years of service; Christian E. Painter, freight station clerk, Mobile, Ala., 45 years; George Jakobe, engineer, 1007 S. First St., Louisville, Ky., 49 years; Ellis R. Turner, machinist foreman, 3023 S. 3rd St., Louisville, Ky., 22 years; Walter G. Smith, engineer, 2817 S. Third St., Louisville, Ky., 40 years; Henry W. Fisel, general foreman, Lebanon Junction, Ky., 34 years; George Davis, carpenter, 217 High St., Clarksville, Tenn., 17 years; Edward P. Albert, freight station clerk, New Orleans, La., 37 years; William L. Traylor, carpenter, Erin, Tenn., 40 years.

It is learned from figures published in the July issue of the L & N Employees' Magazine that 20 of the 33 shops of the L & N Railroad, came through the first four months of 1930 with 100 per cent safety records, that is, without a reportable injury to an employee. Among the larger of the shops to attain this record are Corbin, Ky., Etowah, Tenn., Mobile, Ala., Pensacola, Fla., Loyall, Ky., New Orleans, La., Nashville, Radnor and Knoxville, Tenn.

Decatur, Ala., and Howell, Ind., two of the largest shops on the L & N suffered only one injury during the four-months period.

LOVELY TEA GIVEN BY MISS JOINER IN HONOR OF MISS
LORENE PARRISH

The following is a clipping which occupied a very prominent place on the society page of the Macon, Ga., Telegraph, of Saturday morning, July 12, 1930. Miss Parrish is the charming daughter of Mrs. Mattie Parrish Williams, of Clanton:

A lovely social affair of yesterday afternoon was the tea with which Miss Annie Hill Joiner entertained at her apartment on Adams Street honoring Miss Lorene Parrish, bride-elect and some visitors in the city, Mrs. W. W. Cook of Louisville, Ky., and Mrs. H. H. Harwell, of Newberry, Fla.

In the receiving line were Miss Joiner, Miss Parrish, Mrs. Cook and Mrs. Harwell.

Miss Joiner's becoming gown was of sky blue chiffon, fashioned on princess lines and trimmed effectively in rhinestones.

Of pink lace was the stunning frock worn by Miss Parrish. The long full skirt was even length and the short waistline was accentuated by a narrow belt of the material.

Mrs. Cook's lovely gown was of flowered flat crepe, the neckline trimmed with a pleated bertha of the material. Of Nile green organdy was the frock worn by Mrs. Harwell. The full skirt dipped in the back, and was trimmed at the waistline with a satin bow.

Throughout the rooms where the guests assembled quantities of garden flowers in shades of yellow and white were arranged. In the dining room where refreshments were served, the color note of yellow and white was carried out in every detail. The tea table was covered with a handsome lace cloth and centered with a colorful arrangement of garden flowers surrounded by four silver candlesticks holding yellow tapers. Compotes and platters contained mints and cakes in pastel shades. A dainty iced course was served.

Receiving the guests were: Miss Sallie Boone and Mrs. A. P. Montague. Assisting in serving were: Misses Marie Brahan, Martha Brown, Emily Thigpen, Louise Sandefur, Mabel Price and Mrs. Fred L. Jones.

Approximately 50 guests were invited to call from 6 to 7 o'clock and meet the charming honorees.

Mrs. Byrdie McNeill of Route 1 was in Clanton Friday attending the Opportunity school meeting at the courthouse.

Mrs. W. M. Polk Hostess To
"As You Like It" Club.

Mrs. W. M. Polk delightfully entertained the "As You Like It" Club at her home Thursday afternoon. The home was attractively decorated with summer flowers. Late in the afternoon the hostess, assisted by Mrs. Marcus Polk, Jr., served a delicious salad plate to the following: Mesdames E. A. Childs, T. H. Neighbors, D. C. Alred, J. B. Atkinson, V. J. Gragg, W. W. Fox and L. H. Reynolds.

FORMER RESIDENT HERE VISITS ITS RELATIVES AND FRIENDS

Mrs. Hary Rhodes, and two daughters, Jean and Anne, of Orlando, Fla., left last Sunday afternoon after spending several days here as guests of Mrs. Mamie C. Smith and family, and other relatives and friends. Mrs. Rhodes will be remembered in Clanton as the former Mary Lane VanDerveer. They motored to Vance, Alabama, where they will spend several days with friends and relatives before returning to their home in Florida.

Rev. and Mrs. W. J. Ruddick of Stanton, were guests of Prof. H. A. Harris and family the first part of the week. They were here attending the Mission Institute at the Baptist church.

Taxes

The cost of running our government is increasing more rapidly than our population and wealth. Results higher taxes for all—individuals and industries. In 1928, taxes collected in the United States were $230,000,000 greater than in 1927, and $684,000,000 greater than in 1926, largely due to rising state and local taxes.

Railroad taxes amounted to $403,000,000, in 1929 (a new record), or $1,103,000 per day, and absorbed the entire net revenue derived from 87 days of railroad operation. One-fourth of our railroad facilities might as well have been turned over to the tax collector for the entire year. In effect, 387,000 railroad employees, 14,000 locomotives, 12,000 passenger trains, and 540,000 freight cars and other facilities valued at $6,000,000,000 worked solely to pay the railroad tax bill in 1929.

In 1929, L.&N. taxes amounted to $7,566,457, an increase of 191% in fifteen years.

The railroads are willing and ready to contribute their just share to the cost of efficient national, state, and local governments. In common with other forms of business, they object strenuously to being taxed unjustly. Moreover, as railroad taxes are added to the cost of supplying transportation, which must ultimately be borne by the public in freight and passenger rates, it is highly desirable that every individual should begin to preach and practice the doctrine of economy in the use of public funds.

Summer Forest Fires
May Be Prevented

Airplane pilots report forest fires in various parts of the state says a statement issued by the Commission of Forestry. The hot dry weather is rendering the situation acute, and landowners and the citizens generally are urged to use every effort to prevent the occurrence of fires and to extinguish as quickly as possible those that may get started.

Forest fires bear a direct relation to the dryness of the material regardless of whether the grass is dry on account of being frost killed or through the effects of drought. The net result is the same in both cases. At present drought conditions are responsible for most of the fires. There has been a deficiency of rainfall in Alabama for each month since November. The late spring and summer months have been phenomenally dry.

It is fortunate for Alabama woodlands that forest fires such as occur in the state are comparatively easy to extinguish. During the winter and early spring thousands of these were suppressed by citizens in cooperation with State and Federal Government. Fires were so numerous during that period that both the State and Federal funds became completely exhausted by late spring. However, if the owners, or their tenants and employees, keep a sharp lookout for smoke and go at once to the fire with hoes, rakes, fire swatters and portable spray pumps, practically any fire can be stopped before it becomes large.

Answering a burglar alarm in St. Paul at 3:00 a. m., the police found the intruder to be a strange cat.

Alabama Farmers
Hold Third Place

Alabama cotton farmers this year pooled 161,469 bales of cotton with the Alabama Farm Bureau Cotton Association. In so doing they placed Alabama third from the top in the amount of cotton sold cooperatively by the state associations. Oklahoma farmer pooled 327,187 bales and Texas farmers came 2nd with 161,874 bales. Texas beat Alabama by only 405 bales.

Sued for $14,01, Mrs. Clara McKay of St. Paul admitted the $14 del., but engaged a lawyer to oppose the one cent claim.

Afternoon Frock Is in Limelight

By JULIA BOTTOMLEY

The afternoon frock is again important in the fashion world. Was a time, not so long since, when we really forgot, or rather the style program did not demand that we change our clothes for each passing daytime social event. Sports, sports, how monotonous it grew to be wearing sports clothes for breakfast, luncheon, theater, bridge tea, and even dinner.

The real reason we did it was because there actually were no definite luncheon, afternoon and tea fashions. Having reached the point where sports clothes were accepted even by "the best of regulated" dressers as appropriate as anything, we sometimes became totally resigned, and just wore them on through the dinner hour.

Admitted that we were not picturesque or even particularly pretty thus uniformed? We believe the answer is unanimously in the affirmative, or rather the negative—we were not!

To improve the point that all this is changed the illustration shows a charmingly informal afternoon frock of embroidered dune cotton. It looks, as it should, according to the present call of the mode, decidedly afternoon-

ish. One would never play tennis in such feminine attire, but one would eat a summer luncheon in it; or drink iced tea at five o'clock. One would sit on the country club porch playing bridge of a warm afternoon, but one would never play golf in it. All of which goes to show that the clothes question is anything but a "happy-go-lucky" proposition this season. It requires intelligent study as to the appropriateness of things. The new rules are really quite arbitrary—sports for sports, afternoon costumes for afternoon, and formal evening attire for just that and none other. Transgress the law as to what's what in wearing apparel for this or that time, place and event, and you are, well, to say the least, you are simply not fashionable, not modern.

Notwithstanding some few objections voiced at the outset of the new regime, women are completely won over to this order of things which calls for "perfectly darling" summer frocks made picturesquely instead of "sporty" of loveliest materials, chief among which are handsomely all-over embroidered effects.

SERVING SALAD FAMILY STYLE

Possibly one reason why the busy housekeeper does not serve salads as often as she might is that it suggests individual salad plates, which often means extra work. Why not use the large salad bowl placed on the table as any other vegetable dish? It can be attractive and garnished. Raw carrots, fresh cucumbers, tomatoes and lettuce can all be served "family style," giving each one ample servings with less work for the housemaker.

Story for the Children at Bedtime

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

"I saw you both in the city not long ago," said the horse whose name was Fred.

And the other horses nodded their heads and neighed as they agreed with Fred.

"We must have all come about the same time," said Bessie.

"I think you're right," said Kittie. "I know why we all came here," said Fred. "I heard my master talking to your masters about it, and I heard him say things which I am sure you will both be glad to hear."

"They made me very, very happy, for I have tried to do my best and it is nice to hear the good things, isn't it?"

"Yes," said Bessie. "I think it is, for I don't think it makes one contented to hear nice things."

"I think it makes one want to live up to them, and it makes everyone happy."

"I agree," said Kittie. "I think there are so many nice people, men and women, boys and girls, and animals, too, that they should be made happy by hearing that they are liked."

"Well you both would like to hear my story then, eh?" asked Fred.

"We would," said Bessie, "for we are glad to hear you have good news for us."

"There were a few days when we were quite certain we were going to be sold, and we didn't know what sort of masters we would have."

"I almost died of joy when I came here," said Kittie.

"My master and your master," said Fred, pointing to the other two horses, "couldn't bear to have us sold."

"Of course, we have spent our lives on the police force of a great city."

"We have helped the policemen who rode us."

"We have stopped runaways, we have saved lives of children, and we have done everything we could, always."

"Of course, it would seem to me quite dreadful not to do everything."

"How I loved helping them when they came from school. How gay and bright were the hours in the day when their high, gloriously happy voices would reach my ears."

"My master would whisper to me: 'The children are coming, Fred. We must be on guard to see that they don't get run over.'"

Testing Sheets for Endurance

As an initial step in learning what grades and staple lengths of cotton give the most satisfactory service for sheeting, the bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture is conducting a test of 96 sheets in ordinary use in a Washington (D. C.) hotel. These sheets were made under the direction of the bureau of agricultural economics, which selected the cotton to be used and supervised the manufacture of the sheets. Three different grades of the same staple length—1 inch—are represented in the study now under way.

After making tests of the tensile strength, thread count, and weight in ounces per square yard of these three grades of fabric, the bureau of home economics arranged to place the sheets for service on one floor of the hotel.

Each sheet is marked with a number for identification whenever it is laundered. Every morning the used sheets of this lot are collected by themselves and sent to the hotel laundry. There they are washed separately, but in the same manner as the other linen used in the hotel. A specialist from the textile and clothing division is present throughout the laundering process, timing the sheets in the machine and in the rinse waters and checking the numbers on those which are washed. Thus, at any stage of the experiment it is possible to tell how many times a given sheet has been used.

When the first breaks begin to appear in these sheets samples will be withdrawn for laboratory tests, and at the conclusion of the study all the discarded sheets will be examined for areas of greatest wear.

It is hoped that this study will lead to others linking the production of textile fibers more closely with quality and performance requirements in the finished articles. Up to the present very little attention has been given to this aspect of agricultural production of textile fibers.

ASPARAGUS ON BUTTERED TOAST

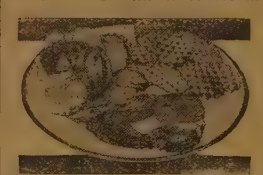

Cook the asparagus as quickly as possible, but cook it gently, by simmering, to avoid breaking off the tender heads and toughening the stalks. Quick cooking preserves its nutrients, its color, and its flavor. The bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture says, "Wash the asparagus well, scrape off the little scales with a knife to remove all sand, and trim off the tough lower ends. Leave the stalks whole or cut into 2-inch pieces. Drop into a small quantity of lightly salted boiling water, simmer for from 15 to 20 minutes, drain, and arrange neatly on thin slices of buttered toast. Sprinkle with salt and pepper, pour melted butter or other fat over the top, and serve at once."

LATTICE POTATOES AN ATTRACTIVE DISH

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The attractive appearance of lattice potatoes, their color and crisp textures, makes them unusually pleasing when served with cold meat and salad for lunch or supper. They are not hard to prepare. To make them, a grooved board covered with a piece of tin with a cutting edge can be bought almost anywhere kitchen wares are sold. This apparatus is not expensive.

After the lattice potatoes are cut they should be rinsed in cold running water and soaked for two or three hours in cold water to remove as much starch as possible, says the bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture. Dip the pieces from the water, and pat them with a clean dry cloth to absorb as much moisture as possible. Heat a kettle of deep fat hot enough to brown a small piece of bread in 60 seconds. Fry about a cupful of the potatoes at a time. Remove them from the fat when golden brown, drain on clean absorbent paper, and sprinkle with salt. Serve at once while hot and crisp.

A man who brags about himself hasn't time to notice your good points.

How to Prepare Fried Chicken

Nothing is More Tempting Than a Plate of Fried Chicken.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

When the subject of chicken, properly fried in true southern fashion, becomes sufficiently important for a mere man to voice his feelings and ideas on the matter in a lengthy magazine article, it is apparent that there must be one right way and many wrong ways of preparing this always delectable dish. The bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture was therefore asked for a satisfactory recipe, and here it is. The two points important to a good "southern" cook are "partly cover," so the chicken will cook through, and "drain on absorbent paper" so it will not be greasy. Experience must be depended on to some extent in the matter of cooking time, for even frying chickens differ in size and plumpness, but the larger pieces will almost certainly take from 20 minutes to half an hour to become done. Keep the cooked pieces warm until all are ready, but do not let them get dry and hard in a fiery hot oven.

Select young, plump chickens. Remove pin feathers, wash the chicken, draw, cut out into pieces suitable for serving, and wipe dry. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and rub well with flour. In a heavy skillet, heat a generous quantity of well-flavored fat to just below the smoking point, put in the larger and thicker pieces of chicken so that each piece will be surrounded by the hot fat, partly cover, and watch closely to prevent scorching. Turn the chicken as soon as it becomes golden brown, reduce the heat, cook until tender, and drain on paper to absorb the excess fat. As the larger pieces are removed, add the smaller ones and all will be finished about the same time.

For gravy, to each two tablespoonfuls of fat in the skillet allow two tablespoonfuls of flour, cook for a few minutes, stir constantly, add one and one-half cups of rich milk, and cook until thickened. Add more salt and pepper if needed, sprinkle finely chopped parsley over the gravy, and serve hot with the chicken.

Lesson for July 20

MOSES, A COURAGEOUS LEADER

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 1:8-14; 2:1-14.

GOLDEN TEXT—By faith he foretold Egypt, not fearing the wrath of the king; for he endured, as seeing him who is invisible.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Moses' Deliverance.

HARD THINGS FOR GOD.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Moses' Call to Leadership.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Daring the Impossible.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Leader, Liberator and Lawgiver.

1. The Enslaved People (1:8-22).

After Joseph's death Israel quickly grew into a nation. The amazing growth of the nation aroused the envy and fear of the new king.

1. Heavy measure of service (v. 10-14).

Cruel taskmasters were placed over the men, forcing them to labor in building fortified cities as well as in field service. However, the more they afflicted them, the more did they multiply and grow.

2. The midwives were ordered to murder the male infants.

This measure also failed, as the midwives feared God and chose to obey Him.

3. Commanded that the male children should be cast into the river (v. 22). In God's providence this mandate failed.

1. Moses, the Deliverer, Prepared (2:1-22).

1. His birth (vv. 1, 2).

Both his father and mother were of Levitical stock. Being of the same tribe, they would have a common bond of interest and sympathy. There was something striking about the child which caused his parents to believe that he was sent of God.

2. His preservation (vv. 3, 4).

Because his mother had faith she did not ignore the proper use of means. She was doubtless full of faith with the place where Pharaoh's daughter came to bathe and believed that somehow through her the child would be saved. She placed the ark of bulrushes at the particular place where it would attract attention. Though the hand of God was directing in the carrying out of his plan, the steps in the process were entirely natural.

3. His education (vv. 5-10).

Moses was educated, first at his mother's knee. Here his mind was filled with the word of God and acquainted with the Jewish hopes and prospects. Doubtless here the indomitable purpose was fixed "rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season" (Heb. 11:24-26). Again, he was educated at the Egyptian court where he became acquainted with all the wisdom of the Egyptians (Acts 7:22).

4. His exile and marriage (vv. 11-22).

Moses was obliged to take his flight from Egypt at the age of forty, because he attempted to enter upon his work as the deliverer of his people (Acts 7:26). He was conscious of his mission, but was mistaken as to the time. His rejection by his brethren was a type of Christ's rejection by the Jews. During this time of rejection he secured a bride, Jesus Christ, his great antitype, while now in the place of rejection by His brethren, he is getting a bride from among the Gentiles. Just as Moses after awhile returned and delivered his people, so will Christ return and deliver His people, the Jews, who rejected Him.

11. Moses Called to Deliver His People (3:1-14).

1. The Lord spoke from the burning bush (vv. 1-6).

It was while keeping the flock of his father-in-law in the desert that the Lord appeared to Moses in the vision of the burning bush. This bush, enveloped in flames, yet unconsumed, symbolized the people of God, swathed in the very fire of God.

2. Moses' commission (vv. 7-10).

In this commission God showed His active interest in His people. Because of His grace He obligated Himself to deliver them out of the hand of the Egyptians and bring them into the chosen land; therefore God commissioned Moses to bring forth the people out of Egypt.

3. Moses' objections removed (vv. 11-14).

Four objections were offered, each one of which God met and removed. (1) Personal unworthiness (v. 11). (2) The difficulty of the people to understand Moses' relationship to God (vv. 13, 14). (3) Unbelief on the part of the people (4:1). (4) Lack of eloquence (4:10).

Value of Religious Belief

I should prefer a firm religious belief to every other blessing; for it makes life a discipline of goodness, creates new hopes when all earthly hopes vanish, and throws over the decay, the destruction of existence, the most gorgeous of all lights; avails life even in death.—Sir Humphry Davy.

Little Pitchers Hold Little Water

If we take little pitchers to the well, we shall carry little water away.—Selected.

HINTS FOR HOUSEKEEPERS

Light colored walls in the kitchen reflect and diffuse light and help to make the room a convenient workshop.

Summer clothes for the child should be light, airy, and easy to launder and they should absorb moisture readily.

Frequent turning, sunning, and cleaning with a brush or vacuum cleaner attachment make a mattress last longer and more comfortable as well.

A convenient way to serve raw vegetables to the child is to chop them fine and use as filling in small whole wheat bread sandwiches. Chopped celery, carrots, spinach, lettuce or cabbage seasoned with a little salt help supply the minerals and vitamins needed for health and growth.

Some Nellie Maxwell Recipes

During the summer we begin with the luscious strawberry and serve it fresh with sugar and cream, over angel cake with cream, crushed over ice cream, and everyone likes the old-fashioned rich biscuit mixture for strawberry short-cake. The currant and cherry follow with raspberries and blackberries, so that one need not wait for fruit desserts from early in the spring until the delicious later fruits of autumn are ripe.

Blueberry Betty—Mix two cupfuls of soft bread crumbs (packed solidly) with one-half cupful of melted butter. Arrange in a buttered baking dish in alternate layers with two cupfuls of blueberries, sprinkle with two tablespoonfuls of sugar, a pinch of salt and a little lemon juice. Cover the top with crumbs and bake 20 minutes. Remove the cover and continue baking until the crumbs are brown. Serve with hot sweetened cream.

Orange Jelly With Strawberries—Prepare a ring mold filled with orange jelly to the depth of one-fourth of an inch. When set add strawberries cut into lengthwise slices over the jelly, adding more of the jelly to hold them in place; chill, repeat until the mold is filled. Chill, unmold on a serving platter and surround with billows of sweetened whipped cream flavored with orange. Fill the center with whole berries dusted with sugar. Raspberry Charlotte Russe—Soak two tablespoonfuls of gelatin in one-third of a cupful of cold water, dissolve over hot water, cool slightly and add to one and one-half cupfuls of strained raspberry pulp and the juice, two-thirds of a cupful of sugar, one teaspoonful of orange extract. Set the dish in a bowl of iced water and stir constantly until the mixture begins to thicken, then fold in one and one-half cupfuls of heavy cream whipped until stiff. Turn into individual molds lined with thin slices of sponge cake. Chill and serve.

Foamy Sauce—Cream one-half cupful of powdered sugar gradually, then add one egg well beaten and two tablespoonfuls of any fruit juice—orange, pineapple, or the blackberry will be just the one for the above recipe.

Cocktails are always a refreshing beginner for a luncheon or dinner.

During the warm weather the melons of various kinds make especially attractive cocktails or fruit salads. Scoop out the balls of melon using a small french potato cutter; serve with any sauce that appeals to the taste. A lemon sirup over muskmelon is well liked as is a ginger sirup, using some of the preserved ginger as a garnish.

Red Raspberry Whip—Set a bowl into a pan of crushed ice. Into the bowl put one and one-half cupfuls of ripe berries, one cupful of powdered sugar and the white of an egg. Beat with a wire egg beater until the mixture holds its shape. Pile lightly on a fancy glass serving dish and surround with fresh macaroons. Serve with a chilled boiled custard.

Junket in Cups—Beat a pint of milk until like warm, add one-fourth of a cupful of sugar and a junket tablet, crushed and added to a tablespoonful of water. Flavor with one teaspoonful of vanilla. Turn into sherbet glasses and let stand in a warm place until set. Then chill. When ready to serve top each portion with a raspberry sauce.

Frozen Plum Pudding—Melt three squares of chocolate over hot water, add one-fourth cupful of sugar and one-fourth cupful of boiling water, stir and cook until smooth and glossy. Scald one quart of milk, one cupful each of heavy cream and one cupful of sugar in a double boiler. Add the chocolate mixture and a tablespoonful of vanilla, one junket tablet dissolved in one tablespoonful of cold water. Set the mixture in a warm place until it jellies. Add one-half pound of mixed fruits soaked over night in a thin sirup to cover, seeded raisins, shredded candied cherries, candied pineapple and shredded citron. Drain and pack in a fluted mold lined with lady fingers, cover and let stand in equal measures of ice and salt.

New System of Transportation in Scotland

A new system of transportation is to be tried out near Glasgow, Scotland, when the "rail-plane," the invention of George Bennie, will be demonstrated to the public. The coach, shaped like an airship, will be driven along overhead rails by a propeller at each end which will be electrically driven. The train will be capable of making a speed of 150 miles an hour. The photo shows the coach in the course of construction.

Hints For Homemakers

By Jane Rogers

INSTEAD of pouring it hot over ice, try making iced coffee by chilling the coffee in the refrigerator. This will mean less dilution from the ice in the glass, and a much more refreshing drink. The coffee should be kept in an airtight container between brewing and serving, so that it will retain its flavor and aroma.

Beets are rich in vitamins A, B and C. Also they possess calcium, phosphorus and iron, all of which is more than enough to recommend them for both children and grown-ups. A small amount of sugar added while boiling, about a teaspoon to a cup of water, restores the garden sweetness they are almost sure to have lost in greater or less degree on their way from the garden to the saucepan.

Snappy Stuff

A bolt of lightning knocked tea cups from the hands of three women guests of Mrs. Robert Selden of Detroit, but none were injured.

T. R. Adams of Cincinnati bequeathed $70,000 to his niece "so long as she properly looked after and provided a home" for his dog.

While the Chicago police hunted five hours for Johnny Loring, 7, believed to have been kidnapped, he was sleeping under a bed where he had hidden during a game of hide and seek.

Yawning in a moving picture theatre Mrs. Clara Burris of Evanston, Ill., broke her jaw.

Thomas Wellman, official rabbit catcher at Dorchester, Eng., has caught 40,000 hares in his 50 years of service.

NON-RESIDENT NOTICE

State of Alabama, Chilton County, Probate Court.

To J. Claude Jones:

In the matter of the estate of James C. Jones, deceased:

On the 9th day of June, 1930 came the Commissioners appointed by this Court to set apart to the widow the exemptions allowed by law, and filed their report in writing, and the same has been set down for hearing on the 30th day of July, 1930.

You are therefore hereby notified to be and appear before this Court on the 30th day of July, 1930, to object to said report and make such other defense in the premises as to you may seem fit and proper.

Witness my hand this 30th day of June, 1930.

Bureau Supports Two Candidates

Austrian Winter Peas and Hairy Vetch entered politics and the farm bureau is actively supporting both. They are both candidates for the county office. Both are for soil builder of Alabama subject to action of farmers, fall season, 1930.

Not only is the farm bureau supporting both but county agents, and specialists of the extension service and experiment station, Auburn, are urging you to support both.

Here is the platform upon which Austrian Winter Peas and Hairy Vetch are running:

1. I'll build your soils.
2. I'll average 20 bushels more corn per acre.
3. I'll decrease your fertilizer bill.
4. I'll average 356 pounds of seed cotton more per acre.
5. I'll make you a profit the second year.
6. I'll make you nitrogen while you sleep.
7. I'll make you do my best work plant me early this fall—from late September through the first of October.

I also like Basic Slag for it makes me feel good, grow big and add more nitrogen to the soil. I prefer slag because it is an Alabama product—coming from the steel industry of the Birmingham district and it will not injure the inoculation.

I am also for an economic program and believe in making it possible for farmers to make more money.

FARM BUREAU PAYS 44 DEATH CLAIMS AMOUNTING TO $3,460

That farm families of Alabama are being benefitted by the life insurance policy which the Alabama Farm Bureau Federation in cooperation with the county farm bureaus give each member is indicated by the fact that the farm bureau has paid 44 death claims since November 1 last year amounting to $3,460. This is reported by J. A. Beaty, director of field service of the farm bureau, who said that each farmer is issued a life insurance policy ranging from $40 to $200 depending upon age, when he becomes a member of the bureau.

"This is a great protection to our membership," says President O'Neal. "Our members lives are insured for approximately $1,509,000 by automatic policies. In addition we have issued $254,100 in additional insurance which is bought by the members at a very low cost. It is most economical."

Mrs. Mabel Thornton of Chicago paid in her divorce suit that she paid all the expenses of her honeymoon.

"Two Days To Get Married," Fairview

If you want to laugh see "Two Days to Get Married," at Fairview school-house Saturday night, July 19th, eight o'clock. This play is being given for the benefit of the 4-H Club boys of Fairview. The characters are as follows:

Simon P. Chase, as black as his race. Delos Culp; James J. Hare, a wifeless heir, Winston Culp; Rufus B. Sawyer, a timid lawyer, Cecil McKee; Emily Jane Pink, blacker than ink; Pauline Durbin; Sadie L. Boise— a widow by choice, Mildred Durbin; Imogene McShane, the sweet young thing, Myrtle Durbin; Walter M. Blair, a millionaire, Alton Culp.

James Dare's rich uncle, Walter Blair, promises to give James's a million bucks when he pays him a visit two days before he is to arrive. Dare finds he must be married or lose the million. He has two days to marry and the one he loves, Imogene, has refused him.

His lawyer, Sawyer, makes wholesale advertisement. Dare has many calls but Emily Jane Pink and Chase bungle them. After much excitement and embarrassment he marries Imogene who really loves him. She is a mere girl. Thirty minutes before the arrival of his uncle he finds his wife must be older than he. Sadie Boise, Imogene's foster mother, who left her husband 15 years ago pretend's to be Dare's wife while uncle is there. Imogene acts as maid. When the uncle arrives he recognizes his wife who left him, Sadie. Dare gets the million after more excitement. Emily Jane Pink and Simon Chase make love.

REMARKABLE NEW MOTOR OIL IS ANNOUNCED BY TEXACO CO.

It has been known for some years that changing engine designs and driving conditions were making increasingly heavy demands upon the motor lubricants. Oil refiners have made every effort to perfect new oils with better body qualities to enable them to stand up and provide effective lubrication. The problem has been to provide an oil with the necessary tougher, longer-lasting body and at the same time not sacrifice any of the other qualities such as purity, and the ability to flow and lubricate at zero.

The Texas Company has been successful. The new Texaco Golden Motor Oil recently announced by The Texas Company and now on sale by Texaco Filling Stations throughout the country is creating a sensation in automotive and oil refining circles. The new Texaco Motor Oil has a remarkably tough body. It is crack-proof; it flows at zero; and it has an exceptionally low carbon residue for an oil of like viscosity.

The oil presents the combined efforts of the marketing and technical divisions of The Texas Company to produce an oil of pronounced superiority incorporating the highest attainable development of all the desirable qualities a motor oil should have for maximum performance under all engine conditions.

It is refined from a special selection of the major crudes to give greater viscosity at higher operating temperatures with a lower viscosity at low temperatures, and at the same time retain the exceptionally low carbon residue content which has always characterized Texaco Motor Oil in the past.

It has a flatter viscosity curve, the low pour test characteristic is improved in that the force necessary to shear the oil is less; the flash and fire points are higher and the carbon residue still low.

Laboratory tests and road test on the oil's performance have shown that the new Texaco is an unquestionably superior motor oil. It is manufactured in five grades conforming to Society of Automotive Engineers Viscosity ratings and on sale everywhere in the United States at 30 cents a quart with the exception of the very heaviest grade, which is sold at 35 cents a quart.

NOTICE OF PRIMARY ELECTION

State of Alabama, Chilton County.

Notice is hereby given that a democratic Primary election will be held in Chilton County, Alabama, on the 12th day of August, 1930, at the several voting places as prescribed by law, to nominate democratic candidates, to be voted upon in the general election in November, 1930, for the following officers: Viz: Governor, Lieutenant Governor, Two Justices of Supreme Court, Two Members Public Service Commission, Attorney General, State Treasurer, Secretary of State, State Auditor, Commissioner of Agriculture & Industries, Commissioner of Game & Fisheries, Superintendent of Education, of Ala., and Member of U. S. Congress from 4th District of Ala., Solicitor for 19th Judicial Circuit, State Senator, Representative in the Legislature from Chilton County, Sheriff, Tax Assessor, Tax Collector, Members of the Commissioners Court, Justices of the Peace, Constable, and at which members of the State Democratic Executive Committee and County Democratic Committee will be elected. Said election to be held under and by virtue of the Primary election laws of Alabama.

J. B. ATKINSON,
Chairman Democratic Executive Committee of Chilton County, Alabama.
P. D. WILSON, Secretary.

J. G. Duncan, Jr.

Candidate for State Senator
Fifteenth Senatorial District, comprising the counties of Autauga, Chilton and Shelby—Subject to the Democratic Primary.

To the Voters of this, the 15th Senatorial District:

I wish to say that I shall greatly appreciate your vote and influence in this campaign. To those of you whom I have not had the pleasure of seeing personally, I wish at this time to express my regrets that I have been unable to do so, and to extend to you in advance, my sincere thanks for your support.

Just a personal word. My home is Prattville, Alabama, Autauga County. I have lived my entire life there. My business is General Insurance. I am also interested in a retail mercantile business in that city. I am a member of the Baptist Church, Masonic Fraternity, and The American Legion.

I entered this race of my own accord and am not lined up with, or in any way obligated to, any individual, clique, organization or corporation. I have only one promise to make any one, and that is, if elected I will serve the entire District to the very best of my ability.

I have no fight to make on anyone. I have conducted my campaign strictly on a high plane and will continue to do so, even in the face of wrongful accusations should any come in the heat of the campaign.

It has been called to my attention that some statements have been circulated to the effect that I will be too friendly with the corporate interests of the State. These statements are unfounded, as I absolutely have no corporate connections whatsoever, and have no other purpose in mind except to serve the entire people of my District, if I am elected to the State Senate. I think of corporations in a friendly manner, but at the same time they should bear their share of state taxation. Having never had and not now having any corporate connections they have no claim whatsoever on me, except to the extent of what is right, and, if elected to the State Senate, I shall at all times adhere, so far as I can, to the wishes of the majority of the people in my District who elected me, and shall see to it, so far as I can, that everyone gets a fair and square deal.

CLANTON TO PLAY HOST TO SHRINERS

Everything In Readiness For Gala Afternoon And Night Here Today

The Clanton Shrine Club will be host to the Montgomery Shriners this afternoon and tonight at a barbecue and dance at Lay Dam, on the Coosa River, about twelve miles from here. As soon as the large motorcade of Shriners and their ladies from Montgomery arrives in Clanton, approximately one hour or more will be given over to a parade and drill by the drill team and band of the Shriners on Main street here. Special arrangements have been made to have the street cleared and given over to the parade this afternoon which will take place about four o'clock.

Reports state that there will be approximately 200 or more in the motor caravan from Montgomery, and arrangements have been made to take care of 400 or more persons at the entertainment at Lay Dam. Following the parade and band concert here this afternoon the motorcade will leave for Lay Dam where barbecue will be served in style at 6 o'clock. Dancing will start in the club house there at 7:30 o'clock. The Montgomery caravan is scheduled to return to Montgomery at ten o'clock.

Admission at Lay Dam will be by 1930 Shrine card and special invitation card. The entertainment committee of the Clanton Shrine Club, composed of J. McIl Martin, L. E. Foshee, P. T. Hinkle, S. R. Powers, J. D. Armstrong, M. A. Gore, R. J. Sumner and W. A. Willis, has been busy making arrangements to make this half holiday for the Nobles, their ladies, wives, daughters, sweethearts and guests, a very delightful and enjoyable event.

LARGE NUMBER MEN ATTEND OUTING ON LAST THURSDAY

A record breaking crowd of men attended the fish fry and chicken barbecue given for and by the Men's Bible Class of the Clanton Baptist Sunday School last Thursday afternoon at Log Cabin Beach on the Coosa River.

A conservative count of the number of men present was said to be around 225. A good time was had by all, there was plenty of fish and chicken which made one think of the feeding of the multitudes. The President of Judson College, from Marion, Ala., was among those present at this outing and made a very interesting address to the gathering of men. This outing was the result of an attendance contest between two groups of the Sunday School Class, the Red side having won over the Whites.

Miss Louise Beall who has been attending school at Montevallo, stopped over in Clanton Saturday en route to her home. Miss Beall will be remembered in Clanton as a popular teacher at the local high school at one time.

New Harmony Revival Closed Last Friday

The revival which has been in progress at the Baptist church at New Harmony, near here, closed last Friday morning. Rev. J. W. Jones, pastor of the Baptist church at Thorsby, Ala., conducted the revival with the assistance of Rev. Cook, pastor of the New Harmony church.

There were eighteen additions to the church through this revival. The interest was exceedingly good from the beginning to the end, and it was also believed that some of the largest crowds attended these services that have ever attended such services there before.

REVIVAL TO START SOON IN THORSBY

Rev. F. M. Barnes Of Montgomery Will Conduct Services Beginning July 27

The people of Thorsby and surrounding communities are looking forward to the Baptist revival which is to begin there Sunday, July 27th, according to an announcement given the News. The revival will be held in the recently completed Thorsby Baptist church.

The Rev. F. M. Barnes, pastor of the Clayton Street Baptist church, of Montgomery will conduct the services, and will be assisted by Rev. J. W. Jones, pastor of the Thorsby church. Ralph Grant of near Verbena will have charge of the singing for each service. It is the intention of the pastor to continue the revival for ten days, and a cordial invitation is extended to all to attend.

HOOVER PROSPERITY MOVES REPUBLICANS INTO DEMOCRATIC PARTY

With the country experiencing one of the worst panics in its history and there being no political plums falling into the laps of certain Republicans of the county there is a noticeable tendency on the part of some Republican leaders to go into the Democratic party,—the party of their fathers. In fact there exists no good reason why that there should be a Republican party in the state of Alabama, and they know it. The traditions of the South have been and can be best maintained through the Democratic party and every leading Republican, who has gone to the extent of informing himself, knows that it is impossible to maintain a Republican organization in the South, which can be blended with that of the National Republican Party of the Nation. They know that it is about as hard to mix oil and water, as it is to have such an organization here in the South.

Many of the older citizens of the county have predicted that so soon as the people of Chilton County—who have voted the Republican ticket learned that their ideals could not be blended with those who compose the National Republican party that they would then return to the party of their fathers which saved the Southland, and has maintained such high standards of government, and society for our people, for these many years.

The failure of the present tariff bill is further evidence to these men and women who have heretofore voted the Republican ticket, that they have erred, in so doing. The last ten years of Republican blunders and failures have produced further proof to them, of their error. And there are many who have been taught that Cleveland, was the direct and proximate cause of the panic during the end of the nineties, when he was President, and this paper believes that there are some leaders here in Chilton county, who have taught that doctrine, who would now like to confess their error and make amends for the damage they have done to those whom they have erroneously caused to leave the party of their fathers and follow after their false doctrines. Many of the rank and file of the Republican party have informed this paper that they were fully convinced that they had erred in the past and would participate in the forthcoming Democratic primary. They are to be commended for that decision and they are welcome to come back into the Democratic party and help select those who will serve them in the future and help in making Alabama's program one that continues to carry on progressively. Some, who perhaps, have not weighed the importance of events, in recent past, have suggested that this paper criticize Judge Reynolds, for becoming actively engaged in behalf of the candidacy of Judge B. M. Miller, and Charlie C. McCall, for Governor. We welcome such activity on the part of Judge Reynolds, in behalf of any candidate of the Democratic party, if it is true that he has made up his mind to participate in the Democratic primary and vote for them. Of course he will support the Democratic nominees in the general election, as he has long since learned that this country is governed by parties and that it would be a grave offense to vote in the Democratic primary and then not support the nominee in the general election. Some suggested that we criticize Judge Reynolds for introducing Judge Miller and Charlie McCall, at the speaking here on July 4th, 1930, and for inviting Mr. G. T. McElderry, to come here and speak last Saturday, in behalf of Judge Miller. This paper believes that Judge Reynolds has the right to accept the invitation extended by the Democratic party and come back into its ranks and participate therein, by voting for his choice of candidates for the several officers to be chosen therein. The invitation was to all qualified white electors of the county. By Judge Reynolds coming into the Democratic party he will have a voice in selecting the best man for Governor, Lieutenant Governor, Attorney General, Secretary of State, Commissioner of Agriculture and Industries, Supreme Court Justices, Members of the Public Service Commission, United States Senator, Congressman, Solicitor, State Senator, members of the state Democratic Executive Committee, which privilege he would have been deprived of had he remained in the Republican party. All the Democrats should welcome him into the party, and the managers of Judge Miller's campaign should insist that he make several speeches over the county and let those who have heretofore voted the Republican ticket know that he is supporting Judge Miller and advise them to participate in the DEMOCRATIC PRIMARY, AND IN THE PARTY, where they should participate.

Working, Macedonia Church and Cemetery on August 1

The attention of those who are interested in the cemetery at Macedonia is called to the fact that work of cleaning off the place is needed done. They are requested to meet there Friday, August 1 for the purpose of cleaning off the lots and making other repairs. Bring tools necessary to do the work.

Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Davis, and family of Tallah. Ga arrived here Sunday to spend several days with friends and relatives over the county. Mr. Davis holds a responsible position with a large furniture store in Talladega, and was at one time a resident of this county.

Candidates Should File Statement Of Expenditures

In a recent statement from Hon. John Brandon, Secretary of State, at Montgomery, Mr. Brandon points with pride that there has been no complications with the elections which he has had to handle while in office. Mr. Brandon wishes to throw all precaution around all candidates who are running for office in the primary election to be held on August 12, and quotes the following laws:

The corrupt practice act requires all candidates to file a statement of all contributions and expenditures. All candidates (continued to back page—1st Sec.)

NEW FILLING STATION WILL BE BUILT HERE

Work Started On Building On Lot Of Old D. Y. Johnston Livery Stable

More evidence that the outside world is believing that Clanton is in a way of future progress and big things, is the erecting of another filling station on the Birmingham-Montgomery highway here. The new station will occupy the lot on the corner across from the store of J. A. Maddox, and across the street from the new Texas filling station. The livery stable known as the D. Y. Johnston place has been torn down and work already started on the new station.

It is understood that this station is being erected by a Mr. Fies of Birmingham, and will involve about $5,000 when completed. Reports also stated that the Sinclair Oil Company has leased the station for a period of ten years, and intends to operate it dispensing Sinclair gasoline and motor oils. Just who will be in charge of the station was not known at the time of this writing.

The station is being erected by Smallman-Brice, contractors of Montgomery, and according to information they expect to have it ready for occupancy within thirty days.

NEW HIGHWAY SHORTENS TRIP TO ROCKFORD

New Road Joins B'ham To Montgomery Highway; Is In Fair Condition

For many years, Coosa County and Chilton County have been divided by the Coosa River, and still are, but these two counties have been brought closer together by the opening of the new road which comes into the paved Birmingham-Montgomery highway about nine miles south of Clanton.

The road has been open down to the river, just south of Mitchell Dam for some time, and now those who wish to drive over to Coosa County will find it a very pleasant drive from Clanton to Rockford of about an hour, without making any excess speed. The ferry at the river is now operating, and is under the supervision of men who know their duties. This is a toll ferry.

According to a reliable speedometer the distance from Clanton to Rockford, the county seat of Coosa County, is thirty miles. The road on the Chilton side of the river is in excellent condition, having been surfaced with gravel and is wide and smooth, while on the Coosa side of the river, the road is wide and with the exception of a very few places is smooth, however, (continued to back page)

Competition In Automobile Gasoline Mileage Tests Creates Quite A Bit Of Interest Here

Monday morning brought to Clanton something new in creating interest among automobile dealers and owners here. To determine just how far various makes of cars would run on a gallon of gasoline was the idea so Polk Brothers Motor Co., local Chevrolet dealers equipped some of their stock cars with a device to make this test in a most exact manner, last Monday morning.

Clanton Motors, local Ford dealers also went into this mileage test with one of their Fords and soon some of the individual owners became curious enough to try their own car and see how far it would run on a gallon of

REPORT COMES IN THIS WEEK ON OPP. SCHOOLS

Schools Showing Average Of Less Than 10 To Be Discontinued Is Report

The first complete report on the Opportunity Schools for adults in Chilton County was turned in this week and given to the county papers for publication. Many of the schools are showing up well in attendance, but rest in some can not be said to be any too good.

Prof. H. A. Harris, organizer of the schools, and who is in charge of the schools, reports that the average attendance of less than ten during the next several days will be discontinued or moved to another school nearby, so everybody in the communities where schools are located should get busy and see that their school's attendance makes a good showing when the next report comes in. These schools are a great benefit to the people of Chilton County whether they fully realize it or not. It is simply giving them an opportunity to get a part of that education which they failed to receive when children, and which they are fully entitled to now. Those who attend the Opportunity schools do not have to pay one cent. Everything is furnished free, and all they have to do is to be there for a few hours a day and make good use of that time trying to learn something.

Following is the report on the schools this week, giving the enrollment and average attendance of each:

Revival Begins Soon At Mulberry Church

The revival at the Mulberry church is scheduled to begin on next Sunday, July 27th, according to an announcement given the News this week. Those in charge are glad to announce that Rev. Frank T. Woodward of North Carolina, who is a returned Missionary from China, will do the preaching for the revival. Everyone is invited to attend these services.

In the test of the Chevrolet conducted by Polk Brothers Motor Company, the test showed a mileage of 11.3 miles on a half gallon of gasoline with backing up twice to turn around and it was stated by a representative of the local Chevrolet dealers that it was believed this could be beat. This showed the Chevrolet making 22.6 miles to the gallon. The test was made with a 1920 model six cylinder sedan.

The test on the Ford made by Clanton Motors showed a mileage of 13 miles on a half gallon of gasoline. The test was made in a 1929 model four cylinder standard coupe.

Private Detective "Graft"

New York.—Americans, in spite of their protestations of a love for personal liberty and fair play, are the most spying and spied-upon people on earth. This is the assertion of Howard McLellan, criminologist and writer, one-time manager for one of the larger private detective agencies, made in an article written for the North American Review.

Mr. McLellan estimates that there are between 20,000 and 30,000 private detectives constantly employed throughout the United States, and that the public pays a minimum of $150,000 a day, or $54,750,000 a year, to "get the goods" on somebody. Aside from two major private detective organizations with branch offices in 30 cities, there are 5,000 smaller agencies with personnel of from one to ten operatives each, he finds. Of this army of privately engaged spies at least 2,000 are women, many of them girls with college backgrounds and good social connections who go into the work for the thrill of it.

Divorce is the background of the private detective business—husbands hiring men to trail their wives, wives hiring women to win the confidence of their suspected husbands—because it is one phase of detection which is not, legally, undertaken by the police.

The larger agencies usually advertise that they do not undertake to secure divorce evidence, but this is only technically true, says the North American Review article. They will not permit their operatives to take the stand as witnesses or otherwise identify themselves with a case after it has reached the legal stage, but they will "shadow anybody for anybody" and report on the movements of the subjects, notifying their client when the opportune time has come so that he, or she, may provide witnesses to support the case in court.

Ethics and fair play are generally disregarded and the law itself is broken into many pieces by many of the agencies, especially in divorce cases, says McLellan.

The divorce case haul of the private detective is even richer than the public suspects, he points out, for many couples who are reported "amicably divorced" in Paris or Mexico have really spent weeks or months "getting the goods," one on the other, with which to enforce the "amicable agreement."

SELF-CONSCIOUSNESS

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

Papa, it was, who is responsible for the statement that "the proper study of mankind is man," but he might have continued with the statement that too much attention to one's self, too much study of one's own feelings and moods and personal situations, is quite unprofitable. Self-consciousness is one of the greatest hindrances to self-possession. So long as one's attention is centered upon one's self, one is likely to be ill at ease and unhappy.

I bought a watch for myself when I was seventeen—a large silver watch with a heavy gold-plated chain and a locket hanging from it as it stretched across my vest front. As I walked across the street from the barber shop to the post office my new possession grew in importance in my mind. The chain loomed up like a log chain. I was not a little uncomfortable, for I felt sure that everyone I met was dazzled by the glitter of my new decoration, and otherwise strongly impressed by it.

Now, of course, the facts were that no one noticed either me or the gold chain. Each of the people I met was too much taken up with his own concerns to pay any attention to an awkward country lad dangleing a gold-plated locket from a tawdry chain. Such things were too common, anyway, to attract any special attention.

I suffered a good deal of real pain as a ten-year-old because mother sent me to Sunday school with a little patch on the knee of my trousers. It was a very small patch and it was very neatly put in, but the memory of it today gives me a queer sensation. I put my little hands over my knee in an attempt to cover up the disgraceful patch, but for all of that I was sure that Edith Corliss, who sat next to me in Sunday school, saw the badge of my poverty and scorned me for it. Now I am quite certain that she was thinking only of her yellow curls and her dainty lace-trimmed dress, and she probably never saw me at all or gave me a moment's consideration.

I watched Gordon during his marriage ceremony a few weeks ago. His voice was shaky and his hands were trembling, and he was as generally nervous as a young kitten. He supposed quite erroneously that he was the center of attention of the crowd gathered in the church, and it made him self-conscious. Now the facts were that no one there knew whether Gordon wore a white rose or a pink carnation in his buttonhole. The only reason he was there was because the ceremony could not well go on without his presence. If Gordon had only realized that everyone was looking at the girl, he would have been much easier.

Whether we are making a speech or presiding at a public gathering or getting married, we would be much more at ease if we would only realize that we are really of very little importance and that nobody is thinking about us so much as he is about himself.

"Slapper" Haunts French Home

Paris.—Husky policemen have prowled in vain, learned scientists have investigated without discovering a single clue, and neighbors have held watch parties galore—yet the mysterious face-slapping thing that inhabits the home of Jean Rossier, a peasant living near Rochefort, France, continues its ghastly depredations. Face-slapping by invisible hands continues, and even the police and curious scientists have felt husky, but unseen, blows. Furniture tumbles about. A noise like the rumbling of distant thunder comes from the attic at night. Beds are unmade and fires in the cook stove extinguished.

And members of the Rossier family are awakened sometimes at night by the screams of the children, on whose faces are bloody scratches.

"I have challenged the Thing to come out and fight a dozen times, but never yet have I had even a brief glimpse of it," explains Rossier himself, who is a veteran of the World war and a husky, middle-aged farmer. "This house belongs to me, though, and I'll not leave it in spite of what may happen. One of these days I'll get hold of the Thing and teach it a lesson, and then my family and I can again live in peace."

Neighbors say the ghastly actions are actually the spiltwork of an eighty-year-old woman who lives alone in a shack in the town. She has cast a spell over the Rossier family because of some fancied wrong, the neighbors say. Feeling against the old woman is so great that police are forced to maintain a constant guard around her home to protect her from violence.

The Rossier case has become the talk of France, and daily stories of its last outrages are carried by the Paris newspapers. Scientists have been called in on a great many such cases, especially in the rural regions, and usually have succeeded in exposing some clever trickery. Never, however, have they encountered a case so baffling and so apparently without solution.

Woody English, youngest player on Joe McCarthy's champion Cubs, who has become the big power of the infield since injury took Rogers Hornsby out of the game. This season English has developed into one of the great infielders in the major leagues. Since being moved from short to third he has stood out. Although still new to the position, he ranks with the best of them on the hot corner. And he's hitting as he never did before and as no one thought he ever would.

Deadly Ukulele Knocks Los Angeles Man Cold

Los Angeles.—Many people have suspected that a ukulele is a deadly weapon. Now it may be proved in a court of law if the person believed to have used one on Larry E. Steere can be located by the men of the sheriff's office.

Steere was found unconscious on the Foothill boulevard, east of Pasadena. He had been badly beaten, apparently with a broken ukulele found in his car.

Steere said he remembered nothing shortly after getting into his car at a restaurant on Sunset boulevard with a couple of strangers who had asked him for a ride.

Find Pioneer's Hidden Wealth

Wasco, Calif.—How an early day partner of John D. Rockefeller, who later became a pioneer settler here, hid his cash and jewels in crannies of his old house was revealed when his daughter, Mrs. Thomas Hicks of Los Angeles, completed tearing the old structure to pieces.

The pioneer was J. C. MacSpadden, whose father died in Indiana after making an exactly similar disposition of his $100,000 fortune, concealing the money in hidden corners of the old MacSpadden homestead.

MacSpadden died here in 1922, but it was not until Mrs. Hicks' search that the mystery of his reputed wealth was solved.

Mrs. Hicks and her husband found stocks and bonds, money in currency, silver and gold and a magnificent diamond ring, which MacSpadden had hidden beneath baseboards, in crevices of the walls, under floors and other odd places.

Part of MacSpadden's wealth was in the form of bullion, melted gold and silver that had been "run" into ingots.

The diamond ring was found in a rusty tin can. The ring was strung on a strand of woven human hair, a form of ornament popular with men many years ago.

Value of the stocks and bonds was understood to be high, but Mrs. Hicks has not yet placed a valuation on the fortune.

Old timers recalled that MacSpadden came to Wasco with the earliest pioneers, the exact year being forgotten.

American Colony in Moscow Grows Rapidly

Moscow.—If ever there was a race which carries its civilization and comforts along with it in its wanderings, it is the conglomerate race of Americans. Except for the limited space, there is very little in an American home in Moscow to indicate that it is located in the Soviet capital and not in New York or Des Moines.

The American colony here is growing by leaps and bounds. Scarcely a week passes without leaving a new deposit of Americans on the Russian soil—chiefly technical experts engaged to help industrialize the Soviet union or mechanize Soviet farming.

It is estimated that there are more than 2,000 Americans already settled in the capital on a more or less permanent basis, the contracts running anywhere from six months to three years. In addition there is always a transient American population of several scores and another 200 scattered through the country.

For the use of engineers and technicians who are here for a considerable period, especially those with families, the government is erecting special apartment houses with baths.

Kentucky Cow Mother of Twenty-Second Calf

Raceland, Ky.—Rose, a twenty-one-year-old cow, owned by Mrs. Emma Mendis was recently the proud mother of a calf. There is nothing exciting about that fact alone, but it happens that the newly born is Rose's twenty-second offspring. The old cow received considerable notoriety several months ago when she strayed away from her home pasture and drank some mash she found at a still in a nearby woods.

DIPPING INTO SCIENCE

Coal Bi-Products Besides illuminating gas, bituminous coal gives off coal tar. This in turn contains about 160 substances which can be separated by distillation. Among other things, at least 900 different coal tar dyes have been developed. Germany controlled this industry up to the time of the war.

FARM STOCK

ROUND WORMS IN PIGS EXPENSIVEMistaken by Some Growers for Thumps or Influenza.

What the hog raiser calls thumps, influenza, or pneumonia is usually worms. Round worms in pigs cost hog growers of eastern Carolina more money than any other one thing.

"There is only one way to handle this trouble," says W. V. Hays, extension specialist at the North Carolina state college. "Use only movable farrowing houses and self feeders. Rake up all the litter, bedding and other trash in the lots and burn it. Turn the lot with a turn plow. Sow some soy beans for the sows and pigs to graze upon in the fall and then plant vetch and crimson clover or vetch for winter and spring grazing."

Mr. Hays says before the sow is put into farrowing quarters, clean them out well and scrub with a solution made of one pound of lye to thirty gallons of boiling water. Wash the sows sides and put her in warm, soapy water before putting her into the clean quarters and then keep the pigs on clean ground where they cannot suffer from worms.

To do this will aid the grower in raising the same number of pigs from one-third less brood sows. This is more economical and also prevents runts. It helps to give uniform thrifty pigs coming along six weeks earlier than where they are raised in dirty, worm-infested quarters. Such a system also works in well with the Shay method of breeding and feeding and helps the grower to have his animals fat and ready for the high markets in April and September.

Mr. Hays says the co-operative carlot shipments of hogs are increasing where these sanitation suggestions are followed. In Craven county nearly all of the growers and shippers are following a rigid system of sanitation both in the breeding lots and the fattening pens. The results are seen in a better control of worms, he declares.

Obsolete Animals Are Named by Dr. Mohler

In order to keep abreast of the times the live stock industry must adopt 1930 models of doing business, Dr. J. R. Mohler of the United States Department of Agriculture stated recently.

Dr. Mohler described three types of obsolete animals as follows:

1. Those that fall to repay cost of maintenance.
 2. Scab and grade sires.
 3. Animals affected with communicable diseases.
- "There are," Doctor Mohler added, "millions of these animals."
- Some of the obsolete practices on farms are the old hog lot in favor of the sanitation program, the incubator has replaced the hen as well as the recommendation affecting poultry which may be out of date from last year.
- "In the swift moving era," the chief concluded, "in which we live, there is need to use the methods which enable us to meet the pace set by our fellow industrialists. Better, healthier and more useful animal types are essential."

Feeding Veal Calves to Get Best Results

For the first two weeks the calf should be fed three times daily. During the first week it should receive eight to ten pounds of milk a day and during the second week ten to twelve pounds a day. Beginning with the third week, milk and grain supplement, or skim milk substitute and grain supplement, can gradually replace whole milk. By the end of the third or fourth week, therefore, according to the size and vigor of the calf, the whole milk can be skimmed from the feed. The amount of skim milk can gradually be increased to sixteen or eighteen pounds daily.

The grain is best fed dry, beginning with a handful after feeding the milk. When the calf is one month old and is being fed entirely on skim milk, or skim milk substitute, clover hay and grain, the amount of grain can be one-half pound daily. At the end of two months it can be one pound, and at the end of three months two pounds daily. No further increase is necessary until the calf is six months old. A good grain mixture consists of 100 pounds of corn meal, 100 pounds of ground oats, 100 pounds of wheat bran, 50 pounds of linseed oilmeal, and eight pounds of blood flour.

New Cattle Disease

Anaplasmosis is the technical name applied to a cattle disease which has recently made its appearance in Kansas, Missouri, Oklahoma and the Southwest. The affected animals become anemic and run high temperatures but usually have a normal appetite. The milk flow begins to drop and later the animal loses its appetite. There is usually an increase in the flow of saliva and tears. About 30 per cent of the cases terminate fatally and death usually comes in a week.

Leaf-Spot Causes
Big Beet LossesMay Be Controlled to Some Degree by Timely Dusting or Spraying.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The leaf-spot disease of sugar beets, which is responsible for serious losses to beet growers in some areas, may be controlled to a considerable degree by spraying or dusting, say experimenters at the bureau of plant industry in Circular 115-C, published by the United States Department of Agriculture. The development of the disease depends primarily on temperature conditions and the distribution of rainfall. Only in years of unusual weather conditions does the leaf-spot disease cause severe losses in the eastern area of sugar-beet culture. The situation is more serious in Iowa, southern Minnesota, Nebraska, and northern Colorado; the disease does its greatest damage in the Arkansas valley of southern Colorado and it is only in exceptional years that beet growers escape serious losses.

The disease is caused by a parasitic fungus which is introduced into the field by infected seed or it may enter as wind-blown spores. The spore-bearing material from the beet tops and refuse of a previously diseased field is the most important source of infection. Long rotations help to restrict the infection. Careful control of irrigation and good drainage in beet fields create conditions unfavorable for the multiplication and spread of the parasite. There is hope that plant breeders may eventually develop beets of commercial value which are resistant to the leaf-spot disease. In the meantime the Department of Agriculture offers the results of spraying and dusting experiments which promise to be of value to growers, particularly in the areas where leaf-spot damage is severe.

For control of leaf-spot in the vicinity of Rocky Ford, Colo., either Bordeaux spray or copper sulphate-lime dust applied from three to five times during the growing season at intervals of approximately two weeks gave favorable results. The treated plots on the average produced a heavier tonnage of beets, and the beets showed a higher sugar content. The cost for a season's dusting is estimated at $8 to $8 an acre, with the probability that the cost can be reduced if dusting becomes common enough to warrant development of efficient machinery and the purchase of materials in carload lots. The gains from treatment, measured in increase in sugar and sugar sometimes amounted to $20 an acre or more.

Heavy Leaf-Spot Toll

"Present knowledge of leaf-spot epidemiology does not permit forecasting the years of heavy leaf-spot occurrence," say the authors of circular 115-C, "and such plant protection must be viewed as a form of crop insurance. From the experience of the last 20 years in the Arkansas valley of Colorado in which all but four or five have been years of heavy leaf-spot toll, such insurance seems warranted for that area. In many other areas, such as Michigan, for example, this type of plant protection will probably be most serviceable as an emergency control measure."

Those interested in the details of the experiments, and in the discussion of the application of the experimental results, may obtain a copy of circular 115-C, "The Sugar-Beet Leaf-Spot Disease and Its Control by Direct Measures," by applying to the Office of Information, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Close Grazing Keeps
Grass Young and Rich

Since young grass, consisting largely of leaves and comparatively little carbohydrate, and is more readily digestible than older grass in which more stalks have developed, a pasture should be grazed sufficiently close to keep young leaves growing and prevent development of too much stalk, the United States Department of Agriculture says.

British investigations show that complete grazing once in three weeks during a good growing season is sufficient to maintain a high nutritive content in the pasture.

The relatively high protein content of leaves and the high nutritive value of proteins indicate that the supplement needed for young and closely grazed pastures is a relatively high carbohydrate feed, such as corn.

In seasons of heavy rainfall, when grass grows rapidly, pastures should be grazed more closely than in dry periods, when grass grows slowly, the department says.

Effect of Fertilizer on Quality of Corn

Numerous reports of fertilizer experiments with corn have demonstrated the effect in improving the quality of the crop. Generally increased yields are accompanied by higher quality. A number of records show the relation between yield and quality of corn harvested on experimental plots by the Purdue university agricultural experiment station. The results are averages of yields for five years on eleven different parts of the state. Increased yields due to fertilizer applications are accompanied in every case by a marked increase in percentage of sound corn.

Seed Marketing Not Favored for FarmerSuccess Depends on Careful Attention to Details.

By careful purchase of better seeds farmers may save money and at the same time enlarge their returns by bigger yields, according to Farmers' Bulletin 1232-F, "Seed Marketing Hints for the Farmer," recently reprinted by the United States Department of Agriculture.

Farmers obtain their seeds, George C. Elder, the author, points out, from three sources—their own farms, from other farmers, or from dealers. Early purchasers usually have an advantage. If a great quantity of seeds is needed, it is wise to get samples which should be tested for purity and germination. Better grades generally pay and purchase by weight is considered preferable.

Success of the farmer who grows seeds for sale depends largely on the care given to threshing, cleaning, sacking, sampling, testing, tagging and storing, the author points out. He may sell seeds to neighbors, to local dealers or shippers, to traveling seed buyers, to distant seedsmen or by advance growing contracts. His price will depend on supply, demand, quality, general business conditions and his ability to find the best outlet. There should usually be a good demand for fancy quality and superior strains of seeds.

Hydrated Lime Checks
Clubroot of Cabbage

At least three-quarters of a ton of hydrated lime per acre is necessary to check clubroot of cabbage in thoroughly infested soils and it takes at least two tons to produce a commercially satisfactory control, the United States Department of Agriculture has found.

As a result of experiments, now reported in technical bulletin 181-T, "Clubroot of Crucifers," published by the United States Department of Agriculture, it was determined that alkalinity of soil alone was not the controlling factor unless the right alkali was present. The disease persisted in soil made alkaline with calcium carbonate, but diminished in another soil in which the soil treated with calcium hydroxide. The results indicate that the disease is caused by a soil-borne fungus which is killed by a high pH value.

Clubroot is often diagnosed in the seed by showing disease above ground and may thus transfer the disease to the field. Later in the field the tops wilt and the plants may die or fail to produce heads. Heavy treatment of soils with hydrated lime may prevent clubroot from gaining a foothold. The disease is present in 36 states and in 21 of them it is important to truck growers.

Eradicate Wild Garlic on Cultivated Soils

A little garlic is all right in soup, if you like it, but the flavor in food or milk is decidedly undesirable. Ploving late each fall and again in early spring, followed by the growing of a thoroughly cultivated row crop, is thus far the best known method of killing wild garlic on cultivated land, but this method must be followed for three years or more in order to clean up the weed, according to the United States Department of Agriculture. Fairly deep plowing should be started in the fall in time to destroy young late-summer plants before they produce new bulbs. This work should be done as a rule in October or November in the South and about a month later in the North. The garlic tops must be plowed under completely or else they will keep on growing.

Farm Hints

Spring, summer and fall are good times to spread limestone.

To eliminate the bad taste of cod liver oil: Feed it to the hens and eat the eggs they lay.

There were 5,751,000 cases of eggs in storage May 1 compared with 8,052,000 cases a year ago.

A trench silo is not as good as the usual upright silo but it is a very good substitute for one in an emergency or as a temporary proposition.

Artificial brooding of turkeys is a means of avoiding worms, lice, mites, and possibly blackhead, if the poulters are kept in infected areas.

A width of 32 to 38 feet, outside dimensions, is most satisfactory for the dairy barn. Thirty feet is too narrow for convenience and more than 36 feet is likely to result in a cold, damp stable.

Dipping the sheep after shearing will save feed later because the operation will kill lice and ticks which annoy the lambs and keep them from making proper gains. Any good coal tar preparation or stock dip can be used.

Value of Kindergarten
Not Fully Recognized

Though it is estimated that 5,000,000 children are of kindergarten age in the United States, only approximately 750,000 are now in kindergartens.

This indicates that the value of the kindergarten has been underestimated. Parents do not realize that this pre-grade training is an important step in child development. It is not merely a nursery.

Work in pasting, cutting paper, coloring; in building with sand and clay; and in recognizing certain words encourages thinking and arouses interest in the constructive. The child is impressionable, and a trained teacher can do much to assist him on his way through the schools and life.

School superintendents and social workers are in agreement that kindergarten work cuts down juvenile delinquency, and parents should be aware of that.—Des Moines Tribune-Capital.

Radio Guards Sailors

A radio beacon system has been added to the equipment of the Highland Light signal station, one of the principal guardians of shipping in treacherous Cape Cod waters. Information is broadcast to ships at sea four times daily, and in thick weather, the conditions are broadcast continuously, with one-minute blasts and two-minute silence. Any ship equipped with a radio set may listen in.

Individuals Must Bring Prosperity

The Futility of waiting upon the administration for restoration of prosperity having been shown, both by the demoralization occasioned by revisions in the tariff and the failure of "farm relief" measures, the time has come for each individual and each community to realize that the job of putting the nation back on its feet has become a collective one, with results largely up to the people and their public officials at home.

By resolute determination upon the part of the individual citizen, the business man, the builder, the manufacturer, the municipal, county and state official, and the wage earner, early and positive results may be obtained, and it is to the highest interest of every one to bring this about.

As an initial measure, there are those fortunate ones whose incomes have not been cut off, but who, for various reasons, have reduced their purchases to the minimum. They can help and help materially, if they will, by the simple expedient of returning to the normal manner of living, buying the usual things that are purchased in normal times. By so doing they will not only lessen unemployment upon the part of others but will minimize the likelihood of their own incomes being cut off or reduced. Thousands of such persons have deferred the purchase of needful things and the time has come to buy—to give the push that will help to end distress among others.

The property owner, large and small, can and should aid by having needful repairs and alterations made, thus giving employment to those who need it and putting in circulation money that will help to restore the business equilibrium. Thousands of jobs of this nature await execution, having been deferred because of general conditions, and general conditions now demand that the work be carried forward without more delay. Self interest and the public interest demand it.

Public officials, city, county and state, also have a duty to perform if there remains any work of a public nature that should be done and which is being held up on account of "the time." Fortunately, officials generally are awake to this situation and are doing much to restore normal conditions, but more might be done.

During the parlous times of the past few months this community has been more favored than most. New enterprises have been established, much building has been done—and is in progress—and the future is beginning to take on much brighter hues, all of which should encourage more earnest and more active efforts to restore normal conditions. The time is ripe for a general forward movement—a drive to put everybody to work on full time, to put increasing sums in circulation and bring about the full measure of prosperity that energy, purpose and faith may make possible.

It is time to quit looking to Washington and to look to self! Time to forget the things that are behind, which seem to hinder, and to push on into the realization of great things that lie ahead. Let every one do his or her part and then watch things hum—Tuscaloosa News.

Thanks To The Alabama Journal

The following clipping was taken from The Alabama Journal, Montgomery, editorial page of Saturday, July 19: NEWSPAPER OWNERSHIP CHANGES

The Rockford Chronicle, this week, contains an interesting announcement of change of ownership and management. Mr. Wallace P. Pruitt has sold all his interest in the property and good will of the Chronicle to Mr. J. B. Atkinson, of Clanton, widely known over the state as publisher of the Chilton County News.

The publishing plant of The Chronicle was recently destroyed by fire and, temporarily, the newspaper, under Mr. Atkinson's ownership, is to be published in the plant of the Chilton County News, at Clanton. A regular staff for the Chronicle, will have offices in Rockford to care for the Chronicle's interests.

Mr. Atkinson, in the Chilton County News, has long published what is regarded as one of the best weekly newspapers in the state and it is indicated that his talent will be further devoted to great improvements in The Rockford Chronicle. It is interesting to note that Billy Smith, editor of the Chilton County News, and well known as the youngest newspaper editor in Alabama, will also be editor of the Rockford Chronicle.

Newspaper readers will note Mr. Pruitt's retirement with regret, but will extend congratulations to the people of Coosa County upon the fact that the Chronicle is hereafter to be in the progressive hands of Mr. Atkinson. Friends everywhere extend their good wishes.

New Peril At Crossings

This thing of blithely dashing into a train at railroad crossings isn't the care-free sport it used to be.

The worm has turned and, unlike the brand used in seeking the elusive bream, it doesn't look at all the same on the other side; not at all.

This change in the accepted order came the other day when a Vermont court required a motorist to pay a railroad company $19.60 for damage inflicted upon a locomotive into which said motorist crashed, dashed, hurtled, ran, impinged, collided bumped and otherwise assailed to the detriment of the paint, varnish, finish, polish, appearance, efficiency, utility and usefulness of said locomotive, engine and vehicle of propulsion at said highway crossing where said motorist committee said breach upon the property of said plaintiff.

Heretofore crossings accidents have merely resulted in cars going to the junk heap and occupants going to the cemetery. Now, however, the danger of having to pay out real cash in consequence of such mishaps has become very real and this, at least, should give pause to those who are in the habit of forgetting that railroads are built to operate trains upon and that venturing thereon without looking is rather careless.

"ROUND TOWN"

---by Doug

Opinions expressed in this column by this writer have no connection with the general policies of this paper, being wholly those of the writer, in the manner they are written.

Silence Seldom Pays

It is a mistaken idea that keeping a thing out of a paper is going to hush it up. Newspapers are not so powerful that they hold in their hands the difference between publicity and silence. Very often when an event is not recorded in the papers just as it took place the reports that gain circulation are apt to be more harmful—if harm there is—than a plain printed statement of fact regarding the occurrence.

This week I have an announcement to make. I have been just passed a rigid examination and am now ranking fourth in the state as an authority on the subject of Women. Next week I intend to begin my airing of some of the faults and some of the good points about the fairer and weaker sex who go out in a big way to make up this country of ours. I hope my discussion of the female sex will not arouse, nor irritate any member who should happen to cast an eye on this column. I do not claim to have such a wide knowledge of them, but I do believe that the majority of them are humans, to speak, if you pardon my saying so. But, I'll try to start my discussion along that next week.

And now, another filling station in Clanton. Can you imagine such a thing? If I had the money that fellow is going to spend on that new station, I'd turn the thing into a big classy eating joint, with a darn good dance floor in connection, cause folks will spend their money for such as that before they will most anything else—even before they will pay their grocery bills, or most any other bill.

And so on, out to Lay Dam to the Shriner's outing this afternoon and night. I hope to be able to get some material for this column for next week from that outing, especially on the fairer sex. I trust that my good friend Dooker Pooker of The Coal Bin fame, who is the "International Authority on the Subject of Wimmen," will forward to me right away my official credentials as fourth authority.

I was invited by the management of the Wadesonian Theatre to go over and see the picture: "Party Girl," and to pass my judgment on the picture, on account of certain rumors about the picture being indecent and unfit for the public to see. Well, I went over and gave it the once over. In my opinion, "Party Girl," has no position with pictures declared indecent and was certainly a good entertaining picture. There was not a scene in "Party Girl" that could be termed indecent by the most critical person, however, there was quite a controversy stirred up when it showed in Birmingham some time ago, but undoubtedly any scene that would smack of vulgarity had been eliminated before it reached here. Of course the picture was extremely human in several scenes, but a broadminded and intelligent person could reason those things out. Those persons who would so readily find criticism to the management of The Wadesonian on showing this picture have very little ground for such criticism.

Taking the people of Clanton as a whole, and then dividing them into groups, is a most amusing and entertaining pastime, and would, if conducted properly, turn out to be profitable, so I have found. Say, for instance, we have a group of people in Clanton, who might be termed intelligent and broadminded. Then there are perhaps many who could be grouped off in a class opposite to this. Speaking of the opposite type of persons: I mean the narrow-minded group—those who are so wrapped up in themselves, who they are, or seem to be, or who their ancestors were and what they owned—that they fail to consider the other person, except to look upon them as inferiors, not worthy of notice or consideration. Then, on the other hand perhaps it might do well to discuss those who are thought of as inferior by those who themselves, think they are superior, and what they think of the self-styled superiors of a community. say Clanton. In my opinion, the opinion of the superiors would not be very nice to write about, however, it would probably be of benefit if it was aired slightly. These two classes of people are perhaps the most noticeable among the people of Clanton, and it would not be a very difficult task for one who has resided here for a number of years, say fifteen, to be able to group these persons off. Then, of course there are a few of the self-styled superiors who can mix with the inferiors without fear of it injuring their social standing in the community. In that case they cannot be termed as "self-styled." The inferiors will eventually recognize them as being slightly superior and be proud to refer to them as friends. But not so with the "self-styled" type.

In my opinion these "self-styled" persons are all heart and soul for strangers, merely to make a hit—until they find that the strangers are just ordinary folks (the backbone of the town) then they discard their friendship. Such persons who follow that method are not really credits to a town. What we need is good substantial, ordinary folks who are willing to make a sacrifice for the benefit of the town, and not the high-bating social standing-seeking kind. In my walks around town, I am continually mixing and mingling with both types, making it necessary to know how to handle both kinds, however, frankly, I have no desire to become too well acquainted with the "self-styled" type. When it comes to a real showdown, they fail to show up, and it is the inevitable show down that counts in the end. The kind of citizens a town needs is the kind who are there at the show down, and can be seen there after the fight, ragged and rugged, ready for more fight to defend the rights of their community, if necessary.

If there is a question in your mind, why the editorial manner I am following this week, maybe I can throw a little light on that for you. It has been my intention to keep up as well as possible with the people of Clanton, their manners, ideas, characteristics, etc., and lately I have become better acquainted with various persons, both sexes, in Clanton, some of whom I had an idea about, and using various methods to determine if my opinion "still holds good," about them. Many of them are still in the old rut, so I have found, and I only wish that they could have a broadminded moment and that I could foster enough courage to tell them where they are making a mistake. But then there is the possibility that they are so "stuck" to their unbecoming ideas about things that I would be unable to make them understand.

STATE TAX MEN AND BANKERS IN ACCORD

Months of Negotiation Lead to Agreement on Changes Broadening Method of State or Local Taxation of National Banks.

NEW YORK.—Months of conference and negotiation between an American Bankers Association special committee and the Committee of the Association of States on Bank Taxation have resulted in an agreement on a form of amendment to the Federal statute dealing with state or local taxation of national banks that "maintains the integrity of the protective principles of the section and is satisfactory to the commissioners' committee," says the American Bankers Association Journal. Thomas B. Paton, the organization's General Counsel, in making the announcement says that previously proposed amendments to the statute, which is known as Section 5219, have been opposed when it was felt their terms would enable any state to place banks in a tax class by themselves.

"The law as it stands today," Mr. Paton says, "permits state or local taxation of national banks or their shareholders in one or the other of the four following forms: the shareholders upon their shares, a property tax, the shareholders upon their dividend income—a personal income tax; the bank upon its net income; the bank according to or measured by its net income. Only one form of tax can be imposed, except that the dividend tax may be combined with the third or fourth form if other corporations and shareholders are likewise taxed."

"The conditions permitted are: the tax on shares must be at no greater rate than on other competing moneyed capital; the income tax on shareholders must be at no greater rate than on net income from other moneyed capital; the tax on bank net income must be at no higher rate than on other financial corporations nor the highest rates on mercantile and manufacturing corporations doing business within the state; the tax measured by net bank income is subject to the same limitations as the tax on net income of the bank but may include entire net income from all sources."

States Seek Broader Law National banks and their shareholders are taxed in different states under a diversity of systems, he says. The U. S. Supreme Court has held that the low millage rate on intangible personal property is in violation of the present law where it results in national bank shares being taxed at a rate greater than that assessed upon competing moneyed capital. A number of states, unwilling to use the income methods permitted, had the alternative of either repealing the intangible tax laws or limiting taxation of national bank shares at the intangible rate. Therefore they sought a broadening of the permissive provisions.

Also, Mr. Paton points out, a Supreme Court decision held a state's excise tax on corporations invalid where it included income from Federal and local government bonds in the excise measure. This created doubt as to some state bank excise taxes.

"Conferences have been held to reach some agreement which would protect the banks, satisfy the tax commissioners and avoid a contest in Congress," Mr. Paton says. "From the standpoint of the tax authorities, the main objectives have been an amendment which would permit certain states to retain their low rate tax upon intangibles and at the same time derive an adequate, but not excessive, revenue from national bank shares, and an amendment which would permit certain states to tax corporations from in-ex-empta, and at the same time derive the same revenue from the banks as heretofore. From the standpoint of the banks, it has been deemed imperative to maintain the protective principles of Section 5219."

The Changes Agreed On "In the proposed amendment the existing provision permitting taxation of bank shares no higher than the rate upon competing moneyed capital has been modified with respect to certain intangible tax states only by a provision under which, instead of the moneyed capital limitation, the rate shall not be greater than the rate upon the shares of the financial corporations, nor upon the net assets of individuals, partnerships or associations employed in the banking, loan or investment business, nor higher than the rate assessed upon mercantile, manufacturing and business corporations with head office in the state."

"Also an added fifth alternative permissive method, designated as a specific tax, permits a state, in place of an ad valorem tax on bank shares, to add together total dividends paid the preceding year and the increase in capital, surplus and undivided profits, less additions to capital or surplus paid in by stockholders, and to divide this total by the number of shares. The state may tax the shares based upon this amount, but not to exceed the rate on other corporations in proportion to their net profits."

"This method is designed for states which have heretofore taxed national banks upon their entire net income from all sources at a proportionate rate to that assessed upon business corporations. The amount which is the basis of the tax is the equivalent of the entire net income from all sources, but being assessed against the shareholder upon his property in the shares and not a tax upon the bank, it is not open to the objection as an indirect tax on exempt income."

Billingsley News

The members of the W. M. U. organizations of the Baptist church, who attended the Mission Study Institute at Clanton last week report one of the most instructive and inspiring meetings ever attended.

The many friends of Mr. W. A. Gandy will regret to learn of his severe illness.

Miss Maude Lee Patrick left Sunday for Newton, Ala., where she will attend a Y. W. A. Camp at a camp site near Newton this week and beginning Friday next, the class of 1929 of Newton Institute will have a Home Coming at the Dormitory, chaperoned by Rev. and Mrs. P. W. Lett, who were President and Matron of the school at the time. Miss Patrick finished there.

Miss Stella Jones of Elrod is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Gibson.

Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Dopson have gone to Montgomery where they will reside in the future.

Mr. J. B. Marlar and Mrs. Annie Thacker of Clanton, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Bilays and charming children of Bessemer visited Dr. and Mrs. A. J. Marlar Friday.

Mr. Robert Golson of Prattville was the guest in the home of G. T. Dickinson the past week end.

Messrs. H. A. Askins, J. W. Pattillo, and D. Davis made a business trip to Prattville Friday.

VERBENA GIRL REPRESENTED CHILTON AT LUNCHEON

Florence, Ala., July 18.—Miss Elizabeth Hubbard of Verbena represented Chilton County when the Florence Service Clubs entertained recently with a luncheon honoring the various county organizations on the Florence State Teachers College campus.

Miss Hubbard is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Hubbard and is a graduate of the Verbena High School.

Forty-six Alabama counties and five states are represented in the Summer school enrollment.

BOXING TO BE STAGED AT MONTGOMERY ON JULY 24

Montgomery, Ala., July 24.—The biggest boxing program ever offered in this section of the state will be staged here Tuesday, July 29, when Battling Bozo, the Birmingham clown, meets Jess Akers, of Tupelo, Miss., for the light-heavyweight championship of the South.

Young Jack Sullivan of Bessemer, Ala., will fight Horace Hooper of Birmingham in the eight-round semi-final. These boys recently fought to a draw in the main bout at Birmingham and the match was so thrilling that J. Thomas, guest promoter from New York, matched the pair for the semi-final here.

Commanders of the various American Legion posts are urged to send in their orders for tickets as soon as possible, to Box 56, Montgomery, to Joe McDuff, promoter.

CEMETERY CLEANING AT MARS HILL ON NEXT FRIDAY

The News has been requested to announce this week that there will be a cemetery cleaning at Mars Hill cemetery on next Friday, July 25th. All who are interested are requested to meet there at seven o'clock in the morning with the necessary tools to do the work.

HUNDRED SOURCES OF FARM CASH ARE NAMED

Alabama's soil and climate makes it possible for farmers to produce and sell more than 100 different products. This is revealed by a list prepared by the College of Agriculture of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute. The list follows:

Crops and Gardens

1. Cotton: (a) Lint; (b) seed for planting; (c) seed for oil mills.
2. Corn: (a) For feed; (b) meal; (c) seed.
3. Popcorn.
4. Peanuts: (a) Feed; (b) for confectionery trade; (c) for oil mills.
5. Oats: (a) Feed; (b) seed; (c) hay.
6. Tobacco.
7. Soybeans: (a) Seed; (b) hay.
8. Cowpeas: (a) Hay; (b) seed.
9. Lespedeza: (a) Hay; (b) seed.
10. Velvet Beans: (a) Seed; (b) feed.
11. Sorghum: (a) Syrup; (b) hay; (c) feed.
12. Sugar cane: (a) Syrup.
13. Johnson grass hay.
14. Alfalfa hay.
15. Sudan grass hay.
16. Sweet potatoes.
17. Irish potatoes.
18. Nuts: (pecans, walnuts, hickory nuts, chinquapins).
19. Berries: (strawberries, dewberries, huckleberries, raspberries, blackberries).
20. Watermelons.
21. Cantaloupes.
22. Orchard fruits: (peaches, apples, pears, plums, oranges, kumquats, persimmons, quinces).
23. Truck crops: (Cabbage, tomatoes, turnips, "greens," peas, cucumbers, lettuce, onions, squash, radish).
24. Garden vegetables: (including the above and many others).
25. Dairying: (a) milk; (b) cream; (c) butter.

Neville, commandant of the marine corps, in Arlington National Cemetery. 3—Laying the famous mosaics of flowers on the principal street of Genzano, Italy, for the Corpus Christi festival.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Progress of Senate Battle Over Ratification of the Naval Treaty.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

OPponents of the London naval treaty, seemingly aware that there are enough of its supporters in the senate to bring about its ratification, spent last week mainly in devising and offering reservations to the pact. Senator Norris, as well as many others, was still deeply concerned about the secret documents which the President refused to give the senate, and Senator Borah visited the White House to tell Mr. Hoover it might be necessary to accept the Norris rider which says ratification is to be with the understanding that there are no secret agreements.

President Hoover was highly indignant over the implications in this Norris reservation. Since he had given the senate his word that no secret agreement existed, he felt that the rider was a reflection on his good faith. Borah said that if the reservation was rejected he could not answer for the fate of the pact. He did not think it likely that the treaty would be rejected, but he regarded it entirely possible that the supporters of the Norris reservation, if defeated, would be able to prolong the fight indefinitely, if not to bring about a postponement of final action until autumn.

THEN Senator Kenneth McKellar of Tennessee came forward with a reservation under the terms of which Great Britain would be required to dismantle her naval bases off American shores. McKellar offered yet another reservation providing for freedom of the seas, because, as had been admitted by Senator Reed of Pennsylvania, the delegates to the London conference failed to obey the instructions of congress to consider this question before or at the parley. Both these reservations were opposed by the administration senators.

Senator Watson of Indiana, majority leader, in the effort to speed up action on the treaty proposed a unanimous consent agreement that beginning Tuesday, July 22, debate be limited to ten minutes on each amendment and reservation and on the treaty itself, and that each senator be allowed to speak but once on each. He declared that if this plan were rejected cloture would be revoked, and a petition for this was prepared.

The fact that this petition was signed by not only the 10 names required for its submission, but nearly the two-thirds majority required for its adoption made it certain that the treaty would be ratified with votes to spare.

MERELY for recreation and a much needed rest, President Hoover will start August 15 on a vacation trip that will last only about two weeks. This was announced at the White House, and it was added that the President would make no speeches or public appearances in the various cities he passes through. It is his intention to visit both the Glacier and Yellowstone National parks, but the itinerary has not yet been made out. It was considered likely he would travel by train to Chicago, take a boat from there to Duluth and make the rest of the trip by railway.

Representatives of the Interior department, at the direction of Secretary Wilbur, have selected a number of camping sites in the national parks for the use of the Presidential party.

SENATOR ARTHUR CAPPER of Kansas wants the farm board to buy 100,000,000 bushels of wheat, in addition to that already purchased, and he put his plan before President Hoover. The Chief Executive, however, had just had a talk with Secretary of Agriculture Hyde who had returned from a trip to the wheat belt and who was understood to be opposed to such a scheme as Capper proposed. So the President declined to approve the plan, though he told the Kansan he was anxious to do anything desirable to relieve the plight of the wheat growers.

Chairman Legge of the farm board made public his correspondence with Governor Reed of Kansas who criticized the board's plan for reduction of wheat acreage and criticized its activities or inactivities. In his letter Mr. Legge makes it plain that the grain stabilization activities of the board have undergone no appreciable change in policy in spite of the governor's charges of its having broken the market and caused a record-breaking slump in wheat.

SENATOR Nye of North Dakota, chairman of the special senate committee to investigate campaign expenditures, was in Chicago last week holding hearings all by himself on the expenditures in behalf of Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick, Republican nominee for senator. Nye and Mrs. McCormick haggled a lot concerning the factions and organizations that supported her against Senator Deneen, and various witnesses testified to their contributions to her campaign fund. But it was not apparent that anything was brought out discreditable to Mrs. McCormick.

That lady while on the stand demanded that the committee summon her Democratic foe for the senatorship, James Hamilton Lewis, and ask him to explain a statement he made in Springfield to the effect that it cost $1,000,000 to win the Republican nomination. She said Lewis "must have knowledge of expenditures of well over $700,000 more than I have included in my accounting. He should be subpoenaed if he has any knowledge of that sort."

ACTIVITIES of Communists in the United States are being investigated by a congressional committee which was busy last week in New York city. Most important of the witnesses heard was Charles G. Wood, commissioner of conciliation of the Department of Labor. He said the Communists at work among the labor groups were chronic trouble makers, and described strikes in Passaic, New Bedford and Gastonia, N. C., each of which was either started or influenced by the Reds. He declared the strikes, like other activities of the Communists, were but a means of attacking the government of the United States.

FRANCE and Italy last week reached a "gentlemen's agreement" to take a naval building holiday for six months, and there was great relief in European diplomatic circles. The agreement means little from a naval standpoint, for neither nation intended to lay down any more vessels this year, but it was of immense importance psychologically. The statement of both countries now hope to settle most of their problems before the six months are up.

GREAT BRITAIN, still struggling to settle the row in India, has a new trouble on her hands. This is in Egypt, where the Ward or nationalist party, supporting Nabas Pasha, former premier against King Fuad, is stirring up revolt. The first outbreak was in Alexandria, where a fanatical mob of Wafdists staged a great riot, attacking Europeans and looting shops. Before native troops and police had regained control of the situation 13 civilians, all Egyptians, had been killed, and at least 80 were wounded by gunshot. About 160 others, including 50 police, were injured in other ways. The British battleships Queen Elizabeth and Ramillies were hurried to Alexandria.

Latest developments in the Indian affair indicated that Mahatma Gandhi, head of the passive resistance revolt, would be released from prison and invited to participate in the London round table conference that is to open October 20. As a preliminary, Gandhi is expected to call off the civil disobedience campaign.

It is also reported in London that though Prime Minister MacDonald and his colleagues are eager to shelve the Simon report they may be forced to face it at the round table because of the determination of certain Indian delegations to have the report accepted as a basis of discussion.

MAKING use of dictatorial power conferred on him by President von Hindenburg under the German constitution, Chancellor Bruening put into effect the "emergency finance law" by decree. The reichstag had refused to approve the measure and the government lost patience. The law, which is expected to end the government's deficit, includes an increase in income tax, enforcement of a tax on bequests and legacies, a head tax and a special tax on food and liquor served in inns and restaurants.

GERMANY's reply to the memorandum of French Foreign Minister Briand proposing a European federation indicates a general acceptance of the plan, though it has almost as many reservations as the Italian reply. The Germans, like the Italians and some others, insist that Russia and Turkey be included in the union, and they make it clear the federation should in no way be directed against the United States. They subtly suggest a revision of the war treaties, but say little of disarmament. The German reply agrees heartily with Briand on the necessity of subordinating economic to political aspects—a view which may prove to be the fatal weakness of the whole scheme.

A "purely tentative" reply from Great Britain was not so encouraging, expressing the opinion that the proposed union is "unnecessary and possibly a dangerous institution." It suggested that the plan be placed on the agenda of the next assembly of the League of Nations.

Greece, Austria and Poland also have accepted the Briand plan, and Russia seems to be fishing for an invitation.

AS USUAL, you can make your own choice as to which faction in China is winning the civil war. Just now things look none too cheerful for the Nationalist government. Dispatches from Peking say fifteen leaders of the Kuomintang signed a manifesto formally ending the long dispute between the right and left wings of that party, and calling a national conference within a month for the purpose of establishing a government "to succeed the false government which Gen. Chiang Kai-shek usurped." It is predicted Gen. Yen Hsi-shan will be head of that new government.

DEATHS of the week included those of Brig. Gen. H. C. Smith, U. S. A.; Rear Admiral A. H. Robertson, U. S. N.; Henry Sydney Harrison, novelist; Judge Jesse Holdom, dean of the Chicago bench; James M. Lynch, veteran leader of the International Typographical union, and Leopold von Auer, eminent violinist.

TWO ART CAPITALS

Galleries and Gardens of the Zwinger, Dresden.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

TWO capitals of German states, Dresden in Saxony and Munich in Bavaria, are capitals, as well, of art, and annually draw thousands of art-loving tourists.

Dresden is filled with artistic wonders. Its picturesque setting, astride a beautiful bend in the Elbe river, about 110 miles south of Berlin, caused Herder, the poet, to call it the Florence of the Elbe.

From an approaching river steamer, the Saxon capital is a city of graceful spires and huge domes and cupolas, but inside the Altstadt (old city) on the left bank of the Elbe, the picture changes to one of artistically embellished buildings, handsomely sculptured monuments, galleries of famous paintings, numerous museums with collections of all sorts, squares and parkways, and canals.

Among the museums is the Kunst (German for art) museum, which houses some of the court's treasures.

A large portion of the Altstadt lies near the Augustus bridge, one of the five spans that connect the old town with Neustadt, on the other bank of the river. The Hofkirche, facing the bridge with its 272-foot tower, is a huge structure, whose parapets are topped with 50 statues of saints and, inside, Raphael Mengs' "Ascension" looks down upon the high altar.

A covered passage connects the church with the old Saxon palace, whose walls are decorated with fine mural paintings; and in the various rooms, large collections of Chinese vases and Dresden china are on display. Even the stable adjoining the palace is embellished with a cavalcade of Saxon princes, in porcelain tiles.

Treasures in Many Buildings.

Within a few blocks of the palace numerous buildings contain the collections that have made Dresden famous as the German art center. Between the church and the palace the Grunes Gewolbe (Green Vault) contains a dazzling array of jewels—diamonds, rubies and sapphires—and works of art in gold, ivory, bronze and Limoges enamels. On a single ivory tusk one artist has carved 142 angels and another ivory piece depicts an organ grinder fighting a robber. The Saxon crown jewels, a 40-carat green diamond, jeweled trinkets of all kinds, a golden tea service and the largest known onyx are displayed. Bronze work includes statues, pedestals and vases. A striking bronze piece depicts Charles II of England fighting off a dragon.

Across the street, surrounded by gardens, the Zwinger, built by Augustus the Strong and intended to house banquet and dance halls, promenades and gardens befitting royal life of the Eighteenth century, is a treasury of art. The building is a fine example of Italian Renaissance, adorned with figures of Greek deities, vases and flowers. Once in the court which the Zwinger incloses, the traveler feels that the rose gardens and promenades should fulfill the most regal whim.

The Zwinger museum contains a half million engravings, many drawings, mathematical instruments, and a picture gallery where some of the finest works of the most eminent Italian, Spanish, Dutch and German artists are on exhibition. Raphael's "Sistine Madonna" occupies a prominent place in the collection. It was purchased in 1764 from Italian monks and smuggled out of Italy by painting a landscape over the canvas. There are also works of Rubens, Van Dyck, Rembrandt and others.

The Johanneum museum, formerly stable buildings, contains an interesting collection of war material and more than 20,000 pieces of Chinese, Japanese and Dresden porcelain, and Italian majolica, a glazed pottery.

The Albertinum, once an arsenal, now is a sculpture museum with many historical and modern pieces. Delicately painted limestone reliefs dating back to 2700 B. C. are displayed there, while a mummy still reposes in a coffin it has occupied for 2,500 years.

These and numerous other exhibit places, including the Municipal museum with a fine collection of etchings; the Academy of Art; the School and Museum of Industrial Art; the Zoological and Ethnographical museum, containing a large collection of stuffed birds and ethnological specimens; the Mineralogical and Prehistoric museum with interesting fossils; draw art lovers from all parts of the world and earn for Dresden the right to be called one of the world's important art centers.

Among the churches the Frauenkirche, a Protestant edifice, is the largest. It can accommodate 6,000 worshippers. The church occupies a whole city block. The lantern above its huge dome is 212 feet in diameter. A magnificent number of statues are in the towers of its interior.

In point of population (Munich) is exceeded only by Berlin and Hamburg among German cities. With 680,000 inhabitants it is what larger than San Francisco and smaller than Boston.

Munich is Magnificent. In physical aspects Munich is one of the most impressive of modern cities. Its royal palaces, its magnificent national theater, its great royal library containing 1,100,000 volumes and 50,000 rare manuscripts; its broad thoroughfares, particularly the Ludwigstrasse and Maximilianstrasse, bordered by the great office buildings of the Bavarian government, and its famous university which ranks first among the German institutions of learning, in the number of its medical students and second only to Berlin in the number of students of all classes—all these and many other buildings and institutions make the municipality one of the chief prides of the Teutonic people.

Most of the modern improvements and practically all of its architectural splendor Munich owes to Louis (or Ludwig) I and his art-loving successors. Louis came to the throne in 1825 and ruled for more than 20 years. One of the impressive monuments of his reign is the beautiful Propylaea, modeled after the gate to the Athenian Acropolis, and the reliefs which decorate this structure quite fittingly tell the story of Greece's war of independence and the events transpiring in that kingdom during the eventful reign of King Otto I, Louis' son who was elected to the throne of Greece in 1832 but was finally expelled after 30 years. Another beautiful Munich gateway is the Siegestor (Gate of Victory), modeled after the Arch of Constantine in Rome.

One Munich gallery exhibits such works as Titian's "Christ Crowned with Thorns," Rembrandt's "The Descent from the Cross" and a Raphael "Madonna," and contains works of Rubens, Van Dyck, Holbein the Elder, Perugino, Botticelli and Fra Filippo Lippi, from which it will be seen that Louis did not hesitate to acquire the masterpieces of other nations.

Louis I saw Bavaria gradually absorbed in the Empire, but, before madness drove him to suicide, he furthered the art development begun by his grandfather. His reign was notable for his encouragement of Wagner's development of the music drama, and to his royal generosity, which would add more to his fame had it not been for the oppressive taxation it imposed and its later excesses, were due the Bayreuth productions.

NEWS FROM THE NATIONAL DEMOCRATIC COMMITTEE

Mr. Hoover's Barren Record

Washington, July 24.—President Hoover's legislative accomplishments in the session of Congress about to adjourn, on the face of them, are limited to the so-called farm relief measure and the Grundy tariff bill. As analyzed by his critics, the President's record is practically nil. All staple agricultural crops are near pre-war prices, an enormous drop since the establishment of the Federal Farm Board. The people of the United States are reported to be in revolt against the Grundy tariff and the European cables bring daily stories of plans for reprisal and retaliation against it by foreign nations.

According to the President's critics, farm relief legislation failed because the President had no definite plans to relieve agriculture and the speculative operations of the Farm Board have been futile to check a decline in staple farm commodities. The Grundy tariff bill was not the kind of bill the President said he wanted, but, they assert that any kind of a bill containing the new flexible clause would have satisfied him. So much for President Hoover's achievements—say the critics.

On the other hand it is pointed out that the President's recommendation for adherence to the World Court has not received the courtesy of a vote, and his request for the repeal of the National Origins provision of the Immigration Law was denied.

The Spanish American War Veterans Pension Bill was passed over his veto by overwhelming majorities in both Houses, and the World War Veterans Pension bill was originally passed by large majorities in both Houses, against his protest. Under the pressure of a party caucus his veto was sustained by the House and a substitute bill passed by that body.

Attention is also called to the fact that his Radio Commission is still held up.

Failure of other legislation, attributed by his critics to the President's lack of leadership, are found in the Muscle Shoals Bill and also in the lack of any measure dealing with Federal relationship to hydro-electric power.

Nothing has been done in the way of banking legislation or railroad consolidation, nor has there been any legislation to indicate the new policy announced last fall by the Attorney-General in dealing with violations and abuses of the anti-trust law.

So, as his critics sum up the whole subject, the President's relation to the entire legislative situation in the waning Congress, his record is barren, both in the legislation passed and legislation withheld, except in the matter of a few routine enactments like Boulder Dam, Federal prison congestion, and the public building program which would have been enacted regardless of any Presidential suggestion.

It is upon this barren record, according to his critics, both of a Republican President and a Republican Congress, that the Republican campaign rests this fall.

A Message Of Peace And A Declaration Of War

Washington, July 24.—Sentiments of the German press toward the Grundy tariff, as cabled to the New York Times, are epitomized in the comments of the Democratic Morgenpost, Berlin, which contrasts President Hoover's message to the World Power Congress with his approval of the new tariff.

"The President's message of peace, in which he lauded the achievements of science and technique, was plainly preceded by a declaration of war, for by rearing still more stones on its existing tariff wall the United States is merely proclaiming war on the world at large and Europe in particular," says the Morgenpost. "Our generation has apparently forgotten that there are other methods of warfare than those demanding rifles, cannon and airplanes, whose results are almost equally disastrous."

"If such a mighty country as the United States heightens its customs barriers still more such a procedure means unemployment and economic misery for countries dependent on their exports."

Why Business Slumped; Lamont Partly Blames Coolidge Administration

Washington, July 24.—Secretary of Commerce Lamont, in the annual report of his Department, just issued, cites facts with reference to existing business depression and heavy decreases in American exports beginning in the latter part of 1929, which the New York World asserts "carry an implication not altogether agreeable to those in power in Washington."

Secretary Lamont attributes these conditions in part to the "reduction of $561,000,000 in capital exports;" that is to say to the reduction in that amount of our loans to foreign countries.

"While Mr. Lamont thus attributes a part of our business troubles to the decline of more than half a billion in our foreign loans," says The World, "he does not offer any explanation of this check to our lending abroad. That phase of the question did not come within the scope of his report. The reason, however, why foreign borrowers withdrew from the American financial market last year is no secret. They were unable to obtain credit on favorable terms because of the enormous diversion of funds into the New York stock market during the great Coolidge-Mellon bull market. It was this speculative mania, fanned time and again by bullish statements from the President and his Secretary of the Treasury, which led to this slump in our export of capital and which, in turn, as Secretary Lamont now states, caused foreign-exchange difficulties, a slackening of our sales abroad, and contributed in part to world-wide business recession."

The World continues:

"Mr. Lamont's description of the unfortunate results of the shrinkage of our capital exports thus carries an implied criticism of the policy of stock market inflation supported so persistently by the preceding administration. By implication it also fixes on that administration part of the blame for the business recession from which this country has suffered for nearly a year. But the implications do not stop with the Coolidge regime. By making it clear that a large export of capital is essential to our prosperity he also implies that barriers against imports are inconsistent with our material well being. For it is an elementary principle of economics that if we export capital we must import goods in payment, and certainly the Hawley-Smoot tariff, with its average increase of 20 per cent in the scale of duties, can only hamper operations which would be mutually advantageous to the lender and the borrower."

"In showing briefly and pointedly what is wrong with our foreign trade the Secretary of Commerce has also showed what is wrong with the traditional policy of the Republican party."

Facts, Facts, Facts

Washington, July 24.—Attention has often been called to President Hoover's desire for facts, and Senator Harrison (Democrat, Miss.) has supplied some:

"When the President thought it necessary to publish his praise of the measure, (the Grundy tariff bill)—and that before he had signed it—every stock traded in on the New York Stock Exchange went down the next day," said the Senator. "When the President had failed in his effort at artificial stimulation, then the Secretary of the Treasury applied his hand, issued a most optimistic statement, and immediately there followed a still greater decline in stock values. Then Senator Watson, who had worked with Grundy in framing it, sought to defend the Act, not by an analysis of the measure, but through the employment of his fine oratorical powers in generalities, and the stock market further declined. Then the successor to Mr. Hoover, Secretary Lamont, tried his hand, as did his assistant, Dr. Klein, and the stock market further declined."

When the stock market rallied eighty-seven one-hundredths of 1 per cent, the singular thing about it was that Senator Fess did not attribute the rise to President Hoover.

BEST GRADE OF COAL IS FREE

Local Merchant Explains How To Get It and Solve Heating Problems

"Make no mistake about it, the coal which we are furnishing to members of the Ninth Annual Heatrola Free Coal Club is our very best grade. No slack or poor coal will be supplied—but a special lump coal of the proper size for burning in Estate Heatrola, to the best advantage."

Thus did a prominent local coal merchant dispel possible doubts on the subject. And, for those who did not know, he went on to explain the Free Coal offer in which he is cooperating with Jones Hardware Company.

"Free coal is being given by the local Estate Heatrola dealer to all who reserve their Heatrolas before August 30, as a special reward for foresight. The Estate Heatrola is really a remarkable heating appliance. Built on the principle of warm-air furnace, this original first-floor heating plant heats the whole house, upstairs and down, by circulating moist warm air to every corner of every room.

"There's another remarkable thing about the Heatrola, an exclusive device which saves users on an average, 45% in fuel over out-of-date heating methods. It's called the Intensi-Fire Air Duct, and is a hollow casting which spans the combustion chamber, directly over the fuel bed—at the hottest point. Air, passing through this casting, is intensely heated by heat which, in ordinary heaters, goes to waste, up the chimney."

"We are glad to recommend the Heatrola, and to urge prompt action upon those who feel the need of modern heating, by ordering their Heatrola before August 30, and receiving a supply of our best grade of Heatrola coal when their Heatrola is delivered next Fall."

TOO LITTLE MILK USED

Like most products of the farm, milk and cream have suffered a decline in price during recent months. But if an intensive campaign for the encouragement of a greater use of milk were made both the dairy industry and the public would be better off.

In a recent statement, O. E. Reed, of the Department of Agriculture pointed out that the per capita consumption of milk in the United States is much lower than in several other nations.

D. W. Pontius, President of the Pacific Electric Railway Company, says: That education is the foundation of progress of any nation.

Educational advantages available to the citizens of this country is the factor that has contributed more than any other single element to our high rank among nations of the world.

We may rightfully be proud of our school system and to it we should pay tribute for the large measure of progress and happiness that is our lot as a people and nation.

For still greater progress and industry must look upon education and our institutions of learning as a vital part of our industrial success. Business and industrial concerns should continue to increase interest in our public schools and encourage the establishment of curricula that will further fit our boys and girls who have already left the schools to take up industrial work, so they may solve the complex problems of life and permit still better citizenship.

Many of our citizens, through no fault of their own, are sometimes deprived of early schooling to which they are rightfully entitled. These young men and women after entering the employ of an industry should be given every opportunity and encouraged to study in order that they may realize their ambition of a broader and fuller life of usefulness and industrial advancement.

STAYS UP ON THE LEG

The saving of 152 years on time every day by American men is the challenging idea put forward by the appearance of a new kind of socks. This statement needs explaining.

With the basically simple idea of making socks support themselves, one of the great hosiery companies is bringing out a sock, called the Autogart, which needs no help to stay up on the leg. It has, made right into the top edge, a half-inch band of a new kind of rubber, with no seams. Experiments carried on during the past decade prove that this band will outlast the sock itself, even though the latter be holeproof. Absence of ribs and softness of material make the new idea both comfortable and reliable.

Because this sock can simply be pulled on, without adjusting of any kind of support, it is figured to save two minutes time for every man. Two minutes each for the 40,000,000 sock-wearing males is $5,555 days, or 152 years. What to do with this new leisure is a new problem.

Perfumes And Toilet Water Are Not Luxuries But Necessities

THE art of using perfume is more fascinating than anything else in the eternal search for loveliness, and seems to mark the difference between a woman who really appreciates beauty, and one who merely takes it for granted. Modern women know that the right perfume can give them a sense of satisfaction and wellbeing that nothing else can give. Fortunately, perfume no longer is the mystery it used to be, and instead of being a luxury it is available to every woman who desires an exquisite last touch to her good grooming.

Experts say, "Always use perfume directly on your skin." This is excellent advice, for every fabric has a slight odor of its own, and if perfume is applied to your clothes instead of to your skin, the fragrance may be changed entirely. It really does not matter where you put a touch of perfume on your skin—at your wrist, on your neck, behind your ears, or at your hair line—the fragrance is there, and that is what you are striving for.

Many people dislike strong scents, and cannot bear any perfume that seems to dominate a room. Unfortunately, some women use too heavy a perfume, and just seem to pour it on. Most people dislike a perfume that "shrieks out loud"—nearly everyone prefers the "whispering" type. We want to be aware of a faint, pleasant fragrance surrounding a woman—but that is all.

When women ask my advice about what perfume to use, I very often suggest a delicate French bouquet that somehow reminds me of little French gardens with high walls around them. There are familiar scents in this perfume—but all of them are so delicate there is only a mere suggestion of rose, lilac, lily of the valley and other garden flowers.

Toilet water also is an excellent beauty accessory. It is especially wonderful to have at hand in hot weather. Some day when you feel almost too warm to breathe, try spraying your face, neck and arms with toilet water from your atomizer. You will find this is very refreshing. Close your eyes when you do it, however, because as you know, all toilet waters and perfumes have alcohol in them to hold their precious fragrance—and even a tiny bit of alcohol will sting your eyes.

Then after your daily bath, I suggest bathing your hands, under-arms and throat with toilet water. This will leave your skin refreshed and faintly fragrant.

A well known poet once said, "A woman's perfume is her spiritual presence, the woman herself as she would have us know her to be." Always keep that in mind when buying or using perfume or toilet water.

Two Stoves for Farm Kitchen

Electric Range Supplements the Coal Stove.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
In the roomy farm kitchen illustrated by this picture, taken in New Jersey by the United States Department of Agriculture, two stoves meet all the cooking requirements of the different seasons of the year. Obviously the large coal range is for winter and between seasons use. It will undoubtedly furnish considerable heat to the kitchen and adjacent rooms whenever it is going. The electric range is primarily for summer cooking, but it is a helpful accessory for quick cooking whenever the fire in the big range is out or banked. There are many times when one would not want to disturb the larger fire for a few minutes' cooking. The current in this case is supplied by a local power company, but in many farm homes there is a complete electric plant which runs the lighting of the house, and various kinds of farm machinery as well as household electrical equipment.

Because the kitchen is used for some meals, as the small sturdy table with four dining chairs indicates, there is added incentive to make it attractive. The neat white kitchen cabinet, the sunny window, the linoleum mat and the gleaming black range are all pleasing to the eye as well as useful.

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

Now they traveled right along the Milky Way, and of all the wonderful things Harry had ever done in his life, or ever expected to do, this was the most wonderful.

He had seen so many clusters and stars and constellations whose homes had been along here, but now the pilot traveled along this most heavenly roadway without stopping.

"The best times to see it from the earth," Cosmo told Harry, "are July, August, September and October. Don't think it divides the heavens in half, for the northern sky has more of the Milky Way than the southern. It takes a trip, too. It winds its way among the constellations and I've always thought it so nice the way Canis Minor or the Little Dog takes his place right on the border, just as a dog will sit on a doorstep."

Oh, what a sight this was, and what an unbelievable trip!
They passed by millions and millions of stars. In some parts there were not so many which made it look less populated. In fact, it seemed as though there were great cities of stars with their scattered suburbs of stars spread out beyond them.

The pilot was going slowly. Harry tried to think of ways in which to express what he felt about it, but he knew he could never possibly describe it. It was like traveling through a world of stars, or like going through fields of stars, or oceans of stars. Everywhere they gleamed, and twinkled, and shone. Everywhere they seemed to smile. And here and there were cloudy patches—like misty forests of stars!

"Oh, what a sight it is," he said to Cosmo.

"And yet," Cosmo told him, "the sky is so tremendous and the distances are so great that even if the Milky Way could be blotted out there are stars so far off that the news wouldn't reach them for thousands and thousands of years."

"It's too much for me," Harry said. As they sped along Cosmo told him stories and legends.

"Virgo—we passed her—was supposed to have scattered some of her wheat along here. Then a story has it that some magpies built a bridge in the heavens so that two separated lovers could travel over it to see each other, while in some countries they led. In the ancient days it was believed that the baby Hercules dropped some of the milk he was drinking and that that made the Milky Way. Nor has science changed that name given to it by that old, old legend."

Harry was listening to all that Cosmo was telling him, but so impressed was he by the wonder and the beauty and the tremendous glory of all that he was seeing that he couldn't think of any words at all in which to express what he thought. He was glad that Cosmo didn't seem to expect him to say anything.

"The Greeks," Cosmo went on, "called this the Road to the Palace of Heaven, and they believed that along this road were the palaces of the finest of the gods."

"The Eskimos believed the Milky Way to have been made from snow that fell from the snowshoes of the great raven as he walked across the sky."

The rockets were being shot off rapidly once more. They were speeding along the Milky Way. How lucky it was that the pilot knew how to manage such a ride. But even that thought was unimportant, Harry felt. He could think of nothing but what he saw, and what he saw was too wonderful to put into any words.

Just as a Dog Will Sit on a Doorstep.

told the story of two lovers who built the bridge themselves so they could cross over it to see each other.

"Some Indians believed that the Milky Way was the path along which the departed souls traveled and that the brighter stars along the borders were the campfires where the great spirits rested. Other Indians thought it was dust kicked up by a buffalo and horse as they raced each other across the sky."

"The Norsemen believed it was the path up which the great warriors trav-

Use Teaspoonful of Tea to the Cup

Brewing a social cup of tea is an art unknown to many housewives.

While the amount of tea to use will depend on the individual's taste, C. F. Hutchinson, tea examiner stationed at New York city for the federal food and drug administration, says that about a teaspoonful to the cup is a good average. Boiling water must be used or the leaves will not open fully and impart their full strength and flavor to the beverage. But tea should never be boiled nor should the leaves stand in the water longer than five or six minutes, in his opinion.

An earthenware pot should be used, and after the leaves have steeped five or six minutes the liquor should be poured into another container, or if a tea ball is used it can be removed.

Mr. Hutchinson puts the tea in an aluminum strainer, puts the strainer across the top of the teapot, and pours boiling water through the strainer until the pot is full, covering the body of the strainer. After it has drawn for three or four minutes he takes the strainer out and has a cup of tea that is just to his liking.

Commemorates Victories

One of the interesting sights in Quebec is a small church—Notre Dame des Victoires—so called because it was erected to commemorate the defeat of one English fleet under the command of Sir William Phips, sent to capture the city, and the destruction of another formidable British fleet by a terrific storm in the Gulf of St. Lawrence in 1711.

Measuring the Job

A job may be good to different people because it is quiet or because it's exciting. Because it offers routine or adventure. Fame or anonymity. Incentive or forgetfulness. Diversion or a life-work.—Woman's Home Companion.

Hints for Housekeepers

Keeping dust from window sills, porches, steps and walks helps to prevent its entrance into the house.

To keep shoes in good condition, always remove mud at once. If allowed to dry on the shoes, it will stain the leather.

A backyard playground equipped with slides, swings, large boxes, and a sandpile will add to the children's happiness this summer and keep them away from the danger of motor traffic.

Never wring or twist silk or other delicate fabrics in laundering. Instead, roll the garment in a thick towel and gently but firmly squeeze out the water.

A light, clean, well-ventilated clothes closet equipped with plenty of hangers and dress covers helps summer clothes stay fresh and last longer and it helps prevent destruction by moths.

Tomatoes on Toast

Tomatoes, broiled to a delicate brown on top, slipped onto crisp toast, and served with a few rashers of bacon, make the center of an ideal lunch or supper for a warm day. Another easy and appetizing way to cook tomatoes is to cut in half and bake under a sprinkling of buttered bread crumbs. The bureau of home economics tells just how to broil and bake tomatoes.

Small Spaces Used for Closets

Sometimes there is a narrow section of a kitchen wall where a shallow closet for cleaning implements can be located. Usually a handy man or boy in the family can utilize this space by building a closet to help make house-keeping more efficient. It is always desirable to keep brooms off the floor to prevent their weight from resting on the bristles, and mops and brushes are also better hung up. Put screw-eyes in the handles or make a hole through them for a loop of string or wire to hang them by. Special clips for holding brooms may be bought, or little holders of wood made for them, or heavy hooks used. More utensils can be stored in a small closet by such careful arrangement, and when article is wanted no time is lost rummaging for it.

There should be a shelf, if possible, for cleaning materials, scouring powder, brushes, ammonia, and so on, and some receptacles for dusts and oily cloths. One of the illustrations, both of which were taken in farm homes by the United States Department of Agriculture, shows how four wire corner sink baskets have been used for this purpose in a very small closet. These wire holders permit a circulation of air and avoid the fire risk from closely packed oily cloths. The other closet has a place for a vacuum cleaner, and the additional space alongside of the cleaning closet

Some Foods the Family Will Enjoy

By NELLIE MAXWELL

For those who wish to reduce and for those who wish to gain in weight the same rules here will apply to both in many things should be followed. Both need exercise, fresh air and daily rest inside and out with plenty of water.

Old Common Sense is the best of regulators. Food false for awhile and are forgotten. A few general health rules here will apply to the ordinary individual who need not starve or stuff. Eat moderately of all foods. Drink plenty of water, do not eat too much of any one kind of food, and be sure to eat plenty of vegetables and cut down on the meat. For the thin person, butter, cream, as well as plenty of fresh vegetables are necessities.

Hearty, heavy foods like meat, vegetable proteins and nuts should always be served with fresh green foods. Heavy eaters are prone to have acidosis. Fresh vegetables and fruits counteract this tendency. Citrus fruits are invaluable in the diet. Lemons if used freely will correct the torpidity of the liver, clear the complexion and help in free elimination of waste products.

A good habit to form, which is as important as brushing the teeth, is the drinking the juice of a lemon in hot water. A whole lemon is not too much, diluted with hot water to fill a glass. Drink it on rising at least half an hour before breakfast.

Recent discoveries teach us that the use of lemon and orange juice arrest the decay of the teeth and retard and prevent pyorrhea, the much dreaded disease which causes the teeth to loosen.

The best results with any food may be determined when that food is not mixed with others. So it is with citrus fruits. Eat the lemon, grapefruit and orange by itself. However, an occasional punch of the mixed fruits can be enjoyed without trouble.

All cooks enjoy using the common things in such a manner that an unusual dish or combination is the result.

Pepper Relish.—Take two cups of finely chopped peppers (green and red may be used) and pack the cup solidly full in measuring. Use a food chopper and put the peppers through the finest knife twice. Measure into the kettle, using just enough of the juice to float the cup level. Add six and one-half cups of sugar, one and one-half cups of vinegar, mix well and bring to a boil, set aside uncovered for 20 minutes. Bring again to a boil and stir constantly, boiling hard for two minutes. Remove from the fire and stir in one bottle of pectin, stir and skim for just eight minutes to cool slightly and prevent floating.

Potatoes, quickly cover the hot relish with a good cover of paraffin. This makes about nine glasses.
Rolled Orange Wafers.—Cream one-half cupful of butter, add gradually one cupful of sugar and the grated rind of an orange, beat until light. Dissolve one teaspoonful of soda in one tablespoonful of cold water, add to one-half cupful of orange juice alternately with two cupfuls of flour. Beat well and spread on buttered baking sheet in the thinnest possible layer. Bake in a moderate oven. When baked cut into squares and roll each square while hot over the handle of a wooden spoon. Sprinkle with powdered sugar and arrange on a dolly-covered plate.
Banana Butter.—This makes a delicious cake filling. Use ripe, mellow fruit and take three cupfuls of the crushed pulp, add six and one-half cupfuls of sugar, the juice of a lemon and one-fourth teaspoonful of butter. Mix and bring quickly to a boil, boil one minute, stirring constantly over the entire bottom, adding one bottle of pectin. Remove from the heat and stir frequently for eight minutes to cool slightly and prevent floating. Pour quickly into cups and cover with hot paraffin. It sets slowly. Make nine to ten glasses.

Circular Lines Hold Favor

By JULIA BOTTOMLEY

In the making of the graceful little informal afternoon frocks of dark silk print which have been so very popular and which give every promise of a continued vogue for midseason and early fall, the trend is for one circular ruffle to call for another. In other words, frocks show a tendency to adopt circular-flare movements from neckline to hemline. The frock in the picture illustrates the idea.

Here we have a very smart styling given to a green-on-black print silk, which carries out a consistent circular movement throughout the capelet, the sleeves and the skirt. This manipulation, which strives to relate the frock or costume through repetition of a given treatment, is observed by most designers. For instance a pleated capelet, let us say, calls for pleated frills on the sleeves, also a pleated flounce on the skirt if the latter be not pleated entire. In case of an ensemble wrap of matching material, it also is likely to be detailed with pleated trimming.

There is quite a rivalry between pleated and circular treatments this season. However, from the standpoint of that which is newest, circular cuts win out. It is interesting to note in how many directions the circular "lines" extend. One sees the undulating grace of circular ruffles in the very smart peplum effects which style so many of this season's silk frocks. The sleeve with a circular flare from the elbow is among the many quaint modes which fashion has resurrected from the past.

Even pleated skirts have gone circular. That is, while not attaining the extreme sunburst flares, yet they are cut slightly bell fashion so that the pleats are shallower at the top than the bottom. Box pleated skirts are especially handled in this manner.

Regarding the new fall silks, tiny allover patternings interpreted in nubbed and interwoven effects are conspicuously displayed in the early fabric showings. Also jacquard effects are sponsored. Little cravat motifs woven in the same color as the background are very smart.

DEBORAH, A LEADER IN A NATIONAL EMERGENCY

LESSON TEXT—Judges 4:1-24.
GOLDEN TEXT—Say to them that are of a fearful heart, be strong, fear not: behold, your God will come with vengeance, even God with a recompense; he will come and save you.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Deborah a Brave Woman.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Deborah a Brave Woman.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Notable Women Patriots.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Woman's Influence in Community and National Affairs.

The book of Judges covers the period from the conquest of Canaan and death of Joshua to the judgeship of Samuel. While Joshua and the elders of his generation lived, the people in some measure remained faithful to God, but the very next generation went into apostasy. Their declension may be accounted for by:

1. Their failure to drive out the Canaanites when they took possession of the land. Their failure to carry out this command of God was their undoing.

2. Their amalgamation with the Canaanites. Their tolerance of the heathen about them was quickly followed by union in marriage.

3. Idolatry. Their intermarriage with the heathen was followed by worship of the heathen gods.

In order to teach this lesson intelligently it is necessary that the teacher have a grasp of the book of Judges from which it is taken. In chapter 2:10-19 is given a synopsis of the book. Observe (1) The sin of the people (vv. 6-18). (2) God's judgment for their sin (vv. 14, 15). (3) Their repentance (3:9). (4) God delivers them at the hands of the Judges (vv. 18-19). A repetition of sin, oppression by the enemy, repentance, and deliverance, is the story of the book of Judges.

1. The National Emergency (vv. 1-3).

1. Lapse into idolatry (v. 1).

Ehud was not only a righteous but a strong ruler. Under his judgeship, freedom had been enjoyed for many years. As soon as he was dead the people turned away from God.

2. The bondage of the people (v. 2).

The Lord abandoned them to be oppressed by Jabin, king of Canaan.

3. The people cried unto God (v. 3). Affliction brought them to their senses.

11. The Judgeship of Deborah (vv. 4-10).

The great national emergency confronting Israel was met by a woman named Deborah. Her name means "Bee." As suggested by another, she exemplified her name by her industry, sagacity and great service to the people.

1. The place where she judged Israel (v. 5).

It was under a palm tree. She held an open air court for the administration of justice.

2. Her method (vv. 6-10). (1) Her summons to Barak (vv. 6, 7). Barak means "lightning." Deborah, being a prophetess, was able to select a man whose gifts would enable him to rally the forces needed to gain victory over the formidable foe. Deborah gave definite instruction as to the number of men and the strategy to be employed, assuring him that God would deliver Sisera into his hand. (2) Barak's reply (v. 8). He expressed an unwillingness to go unless Deborah would go with him. (3) Barak rebuked (vv. 9, 10). Deborah yielded to his request, but made it plain to him that it would detract from his honor as a conqueror, "for the Lord shall sell Sisera into the hand of a woman."

111. The Defeat of Jabin's Army (vv. 11-15).

Sisera, the captain, gathered a mighty army and went forth, confident of victory over the ill-equipped and undisciplined army of Barak, but he made one sad mistake—he did not consider that it was the Lord's battle (v. 15). Through supernatural interposition the enemy became panic-stricken (25:20).

IV. Sisera Killed by a Woman (vv. 17-24).

In his flight Sisera took refuge in Jael's tent. In the guise of friendship she committed a most heinous murder after inviting him into her dwelling.

V. The Song of Deborah and Barak (ch. 5).

This song was composed and sung in celebration of the marvelous victory which God had wrought. Deborah set forth in the most definite way that the secret of victory was the help of God.

J. G. Duncan, Jr.

Candidate for State Senator
Fifteenth Senatorial District, comprising the counties of Autauga, Chilton and Shelby—Subject to the Democratic Primary.

To the Voters of this, the 15th Senatorial District:

I wish to say that I shall greatly appreciate your vote and influence in this campaign. To those of you whom I have not had the pleasure of seeing personally, I wish at this time to express my regrets that I have been unable to do so, and to extend to you in advance, my sincere thanks for your support.

Just a personal word. My home is Prattville, Alabama, Autauga County. I have lived my entire life there. My business is General Insurance. I am also interested in a retail mercantile business in that city. I am a member of the Baptist Church, Masonic Fraternity, and The American Legion.

I entered this race of my own accord and am not lined up with, or in any way obligated to, any individual, clique, organization or corporation. I have only one promise to make any one, and that is, if elected I will serve the entire District to the very best of my ability.

I have no fight to make on anyone. I have conducted my campaign strictly on a high plane and will continue to do so, even in the face of wrongful accusations should any come in the heat of the campaign.

It has been called to my attention that some statements have been circulated to the effect that I will be too friendly with the corporate interests of the State. These statements are unfounded, as I absolutely have no corporate connections whatsoever, and have no other purpose in mind except to serve the entire people of my District, if I am elected to the State Senate. I think of corporations in a friendly manner, but at the same time they should bear their share of state taxation. Having never had and not now having any corporate connections they have no claim whatsoever on me, except to the extent of what is right, and, if elected to the State Senate, I shall at all times adhere, so far as I can, to the wishes of the majority of the people in my District who elected me, and shall see to it, so far as I can, that everyone gets a fair and square deal.

BURNING UP MILLIONS

During May the total fire loss was $38,415,142, $6,285,734 more than in May of 1929. The total for the first five months of this year is estimated to be above $210,521,000, which corresponds with $196,487,000 for the same period last year. If the present trend continues, the 1930 waste will exceed that of 1929 by more than $30,000,000.

When, over a two-year period appreciable declines in our fire losses were recorded, it was believed that America was at last becoming "fire conscious." Apparently this optimism was not justified. We are again on our way toward a new record.

We cannot plead ignorance. Various public and private organizations have worked intensively to show us the danger of fire and how to prevent it. Each year we have a nationally observed Fire Prevention Week. There is only one sound reason for the gigantic waste—carelessness.

We put off wiring inspection; we drop tobacco and matches wherever we happen to finish with them; we lazily leave piles of trash in corners of garages and basements.

We do everything that may cause fire, and almost nothing to prevent it. It is only natural that our annual waste should be the greatest in the world.

Every year the American people contribute about $500,000,000 to fire waste. It is destroyed just as thoroughly as if we threw the currency in the stove.

What is the thinking about. used for this purpose in a o-closets. These wire holders recently returned from closely packed o-closets that the closet has a place for a vacuum cleaner, and the addition of a space alongside of the cleaning closet.

A WORLD RADIO CENTER

Plans recently made public by Rockefeller interests contemplate for New York City the greatest amusement enterprise the world has ever seen, with radio as its central feature.

This stupendous project will represent an investment of $250,000,000—a quarter of a billion—and will cover 3 whole blocks in the vicinity of Fifth Avenue and Forty-eighth Street. There will rise four magnificent temples of art—a variety theater, a sound-film theater, and a house for regular drama—with a combined seating capacity of 25,000.

Performances from all of these will be broadcast to the nation and to the world by radio, and means will be provided for utilizing all developments of television as they appear.

In connection with this majestic art center will be a grand plaza, of which it is said by the promoters "no effort will be spared to make it the most impressive boulevard of its kind in the world; fountains, statuary and beautiful garden plots will intersperse its whole extent."

Provision will be made underground for streets, bus terminals and parking space, and all deliveries to the "radio city" will be made from this underground area, so that the surface traffic problem may be reduced to a minimum. Work is to be begun this fall and completed in 1933.

All of this is of the greatest significance not only to those who may visit New York, but to everyone who owns a radio set. This may be understood from the announcement that the National Broadcasting Company will operate 27 broadcasting studios in the radio city, instead of only eight as at present, offering better programs of greater variety.

News From South Clanton

Editor News:

Notwithstanding the unprecedented continuous dry and scorching weather, we have had dished out to us, most of the good people of South Clanton are still good tempered and meeting the disastrous situation with a smile.

Vegetation, however, is not so philosophical. The main corn crop has turned up its foliage and tassels to old Sol and given up the fight, so far as it is concerned. The Rubicon has been passed and only the dreams it may have of another year with less fire and more rain, is all the pleasure it can get out of its inevitable trip to the hay and forage loft. The crop is practically a total failure so far as the horse trough and meal tub are concerned. Young corn may get seasons and weather that will enable it to take care of the moon-light juju dispenser.

Cotton will be unusually short unless it can make a crop in August that can have time to mature before frost. Sweet potatoes will be small and few in a hill, unless the rains put in a regular appearance right away. Peas and all other hay crops are 50 per cent off now and still going down the toboggan. It is a good thing that a Higher Power governs the weather, for if it was humanly dispensed, somebody would have to hunt the tall timber about now.

Most of the newspapers in Alabama are just about as erratic and disappointing as the weather at this time. They give us only one side of the political situation and that side is so garbled and magnified so entirely out of the bounds of truth and reason, that people have ceased to read it.

These papers expect to get their living out of the people after the political tilts go dry, but at present they are playing up to only a small minority of the real people and where do they hope to get their soup after the battle is over. It looks like they could see a little further than they do.

Had you thought of it? If we had our honest to goodness Democratic party in the United States at the present time, there would be another Cleveland landslide. They could take over the National Government easy as taking candy from a baby.

The Republicans have about bankrupted the whole country again, like they did when they gave it over to Grover Cleveland, and my opinion is they would like to turn it over to somebody, but the Democratic party has fallen into alien hands and gone utterly to the dogs until they could not take over the job as a gift, as Cleveland did.

The handsome home of Mr. Tom Taylor is nearing completion now and as a lovely suburban home it is hard to beat. A few more like it out here and these South Clantonites would begin to strut their stuff and demand paved streets, water and gas in the houses, etc.

Mr. Tom Patterson and wife have just returned from over a 4,000-mile trip. He looked over that great territory very closely and says the drought and hot weather extended as far as he went, the crops are about ruined and that jobs are fewer and idler labor is a sight to give the most optimistic booster the jim-jams. The time we older people went through back in the '90's begins to come up like ghosts from a hungry past. Dollars then were even scarcer than hen teeth and they are rapidly getting in that same fix now.

Oh, well! God reigns and rules and all things will work out for the best. Don't worry, just leave it all in His hands and go on smiling.

W. B. CORLEY.

Eastview News

The revival meeting here closed Friday night. It was attended by large congregations and there was twelve added to the church during the services. It was a union meeting, all denominations taking part and worshipping together. The prayer of our Lord and Saviour "That we all may be one," was answered in these services.—John 17:21. The people wanted the meeting to run longer, but the pastor and Rev. Dopson had to leave Saturday to begin a revival at Mt. Springs church, six miles east of Clanton. At this meeting we learn that the revival is going fine, and some additions to the church.

Mrs. Maggie Teel and daughter, Miss Ruth, of Clanton were visiting here Monday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Johnson, Mrs. Ellis Johnson and family, Rev. and Mrs. George Watson, Mr. I. L. McWhorter, Mrs. Maggie Calloway, Mr. Ada Johnson and Mrs. Smith Luster of Elmore County attended the revival here last week.

The singing school will begin here the first Monday in August, with Prof. J. M. Williams teaching. Be sure to attend.

We have an evergreen Sunday school with seventy-eight on roll. This school has been a recruiting station for the church, for in this school they learn more about Jesus. There will be prayer meeting here Sunday at 7:30 P. M. You are invited to meet and worship with us.

MULE VS. MOTOR

According to a recent bulletin by the Department of Agriculture, the average cost of power from work animals on farms, as shown by a farm power survey, is 28 cents per horsepower. The cost from tractors is 8 cents.

Taking these figures as a basis for comparison with the cost of electricity, the rural division of the Alabama Power Company asserts that during the past year its 22,000 rural customers have paid an average of only 4.67 cents per kilowatt-hour, which is the equivalent of about 3.6 cents per horsepower-hour, for the energy used by them.

These rural customers used nearly 16 million horsepower-hours of electricity last year, so that an equivalent amount if furnished by horses and mules would have cost them three and a half million dollars more than they actually paid. The same amount of power from tractors would have cost about $800,000 more than the total of their electric bills.

This would seem to indicate that rural electrification has progressed to the point where its economy for farmers can no longer be questioned.

A can of food, 40 years old, was opened in London recently and found by chemists to be perfectly preserved and fit to eat.

ENGLISH IS QUEER

In a plea for greater consistency, a spelling reformer has called attention to a few of the many vagaries displayed in English spelling and pronunciation.

The sound of long "a," for example is represented in many different ways, as in a lady, ai in rain, eign in reign, ay in pay, ei in veil, ey in they, ex in gauge, ag in champagne, aig in campaign, aigh in straight, and ai in said.

Other sounds are represented by an almost equal variety of spellings. Words pronounced alike have different meanings, such as right, rite, write, wright, to, two, too, oh, owe, and many others. Words spelled alike may mean entirely different things, such as row, bow, lead, saw, and so on.

These peculiarities have to do merely with orthography. When the other innumerable inconsistencies of the language are considered, the wonder is that anyone ever learns to speak and write English correctly.

As a matter of fact, hardly anyone ever does.

Mrs. Merle Fitting of Hanford, Cal., had John Sorder arrested for yanking her from her car and spanking her after a collision in which Sorder declared she was to blame.

A good business man will not buy a farm or any property without first looking it over to see what it is worth. However, some will buy or loan money on land without an abstract.

Isn't it equally as foolish to buy a farm without looking it over as to buy it and not know whether the titles are good or not? Without an abstract you do not know where you are getting the land you look at or not.

Before investing in land in any way have an abstract made and be safe.

GOODS ARE SOLD—NOT BOUGHT

When you buy goods today they are generally "sold" to you. You were sold your automobile, your life insurance, your radio, and you are "sold" on the store where you do most of your trading. You are sold on things because you have been convinced by sound argument and appeal that the merchandise, service, etc., are the best in their line for the price asked.

The wise merchant will realize this trend and capitalize on it by better informing his customers of the merits of his goods. It is too much to expect that all the people who might buy his goods will come into his store and give him an opportunity to tell them personally why his goods, prices, and service are as good or better than those offered by somebody else. He must go to the purchaser with his store message. One of the best ways yet devised to do this is through the medium of advertising. Advertising offers an opportunity to send the sales argument to the prospective customer and the regular customer in a way that gives them time to thoughtfully consider the merits of the argument, and it is most economical, when the number of people it is possible to reach is considered.

Two Old Candidates Again In Politics

Auburn, Ala., July 24.—Two old candidates are again in the political field in Alabama. Friends of General Hairy Vetch and Colonel Austrian W. Peas have again announced the candidacy of the two nitrogen gathering plants for the office of soil builders for Alabama, subject to the action of the farmers of the State during the planting season. September 15 to October 15.

These two winter legumes have launched a vigorous campaign, and say they are running on their record. They expect to make a canvass of every county in the State and meet all the farmers by September 1. In each county the county agricultural agent has been appointed and accepted the job of campaign manager.

These "facts" are revealed in many ways, but chiefly by the action of the "campaign managers" and by political cards that are being handed out to prospective supporters.

On one side of the cards reads: "Vote for Col. Austrian W. Peas, candidate for soil builder of Jones County, subject to action of farmers, fall season, 1930, presented by John Smith, county agent." On the other side the platform is outlined as follows: "1. I'll build your soils. 2. I'll average 20 bushels more corn per acre. 3. I'll average 350 pounds of seed cotton more per acre. 4. I'll decrease your fertilizer bill. 5. I'll make you nitrogen while you sleep." The cards ends with the statement, "Paid prosperity advertisement by Jones County Farm Bureau."

Campaign managers in their statements at meetings have announced that no effort will be spared to send to oblivion those great curses of Alabama—"Poor Soils" and "Feed Bills." The experiment station at Auburn is said to be strongly in favor of both General Vetch and Col. Peas, and the campaign between them and "Poor Soils" and "Feed Bills" promises to be one of the most exciting in history.

The aim of the campaign, managers state, is to see that big fields and entire farms instead of "patches" are planted to the nitrogen-gathering plants.

"ORGANIZATION"

From Address of Joustt Shouse at Dinner Given by the Jefferson Association, Washington, June 10, 1929

"No party can hope, with any degree of certainty, to win elections through mere spasmodic efforts. A political party is in many regards like a business organization, and unless it is run on business principles its chance of success is greatly lessened.

"What we propose to set up here is a businesslike national headquarters that will function continuously, day in and day out, week in and week out, month in and month out, to lay the groundwork in every proper way for building up the organization of the Democratic Party, for the education of the people as to what is taking place in the conduct of their Government by the party now in power, and for an earnest effort to win them to the support of our party, first in the election of the next Congress and later in the election of the next President of the United States. With this in view, three major activities will be undertaken—organization, publicity, and research. The publicity and research divisions can take care of themselves, but obviously the division of organization can not properly function, and, therefore, the work of the headquarters be made a success, unless we have the cooperation, the helpful counsel, the constructive aid of Democrats everywhere, and particularly of Democratic leaders in every state and every congressional district of the country. No political organization can carry on successfully merely at the top. There must be an adequate national plan. But such plan can not be put into practical effect unless the State organizations will lend the fullest and the most hearty assistance. In turn, the State must look to the county, and the county to the precinct, so that, after all, in building up an effective Democratic machine, if we succeed in doing that, it must reach down to the very precinct unit, involving the support of the precinct committeemen and committeewomen, to enable it properly to carry on. Willingness on the part of the necessary number in the smallest unit to work co-ordinately and under direction will determine the success or failure of the enterprise.

"I am approaching the large task before me with a full realization of its difficulties and with real humility of spirit. Neither I nor any other man alone can accomplish the purpose which is in mind. I shall need, and I earnestly desire, suggestions and advice and help from Democrats and forward-looking men and women everywhere. And only as such help is given the possibility of making the national headquarters successful will be determined."

Back Quit Hurting

"I WAS in a very weak condition from a serious sickness," writes Mrs. L. Leonard, 671 Joseph St., New Orleans, La. "I was so weak, I wanted to sleep all the time. I did not have strength to do anything. My back ached nearly all the time. I was just in misery. My mother told me I must arouse myself from the sleepiness, and take something to help get my strength back. She had taken Cardui and had been helped, so I decided to take Cardui, too. After my first bottle, I could see that it was helping me. I took four bottles at this time. My strength came back and I gained weight. Pretty soon, I was my old self again. My back quit hurting, and I haven't had any more trouble since I took Cardui."

News In Brief

Last year (1929) the production of commercial mixed feeds amounted to ten million tons, or about twice the volume of 10 years ago.

Farm wages are lower. According to the U. S. Department of Agriculture the index figure for farm wages for July this year was the lowest since the index was compiled in 1923. The supply of farm labor on July 1 was the largest reported by farmers in a number of years covered by available records.

It is thought that the 18,000,000 tons of cotton stalks that are available each year can be used in manufacturing useful articles and that when this is accomplished there will be a cash market for the farmer's cotton stalks. The U. S. Department of Agriculture is doing experimental work on this problem.

A world census of automobiles, announced by U. S. Commerce Department, fixes total passenger cars, truck and busses in operation January 1 at 35,127,398, or about one for every 55 persons. For this country the proportion of cars was one to every 4.5 persons. Canada and New Zealand furnished the closest approach, having a car for every eight persons.

More than six hundred million dollar's worth of implements and farm machinery was manufactured in the United States last year, $455,000,000 of which was sold in this country, and the remainder sold abroad. This compares with a manufacturers' value of $460,000,000 in 1927 and $524,000,000 in 1928. If the increasing sales of farm equipment and machinery is an index, then agriculture is on the upgrade.

Sudan Suggested As Emergency Feed Crop

Auburn, Ala., July 24.—Foreseeing a short feed crop as a result of recent drought and torrid weather, authorities of the College of Agriculture, Alabama Polytechnic Institute, suggest the planting of Sudan grass as an emergency feed crop. Sudan grass is selected because it grows well in Alabama and will mature a crop of hay in 8 or 10 weeks after planting, they said.

Corn in many fields was seriously damaged by the recent drought. Blades were twisted and the plants yellowing. Reports say that this is particularly true of corn planted early. Late-planted corn stood the drought better and in most cases will make a fair crop, it is reported. Recent rains in some sections were a great help.

Dean M. J. Funchess of the College of Agriculture and J. C. Lowery, extension agronomist, recommend the planting of 25 pounds of Sudan grass seed per acre immediately. The planting should, if possible, be made on bottom land or low land, they said.

It is suggested that the seed be broadcast. Methods of planting Sudan are the same as those for oats, they explained. Unless the weather continues dry farmers may expect a fair yield of hay, they said.

As a fertilizer for Sudan grass they recommend 100 to 200 pounds of nitrate of soda or nitrate of lime. It should be applied 10 days after the grass is up. "Cut when the plant is in full head," they added.

Where grain is needed the authorities say that Mexican June corn should be planted in South Alabama though they would not risk it in North Alabama.

"STOP, LOOK AND LISTEN—LOOK OUT FOR THE CARS"

That old familiar crossroad sign posted on the railroad right-of-way at every crossing was good enough in the horse and buggy days. The driver had plenty of time to gaze up and down the track as Dobbin plodded along over the bumpy road. Even though the driver was not alert to an approaching train, his trusty steed would generally sense and signal the danger himself.

Now that same old road and crossing is a stretch of glassy smooth highway. Your motor purrs quietly and you roll at a speed often in excess of the train itself. The old "Stop, look and listen" crossroad is still there and is probably augmented by a more elaborate signalling device of one sort or another. Down the highway a short distance on your right you have passed the small sign with an "R R X" on it similar to various other signs used along the highway to mark schools, curves, etc. Generally you see these signs. Sometimes you don't but flash across the track—if you are lucky. Then you look back to see if a train "was coming."

Many accidents occur at grade crossings where the railroad company has taken every precaution possible in the way of erecting standard signalling devices. The train hits an automobile, or just as often an automobile runs into the side of a passing train. The blame is buffeted between the dangerous grade crossing and the carelessness of the motorist.

In this day of fast moving traffic the best warning devices upon the railroad right-of-way at a crossing often come upon the driver as a surprise without giving him sufficient time to stop, or to look or to listen. He can't stop—probably looks after he has passed the danger—and listens to comment from the back seat.

A standardized warning of a size and character that must attract the attention of every driver, placed by state highway departments at a sufficient distance from grade crossings, could do much to lower the yearly death and accident toll.

A Protest!

WASHINGTON, June 6.—Trained roosters are being used by the Department of Agriculture's food and drug administration in the "Cock's Comb Test" to determine the potency and purity of ergot. Howard W. Ambuster, New York importer of the drug declared before the Senate Agriculture Committee today. These roosters, he charged, are trained to give good results for bad ergot and bad results for good ergot. Thus, he said, inferior and dangerous ergot is permitted to enter the country. In the name of the National Roosters' Association we want to protest the "Cock's Comb Test." We protest the double standard, whereby hens are supplied with a good grade of horse corn, whereas we are tested with ergot. We roosters feel that the hen, far outnumbering us, has been given too much credit. Unless conditions are improved, we plan a big raid on the salt cellar and non-cooperation on a national scale. We hereby ask Bishop Cannon for his support. Down with ergot! And equal rights for the workman.

Miles of Conveyors in Ford Plant

This picture shows two types of conveyors in use in the Rouge Plant of the Ford Motor Company.

AN ENDLESS chain conveyor, three and a half to four miles long, said to be the longest in the world, has just been completed at the Rouge Plant of the Ford Motor Company at Dearborn, Michigan. On it parts of Ford cars in the process of manufacture are transported from one building to another and completed cars are carried direct to railroad cars for shipment to branch assembly plants.

The conveyor, which carries its cargo on suspended hooks, has a daily capacity for 300,000 parts weighing over 2,000,000 pounds. It supplants freight cars and trucks which have been used for the transfer of many parts from one point to another in the Ford plant.

This longest conveyor of them all is a development of the Ford policy that nothing should be done by manual labor that could better be done by machine.

In the early days of his manufacturing career, Mr. Ford devised the assembly line—a moving track on which cars in the process of assembly went to the workmen instead of the workmen carrying parts to the car. The assembly line, perfected in many ways, is now used by automobile manufacturers generally.

The value of the conveyor in reducing physical labor, in saving time, in preserving system and in cutting costs soon became apparent and its use was extended to other purposes about the plant. Now there are literally miles of conveyors of various types in the Ford plant. Some of them carry parts from one building to another and are carefully synchronized so that the parts arrive at precisely the right moment and in the exact spot where they are needed. Others transport red hot ingots of steel weighing nearly a ton each. Still others move outgoing shipments.

If it were not for the conveyors, according to officials of the Ford Company, mass production would not be possible on its present scale.

GRUNDY TARIFF PASSED WITH APOLOGUES FROM OLD GUARD SENATORS — "CLIMAX OF ECONOMIC INFAMY"

Washington, July 3.—The Grundy tariff bill, which passed the Senate on "Hoodoo Day," Friday, the 13th, by a vote of 49 to 47, counting pairs, which assured its passage in the House, is widely denounced as the climax of "Old Guard" Republican economic infamy.

If technically described by what its opponents have said about it, its real title would be:

- A Bill to promote international ill will,
- To destroy American foreign trade,
- To retard the recovery of domestic business,
- To nullify efforts for farm relief,
- To further increase unemployment,
- To add a billion dollars a year to the high cost of living,
- To repudiate the pledges of the Republican Presidential candidate in the last campaign,
- To keep the tariff in politics,
- And for other purposes, including the repayment of contributors to the last Republican campaign fund.

An analysis of the vote in both Houses is generally accepted as proof of two outstanding facts in connection with the framing and passage of the bill: first, that the bill is an "Old Guard" Republican measure, for which the Republican Party will be held solely responsible; second, that the charges of Democratic complicity are refuted by the fact that only five of the thirty-nine Democratic Senators voted for it, three of whom have long been committed to the high protective theory and voted for the Fordney bill, the present tariff law, eight years ago.

As an evidence of the extent of the infamous character of this measure, it is pointed out that some Republican Senators deemed it necessary to explain and apologize for their votes in support of the measure, including the two senators from Pennsylvania, the highest protection state in the Union and chief beneficiary of exorbitant tariffs.

The Mazaroff Mystery

by J. S. FLETCHER

W. N. U. Service

THE STORY

Mervyn Holt is engaged by a man calling himself Mazaroff as a traveling companion. After a short tour they put up at the Woodcock inn on Marrasdale moor. They meet, casually, Mrs. Elphinstone and Sheila Merchison. Mazaroff tells Holt they are his wife and daughter and that his real name is Mazaroff. That night Mazaroff fails to return to the inn and his disappearance is unexplained. Holt meets Sheila and tells her of Mazaroff's disappearance. Holt is questioned by Police Sergeant Manners and a reporter, Bowena. Mazaroff's murdered body is found. Crole, Mazaroff's lawyer, and Maythorne, private detective, arrive. Valuable diamonds that Mazaroff usually carried are missing. A gun, stolen from Musgrave, is found at the scene of the murder. Evidence at the inquest proves Mazaroff was Merchison. His will leaves all to Holt. Herman Kloop, close friend of Mazaroff, is in London.

CHAPTER V

The Diamond World

We found Mr. Kloop at half past ten, leisurely finishing a late breakfast, a little dapper, Hebraic looking gentleman.

He appeared to take unusual interest in me as we revealed our separate identities, and I remembered then that the details of Mazaroff's will had come out in Postlethwaite's evidence at the inquest, and that newspaper reporters had been present.

"I only arrived in London last night," he said, as we seated ourselves. "I read about Mazaroff in the paper. A strange affair, gentlemen—and yet not so strange as it seems. Mazaroff was a careless man. He was too ready—sheer thoughtlessness, you know—to let people see what he had on him. And he carried things that I should have kept under lock and key. However—but tell me—how did you find out that I was here?"

"We found these letters of yours in Mazaroff's rooms at the Hotel Cecil," replied Maythorne, producing the letter case, and judging from them that you were a very intimate friend of his. I called to your address in Cape Town yesterday morning, and received a reply at night that you were here. You have read up the case, Mr. Kloop?"

"All that there is in these papers," replied Kloop. "I see the police suspect some local man—a villager of no very good reputation. May be so—but I should say, knowing what I do of Mazaroff, that there is something deeper in the case than a mere vulgar murder and robbery. Now, as I learn from the newspaper accounts that Mr. Holt was Mazaroff's companion in his north-country excursion, and with him all the time at this Woodcock inn, I should like to ask Mr. Holt to tell me two or three things—questions that occur to me, you know. Did you ever notice anything to make you think that you—that is to say, that Mazaroff was being followed—tracked?"

"I can't say that I ever did," said I. "You never, for instance, noticed a man, or men, who turned up with some regularity at the hotels you stayed at?" he suggested.

"Well," I answered. "I can only think of this—that seems to have anything to do with your suggestion. We stayed a night at Huntingdon—our first night. I saw Mazaroff talking, evidently confidentially, to a man in the smoking room late that night. Then, one day at York, I saw him in conversation with the same man in York station."

"You'd know the man again?" suggested Kloop.

"Oh, yes—a young, fair-haired, fresh-complexioned man, very smartly dressed," I said. "A man of probably twenty-five, or so."

"Were there any other guests than yourselves at this Woodcock inn?" inquired Kloop.

"Staying there—no," I replied. "People came in, though, for lunch—people who were motoring north or south."

Kloop folded his hands on the table and looked from one to the other of us. "What is in my mind," he said, "is that Mazaroff may have been tracked to this place, caught on that moor by the man who had tracked him, and done to death."

"For what he had on him?" suggested Crole.

"That—or something like it," answered Kloop. "I see it stated in the papers—from Mr. Holt's evidence—that he probably had a lot of money, and his valuables on him. But—do you know if he had anything else—anything that would make a man resort to actual murder to gain possession of?"

"We don't," answered Maythorne. "The fact is, Mr. Kloop, we came to you hoping that you, as a close friend of his, could throw a lot of light on Mazaroff. What, now, was he likely to have on him?"

"I will tell you what I know of Mazaroff. It may do some good—but I think the secret of this business will be unearthed only by getting at Mazaroff's own doings between the time he arrived here in London and his murder at Marrasdale moor."

"You have read what was said at the inquest about Mazaroff being in reality one Andrew Merchison? Very well—do you know if he was Andrew Merchison?" Maythorne asked.

"I do not," replied Kloop. "But," he added, with a quiet smile, "I dare say he was. In fact, I should conclude he was the Andrew Merchison spoken of at the inquest. He was a bit of a mystery man. But I never knew him as anything else than Sallim Mazaroff, and he never said a word to me about his antecedents, during the whole time of our friendship."

"When he first came known to me, Mazaroff was what you might term a general trader, or general speculator in commerce. But of late years, he had given up all that and had turned his attention exclusively to diamonds. When he retired, and when he came to England he had a certain deal, or venture, or speculation on, and I am inclined to believe that it was more than a little to do with his murder."

"Last winter Mazaroff got hold of a truly magnificent blue diamond. I have seen the famous Blue Hope—Mazaroff's stone was finer, both in size and quality. It weighed fifty-five and a half carats; its color and brilliancy were superb! I don't think—indeed I am sure—it was not seen by anyone but myself in Cape Town; Mazaroff sent it off to England. He—"

"To whom?" interrupted Maythorne. "That I do not know," replied Kloop.

Maythorne produced the receipt for the registered letter posted at Cape Town and passed it over to him.

"Do you think that receipt has anything to do with the sending?" he asked. "Look at the indorsement on the back—in Mazaroff's writing."

Kloop examined the bit of paper carefully, on both sides, and finally passed it back with a satisfied nod. "Oh, no doubt!" he answered. "That would be about the date. Sent it to the London branch of his bank, to be sure. The indorsement proves it, too—what could be clearer? 'Bl. D. 1.' 'Blue Diamond One,' of course."

"Why, 'Blue Diamond One?'" asked Maythorne. "Is there, or was there, a Blue Diamond Two?"

Kloop smiled knowingly. "Precisely what I am about to tell you!" he answered. "There was—in the end. And I feel convinced that Mazaroff had Blue Diamond Two, and perhaps Blue Diamond One, on him when he was murdered on the moor! After he got hold of that first blue diamond, he developed an almost feverish craze to get a second. I know that he got Blue Diamond One for what you call, I believe—in your English phrase—a mere song. But he was so intent on getting another blue diamond to match it that he told me he was prepared to go to a great length, a big price. In the end he got what he wanted."

"Another?" exclaimed Crole. "Another. And equally fine," replied Kloop. "I don't know, for he wouldn't tell me, what he gave for it. But he got it—and not very long before he sailed for England."

"You saw it?" asked Maythorne. "I saw it—yes," assented Kloop. "So—I have seen both. I don't think anybody else has. Unless—which I suspect—Mazaroff has shown them here, since his coming. He had his eye on buyers in Europe."

"Did he mention any particular buyers?" inquired Maythorne. "He did not. But he did tell me that he had a man here, in London, who did things for him, and who was in touch with European and American people of high degree that might be inclined to give a very fancy price for the pair."

"And you feel sure that he first sent Blue Diamond One to London, and then brought Blue Diamond Two in his own pocket?" suggested Maythorne.

"I feel sure of that," said Kloop. "I may say—I'm certain of it. And since I have learnt these particulars of his sad fate, I have wondered if Mazaroff did one of two things, or, perhaps, both? The first—did he get talkative on board ship, and show his second blue diamond to fellow passengers; the second, did he show it here in London, amongst the fraternity?"

"The fraternity?" said Crole. "You mean—"

"I mean Hatton Garden," answered Kloop, with a knowing smile. "Where, as you must know, the greater part of the diamond transactions of this country are carried out. It will surprise me if Mazaroff is not to be heard of there! Come, gentlemen, we will walk along the street with you . . . and we will see."

We made a little procession along Holborn; Mr. Kloop and Maythorne in front, Mr. Crole and myself in the rear.

Kloop greeted a man whose fine cloth overcoat was ornamented by a luxurious fur collar and his black satin stock by a blazing diamond pin. They were evidently well acquainted and met with much enthusiasm and handshaking—after which Kloop drew his man aside. When, a few minutes later, they parted, Kloop came to us, shaking his head.

"That's a man who knows this place from top to bottom and end to end," he remarked. "And he has not heard of Mazaroff and his blue diamonds. That inclines me to a further belief in what I've been thinking all along—which is that Mazaroff intended, and perhaps had in view—a private deal with those stones—did not intend them to come on the market. This is the market—and that man knows nothing. But there are still other men."

After that he dived into several offices and spoke to other men whom he met on the street, but we got no news of Mazaroff.

"The fact is evident," Kloop said, as we once more sought the open street. "Mazaroff has not visited these regions during his stay in London. I am convinced now that if he showed his blue diamonds here it was in private."

Then, saying that he must now attend to his own business, Kloop left us. We three went to lunch.

"Well, we've got some information," observed Maythorne as we settled down at a corner table. "We've found out about those diamonds. I figure up the situation in this way: Mazaroff sent the first—Blue Diamond One, as we'll call it—to his London bankers. Now then—did he send it for safety, until his coming, or did he send it that it might be shown to a likely customer? I think, to a likely customer—I also think more, in view of that cipher letter. I think that—probably for some time—Armintrade, then at the Imperial Banking Corporation of South Africa in London, had not only had charge of Mazaroff's correspondence with the bank, but had corresponded privately with Mazaroff. I think that Armintrade took charge of Blue Diamond One till Mazaroff's arrival with Blue Diamond Two, and, probably, during the interval made inquiries for a likely buyer of the pair.

"From all I hear of him, Mazaroff was an astute man. He probably figured that there was a lot of men here in England who, rightly or wrongly, have made vast fortunes out of the war. Such men—as we well know—want to set up in great style, or, rather, they do set up in great style. And the men have women—there's Lady Midas as well as Sir Gorgon."

Now what does Lady Midas want? What is a fashionable woman without diamonds? Her hair may be false, and her skin as yellow as parchment—but she's going to have diamonds glittering in one and on the other. Now I reckon that Mazaroff knew all that, and that he considered Lady Midas the customer he was looking for, eh?"

"Well—no doubt you're not far wrong," laughed Crole. "Now, if you've got Lady Midas' address in your pocket?"

"At present," observed Maythorne,

"Lady Midas is found at a lot of addresses. In the meantime, there's spade work to be done in another corner."

"It strikes me there are several corners," said Crole. "Up to now, we've had no light on that Mombasa affair. There can be no doubt that Merchison was on that ship, that he slipped away from it, leaving his things behind, and got safely ashore—to disappear as Merchison—and reappear as Mazaroff. Now, why?"

"I should say—because he wanted to cut clear of Mrs. Merchison, left at home," said Maythorne, dryly. "He wanted her to think him dead—what did it matter as long as he was alive? But I tell you he was always a bit of a mystery man, and I'd give a lot to know where he was, and with whom he talked, and so on that day after he and Holt struck the Woodcock. He saw somebody that day who gave him some information about Mrs. Elphinstone and Miss Merchison—he said as much to you, didn't he?"

"He did," I admitted.

"Well—who was that somebody?" he asked. "That somebody who's never come forward?"

Maythorne laid down his knife and fork, and bent across the table to us.

"Suppose," he said, in a whisper, meant to be mysterious and significant, "suppose—eh?—suppose it was his wife?"

"This suggestion seemed to impress Crole even more than it impressed me—his mouth opened and he started. But before he could say anything, a young man came threading his way through the crowded room and made for him. He bent down, handed Crole a card, and whispered something. Crole looked at the card and towards the door. "Outside?—waiting?" he said. "Bring him in here, Rollinson."

Rollinson—one of Crole's clerks—went off, and Crole threw the card on the table for us to look at. It was a very neat, beautifully engraved card, giving the name and address of Mr. Adolf Frobenius, 508 Bond Street, W., and a very neat, spick-and-span gentleman followed it.

"Swell jewelers in Bond Street," whispered Crole, as Mr. Frobenius, ushered by the clerk, made his way to our corner; "client of mine, and neighbor of mine, too—lives near me at Wimbledon; smart man. Hallo, Frobenius!" he continued as he greeted his visitor. "Delighted you ran me to earth. Let me introduce my friends—Mr. Maythorne; Mr. Mervyn Holt. I dare say," he added, with a sly smile, "you've heard of both, before now."

"Of Mr. Maythorne, often," answered the jeweler, with a polite bow. "And of Mr. Holt—since I read in the newspapers of the Mazaroff affair. Which affair, Mr. Crole," he continued, seating himself by the solicitor, "is what I have come to see you about."

"I thought so," said Crole. "Guessed it at once. We shall be glad of any information. Did you know Mazaroff?"

"I have read a great deal in the newspapers about this affair. And I came along to see you, Mr. Crole, because I am almost sure that not very long ago, under rather unusual circumstances, I met Mr. Mazaroff."

"Good!" exclaimed Crole. "But—you either did or you didn't. Why 'almost'?"

"Because," answered Frobenius, "the man whom I met was not introduced to me by any name. I just met him. However, he was a notable man—and the description of Mazaroff in the papers corresponds with my recollections. But I will give you the facts. During the past twelve months or so, I have had business dealings with a Sir Samuel and Lady Locke. Sir Samuel is a self-made man; to be plain, he made a vast fortune as a contractor during the recent war; he is, I gather, a multi-millionaire. About a year ago he bought Lord Mulworthy's house in Park Lane. He and Lady Locke—chiefly her ladyship—have had extensive dealings with me in jewelry and plate. Lady Locke has bought a good many jewels from me."

PROBLEMS OF SOCIAL WORKERS

By JUNE PURCELL GUILD, National Social Worker.

IN ANSWER to the indictment that organized social work is "fundamentally immoral" because it seeks to help individuals one by one instead of improving general social conditions, it might be said there is sufficient truth in the statement to offer a challenge to make immediate, joint, specific and definite plans to meet problems of economic insufficiency which are at the basis of much of human distress.

Few agencies are doing regular scientific research work on their own records. If they did, they would be surprised to learn how few permanent adjustments they have made in personalities, and probably some of these adjustments would have come about, in the long run, without the social case worker's activity, anyway. We do not know to what extent we merely alleviate instead of prevent.

Depressions of 1907, 1913, 1921 and 1930 indicate that we will tailspin into another about 1937 if we do not do a good deal more about it than we have done now. We shall have an increasingly large army of irregularly employed workers, due to the mechanization of industry. Real wages, as distinguished from wage rates, will still fail to maintain adequate living standards. This is our most important problem. If we cannot solve it we only continue to mark time with questions resulting from poverty or which cause poverty—when the great basic economic solution of poverty itself remains unaffected.

COLLEGE AND THE INDIVIDUAL

By ROBERT MAYNARD HUTCHINS, President Chicago University.

College educational methods have been reduced to a mathematical formula that defeats what interest and ability a student may possess. The modern system is set up for the average student, with the result that in any well-organized university there probably is not a single regulation governing the curriculum that a really excellent student should not break.

The first duty of a college is to organize itself so that a student who wishes to become a scholar will not have insuperable obstacles put in his path. If we had time to think about education, instead of being forced to provide something that would look like it for the multitudes who suddenly demanded it, we should direct our attention first to the achievement of the individuals.

Instead of the present bookkeeping methods that put emphasis on time spent and courses passed, I would have the universities create new standards and measurements. They should develop a criterion of entrance, with a completion of general higher education and of nonprofessional and of professional specialized education; then at stages employ general examinations, with such other devices as might be necessary.

If then an individual remains at any level longer than the average student, it will be because he needs to remain there. If he goes earlier, it will be because he is qualified to do so.

"BAD BLOOD" NATIONAL BURDEN

By DR. BRUMBAUGH, Deputy Health Commissioner, Milwaukee.

Good blood and bad blood in the reproduction of the American stock has asserted itself and will continue to do so in future generations, but the country is facing a critical public health condition today because bad stock is multiplying faster than good stock.

A human life in its most productive years represents a capital investment of $31,000. Of this $31,000, an average of $9,480 is spent in bringing the individual from birth to the age at which he becomes a productive member of society. To conserve this great investment is one of the big health problems today.

Yet millions of dollars are lost each year because society must care for its bad blood by maintaining public institutions. The capital investment of Milwaukee institutions is $41,000,000 and it costs $10,000,000 annually to maintain them. All this is the result of our inability to stop the intermarriage of persons of bad blood, which result in the propagation of our mentally deficient.

The result through many generations of a union of two feeble-minded families in New York more than 100 years ago is known. Nearly 3,000 progeny of the family were studied. Three hundred died in infancy, 300 were beggars, 2,000 were cared for in almshouses and several hundred became criminals.

ECONOMIC OLD-AGE PROBLEM

By GLENN A. BOWERS, Industrial Relations' Counselors, New York.

Industry today is highly competitive and competition requires the efficient to crowd out the less efficient. But in the face of increasing competition there has been a marked increase proportionately of workers between forty-five and sixty-four, between 1900 and 1920, in all occupations except agriculture. Significant trends are shown by a study just finished in five industries for the period 1911-1929. In all five, relatively more persons of forty-five or more were found to be employed in 1920, and in three industries—more men past sixty-five.

Remedies for relief of economic old age are yet in an experimental stage. True it is that the employment rules of some companies are applied at times with a harshness that shows lack of human sympathy and deserve strong public disapproval. The public has a right to look to those in control of industry so to conduct their financial relations with employees that they may accumulate a reserve for old age.

PUBLIC OPINION NOT FOCUSED

By ALANSON B. HOUGHTON, Ex-Ambassador to Britain.

If children could pick their parents there would be no mental defectives. Child guidance should be called parent guidance because the fault is nearly always with the parents. Children get both their heritage and their environment from their parents.

Teachers must remedy the defects in children which occur through the faults of the parents. If they are successful in correcting mental instability before it becomes serious, the $32,000,000 appropriation Governor Roosevelt seeks to house the criminal insane and mental defectives would not be necessary. Within five years, I predict, mental hygiene will be one of the chief functions of every health department.

Many Republics Before That of United States

Probably the first government which can be considered republican in form was the ancient Israelitish commonwealth or republic, which lasted from about 1491 B. C. to 1095 B. C. About three centuries after this the Greek states, of which Athens was chief, set up what gradually came to be democratic republics. Ancient Carthage and Rome were for a short period republics. During the Middle Ages many of the free cities of Italy and Germany set up republics. San Marino in Italy is now the oldest existing republic, while Switzerland has existed as a republic since 1291. According to an article in the American Cyclopaedia, the degree of popular sovereignty in republics has varied very widely in the past, most of the so-called republics having been ruled by an aristocracy which jealously guarded its own rights but treated the multitude as little better than slaves. "Real republican government may be said to date from the American Declaration of Independence, and even in the United States the government was largely one of class until about the second quarter of the Nineteenth century, when suffrage barriers began to break down."

Eliminating Ground Ivy

A simple and effective remedy for ground ivy on lawns has been found. This consists of a single spraying with sodium chlorate, using 1 1/2 ounces per gallon of water, and that quantity of solution is sufficient to cover 100 square feet, providing a pressure sprayer is used. If applied with a sprinkling can, a trifle more solution will be needed, as that method of application is somewhat wasteful of material. The leaves should be thoroughly covered. The spray can be applied any time during the summer or fall. Since the spray discolors the grass for a short time, it is perhaps best to defer application until late fall.

Moral Conveyed by Winter

The simplicity of winter has a deep moral. The return of nature, after such a career of splendor and prodigality, to habits so simple and austere, is not lost upon either the head or the heart—Burroughs, in "Touches of Nature."

WRIGHT PROVES HONUS WAS RIGHT

Glen Wright Now Playing Brilliantly for Dodgers.

"A baseball club is no better than its infield."

So said Hans Wagner several years ago, and he was pardoned at the time for the little conceit because as the greatest shortstop in the game he made the saying ring true. The fans of Brooklyn are now prepared to accept the pronouncement as a truth.

Glen Wright, all but lost to the game a year ago, has so rounded out the infield of the Robins by his dependable and even brilliant play at shortstop that they have become a National League pennant threat.

There is romance in it, particularly in the case of Wright. He had been tossed to the scrap heap of baseball by a torn ligament in his throwing arm which failed to respond to the usual methods of treatment. It looked hopeless, but after being discarded by Pittsburgh, Wilbert Robison, boss of the Robins, agreed to take a gamble, and so did Wright.

Glen Wright married and his wife proved to be a stabilizer as well as a stimulant to his naturally high and determined spirit. His arm was all but dead; anyway, useless for baseball. Robie gambled to the extent of over $5,000 trying to effect a cure, and finally it came down to an operation or nothing. The doctor could give no assurance. In the balance hung a possible cure or a ruined, crippled arm. With the encouragement of his wife, Wright gambled—and won.

Most Furious Tornadoes Not Deemed Dangerous

In spite of their ferocity, tornadoes offer little peril to motor tourists if four general rules are kept in mind and obeyed when a twister is sighted, points out the touring bureau of the Chicago Motor club.

"Inasmuch as nearly all tornadoes move in generally easterly direction, the car should be driven north or south, out of its path," the bureau stated in a bulletin. "One should be careful, however, not to drive into a second one.

Get into Cyclone Cellar.

"If the car is disabled, get into a cyclone cellar, if one is near. Falling in both of those plans, take refuge in the cellar of a frame house, on the side nearest the storm. Should the house topple, the debris will be blown away from you. If there is no other recourse than to face the storm in the open, lie flat on the ground, or preferably in a ditch some distance from trees or poles. Shield your head with seat cushions."

Tornadoes are, the bureau explained, traveling whirlwinds. Their destructive area at any one moment is not greater, on the average, than two or three square city blocks. While the rate of whirl at its axis may be three or four hundred miles per hour, it seldom travels across the country faster than sixty miles per hour.

Tornadoes Move Northeast.

Most tornadoes move toward the northeast, while a few travel toward the southeast. The chances are about fifty to one that the direction in which it is seen to be moving is the one which, with but slight variations, it will pursue until it dies out.

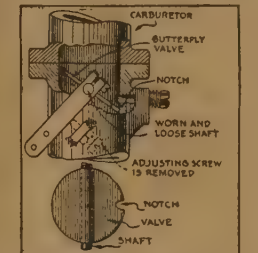

THE MOTOR QUIZ

How Many Can You Answer?

- Q. How often is the oil circulated through the engine's oiling system at average driving speed?
- Ans. From 100 to 150 times an hour.
- Q. How is spark plug pre-ignition revealed?
- Ans. The engine loses power and the driver often thinks he is running out of gas; a pingling noise is sometimes heard; misfiring at continuous high speed.
- Q. What factors are necessary for perfect carburetor performance?
- Ans. Proper carburetor adjustment, good compression and ignition.

Repairing Poor Idling of Motor Car Engine

The effective opening past the butterfly valve, to allow the motor to idle at a slow speed, is surprisingly small. After the car has been in use for several years, the shaft on which the butterfly is mounted and its bearings become worn. The result is that the butterfly never closes to the same position twice running; in addition, a considerable amount of air leaks through around the shaft bearings. A simple way to cure this trouble is to remove the adjusting screw entirely so that the butterfly closes tight. File a small notch in the edge of the butterfly valve as shown. The notch should be filed in the side of the butterfly valve on which the low speed nozzle is located and the size of the notch will govern the idling speed.—Popular Science Monthly.

With adjusting screw removed, file a notch in the butterfly valve to govern the idling speed of the motor, when the bearings admit air.

Three of World's Greatest Sprinters Attending School

The campus at the University of Southern California will be blessed this summer with the presence of three of the world's greatest who will be attending the Trojan school at the same time.

Charley Paddock, demon of the cinder path for a number of years, grown too robust to consider any further breaking of records, will return this summer to U. S. C. to study law. After receiving his A. B. degree in 1923 Paddock took up the pastime of writing and lecturing and, on the side, served in an executive capacity in a Minneapolis publishing concern.

The second famed sprinter is Charley Borah, former national intercollegiate champion, who will re-enter school to pursue courses in medicine. Rounding out the trio is Frank Wyckoff, who ran the 100 yard dash in 9.4 in the N. C. A. A. games. Frank should become the most famous of the three, as he has two years more of collegiate competition and has been improving with each season.

New York Has Big Bill

Between $24,000,000 and $27,000,000 will be collected in gasoline taxes in New York state during the present fiscal year. Aside from this, other taxes, such as plate taxes, drivers' licenses, dealers' fees, etc., will amount to more than $34,000,000. Premiums amounting to over $50,000,000 annually are now being paid by motorists of New York state for liability insurance and make the annual cost average approximately $35 per vehicle for these three items on the state motorists' bill.

Radio Exports to France

American radio exports to France last year were more than three times as great as in 1928, the total having reached in value $201,065.

Giant Beasts of Prey Once Roamed England

In the Pleistocene period an animal known as the cave lion was common in England, south of Yorkshire; this was larger than the African lion, and as remains have been found in nearly every English county it must have been well distributed. But there was a great mammal somewhat similar to the cave lion in appearance, but infinitely stronger; this was the machairodont, and probably represented the carnivorous mammal brought to its most amazing development. Remains of this catlike animal have been found in the eastern counties.

At the same period swarms of hyenas were seen. Their remains have been discovered in incredible quantities in caves, and in the same layers bones of the cave lion and other large mammals have been found. Probably these hunters shared the same home, whence they emerged to prey upon the vast herds of deer.

Indoor Weather Control

It isn't only the heat, but the humidity and the air motion that affect the destiny of whole races. Weather to primitive man was the most important factor in life. In the tropics and the subarctic regions it still remains master of the situation.

Civilized man, however, from the time of the domestication of fire, has been progressing slowly in the art of making his own weather indoors. It is now possible to control heat, relative humidity and rate of air motion in any space between four walls, a ceiling and a floor. From factories and public buildings the art of manufacturing weather and controlling it is spreading into homes and apartments. The next few years will see radical progress.

Use for Historic Building

The old court house in St. Louis, in which the Dred Scott case was tried, will be used as an exhibition place for the art of the Mississippi valley, according to plans now being shaped by the St. Louis Art League. The historic building, whose dome once was the giant of the city, now nestled down among clusters of skyscrapers, will be abandoned by the civil courts when the new $4,000,000 civil court house is ready for occupancy. The exhibitions, according to present plans, would be devoted mainly to works of modern art and all are associated with the Midwest and the valley.

Modern

Clarence Darrow, the lawyer, related at a dinner in Chicago the story of a man whose double life had been exposed.

"The man claimed," said Darrow, "that nowadays we are all entitled to double lives. He pointed to this playwright and that novelist who advocate free love. But he was put out of the church anyhow. His claim didn't go over.

"As one of the church deacons remarked to me afterward, his claim had about as much sense to it as the bigamist's."

Women debaters think quicker than men, in the opinion of Prof. John Henry Frizzel of the Pennsylvania state college. He has coached both men's and women's debate teams for two years.

"Girls come to the fore in rebuttal where quick thinking is of paramount importance," he says. Among other points where girls excel he lists tactful approach and a tendency to consider the subject more seriously.

Prizes for Churchgoers

Prizes are being given by a church near Glasgow, Scotland, to those who attend most regularly. On prize-award day the procession of winners is among the strangest to leave a house of worship. Controlled Light Favored for Most Inclement Weather Controlled lighting offers the most satisfactory solution of the difficulties of driving through fog or snow and rainstorms.

Fog generally hangs just above the ground and lighting equipment which can be adjusted to get underneath the fog for a short distance ahead of the car so that the driver may see the edge of the road is the most desirable. A road light, attached below the front bumper, is effective. Dimming equipment which tilts the beams of the headlights downward have an advantage over some other types of dimmers.

Controllable spotlights or searchlights which can be trained on the edge of the roadway are desirable equipment for driving under these conditions. Fog continues to be hazardous and calls for unusual caution on the part of the motorist, just as it continues to trouble the airplane pilot and the sailor.

In the same way controllable lighting equipment is best for driving in heavy snow and rain, from the standpoint of path illumination.

In inclement weather accidents are fewer in proportion to the hazards involved than they are on bright, clear, and dry nights, because drivers naturally use extreme caution.

It's Your A&P Store

As the town you live in is yours

Housewives, visiting a young merchant's store in 1859, found goods on his shelves they liked—and—as housewives do—told others.

Thus, A&P's business grew from this single store. First one customer brought another. Then one neighborhood brought another.

A&P has not forgotten why it outgrew a single store. It knows it must make good in each community if its stores are to be accepted by many.

Because A&P realizes this, the A&P store nearest you is run by your townsmen. Men in your own locality keep your store in touch with the A&P system. The food on its shelves is there because you have asked for it.

A&P is made up of many such stores, just as the United States is made up of many communities like your own. Your A&P store serves you better because it is part of a large system, just as your community suits you better because it is part of a great nation.

INTERESTING NEWS FROM SARDIS

Editor Chilton County News:

Please give me some space in the paper to give our singing report, and some other things which were done at Sardis Sunday. The singing society was called to order by the chairman, R. W. Kendrick, who sang the well known hymn, "Leaning on the Everlasting Arm," after the song and prayer the arrangement committee composed of Misses Mae Sansom and Miss Arie Ratliff asked the following directors to sing two songs each.

G. B. Williams, Claude Traywick, Prof. J. W. Lowery, Hiram Littlejohn, Mack Durbin and Houston Melton. The organists were Miss Gertrude Lee Lowery and Prof. George Anderson.

There was a large audience of visitors from other communities who enjoyed the singing very much. After the directors had finished their lessons the President sang that widely known hymn, "I Heard the Voice of Jesus Say." After which the society was dismissed to meet the first Sunday afternoon in August at Pilgrims Rest. The singing society meets the first Sunday afternoon at Pilgrims Rest and the third Sunday afternoon of each month at Sardis. The public has a cordial invitation to attend our singings.

I am requested to announce that Prof. J. W. Lowery, of Clanton, Ala., will begin a 20-days singing school at Sardis Monday morning, July 21, 1930. Prof. Lowery asks all who are desirous to learn to sing will attend this school. He hopes to make it the best school of its kind ever taught at Sardis, so all who wish to enroll are cordially invited to come to Sardis to the singing school.

The Sardis B. Y. P. U. met Sunday night with a large audience of both young and old people. Group 2 of the Union was on the program. Their subject was Baptism. Those on the program rendered their part real well. It is indeed remarkable to see the wonderful interest the young people of this community are taking in the Master's work. It is indeed a real pleasure to the writer to report to the county papers what the young people of this community are doing. The writer knows the editors of the county papers are too glad to publish all good work done by the young people of the various Baptist churches over the county.

Mrs. J. D. Griffin of Mulberry met with the boys of Sardis Sunday night and organized a Charter Royal Ambassador chapter with 17 members on roll. As has already been mentioned the public has a cordial invitation to come to Sardis to help us out in any way we can. We need you. I hope I haven't taken too much space in making these reports.

ENDURANCE AUTO DRIVER PAYS VISIT TO CLANTON RECENTLY

Something new for Clanton showed up here last Saturday morning in the way of an endurance test. Hugh "Jockey" Elder arrived in Clanton Saturday about noon handcuffed to the steering wheel of a new Plymouth automobile, which was put on the road by the Peoples Auto Company of Montgomery.

"Jockey" had been driving the car continuously since last Friday at ten o'clock, and when in Clanton the wheels had not ceased to turn. Just how long he will be able to hold out at this he could not tell when here, but he did state that he was "still going fine." The car created quite a bit of attention while moving around town.

J. THOS HEFLIN TO BE SPEAKER HOLTVILLE ANNUAL BARBECUE

J. Thos. Heffin will be the principal speaker at an annual barbecue at Holtville, Ala., on July the 25th, at 10 a. m. This is a big event of the year in the community and many people from Elmore and adjoining counties are looking forward to a big day. The public, together with all candidates are cordially invited to attend.

Thorsby, Alabama Is Showing Evidence Of Expansion Program

On a recent visit to the town of Thorsby, Alabama, a representative of the News found that the citizens there are wide awake and very optimistic concerning the business outlook for the future. Already new business houses are being erected in the town, and some additions are being made to those already occupied by thriving concerns.

On the corner, opposite the L & N Depot will be seen a large single story brick building now under construction. This building will occupy the lot where the Thorsby Hotel burned not long ago. Short work was made of the cleaning off of the lot where the hotel burned and no time was lost by R. D. Gibbons, proprietor of the burned hotel, in erecting another building. This new structure will house the Franklin Garage, of which Relious Franklin is proprietor, and which is at present located near the Bank of Thorsby.

E. N. Bentley, another outstanding and prominent garage owner of Thorsby, is now occupying a large and modern arranged garage and machine shop building directly on the Birmingham highway. Mr. Bentley has made great strides toward progress for the Town of Thorsby, and has increased the size of his place of business. These two garages with their modern buildings are a credit to the town. Both employ experienced mechanics and are enjoying a nice amount of business.

W. H. (Bill) Goodgame has under construction, on another corner lot, directly on the Birmingham highway, a nicely planned building which will be the new home of the Thorsby Drug Company, of which W. W. McPearson is proprietor and operator, and which at present is located on the opposite side of the highway and railroad. This new home of the Thorsby Drug Company will be as modern as possible, and, in itself, will be a credit to the town, as no bad impression can be had from new buildings being seen by passing motorists.

The concrete blocks which are being used in the construction of the building being erected by Mr. Goodgame, were manufactured right in the town of Thorsby by E. F. Mead & Son, manufacturers of concrete building blocks, brick and all kinds of tile for wells. Mr. Mead with his son, Clyde are experienced men in the making of these concrete building supplies and their well equipped plant is kept busy filling orders, that come not only from their home town, but from many other places. They also furnished the blocks for the erection of the E. N. Bentley garage. The plant of the E. F. Mead & Son gives employment to five and sometime six men.

George Stanford, who with Mrs. Stanford have recently become residents of Thorsby, are making some nice showings with his neatly arranged lunch room located on the southern end of the town of Thorsby, on the Birmingham highway. Mr. Stanford came to Thorsby from Montgomery, and since his location there has caused his place to become popular with tourists. He is just completing a summer out-house where he intends to serve ice-cold watermelon during the season.

The Town of Thorsby is noted over the state for the co-operative spirit of its citizens. It is to this fine spirit that the town owes much of its progress that is now being made. Surrounding Thorsby are many communities that contribute in a large measure to the trade of the town, and to the financial condition. Some of the finest truck farming being carried on in Chilton County can be found to exist in Thorsby and in the communities surrounding it.

There are many other noticeable steps being taken in the improvement and expansion program of Thorsby, which have not been touched in this article, but from time to time these articles about Thorsby will appear in the News, and if there is any improvement being contemplated in Thorsby, the News will appreciate it if their attention is called to the fact.

REPORT OF THE MATCH PLAY AT THE MISS-A-PUTT LINKS

Following is a detailed account of the golf match which was played at the Miss-A-Putt Miniature Golf Links here last Friday night, July 18th, between Birmingham players and Clanton players.

Mens Foursome	Mens Foursome
Clanton	Birmingham
Sam Upchurch vs. Carl Hunter
Lanier Moore vs. Fred Acton
Arthur Johnson vs. Dan Morrison
Earl Ellis vs. Ellis Oglesby

Johnson and Ellis won their singles by comfortable margins, while Upchurch and Moore were defeated by Hunter and Acton of Birmingham, and in the play off of Clanton winners vs. Birmingham winners, the Birmingham players won by a narrow margin.

Ladies Foursome	Ladies Foursome
Clanton	Birmingham
Pauline Lawrence vs. Helen Biles
Nell Sumner vs. Bessie Hunter
Gladys Williams vs. Mrs. Ransom
Bernice Williams vs. Maurine Marshall

The feature of this match was the stiff competition that the Clanton girls gave the older and more experienced ladies from Birmingham. Although the Birmingham foursome won every match, yet the matches throughout were not determined until the last hole. The management of the Clanton Miss-A-Putt Golf Course congratulates the Clanton girls on their splendid showing against the Birmingham ladies, who are experienced miniature golf players.

After the matches were over Acton and Calloway of Clanton played a grudge match against Hunter and Acton of Birmingham, and took the match from the Birmingham boys 5 up.

Immediately after the match Sam Upchurch, captain of the Clanton foursome, challenged the Birmingham foursome to a return match in Birmingham, Ala. This match will be played Friday night, July 25, starting at 8:30, on the Miss-A-Putt Golf Course at Mountain Brook, Birmingham.

The management of the Clanton Club is very anxious that at least four boys and four girls will make this trip to Birmingham and as many more as possibly can go. Anyone who can possibly make the trip will please see J. A. Acton as to arrangements for the trip.

MR. AND MRS. FRANK CALLEN BACK FROM NORTH CAROLINA

Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Callen and two children, Billy and Anne, returned last Sunday from Hendersonville and other points in North Carolina, where they have been spending several days. They made the trip by motor.

didates should promptly comply with the law which reads as follows:

Sec. 593. Filing statements, itemized, of detailed amount of expenditures, contents of such statements.—Not more than ten days, nor less than five days prior to the election and within fifteen days after the election, every committee shall file statements giving in itemized detailed form, including names, items and detailed amounts, covering all of the expenditures made directly or indirectly, and all obligations, debts or liabilities assumed or incurred at the time of filing of said statements. Such statements shall include the names of all contributors of amounts in excess of ten dollars, with amount given by each, and a list of all gifts, loans or contributions made. Such statements shall itemize all moneys expended in sums over five dollars, and shall give the names of the various persons to whom such moneys were paid, the specific nature of each item, by whom the service was performed, and the purpose for which it was expended. There shall be attached to such statement an affidavit subscribed and sworn to by the treasurer of said committee setting forth in substance that the statement thus made is in all respects true and that the same is a full and detailed statement of all moneys, securities or equivalents for money coming under the control or custody of the committee and by them expended directly or indirectly.

Sec. 595. Penalty for failure to make statement required.—If the statement required to be made after such election is not made by any candidate and committee for him, a certificate of election or nomination shall not issue to such candidate though he be successful in such election. The failure of any other political committee to file the statements herein required in the form and at the time specified is a corrupt practice. The statements herein required to be filed are public documents and shall be open to inspection by any citizens.

It has not yet been surfaced with gravel, and in dry weather is a fine road. Rain would probably tend to break it up slightly, however, workmen are always on duty to drag the road often enough to keep it in fair shape.

The opening of this new road places Clanton almost in an intersection of two main highways in the state, one running north and south and the other east and west, and also places Rockford in an advantageous position, and more easily to get to than before. By making this route, those wishing to go to Goodwater, or Sylacauga, find it somewhere around twenty miles to either place from Rockford, with a good gravelled road to either. Nine miles of the thirty miles from Clanton to Rockford is paved, by the new route, leaving the twenty-one of good dirt road.

The citizens of Rockford are anxious to welcome visitors to their town, that is directly on the new road, which is being generally referred to now as "The Road To Rockford."

S. M. Edwards Writes About Candidacy For Commissioner

poor to pay his road tax. If you elect me as one of your commissioners, I would make a move to amend this road law, so as to give the man that prefers to work out his time on the road rather than pay $5.00 and that 50c fee, the exact amount any other hand doing the same type of labor is getting. It is not a crime to be poor, and if it is and this Republican panic holds out a while longer, we will all be criminals. We can't help but think there is too much petting going on and some folks must be getting away with it too easy. They may be like a spoiled baby, hard to keep in line. Well, boys, if you send me down there, I will try and cure some of that stuff the first time I go to the bat. I would not favor that gas truck. It's nothing but a money waster unless the gas people are just about giving them the gas to haul it out. They do not do it that way. There is too much competition in the gas business to ever think of operating a gas truck by the county. Next, I would not favor any employee using gas or any other material belonging to the county for private use. But on the other hand I would favor giving the employee fair wages and then let him look after his own needs. I would favor a more permanent road and bridge program and replace with fills. Our roads in many places are entirely too narrow. I would favor tearing down such road beds and build a much wider road bed; something to take care of our gravel when we spend the road funds to gravel it. It should be taken care of.

I promise the people I will not have a single pet if you send me to the commissioner chair. I will go there to do business for the county and not to play the game of politics. I think that it is all wrong to work some of the private roads to peoples homes and leave others out. I would favor working every mans road to his door or none. I believe in equal distribution of road funds throughout the county. I would work to this end if elected your commissioner. I believe the people should have a voice in the affairs of our county. I would at all times welcome suggestions from the people. I have tried to give you in these few lines an outline of the way I see things, and upon them I take my stand to live or die for old Dixie Land.

Sincerely yours,
S. M. EDWARDS.

Verbena Bank Cashier Is Placed In Jail Here

and president of the Verbena bank, to take the place of Horace W. Davis, former cashier. According to reports Davis is said to have confessed to a shortage of approximately $10,000 of the bank's funds, and rumors state that he has made a confession of how he disposed of the money while cashier of the bank, however, this could not be found to be true Tuesday.

Davis was brought to the jail in Clanton last Sunday according to information from the sheriff's office here, with his bond fixed at $15,000, and late Tuesday he had not been released.

Reports stated that the bank was solvent and in a condition to pay all depositors if necessary, and opened for business as usual Monday morning. Officials of the Verbena bank stated to a representative of the News that the bank will continue to operate with its capital and surplus just as large as before.

In statements from officials of the five banks located in Chilton County, it was said that the banks are in a most excellent financial condition.

JUNIOR G. A.'S MET LAST TUESDAY WITH JUNE COX

The Junior G. A.'s met with June Cox Tuesday afternoon at four o'clock. The meeting was called to order by the President, Ruth Gowan. A short program was rendered and afterwards a social hour was enjoyed.

Plans were made for service next Tuesday night to be in charge of the Counselor, Ruth Sessions.

Fifteen were present at the meeting.

Testifying in her divorce suit, Mrs. William Bailey of Chicago sadly declared, "I am a radio widow; my husband sits at the loud speaker and will never take me anywhere."

"DICK" HOBBIE RECENT VISITOR HERE IN INTEREST OF I. G. A.

The News received a pleasant call from "Dick" Hobbie, of Montgomery the early part of the week. Mr. Hobbie comes to Clanton quite often in the interest of the members of the International Grocers Alliance. He represents the H. M. Hobbie Grocery Company of Montgomery. Elsewhere in this issue of the News will be found the ad of the various stores that are members of the I. G. A. and in which they are listing some real bargains on the grocery line for this week end.

REVIVAL BEING CONDUCTED AT STANTON FOR SEVERAL DAYS

A revival meeting is being conducted at Stanton, Alabama, during this week by the Rev. J. C. Hill of Birmingham. There has been several additions to the church during the progress of the revival. It has not yet been stated just when the meeting will close.

DR. AND MRS. T. H. NEIGHBORS IN AUTO ACCIDENT RECENTLY

Dr. and Mrs. T. H. Neighbors were slightly injured and shaken up on Wednesday of last week, when their car overturned on the Goodwater road, in Coosa County. Other occupants of the car, relatives of Dr. and Mrs. Neighbors, were more seriously injured, one receiving a broken collar bone. The latter has been confined to a hospital for several days.

SEVERAL FROM HERE ATTEND FARMERS MEET IN AUBURN

Among those from here who attended the Farmer's Week Meeting in Auburn during the past several days were J. B. Downs, Miss Esther Lee Dennis, J. N. Dennis, W. L. Popwell, Horace Popwell, Garland Foshee and Dr. W. L. Parrish.

REVIVAL MEETING AT COURTHOUSE POSTPONED

The revival which was to begin at the courthouse last Monday night has been postponed on account of inability of the evangelist to reach Clanton for the opening date as announced. The meeting is in progress, however, at the church at the east end of Second Avenue, Clanton.

The evangelist is expected within the next few days, however, when the revival will be moved to the courthouse, and carried on as announced last week.

An effort is being made to have Rev. Ernest Wicks, late of Angelus Temple, to come here for at least a week's meeting. Rev. and Mrs. Wicks are at Wichita-Kan., attending the Mid-West Conference of Foursquare Churches, before continuing their journey to their permanent location at a Foursquare church in Michigan. Watch for further announcement.

In the meantime, you are cordially invited to attend the services at the Foursquare church, east end of Second Avenue, Clanton.—J. Mat Johnson.

YOUR BEST ASSISTANT, MR. MERCHANT, IS ADVERTISING

The best assistant any merchant can use to sell merchandise today is well written, well gotten up advertising.

It has become an inseparable part of modern merchandising. Very little merchandise is sold these days that is not advertised. Advertising cuts down sales resistance, it creates confidence, it gives the customer information that he wants about your merchandise.

Too many merchants pay all their attention to buying goods and not enough to the proper advertising of it. A little time and thought spent on this phase of merchandising will result in more sales at lower overhead cost.

A good, well written advertisement is an invitation to customers to come into your store and see the merchandise displayed there.

SUNBEAMS MET LAST FRIDAY AFTERNOON

The members of the Sunbeam Band met at the home of their leader, Mrs. J. B. Atkinson, last Friday afternoon, at four o'clock, for the regular meeting. Fifteen members were present, and a missionary program was enjoyed. After the meeting the girls played games, until late in the afternoon. The next meeting will be August 8th.

FERRY TO ROCKFORD ROAD GIVES QUICK MOTOR SERVICE

The ferry which connects the break in the new road to Rockford at the Coosa river has recently been equipped with a motor boat. Before this improvement was made, the going was rather slow across the river, but now that the ferry is motorized those using it are assured of quick passage to either side.

Mr. Charles Guldge of Verbena was in Clanton Monday attending to business matters.

Davis Still Held Here Pending Bond

H. W. Davis, former cashier of the Bank of Verbena, Alabama, was still in jail here Tuesday, following the finding of a shortage in the bank's books on July 18th.

Davis' bond has been fixed at $20,000 according to recent information and as yet has been unable to secure bonds—it was stated. J. W. Brassell, assistant attorney general will represent the state when the case comes to trial.

JOE MOORE IN MONTGOMERY HOSPITAL AFTER OPERATION

Joe Moore, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Watts Moore, is confined in a Montgomery hospital following an operation last Saturday for appendicitis. Latest reports state that Joe is getting along fine and expects to be home sometime next week.

JEMISON LADIES SHOW REAL CULINARY ART AT CONFERENCE

Those Masons who were attending the Masonic Conference in Jemison recently will long remember the well prepared meals served to them by members of the Order of the Eastern Star at Jemison. These ladies showed some real culinary art, according to expressions heard from various ones who were fortunate enough to have been fed at this conference. Those ladies who so willingly and untiringly assisted in the preparing and serving of the meals to the Masons were:

Mesdames A. C. Wells, J. P. Montgomery, J. B. Crysell, Zane H. Turner, W. C. Erwin, B. S. Frederick, R. M. Hubbard, C. C. Conway, E. L. Glasscock, W. G. Atkinson, H. H. Hays, Erwin Mims, S. P. Shaw, A. M. Attaway, and Miss Nell Wells.

The above were assisted by the following ladies: Mesdames John Adams, H. G. Jefferies, Erby McNeill, Stanley McNeill, Fred Sims, A. A. Conway, Joshua Sorrell, George Naish, J. M. Langston, and Misses Lizzie McNeill, Bertha Johnson and Ozzie.

Smallest Car Brings Lightning Artist

A. L. (Lightning) Morange, famous rapid cartoonist and water color artist, in company with Dick Beard, popular floor salesman for the Tip-Top floor, arrived in Clanton Tuesday afternoon in one of the small Austin automobiles that are gaining in popularity over the country. These men are here in the interest of the Cherokee Mills line of floor, and while "Lightning" Morange does his stuff on the windows of the merchants and attracts large crowds with his art work and speed, Dick Beard is busy talking Tip-Top floor.

Morange is a familiar figure throughout the South, and it is said that he has painted pictures on over half the show windows in Dixie. If one should see him standing beside the baby automobile which weighs something like 1100 pounds, one would think that he is about as large as his car. With Morange and his small car and lightning art work, and Dick Beard with his personality, Tip-Top floor will undoubtedly make a hit here.

GEO. ROSS WILL SPEAK HERE IN BEHALF OF W. C. DAVIS

George Ross, of Bessemer, is scheduled to speak here on next Saturday afternoon, August 2, in behalf of W. C. Davis, Democratic candidate for governor of Alabama.

The speaking will be held at the courthouse, and is scheduled to begin at three o'clock. The public is cordially invited to hear Mr. Ross at this meeting, and a special invitation is extended to the ladies of the county to hear him.

Interest Growing In Opportunity Schools According To Report For The Second Week

Interest is beginning to pick up some in the Opportunity Schools for adults over the county according to the recent report of the schools. The report on the schools for the second week shows that the attendance average for the colored schools is somewhat higher than that of the white schools, taking into consideration the fact that there are fourteen white schools and only nine colored.

It was also stated again this week in the report that those schools that do not show an average attendance of ten will be moved. Only one school has been moved to date, and it is hoped that it will not be necessary to move

Young People Have A Good Meet, Mulberry

Following the News publishes a report from the meeting of the W. M. U. Quarterly Meeting and the Young People's Council recently held at the Mulberry church.

The people of Mulberry church are very happy because they had the pleasure of the W. M. U. Quarterly Meeting, and the Young People's Council (continued to editorial page)

MR. AND MRS. THOMPSON TAKE TRIP THROUGH TENNESSEE

Mr. and Mrs. Leo Thompson left last Friday for Chattanooga and other points of interest in Tennessee. They returned to Clanton Monday. Mr. Thompson is manager of the Clanton Laundry & Cleaning Company, here.

RAIN INTERFERES SLIGHTLY WITH SHRINERS OUTING HERE

Clanton was given a real treat last Thursday afternoon when the Montgomery Shrine Club arrived here about four o'clock en route to Lay Dam for a barbecue and dance that night. Stopping in Clanton for about two hours, the visiting Nobles staged a band concert, parade and drill on Main Street, which was cleared of all traffic and given over to the Shriners for the afternoon. Following this the Shriners motored to Lay Dam where they enjoyed a barbecue and dance.

A slow rain began late in the afternoon, and had a tendency to interfere slightly with the frolic, however, very few allowed it to make any difference with the fun.

SEN. WATT T. BROWN HERE IN INTEREST OF CANDIDACY

Senator Watt T. Brown, Democratic candidate for the office of Governor of Alabama was a visitor to Clanton last Monday in the interest of his candidacy.

Moore's Store Will Move To New Home

Following on the heels of the completion of the rebuilding of the Jones Building, on Main Street, the former location of the Hodges Store, Moore's Store will move today, according to an announcement from the management this week.

The Jones building, the new home of the drug store, has been completely remodeled throughout and is now finely fitted to take care of its new business, which according to Mr. H. T. Simms, will be ready for business not later than Saturday in their new building.

Moore's Store was reopened several weeks ago, and has been continuing in business in the same location, next door to Broadhead's until the new place could be put in readiness. The management of the drug store invites inspection by the public of their new home.

J. J. PRUETT WILL SPEAK HERE IN INTEREST OF B. M. MILLER

Announcement was made this week to the effect that J. J. Pruett of Ashland, Alabama will speak at the courthouse in Clanton on next Saturday afternoon at two o'clock.

Mr. Pruett will speak to the people in behalf of the candidacy of Judge B. M. Miller, candidate for the office of governor of Alabama. The public is invited to hear him.

J. N. Dennis and C. E. Stapp have been attending the Farmers meeting which has been in progress in Auburn, Alabama, during the past several days.

CURTIS BILLINGSLEY OPENING TEXACO STATION

The Texaco Filling Station on the Birmingham highway at advantageous point here, changed hands recently, when L. E. Foster, his interest in the station to (Curtis) Billingsley.

Mr. Billingsley has assumed control of the station, which dispenses genuine Texaco products. He is well known over this county, being the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Billingsley, of Thorsby, Alabama. He has for some time been located in South Carolina in the tire and filling station business, and secured a wide experience there. The people of this section welcome Curtis back into their midst again and hope that he will see fit to remain here. He invites his friends to call and see him at his new location, where they will receive the utmost in service and courtesy at all times.

Mr. and Mrs. S. T. Darnell of Aniston are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Atkinson this week.

CHILTON STRINGERS WILL PLAY OVER STATION WAPI

The string band from Chilton County will again appear on the program of Station WAPI, in Birmingham, on next Saturday afternoon. The exact time they will play was not given.

This string band which is composed of C. A. Johnson, Irion Howell and Ben Scott, has been appearing on the program of the Birmingham station for some time on Saturday afternoons.

Misses Clara Harris, Sue Townsend, Inez McCauley, Louise Ivey and Mr. Clyde McCauley, of Marion, were the guests of friends in Thorsby and Clanton last Monday, returning to Marion Tuesday.

TWO INJURED IN ACCIDENTS LAST SUNDAY

Others Receive Minor Injuries In Wrecks On B'ham And Selma Roads

Adding to the week end accidents over the state were two accidents in which persons were injured and brought to the Central Alabama Hospital here last Sunday.

Arthur Boyd, son of Oscar Boyd, near Verbena, was brought to the hospital here in a Martin ambulance last Sunday night after the car which he was driving side-swiped the car of Frederick I. Thompson, on the Montgomery-Birmingham highway about three miles south of Verbena. According to reports given the News, Boyd is said to have driven onto the highway from a side road just as Thompson's car was passing, and struck the latter's car on the right side doing considerable damage to the car, as well as greatly damaging the Boyd car.

Thompson was not in his car at the time, his chauffeur having carried him to Birmingham and was returning. Thompson made necessary arrangements for the taking care of Boyd and other matters pertaining to the accident, as soon as he was notified Sunday night. Boyd was released from the hospital immediately after being given treatment. It was stated that he was not injured seriously.

Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Cox and two children of Centreville figured in an accident Sunday afternoon when the car in which they were riding on the highway three miles west of Maplesville ran off a bridge. A Martin ambulance from Clanton was summoned and Mr. and Mrs. Cox were brought to the Central Alabama Hospital for treatment. The children were not injured. Latest reports from the hospital stated that Mr. Cox was released after receiving treatment, while Mrs. Cox was still there last Tuesday, but will be able to be out soon.

Lieut. B. A. Crandell, who received a broken leg in an accident sometime ago, and who is confined in the hospital here is reported to be getting along all right and will be released in about two weeks.

A TOUCHING APPEAL

A young couple, father 23 years old, mother 17 years, with 7 months old baby, started out on a small farm with a very simple little home and were working hard on their crop and very happy. Last week, this little home and all of the furnishings and the smoke house were completely destroyed by fire. Only some of the bedding was saved. They have to make the second great effort to begin again.

If there is anyone who has any piece of furniture, cooking utensils, etc., that they could help this couple to start over with, please bring to or notify the Child Welfare office, Clanton, Ala., upstairs of the Gore Building or phone 41. You may have some discarded pieces that could be freshened up by this young couple and help them to tide over this distressing time.

CLANTON TEAM LOSES TO CALERA LAST THURSDAY

The Clanton baseball team played the Coopers team on Tuesday afternoon of last week and won by a score of 11 to 12, and playing Calera on Thursday afternoon of last week, were defeated by a score of 11 to 5.

This afternoon the local players will go to Montevallo to meet the Montevallo team. It is hoped that as many from Clanton who can, will go over to Montevallo this afternoon and give the fellows from here some real boosting.

W. W. BISHOP AND FAMILY GO VISIT THEIR OLD HOME PLACE

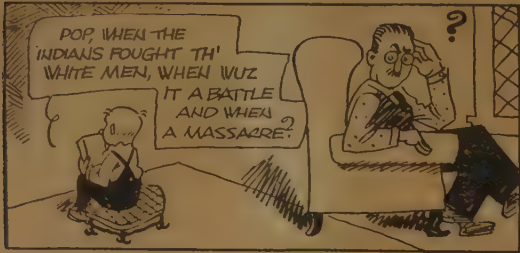

Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Bishop of Clanton motored to Rockford and other places in Coosa County last Sunday to spend the day visiting friends and relatives. Mr. and Mrs. Bishop were accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Leo Taylor.

Mr. Bishop was at one time a resident of Coosa county, having been born in the Union church community. He stated that he enjoyed the day meeting up with many of his old friends, and especially did he enjoy the little visit he took to McEwen's Springs where he stated he used to play while a boy.

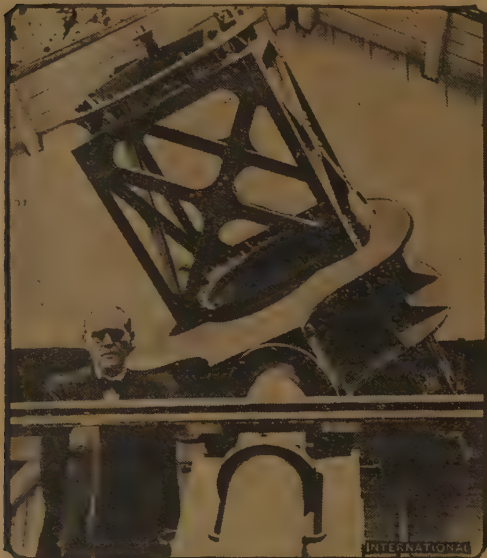

Mr. and Mrs. Willie Hayes of Six Mile, are visiting Mr. and Mrs. M. Z. Atchison here this week.

Improved Photographic Telescope

Prof. John Ritchie, noted American astronomer, with the new type of photographic telescope which he has invented jointly with Professor Chretien, French astronomer. The instrument, which is technically known as the Ritchie-Chretien Aplanatic telescope, is only 54 inches long and uses a mirror of but 20 inches in diameter, thereby considerably decreasing the cost of installation and operation. It is said to produce better results than do the 100-inch telescopes previously installed by Professor Ritchie at the Mt. Wilson observatory in California.

Sees After Thirty Years of Blindness

Chicago.—A young man on his honeymoon was stricken with total blindness—thirty years ago.

One day recently, his vision suddenly restored, he sat bewildered by the side of the woman who for three decades had been his guide, his companion and his wife, and—until he closed his eyes again—she seemed unreal.

Three days before the man—J. F. Fish, 2423 North Sawyer avenue—sensed the beginning of the miracle that was coming to him.

He was in his own living room. His wife was there. The feeling he had was as if a black curtain before his eyes became less black at the lower edge and a misty gray border grew. For some time he considered this without saying anything. Probably it was just an illusion, he thought. But the gray border widened. It became translucent—and then—transparent. He exclaimed:

"My dear, I believe—I really believe that I am beginning to see!"

She started up—then resumed her seat. Her pulse beat fast. But his was beating faster. He continued:

"There are vague shapes. The outline of a door—over there—a chair—is that your hand on the back of the chair?"

Swiftly the whole of the old black curtain seemed to be drawn aside, and the eyes behind the curtain—eyes which last had looked upon the world in the year 1900—saw the amazing world of today.

RESPONSIBILITY

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

In "Green Pastures," the much-talked-of negro drama which ran in New York for some months this last winter and spring, there is a very human and material presentation of the goings on in heaven—a material heaven such as an illiterate and pious mind might imagine.

It was not an easy job running the heavenly choir and keeping things going along regularly and peacefully, and one of the heavenly hosts is heard to say, "Sometimes it's hard, even for God."

Even omnipotence must carry heavy responsibilities, and it may be they are not easily borne. It was one of the Henrys who, worn out with the worries of his kingship, is quoted as saying: "Uneasy lies the head that wears a crown." It isn't all glory and gayest times being a king. Anyone who holds a high position must bear responsibility and pay dearly for the honor and the distinction which the position carries.

I thought that Weldon was having a pretty soft time. He lived in a beautiful house, he seemed to be free from financial worries, and he was president of the local bank. As far as I could see he came late to work and left early, but sometimes, perhaps, "It was hard being president of the bank."

He had been having a consultation with a man and his wife when I called on him last, and as they came out of his office they all three looked tense and worried. Things were not going right I could see.

"We don't have a very easy time these days, we bankers," he said. "Banks are going on the rocks everywhere, and we wonder when we wake up in the morning what's going to happen to us before night. Maybe there'll be a run on the bank, and we'll be closed up. It makes one old to carry such heavy responsibility. Sometimes I wonder if it is really worth the test."

We pay for responsibility. Dale had always looked forward to the time when he would be president of his fraternity. It was the greatest honor which could come to him in college, he felt. He has the job and it is weighing on him.

"We've a fellow over at the house," he said to me yesterday, "whom I like immensely, and yet I've got to break his pledge. He doesn't fit in; the fellows don't take to him, and the job of telling him is mine, of course. It isn't easy." His face was a little drawn; he was learning that honor carries responsibility.

Hobart was president of the school board. He liked the distinction and the prestige it gave him. The superintendent of schools had been in office for forty years. He was a kindly old man, gentle, lovable, kind-hearted, and he adored his work; but he was inefficient—he was far behind the times in his methods. There was only one thing to do and that was to ask him to resign. It was Hobart's job. He did it well, but he didn't run for office the next year. He didn't care for the responsibility.

Harold Russell Ryder, the broker who spent millions on Broadway before he crashed, has, according to close friends, a most extraordinary and puzzling personality. They describe him as a man with a mixture of a delusion of grandeur, a kindness complex, a total financial irresponsibility and a Robin Hood desire to aid the needy. Ryder never, in his spending, was of the loud-voiced aggressive type. Always courteous and gentle, he spoke in almost hushed tones.

"May I please have another good table tonight?" he would say to a head waiter, and then to a bus boy, "Will you see that all my guests have plenty of water?"

Then he might give the head waiter $100, and the bus boy $10. He knew the waiters in the places he frequented by name; knew their family history; asked concerning their wives and children. He always tipped lavishly, but if any of the waiters was in trouble, he would hand him a big enough bill to help him out.

Those who knew Ryder tell me he had a mania for helping persons financially. Waiters, taxi-drivers, musicians—he always has been fond of music—scrubwomen, actresses, chorus girls, any of them could get money from him if he thought they needed it. His friends declare that this gave him a reputation he didn't deserve; that he was no more; didn't especially care about women—unless they were broke. His benevolent, caliph-of-Bagdad complex started working immediately to

When students and teachers come to his office now he closes his eyes "in order to recognize them more readily"—because his ears are better trained than his eyes.

The original loss of his vision was the result of a blow on the head. The restoration was time's slow healing of that injury.

Springs to Heat Capital of Iceland

Washington.—Iceland, the world's oldest republic, lying just south of the Arctic circle, is preparing to heat its capital, Reykjavik, and at the same time provide power and amusement through the long winters with boiling water drawn from nearby hot springs.

Progress in this undertaking to a point where, next winter, the national hospital and a school will be heated and an indoor swimming pool will be established, utilizing the water after it has given up most of its heat, was reported to the Department of Commerce this week by North Winslip, Consul General at Reykjavik. He described it as the first step toward heating all of the capital.

The success of this undertaking provides a fresh explanation of the admiration which anthropologists and other students of human races and progress have long expressed for the Icelanders, who have retained in their isolation the splendid qualities displayed by their ancestors of 1,000 years ago in resisting oppression at home until hopelessly outnumbered and then sailing into unknown seas in flimsy ships to find a land where they could live in freedom.

Iceland was formed, after a fashion, much as the republic was formed, through a volcanic uprising in the earth's crust. That accounts for the abundance of hot springs there, providing water ranging from warm to boiling in temperature. Experiments looking to the use of this natural resource have been in progress for some years, and have shown very favorable results, Mr. Winslip reported.

First drillings were made two years ago by the Icelandic Engineering association at Wash Springs, about two miles from the capital. During the succeeding experiments the hot water was successfully used in heating a house, in cooking and washing and in warming the soil. Further investigation and experimentation are planned.

Under the plan for heating the capital a pumping plant will be constructed near Wash Springs. It will be built under ground, and the nat-

All the night clubs know Ryder; the night club workers are for him to the last man. Why not? Ryder is said to have spent over $40,000 on Broadway in a month. Some few were grateful. One man sat in Ryder's office two hours to see him. When he finally did see him, he gave him a hand-made wooden cigarette case.

"I made this for you," he said, "It was the only way I could show my gratitude."

"Where did I see you and what did I ever do for you?" asked Ryder. "Don't you remember me?" said the man. "I'm a waiter. One night you asked me about myself. I told you my wife was to have a child and I had saved no money. I didn't know what to do. You gave me $200. I cannot tell you how that helped."

Wherever Ryder got the money, he certainly spent it, and largely on others; although he did own half a dozen expensive cars and had a suite of seven rooms at an expensive country club, where he kept a couple of Japanese valets to wait on his guests. But he visited humbler places of entertainment. They say that one afternoon, in a small Greenwich Village restaurant, he heard and liked a male quartet.

"Why haven't you a piano?" he asked one of the villagers.

"We can't afford one," was the frank reply.

Ryder immediately called up one of the big piano concerns; told who he was; asked them to keep open until he arrived. When he got there he bought a piano which cost several thousand dollars, put it on a truck and had it delivered in Greenwich Village.

"Here is a piano," he said mildly to members of the quartet. "You sing well, but I like songs better with instrumental accompaniment."

On another occasion Ryder paid $7,000 for a radio and a piano and gave them away. A taxi man he helped in Paris constituted himself Ryder's bodyguard. If he took another car, this driver would follow with his taxi, until such time as Ryder got safely back to his hotel. Ryder did everything in the grand manner, even offering any friend he was sending home a choice of several makes of cars.

POPULAR LACE TWEED

Among the new fabrics lace tweed is destined for great popularity in the sports field. A pattern of this tweed is shown in the smartly flared suit in the illustration. It is made with a one-piece dress which outlines the figure to the knees, where it flares in circular flounces. The dress is topped with a short jacket showing the same flaring finish, while a belt further emphasizes the flared effect. The yellow and black combination is subdued by a small black beret, while black oxfords complete the costume.

CHILDREN CRY FOR IT—

CHILDREN hate to take medicine as a rule, but every child loves the taste of Castoria. And this pure vegetable preparation is just as good as it tastes; just as bland and just as harmless as the recipe reads.

When Baby's cry warns of colic, a few drops of Castoria has him soothed, asleep again in a jiffy. Nothing is more valuable in diarrhea. When coated tongue or bad breath tell of constipation, invoke its gentle aid to cleanse and regulate a child's bowels. In colds or children's diseases, you should use it to keep the system from clogging.

Castoria is sold in every drug store; the genuine always bears Chas. H. Fletcher's signature.

The DAIRY

GOOD LEGUME HAY
VERY ESSENTIALSoy Beans Can Be Used in Emergency for Cows.

Legume hay is practically a necessity in producing milk at the lowest possible cost, asserts C. L. Blackman, extension specialist in dairying for the Ohio State university. And the dairy farmer who fears that he will run short of clover or alfalfa hay for his herd, need not be without a good legume hay.

"Soy beans can be used in an emergency to supply the necessary legume hay," says Blackman. If the beans are sowed early in June or immediately after corn planting they will usually be ready to cut the latter part of August. It is important that they be sown early in order to be ready for cutting at this time. Soy beans sowed too late and cut too late may provide either a poor quality of hay or none at all. They make hay which is sufficiently valuable to justify the dairy farmer in arranging his farm work so as to sow them when they should be sown.

"Soy bean hay is one of the most palatable hays for dairy cattle, and is practically equal in feeding value to alfalfa, which is the perfect hay for the dairy herd. The soy bean hay carries approximately the same amount of protein and mineral matter as alfalfa, but cows do not eat it up quite as cleanly as they eat up alfalfa, because of the coarser stems. Early sowing and cutting reduce the amount of waste due to this.

Many Dairymen Fail to Balance Their Rations

Many stock keepers fail to balance their rations because they feel it necessary to feed what they have at hand. For example: A farmer may have a large supply of alfalfa or clover and, knowing that this is an excellent feed, especially for dairy stock, he will feed too much protein, which will result in a loss of feed as well as production.

It probably would pay him very well to sell some of his alfalfa and buy corn or barley. On the other hand, he may have a large supply of timothy hay, corn silage and corn, and his rations woefully lack protein as well as minerals; for in our protein feeds we generally have a high per cent of minerals and vitamins.

There are many feeds in the form of forage, grains or mill stuff, and in any state or county they generally can be produced in sufficient quantities and at low enough prices to warrant profitable production of stock and stock products. But to obtain results it is necessary to give the animal a balance as to protein and carbohydrates. This also applies to minerals.

Dairy Hints

The effects of scant pasture in summer last far into the winter.

There are no known cures for abortion but there are precautions.

The price of butterfat is always highest in fall, winter, and early spring.

Cream can be more easily and more economically handled in the cooler weather.

Feeding good cows is more profitable than feeding poor ones. Cull out the boarder animals.

Butterfat production depends upon the inherited producing qualities of the cow, the kind and amount of feed, and the care and management given the cow.

There are many excellent commercial mixed protein feeds on the market which have the advantage over single protein concentrates, like linseed meal, cottonseed meal, gluten feed, etc.

The value of feeding dairy cows well during the summer cannot be measured entirely in the milk production at that time. The better care has a beneficial effect that lasts over into the winter following.

When prices of dairy products are low it is a good time to put the herd on a more efficient basis of production. Cutting down the feed is not considered good economy; culling out inferior cows is a profitable practice.

A home-made calf meal can be made of equal parts by weight of hominy meal, red dog flour, linseed oil meal and blood flour.

Commercial calf meals give fair results, and vigorous calves result from their use without milk after the calves are four weeks old.

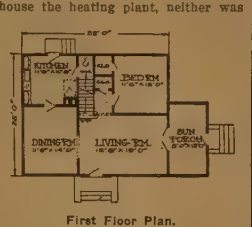

Dairymen who feed liberally during July and August will largely avoid the decreased milk flow commonly ascribed to flies, since shortage of feed is really at the bottom of most of the trouble.

Convenience of Room Arrangement
Recommends Bungalow Type of Home

Many people prefer the bungalow type of home because of its greater convenience of arrangement, all on a single floor. When treated as such this house has been treated, a charming exterior appearance is also achieved with a suggestion of coziness.

By W. A. RADFORD
Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to practical home building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as editor, author and manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 407 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill., and only inclose two-cent stamp for reply.

Not so many years ago there originated a home building design that has since become very popular all over the United States. The bungalow type of home is preferred by many people because of the convenience of its room arrangement, the rooms being all on one floor. The climate of California made this design popular because it could be constructed cheaply, there being no necessity for a basement to house the heating plant, neither was lating illustration is not a true bungalow for the reason that the pitch of the roof has been made such that there is space for two additional bedrooms and a bathroom on the attic floor. Set into the roof are two fan light dormer windows which are aided by the same type of windows in each of the gables. These provide light and ventilation.

This is a good home building design for the family which wants a bungalow type of home but which needs more bedrooms than are usually found when only the first floor is utilized. When surrounded by lawn and plants as shown in the illustration it makes a most attractive home.

Under Windows Best Place for Radiators

What is the best location for the radiator in the ordinary room in a residence or apartment?

Years ago radiators were placed more or less by guess or in accordance with the wishes of the home owner. Today they are placed where scientific research by heating engineers has shown that they will perform their work most efficiently. This is at the source of the cold air which filters in to the room. In the ordinary room this is around the windows.

The best loss of the room is especially great around the windows not merely because windows often do not fit tight, but also because glass gives off heat to the outside air.

Very accurate data on the amount of heat which will be lost and the amount of cold air which will come in are available for the guidance of heating contractors who are members of the national association of heating contractors.

With the help of this data the contractor knows how much heat loss the radiators must offset and then he can place his radiators where this heat loss occurs.

One of the outstanding advantages of radiator heating is that the radiators may be placed near windows. In fact, they will be most efficient at the window.

Bad Lighting in Homes
May Cause Blindness

Bad lighting, even so apparently harmless a thing as the glare from an unrosted electric lamp used night after night, may materially affect the health and happiness of the individual, according to Winifred Hathaway, associate director of the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness.

"The eye will often stand, apparently without strain, perhaps more abuse than any other part of the body," says Miss Hathaway, "but that does not mean that it is not registering its unhappiness. Many nervous disorders may be attributed to eyestrain."

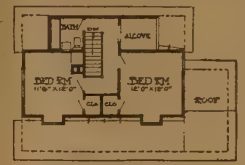

"In the home the light must be adapted to the type of work or recreation for which it is needed; there must be an adequate supply of light; glare must be eliminated; the type of lighting should be in harmony with its surroundings, and the illumination should be well distributed."

Insulation Becoming More Popular Than Ever

Each season sees more home builders and remodelers lining walls and roofs with insulation materials, insuring the homes against cold in winter and heat in summer. The building material dealer can tell you all about these materials. There are almost a score of insulating materials that are constantly used. The selection of a particular kind depends largely upon the price a person wishes to pay.

Compactness Required in the American Home

Compactness.

That is the watchword of the American home.

Space has been given value never thought of in days passed when the kitchen was the real living room of the house.

Today the kitchen has developed into a highly efficient workshop, a laboratory where the housewife prepares food for her family with ease and scientific precision.

Small kitchens because of the need for compactness without congestion must be more carefully planned than larger ones.

Every inch of available space must be utilized to good advantage. One very good way to do this is to fit it with space-saving furniture.

For example, instead of taking off two or three feet of wall space with a huge dish closet, have one just large enough to hold your dishes, and put in a metal kitchen cabinet, which will hold the kitchen utensils and cooking ingredients.

The cabinet eliminates the work table and also the storage closet for cooking ingredients. Instead of a bulky old-fashioned kitchen chair, use a stool which will fit readily under the sink.

Not "How Cheap," But "How Good" Question

When you make a purchase on which you may have to depend for a lifetime's service, your thought is "how good" rather than "how cheap."

This is especially true when the best costs but little more than an inferior product. It is in the highest degree true of house wiring. You will never see the most important part—the part that is hidden behind the walls, you cannot inspect it before buying.

How, then, shall you choose? The answer is, "On faith"—faith in the responsibility, experience, skill and good repute of the electrical contractor who is to install it—faith in his use of only the highest quality material.

Only when a contractor has demonstrated that he possesses these qualifications and that all his material is invariably of the best, has he earned the right to your confidence.

War Put Heavy Burden on Women of Esthonia

Women of Esthonia are among the blindest on earth, according to Miss Clara Roe of New York, a recent visitor to that tiny republic.

Between her home, her job and her public duties, the time of an educated woman in Esthonia is severely taxed, she says. Many such women have two or three public duties, a job as home-maker, wife and mother, and another as wage earner. These Esthonian women are carrying heavy responsibilities. Esthonia lost its men heavily in the World war, and in its struggle for independence women must now help to do the work of their nation. They also work in the fields, repair roads, streets and railroad tracks, work in brickyards, lumber yards and in building construction and perform other laborious tasks. If they sought to use their political power to the fullest, they could outvote the men. Every one is public spirited, carrying two or three jobs with pride instead of complaint.

Foundation for Belief
Concerning Third Match

There is a multitude of superstitions which have become thoroughly imbedded in the race, and are observed seriously or humorously according to the individual temperament. Some people will not accept the third light from a match because it signifies death or disaster. The origin of this superstition is more understandable than some. In time of war when a soldier lit a match it revealed his whereabouts to the enemy. The sniper who saw the light lifted his gun to his shoulder. There are three stages to firing: Ready (cock the trigger), aim (gun at shoulder) and fire. Therefore, the third soldier to receive a light from the match was the one visible when the sniper was ready to fire. That is how the third light from the match came by its sinister significance.

Aircrow Train in Germany

Trains operated by a propeller-driven engine are possible as the result of tests made recently in Hannover, Germany. The engine resembled an armored car and the two propellers were driven by motors. The experiments were similar to those being made in Scotland with the George Bennie railplane, a cigar-shaped car guided by rails built on a series of trestles and driven 120 miles an hour by aircraft propellers.

Chicago Millinery Center

The world's busiest millinery center, by virtue of a $50,000,000 a year business, is claimed for Chicago by the Chicago association of commerce. In the three departments of manufacturing, wholesaling and retailing millinery, the city stands supreme. More than 25,000 persons, mostly women and girls, are now employed producing hats and millinery accessories.

Fight "Slot Drug Stores"

Medical men of London have started a war on the new "automatic drug stores" which are being placed in railway stations, hotels and other public places. The machines deal out aspirin, bismuth and other drugs. The possibility of children getting the drugs has prompted one pathologist to predict that the machines will undoubtedly cause many fatalities.

Quit Complaining and Get Busy, Advises Piedmont Paper

"Quit complaining, get busy, work like forty to make things better." This is the common-sense advice given its readers by the Piedmont Journal. Editor Johnson is of the opinion that "a whole lot is up to us in making things better or worse." Through the Journal he suggests a program for helping to turn depression "into certain advantage."

There is food for reflection and a timely hint to all in this from the Piedmont paper:

"We can help ourselves, and help our community by keeping quiet about our troubles, and working like forty to make things better. This will stimulate things a lot. Everybody is more or less affected by general complaining and lack of confidence. On the other hand, it helps the temper of people, and business generally to see people busy, and bright and cheerful, and working away at their jobs in a determination to help business and things around."

"As a matter of fact, it is not impossible to turn depression into a certain advantage, for instance, it is the best time you ever saw to build that house; that extra room, or porch, or fence, or to lay that concrete sidewalk. Because help is plentiful at low wages, material is cheap, and the money invested now will bring good return. If you have not the money to build a house, you can get it. I all property owners can well take advantage of this. It is a little harder in our business or on our farms, but we can get around them. We can give out a few days' work to those needing the work, and then come right back and spend their money. We can get indirectly with those from whom they have to buy."

"In building or repairing or other improvements, extensions to be done, we can at least look at it a little harder in our business or on our farms, but we can get around them. We can give out a few days' work to those needing the work, and then come right back and spend their money. We can get indirectly with those from whom they have to buy."

"The remedy suggested by the Journal will be found effective in every town in Alabama."

Try Home-Town Stores First Before Buying Out of Town

When you are seeing first, if the home-town stores have what you want to buy before going out of town to buy. Almost everywhere you go, you find that the goods desired are sold at a lower price than at the big city stores, and frequently lower.

"The remedy suggested by the Journal will be found effective in every town in Alabama."

What's The Remedy?

As being written about unemployment, its cause, its remedy. Political conditions undoubtedly have considerable to do with lack of work, but the introduction of machines, the place of nine thousand clerks in the Bureau shows that the constantly changing conditions of the worker with respect to the work to produce idleness until some new means of adjustment has been found, or until the world ceases to advance.

If You Know How, It Will Be Easier to Win

One thing, nowadays is knowing how. The untrained, unskilled worker has been shovelled off the shelf by the trained, skilled man or woman who knows how. It is an era of specialized effort.

In the most ordinary of occupations, the worker who has had training has a distinct advantage. Even the ditch digger has seen his job taken from him by the steam shovel, operated by a man who knows how.

On the farm the lad who can plow or hoe still is needed, but even in this work, machinery operated by men who know their workings is supplanting the farm labor on large ranches and plantations.

The best advice that can be given to a boy or girl now is to learn something, become adept in some special line of endeavor, get as much of an education as possible and supplement it with training from the ground up in the avocation which appeals to them as their life work.

To get ahead in industrial or commercial life today one must know the work well, and those who make the best progress are the ones who know some one thing better than others know it.

"ROUND TOWN"

---by Doug

Opinions expressed in this column by this writer have no connection with the general policies of this paper, being wholly those of the writer, in the manner they are written.

Not so much material could be picked up at the Shriners outing last Thursday at Lay Dam, for my initiative airing of the merits and demerits of the fair sex, which I am supposed to begin this week. But it isn't absolutely necessary to depend on such outings for this material, as plenty is furnished without any great amount of overhead expense of the part of an escort of some fair lady, right here in Clanton.

One of the rarest kind of young ladies, speaking of the unmarried group, is the one who is so considerate as to refuse to allow a young man to spend money on her, for her—or any other way you care to put it. Occasionally a fellow is lucky enough to meet one of this type. Then he should always remember her as the kind not to be classed along with the goldiggers, and nine times out of ten she will make some fellow a good wife. But you never can tell now—she may be using that as a bait and then after the ceremony, it's all off and the expense begins, she endeavoring to make up for lost time.

Some of the most beautiful young ladies I have met are Southern girls. They have a certain thing about them that brings out the feminine qualities of a lady that are so admired and some times are the ruin of a man. That depends entirely on the will power of the masculine sex, which in many cases is quite weak, in instances of this kind. A man has to have a most unbreakable will power to withstand some of the temptations that are placed before him by members of the fairer and weaker sex—they not realizing that the more men they ruin, means that the more men will turn against them and vow to leave the women alone forever, which vow is usually broken at one time or another.

There is a certain young lady of my acquaintance that is of a type usually referred to by men as the type difficult to understand, however, I, being an authority on the subject thoroughly understand her. She has a certain amount of will power that is rather annoying and tends to cause a snag in a party that should be a party that would go off in the best of style—speaking in modern terms of style. She is of an age that should be able to know what she is doing and when to do it, but I find that she fails to come up to this point. She is considered good looking and the type that makes a man take the second, or maybe third look, and is in the class that a fellow should feel complimented when he is able to make a date with her. Now this member of the fairer and weaker sex, who is failing, along with all these good points. She is not the sport she could be, and still be just as modest and reserved. So many of the young ladies who have not "been out" much have the idea that to be a good sport they have to go in for all the petting and other mushy things. This is a mistake, if you will take it from an authority. There is a time when extreme modesty is used to an advantage and other times when used, is quite a disadvantage. It would be a very difficult task for me to undertake to attempt to explain this, however, I may in time to come.

Due to the fact that this is my first crusade on this subject of the fair sex, I have secured the aid of the famous Dooker Pooker, the International Authority on the Subject of Wimmin, and who has been gaining in popularity as the Homocratic candidate for senator. Dooker Pooker wishes to come to Clanton to enter into a debate with members of the fairer and weaker sex. But here's his letter to the column this week, after a period of A. W. O. L. I welcome the Dook—

Dear Mr. Editor:
Round Town Column:

I would have wrote you sooner but I have been busy organizing the Homocratic party, which wants me to run for the Senate. My campaign will be officially opened on Friday, August 1st at six P. M., when I will broadcast an immortal address over Station W A P I. So be sure and tell your folks to tune in and learn what Senator Pooker is going to do about the liquor question, the unemployment situation, helping the farmers, and lots of other nice things that I'm going to do.

Now Mr. Editor, as goes Clanton, so goes the State, so I want to come to Clanton sometime and address your people. I wish you would act as my campaign manager for Chilton County and will arrange for the details of my engagement, being sure to ask the charming lady and daughter at the Exchange to be sure and have on hand and table some more of that good old country ham and oodles of red gravy.

It is a well known fact that I am the wimmin's friend, doing all I can to bring them to their sense, if any, and trying to save them from themselves. Of course you know that most of our political troubles is because the wimmin is always looking for some place in which to put her foot even though they ain't endowed with wimmin business men modestly refer to as commercial ability when alludin' to brains. Then too, they is always in the air about something and I'll bet if their head wasn't non-detachable, it would take an aerial flight like a toy balloon or something.

But the wimmin is a necessary evil and I think every man should oughter have as many as one of them, and as evidence of my friendship for them, I recently organized the Critters Matrimonial Agency. And I'm pleased to extend an invitation to all Clantonians which would venture upon the billowy seas of matrimony, to register with us, provided of course they are recommended by you.

I believe that they's lotsa wimmin voters in Clanton and I'm gointer make a drive for their votes (Being entitled to them) although I doubt if they is worth very much. But I wish you would announce to them that I'm not gointer buy none of their votes with the liras which Mr. Mussolini sent me. I still have a few dams on hand and if they would be interested in them, they may submit their proposition through you.

I'm not surprised to note in last week's paper where you have gave your people a good lecture; and I hasten to subscribe to the opinion expressed by you. Of course, you know, Mr. Editor that it is entirely unnecessary, that nice people tell how nice they are; and that it's only those who are conscious of their deficiencies who must point to their virtues, if any, in order to remind you that they may be nice. All of which leads to the thought that these latter mentioned animals is usually haughty, and haughtiness is unmistakable evidence of inferiority complex. And another thing: you never saw a haughty man in your life—it's always the wimmin which is haughty and which thinks they is so smart or something.

I deem it my political duty, in view of your article, to come to Clanton and function in my official capacity as the International Authority on the Subject of Wimmin, because it look like the wimmin is runnin' wild down there or something. I know of no better way to convert and convict the critters than to introduce evidence proving beyond the peradventure of a doubt that they is a menace to the peaceful and harmonious prosecution of the nation's political, industrial and commercial activities; and I hereby challenge any six wimmin down there to meet me in joint debate, they to take the negative. While I want only 15 minutes to win, I will agree to allow the critters to speak as long as they want to. However, in view of their inherent weakness, I must ask them to stop talking after they reach the point where they haven't got nothing to say. Also I must ask for constabulary protection as a guarantee of immunity from attack by the critters when I begin to tell the setting-free truth. You arrange for the debate anytime after election and I'll meet and defeat them.

Write me sometime.
Dooker Pooker.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTSSouthern Italy Devastated
by Quake—Thousands Killed or Injured.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

SOUTHERN Italy was rocked and torn by the worst earthquake in that region since the terrible disaster that destroyed Messina in 1908. Definite figures on the loss of life may not be known for many days. At this writing it is known that 2,013 persons were killed and twice as many injured. Communications in the stricken area broke down and airplanes were being used for relief and exploration work.

The provinces of Puglia, Campania and Basilicata sustained the worst of the temblor, but it was felt as far north as Abruzzi and Molise. The quake, which started at 1:15 in the morning, centered around the old volcano Mount Vulture, and the city of Melfi, just north of that cone, was destroyed, as were also the nearby towns of Lacedonia, Aquilone, Bisaccia and Ariano. Many other cities and villages were partly razed, and famous palaces and churches were ruined. Even Rome and Naples were badly shaken, and several persons were killed in the latter city.

Premier Mussolini promptly took command of the situation and rescue and relief measures were put into effect quickly throughout the devastated region, the Red Cross and the army with hosts of physicians and nurses, being hurried to the scene. Pope Pius ordered that aid be sent to places in urgent need and a relief fund held in readiness by the Vatican. Though southern Italy was thronged with tourists, it was believed there were no casualties among the Americans there.

Two days after the earthquake a tornado swept over the Venice district, killing a dozen persons and causing heavy damage over a stretch of 25 miles.

GERMANY also had its disaster, vastly less in magnitude but sucking enough. During the celebration in Coblenz of the evacuation of the Rhineland, in which President von Hindenburg was the central figure, a pontoon bridge across the Moselle collapsed and about 80 men, women and children were precipitated into the river. Many of them were killed by the falling timbers and many others drowned. The bodies of 33 were recovered and it was feared more might be found by divers. The celebrations, which had been going on rally for several days, were brought to an end by the calamity.

OVER in England there was an airplane disaster made notable by the prominence of the victims. A Junkers air liner en route from France to Croydon blew up near Gravesend and its six occupants were killed. They were the marquess of Dufferin and Ava; Viscountess Ednam, a noted beauty and close friend of the prince of Wales; Sir Edward Ward; Mrs. Henrik Loeffler, well known social woman; Lieut. Col. George L. P. Henderson, the pilot, who was rated as one of England's best flyers, and Charles Shearing, second pilot.

THAT London naval treaty is now in effect so far as American action goes. The senate by a vote of 58 to 9, ratified the pact, and next day President Hoover signed it with the gold pen used by the American delegates to the conference to sign the treaty in London. The document was then sent to London, where parliament was engaged in giving the pact its approval.

In a formal statement President Hoover said: "It is a matter of satisfaction that this great accomplishment in international relations has at all steps been given united support of both our political parties."

"With the ratification by the other governments the treaty will translate an emotion deep in the hearts of millions of men and women into a practical fact of government and international relations. It will renew again the faith of the world in the moral forces of good will and patient negotiation as against the blind forces of suspicion and competitive armament. It will secure the full defense of the United States. It will mark a further long step toward lifting the burdens of militarism from the backs of mankind and to speed the march forward of world peace. It will lay the foundations upon which further constructive reduction in world arms may be accomplished in the future. We should by this act of willingness to join with others in limiting armament have dismissed from the mind of the world any notion that the United States entertains ideas of aggression, imperial power, or exploitation of foreign nations."

Immediately after the ratification by the senate, the President asked for the names of those who voted in opposition. These were: Bingham of Connecticut, Hale of Maine, Johnson of California, Moses of New Hampshire, Odell of Nevada, Pine of Oklahoma and Robinson of Indiana, all Republicans; and McKellar of Tennessee and Walsh of Massachusetts, Democrats.

FIVE senators from wheat states—Capper, Allen, McMaster, Howell and Pine—called on Chairman Legge of the federal farm board in Washington and again urged that the board adopt Capper's plan and buy a lot more wheat in the effort to boost the price. Once more Mr. Legge refused, declaring the scheme would be at best only a temporary expedient and in the long run would make the wheat problem worse. He declared the board, which has 60,000,000 bushels on its hands, would not purchase any more at this time and would sell none until the price advanced.

"What we want," said Mr. Legge, "is something permanent. Stabilization will work admirably on seasonal surpluses, but it cannot be used on an accumulative surplus. We have had an accumulative surplus in wheat for four years. Stabilization will not cure it. I don't say stabilization is a failure, but it won't work at the present time. To follow Senator Capper's plan would only encourage the farmers in Kansas to raise more wheat and make a bad situation worse."

In Kansas the wheat problem is having powerful effect in the gubernatorial primary campaign. Governor Reed, who attacks the farm board plan for reduction of wheat acreage, is up for renomination by the Republicans and is opposed by Frank Hauke of Council Grove, a farmer, who upholds Legge's plan.

DETROIT, which has won an enviable reputation as a vice center in recent years, has begun to clean house. Charles Bowles, who was serving his second term as mayor, was ousted from office last week in a special recall election, the majority against him being 30,956. When Bowles took office last year he appointed as public works commissioner one Joseph Gillespie who had been forced out as police commissioner in 1918, when vice conditions in Detroit were especially bad. Under Bowles, the newspapers declared, gambling houses and speakeasies began running wide open and Police Commissioner Harold Emmons was said to be afraid to close them. Finally, while Mayor Bowles was attending the Kentucky derby, Emmons did raid some places, and the mayor thereupon ousted him.

Under the law a new election to fill the mayor's place must be held within 30 days of the filing of the certified returns of the recall election. Under the law Bowles is automatically a candidate for re-election and any other candidates may go on the ballot by presenting nominating petitions signed by 14,000 voters.

Only a few hours after the Detroit voters had put Bowles out of office, Gerald Buckley, a radio announcer who had been delivering addresses describing vice conditions in Detroit and criticizing the mayor's administration, was shot to death in the lobby of a hotel by three men who escaped. This was the eleventh gang murder in the city in nineteen days. Governor Reed ordered the state police to investigate the crime independently and said he would call out the state troops, if necessary, to stop the assassinations. There were points of similarity between the murder of Buckley and that of Jake Lingle, the Chicago reporter. It was asserted Buckley had been the intimate friend of underworld characters, and the Detroit police said they had in their possession an affidavit purporting to show that he had been extorting money from bootleggers.

CLAUDIUS HUSTON, after conferring with President Hoover, announced that he would resign as chairman of the Republican national committee on August 7. This greatly relieved the leaders of the party, who had insisted on Mr. Huston's retirement because of revelations made before the senate lobby committee.

DEMOCRATS of Iowa in state convention adopted a plank in their platform calling for "a reasonable definition" of what constitutes intoxicating liquor and advocating a nationwide referendum on prohibition. The reason for this stand, the resolution says, is the "nation-wide scandal" brought about by dry law enforcement methods. In this way the Democrats accepted the challenge of the Republican state convention, which voted down a resolution urging modification of the prohibition law.

RIOING by the Egyptian Wafdist was renewed last week in Cairo and Port Said, and there were a number of deaths in the battles with the police and troops. Up to date the British had not intervened.

GLENN H. CURTISS, a distinguished pioneer in aviation, died suddenly in a Buffalo hospital at the age of fifty-two years. He was operated on recently for appendicitis and was thought to be well on the road to recovery. Mr. Curtiss was one of the foremost aviation experimenters and was ranked next to the Wright brothers. He retired from active business shortly after the World War, retaining directorships in several companies that bear his name.

Another well-known American who passed away was James Eds. How, "millionaire hobo," who during his life had spent a large fortune in trying to help the hoboes, denying himself even sufficient food and clothing and other necessities of life. He died in a hospital at Stanton, Va.

Harry S. Black, chairman of the United States Realty and Improvement corporation and known as the "spirit in the modern growth" of New York city and the construction of many of its greatest buildings, committed suicide by shooting at his country home at Lloyd Harbor, Long Island. He had been in poor health for a long time.

The production of quality cream will be discussed and demonstrated to the farmers of Alabama during farmers' week at the Alabama Polytechnic Institute July 28-Aug. 2.

Land of Sagas

Typical "Row House" of Rural Iceland.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

ICELAND'S celebration this summer of the thousandth anniversary of the organization of her popular assembly, the Althing, finds a country that has advanced like the rest of the world in its chief city, but has retained the simple life in its rural districts. So simple is rural life that in many parts of the island the villages and farms are not connected by roads; only trails exist, and all travel is done on pony back.

The island's one sizable city is Reykjavik, the capital. Of the 104,000 people in Iceland, about 25,000 live in Reykjavik.

Politics was responsible for the first settlement in Iceland, and fish brought about its development. Ingolf and Hjalreid, two disgruntled chiefs of Norway who refused to acknowledge Harald Haafager, the first Norwegian king, settled on the southern shore of the island in 871 A. D. When the value of the fishing grounds found by these pioneers became known, a number of Scandinavian settlements came into existence.

To the visitor approaching by water, Reykjavik's commercial aspect conceals all evidence of the fact that this city has been the capital of Iceland since 1800 and its seat of learning. Scores of fishing craft and commercial vessels, battered by the sea and in need of paint, dot the anchorage. The quays are lined with warehouses, and here and there along the shore are cod-drying grounds, white with slabs of fish. Anchored vessels may be seen filling their holds with alternate layers of fresh fish and salt, thus preserving the fish for a quick trip to northern European ports.

Scenes in Reykjavik.

After one lands, however, and enters the city, commerce is no longer dominant. Broad streets are lined with rather gaudily painted wooden and corrugated iron houses. Along the streets American automobiles dart.

The Asturvollur, the city square, is the center of interest in Reykjavik. Facing it is the great stone house in which the thousand-year-old Althing meets every two years. On another side is the cathedral, built of stone, but with a tower of wood. It was built in 1847. In the center of the square is a statue of Thorvaldsson, famous sculptor of Iceland. This statue was a gift from the city of Copenhagen in 1874.

In another part of the city are the buildings of the Iceland university, which was only recently established—1911. In the same section are the museum and library, the latter housing 80,000 books and manuscripts. In the museum is a collection of Icelandic antiquities, geological specimens, and objects of industrial art.

A unique feature of the capital city is its public laundry of naturally heated water from hot springs that were once geysers.

Because of the lack of roads in many parts of the island all the travel is done on pony back. But out from Reykjavik, Akureyri, and even smaller towns, roads are reaching farther and farther; and Icelanders visit the day—many of them not without sadness—when the pony will lose his all important place in the Icelandic transportation system, and when automobiles will howl along over a network of highways that penetrates even the seared volcanic wastes of the interior.

Farming and fishing are the chief industries. Forty-seven thousand sheep and land pools are raised, chiefly for export, and the sheep number about 800,000. During the short summer season many vegetables can be raised, but the potatoes grow only to the size of walnuts.

Its Ancient Sagas.

Iceland is the land of the Sagas, the oldest literature of Europe, of which Sir Rider Haggard says: "Too ample, too prolix, too crowded with detail, they cannot vie in art with the epics of Greece; but in their pictures of life, simple and heroic, they fall beneath no literature in the world, save the Iliad and the Odyssey alone."

The language in use today in the same as the ancient language of all Scandinavian countries, the Icelanders alone having preserved it, chiefly due to the remoteness of their island.

Since December 1, 1918, Iceland has been recognized as an independent state, united with Denmark only through the identity of the sovereign. The island is about 810 miles long from east to west and 190 miles long from north to south, with an area of 40,000 square miles.

Historic House Rebuilt.

For Iceland's millennial celebration an early icelandic house that was burned 819 years ago was reconstructed. The new house duplicates, as nearly as possible, the historic home of one of Iceland's greatest lawyers—Njal. He was learned in the voluminous and technical law of Viking Iceland before William the Conqueror brought the English jury system to England on the end of a Norman spear.

Iceland has rebuilt Njal's home because the fame of his legal skill, together with the story of his death amid melodramatic scenes, has been preserved in one of the most cherished of Icelandic sagas, "The Story of Burnt Njal." The saga came into being eleven years after Lief Ericson's journey from Greenland to American shores, which was in the year 1000 A. D.

The appearance of many Viking houses resembled a street of modern row-houses in eastern United States and seaboard cities. The triangular Viking gable ends ranging in a line suggested a series of cottages shoulder to shoulder, but each Viking gable roof usually sheltered a single room. The whole sprawling Viking house of many gables was connected by a narrow hall that linked the rooms in the same way that covered passages link up the many buildings of a New England farmhouse. Turf often roofed the Viking's house, and in spring he lived beneath a carpet of wild flowers.

Leading men of the island, such as Njal, usually had one high-roofed, large hall in their houses. This hall had three divisions lengthwise: a nave and two low side aisles separated by low stone walls. The high roof of the nave was supported by two lines of wooden pillars brought over stormy seas from Norway in the small Viking ships. This hall was a sleeping, eating and living room for the chief and his retainers. Some of these halls, which served as eating, living and sleeping rooms, were very large. One in Iceland was 200 feet long and 60 feet wide.

Down the center of the hall was one long fireplace. The smoke from the fire found its way out through holes cut high up in the roof. Benches for the family, servants and retainers ran along each side of the long fireplace. In the low-roofed aisles parallel to the long axis of the hall were bunks for sleeping. These bunks usually had swinging doors which locked on the inside so that the sleeper could lock himself in his compartment.

Such a house was burned down over Njal's head. Njal had been too successful in the Icelandic courts. He knew Icelandic law so well he could repeat it all from memory. So he, his sons, and his friends and servants were attacked by a rival gang. With spears and battle axes they beat off the attackers who finally set fire to a haystack which in turn fired the house. Women and children were permitted to go out safely, except Berghora, Njal's wife, who chose to stay with her husband. Njal himself was too old to fight so he and Berghora lay down together, covered themselves with an ox hide and awaited their fate.

Five Billion Appropriations To Meet Hoover Budget Called "Riot of Extravagance."

Washington, July 31.—More than $5,000,000,000 was appropriated by the special session and the first regular session of the existing Congress to keep the wheels of the Hoover administration turning, according to a review by Representative Joseph W. Byrns (Democrat, Tennessee). This is $459,003,062.24 more than the appropriations made at the last session of the Seventieth Congress. It is also $23,785,185.61 less than the President and his budget director asked Congress to appropriate, according to Mr. Byrns, who is the ranking minority member of the Appropriations Committee.

The figures for the first regular session are $4,924,929,233.16; for the special session $199,310,597.12, amounting to $5,124,239,830.28.

In addition to the amounts appropriated, the present Congress authorized future appropriations amounting approximately to $1,000,000,000.

Governmental expenditures today, Mr. Byrns points out, twelve years after the war, are within a few hundred millions of what they were three years after the war when the country was still maintaining troops in Europe and paying huge hang-over war expenses.

"Recently the President seems to have become aroused to the fact that appropriations are increasing under his administration to an unprecedented extent," Mr. Byrns says in his review. "Two White House statements were issued calling attention to the necessity for retrenchment and saying that unless there was retrenchment it would be necessary to increase taxes or issue bonds to meet the cost of government. Whether intended or not, these statements left the country under the impression that Congress was entirely to blame for this situation. This is by no means the true picture. The President himself is primarily responsible. Not a dollar has been appropriated or authorized which had not previously received his approval and that of his budget director."

Mr. Byrns epitomizes the reasons for these increases, saying: "Since Mr. Hoover entered upon the Presidency there has been a complete reversal in the attitude of the Republican administration and Congress toward the expenditure of public money. From a semblance of economy under Mr. Coolidge, which was considered by many at that time a mere gesture, the government has indulged in what may well be termed a riot of extravagance."

Senator Borah in a speech in the Senate, Jan. 18, 1919:—Whatever may be the great ability of Mr. Hoover, there is one individual who he does not know exists in this country, and that is the taxpayer. He seems to think that money comes like manna to the children of Israel from Heaven and not from the sweat and toil and sacrifice of the people.

Farmers Relieved

Washington, July 31.—A summing up of farm relief by the present and previous administration is thus set forth by the Louisville Times (Dem.):

"The Federal Farm Board, child of the present administration, has relieved the farmer of any illusion he may have had as to its helpfulness.

"The tariff bill, which the present administration is responsible, has relieved the farmer of his watch and chain, in cases in which he still had his watch and chain, and will get his shirt and shoes.

"Improvement of credit facilities, altruistically promoted by a previous administration, had relieved the farmer, in many cases, of his farm, or a valuable equity therein, before the Hoover administration began relieving him."

Another possible method of farm relief is suggested by the Times: "The farmer whose land is where a country club would like to establish a golf course, or where the president of a tariff-subsidized town plant, works, mill or factory would like to plant his surplus and create a reputation for baronial hospitality, may be relieved, by getting an offer which will cause him to say, under his breath, almost incredulously, in solitude, behind the barn, when pinching himself to see if he is awake: 'The gol darned fool!'"

From a speech by Herbert Hoover at New York City, Oct. 22, 1928:—If their (the Democrats) agricultural relief program means anything, it means that the government shall directly or indirectly buy and sell and fix prices of agricultural products.

What does the Farm Relief Act, which you approved, Mr. President, under which Chairman Legge of the Farm Board, whom you appointed, has bought 60,000,000 bushels of wheat and is now selling for export (at a loss), with the reported promise to buy more to take its place after having tried and failed to "peg" and fix the price—what Mr. President, does all this mean, if it means anything?

From The "Goat" Belt

Max and Louis Levand, publishers of the Wichita (Kans.) Beacon, to Chairman Legge of the Farm Board: (Telegram.) "Since you say you are through and the best you can do is to advise farmers of Kansas to 'sit tight,' we ask you to resign."

Chairman Legge to group of newspaper men at Amarillo, Texas. (via Associated Press, July 11): "You may present my compliments to Max and Louis and please tell them that I said they can go to hell."

Mr. Hoover's Formidable Contract In Re Prosperity.

Washington, July 31.—Commenting upon the policy of the Republican party to raise the hopes and expectations of the people by specious promises, the New York Times thus comments:

"Every reasoning man sees the injustice of holding President Hoover responsible for the business depression, the low price of wheat and the persistence of unemployment on a great scale. Yet, politically speaking, there is a certain rude justice in it. For Mr. Hoover went along with his party in 1928 promising a steady march of prosperity in the United States if a Republican President were elected, and quietly assuming that it would be within the power of the Government to prevent any slackening of trade or crippling of commerce or financial embarrassment of any kind. He even went so far as to speak confidently of the entire abolition of poverty, ultimately, in this country. This was entering into a formidable contract, and when the party of the second part began to demand specific performance, it necessarily meant the mortification and distress for the party of the first part which are now visible at Washington. The whole has been a costly lesson for this nation and promises to carry with it heavy

Billingsley News

Rev. R. C. Eason of Eclectic delivered two interesting and helpful sermons Sunday at the Baptist church.

The countless friends of Mr. W. A. Gandy will be sorry to learn of his continued illness.

Dr. and Mrs. E. H. Downs were called to Birmingham Sunday by the illness of their son-in-law, Mr. J. A. Boozer, who is in St. Vincent's Hospital.

Miss Margaret Hall of Birmingham was the visitor of Misses Inez and Willie Jeanne Patrick last week.

Miss Hall was a very popular student among her many friends at Alabama college the past year.

Lucille and William Higgins Pattillo are visiting Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Harrell at Rayburn Gap, Ga.

Mrs. Alvin Turner of Heflin and Mr. Melton Turner of Roanoke are visiting relatives here.

Mrs. A. N. Hall and daughters, Mrs. Arthur Adams, Mrs. F. E. Glover, and Miss Sarah Louise Hall, of Kansas City, Mo., are visiting relatives here.

Mrs. Reedy and son of Plantersville were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Gandy last week.

Mrs. B. W. Thompson and Miss Mabel King spent Saturday afternoon in Clanton shopping.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnnie Williams of Selma spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Williams.

Mrs. J. C. Hughes is visiting Mrs. Willis Lawrence of Eoline. While there she will attend the revival at the Baptist church.

Mr. A. G. Thompson of Bessemer is spending his vacation with relatives here.

Miss Willie Jeanne Patrick left Tuesday for Tuscaloosa and Northport where she will spend several days with friends and relatives.

Representatives from each of the W. M. U. organizations attended the Quarterly meeting at Indian Grave last Wednesday. Mrs. Ida Stallworth of Tuscaloosa gave the inspirational address, and also spoke on R. A. Work in the afternoon.

political penalties for the Republican party; but perhaps, as Mr. Coolidge has said in the case of the unhappy failure of the Farm Board, the demonstration has been worth the price."

This (the Farm Board's policy) is the gospel of despair.—Governor Clyde Reed, of Kansas.

President Hoover will make no speeches on his Western trip, it is announced. Certainly not; what could he find to talk about?

New Blood For State Capitol

The determination to get some new blood in the State Capitol was never more pronounced than it is today. Throughout the State, from the Gulf to the Tennessee Valley, east and west, it is the same—the voters have decided to put some new faces in the state offices at Montgomery.

In connection with this it is quite pertinent that R. B. (Bob) Vail is the only candidate for Secretary of State who does not hold a state job. Both his opponents have long held state jobs—one of them for eleven years and one for 23 years. One of his opponents, an appointee of the present administration, has six other members of his family holding state jobs. Democrats have never endorsed that sort of thing. And in voting for Bob Vail for Secretary of State they will say "we do not endorse it now."

Bob Vail has worked twenty years for the cause and principles of Democracy. He is a newspaper editor and has thrown himself and his paper into the fight for Democracy in every campaign. He lives in a county that has a strong and very active Republican party, where the Democrats must fight every election. Bob Vail has always done his part for the Democratic party and without hope of reward. (This is the first time he has ever asked the Democrats of the state for any consideration.) On the other hand, his opponents, both have long plucked the fruits of Democratic success, and with newly-made and unproven records of party loyalty and service. Bob Vail's Democracy has been proven through twenty years of service. He is not a Democrat "for what's in it."

In announcing himself as a "one-term candidate" for Secretary of State Bob Vail strikes a new note in state politics. He boldly tells the voters of Alabama that he will not run for some office every time an election is held. That he will not be an aspirant for any state office at the expiration of his term. Neither of his two opponents pledge themselves to thus observe the Constitution in spirit as well as in letter. His opponent's records indicate that they would like to hold public office a lifetime. For many years they held public jobs and their seeking more now can only mean they will go on seeking still more at each election. Someone else should have some consideration! There are plenty of good men in Alabama; there's no need to give all the offices to one family, nor to one man. A vote for Bob Vail is a vote to uphold the state constitution in spirit as well as in letter: it is a vote against the making of political rings and a vote against an office holder being tempted to misuse his office in order to perpetuate himself in office.

Bob Vail is clean, sober, trustworthy, and thoroughly qualified to fill the office of Secretary of State; vote for him and get one less politician and one more business man in office. Remember, it's R. B. (Bob) Vail, candidate for Secretary of State, subject to the action of the Democratic Primary. Vote for him.

STATE CAPITOL NEWS

In the last three years there has been an increase of nearly seven million dollars in the annual disbursements from the State Treasury for education, public health, Confederate pensions, child welfare, and eleemosynary and charitable institutions. For the fiscal year ending September 30, 1926, the State spent for the above purposes $9,075,216.83, while for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1929, the auditor's report shows that there was spent for the causes mentioned $15,897,145.98. This is an increase in three years of $6,821,929.15. So much has been said recently about the increase in the State's revenue that it should be of interest to note that there has been a tremendous increase in the disbursements for developing and conserving the human resources of the State.

The following figures show in detail the expenditures for the purposes listed above, for 1926 and for 1929.

Education: 1926, $6,181,243.36; 1929, $11,751,560.46.

Eleemosynary and charitable institutions: 1926, $1,239,599.47; 1929, $1,512,935.94.

Confederate pensions: 1926, $1,399,374.00; 1929, $1,992,149.00.

Public health: 1926, $205,000.00; 1929, $342,432.51.

Child welfare: 1926, $50,000.00; 1929, $98,068.07.

Total: 1926, $9,075,216.83; 1929, $15,897,145.98.

Eleemosynary and charitable institutions, as given above, include the State insane hospitals, the various State reform schools and training schools, the State school for the deaf and blind, and the Soldiers' Home. There was a notable increase in disbursements for the State School for the deaf and blind, from $150,240 in 1926 to $270,000 in 1929.

Every county in the State is receiving a tremendous increase in school money from the State Treasury in the last three years.

School money received by Chilton County from the State Treasury for the current year is $82,811, as compared with $54,748 in 1926, an increase of $28,063, or more than 50 per cent. Property tax payments by Chilton County into the State Treasury for 1929 show an increase over 1926 of $2,782.44. From these figures it will be seen that the increase in revenue received by this County from the State for educational purposes alone was more than ten times greater than the increase in property tax payments by the County to the State.

Former Newspaper Man Writes Views

Following is a letter from W. B. Corley, well known over the county as an old newspaper man:

Editor News:

Finally the rains have come, but the torrid heat doesn't seem to abate much. Young corn and cotton seems to have waked up and taken a new lease on life, with a promise of a fair yield if the drop falls right from now on. The old corn looks pitiful, like some of us old folks. It has tried to straighten up, and clean and brighten up its foliage, but the tassels are parched relics and the poor little "shoots" have a few faded silks that rattle and fly away in dust if you touch them. It's day has gone and it can only dry up and pass away, while it observes the antics of the younger crop. Ain't it just like folks?

Cotton went to 11 cents in New York the other day and that may be what spurred up the plants, trying to make up in quantity what the sharks robbed it of in value. But that won't help any, for that gang up there will fix the price, over and over again, to meet any crop that may materialize. Nobody, short of God can handle those fellows, and I expect, He would have to get real rough with them before they would sit up and take notice.

I live in about 20 feet of the Birmingham and Montgomery Highway and I can see something like a mile of it from my seat on the front porch, and believe me, it is an ever changing panorama of insights into human nature. One moment you will blush for shame at the cruel harshness and contempt man exhibits towards his fellows, then presently, your heart will thrill with thankfulness for the brotherhood of man still existing in a few of the species, as some noble gentleman halts his car and takes on board a weary boy or man who is bravely plodding along on foot seeking a job where he may labor for board for himself and perhaps a family left in want as he gamely started out on foot to wage the battle with poverty. I fully believe the Recording Angel keeps an accurate tab on these events, and in that future that faces us all, some very embarrassing questions may be asked along this line.

The American people are more cowardly than I have ever believed, or those who have shown on bloody fields of battle, if "fear of robbery is the real reason they refuse to aid a brother in need."

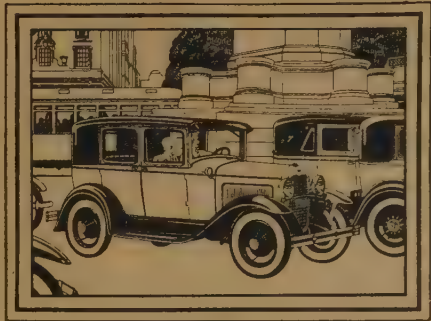

Did you ever stop to notice how rapidly these heavy freight and passenger trucks, that through this highway are destroying it? If they continue this traffic throughout the winter by next spring your splendid speedway will be only a memory, and holes, bogs and ditches will take its place. Your own common sense will prove this to you, if you will only stop a moment and think.

Why don't you paper men ever come out and tell us common folks who is going to be Senator, Governor and so on next time. Surely, you have the slate made up by now. "Let the cat out of the bag" and give us the dope.

I have the greatest respect for Judge Reynolds as a shrewd and successful campaigner and politician, but he seems a little off in his appeal to voters in The Union-Banner last week in speaking of a candidate for Sheriff, the only qualification that was required was strict loyalty to the entire ticket of the Republican party since its first introduction in the county. We would have supposed a candidate would be better qualified were he steady, sober, honest and able, more of a good citizen, than a politician, proven personal ability and fairness to all regardless of either religious or political creeds, would come nearer being my ideal for a sheriff.

Meeting the Needs of Millions of People

The low-priced automobile has brought greater opportunity and added hours of recreation to millions of men and women.

BECAUSE the automobile is such an important factor in the lives and prosperity of so many people, the purpose of the Ford Motor Company is something more than the mere manufacture of a motor car.

There is no service in simply setting up a machine or a plant and letting it turn out goods. The service extends into every detail of the business—design, production, the wages paid and the selling price. All are a part of the plan.

The Ford Motor Company looks upon itself as charged with making an automobile that will meet the needs of millions of people and to provide it at a low price. That is its mission. That is its duty and its obligation to the public.

The search for better ways of doing things is never-ending. There is ceaseless, untiring effort to find new methods and new machines that will save steps and time in manufacturing. The Ford plants are, in reality, a great mechanical university, dedicated to the advancement of industry. Many manufacturers come to see and share the progress made.

The greatest progress comes by never standing still. Today's methods, however successful, can never be taken as wholly right. They represent simply the best efforts of the moment. Tomorrow must bring an improvement in the methods of the day before. Hard work usually finds the way.

Once it was thought impossible to cast gray iron by the endless chain method. All precedent was against it and every previous experiment had failed. But fair prices to the public demanded that wasteful methods be eliminated. Finally the way was found.

A better way of making axle shafts saved thirty-six million dollars in four years. A new method of cutting crankcases reduced the cost by $500,000 a year. The perfection of a new machine saved a similar amount on such a little thing as one bolt. Then electric welding was developed to make many bolts unnecessary and to increase structural strength.

Just a little while ago, an endless chain conveyor almost four miles long was installed at the Rouge plant. This conveyor has a daily capacity of 300,000 parts weighing more than 2,000,000 pounds. By substituting the tireless, unvarying machine for tasks formerly done by hand, it has made the day's work easier for thousands of workers and saved time and money in the manufacture of the car.

All of these things are done in the interest of the public—so that the benefits of reliable, economical transportation may be placed within the means of every one,

Governor listed in the August 12, primary. If the voters tag him for the finish, Judge Locke will have to stir his stumps.

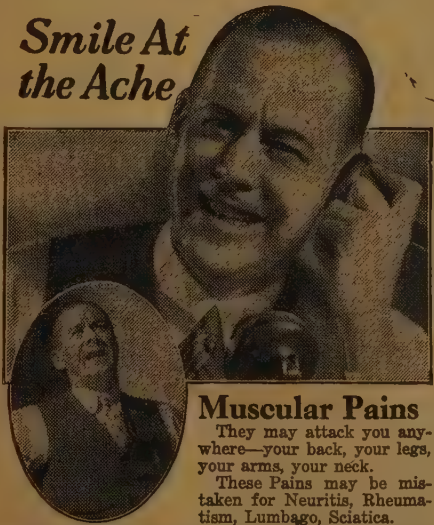

What is the reason that a candidate for Governor loads himself with so many impossible promises? The Governor is only an executive officer and can only do the things provided by law. He can neither make nor unmake a single law. The legislature does all the law making and the governor only carries them out.

Two Hours From Garden to Can

Canning String Beans in a Steam Pressure Canner.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Each year as the time approaches when the garden surplus must be cared for, the homemaker finds herself wondering whether there is any new and easier way to do her canning and yet have as good results as usual. According to the bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture, however, the same principles that have been advocated for the past four or five years are still essential for satisfactory home canning of fruits and vegetables. The most important points might be expressed in a few sentences:

"Two hours from garden to can" to insure fresh sound products.

Use the "hot pack" when possible so that the material at the center of the can will reach the necessary processing temperature more quickly. Nonacid vegetables are always more satisfactory if hot packed.

Can nonacid vegetables under steam pressure because they require sterilization at a higher temperature than that of boiling water (212 degrees F.).

Before beginning any canning, it is well to send to the department for Farmers' Bulletin 1471-F, "Canning Fruits and Vegetables at Home," and read it carefully. In addition to a clear explanation of the reasons behind the various recommendations made, the bulletin gives time tables for a number of fruits and tomatoes, which may be canned by the water-bath method, and for most common vegetables, for which the steam pressure canner should be used. The reason why the steam pressure canner is necessary for string beans, peas, corn and other nonacid vegetables is this: The bacteria on these vegetables are very resistant to heat. Though these bacteria might be destroyed by six hours of processing at the temperature of boiling water (212 degrees F.), as in the water-bath canner, in the course of this long-continued boiling the flavor and texture of the vegetable itself is ruined. With the steam pressure canner a temperature of 240 degrees Fahrenheit can be obtained quickly at ten pounds pressure. At this high temperature bacteria cannot survive long, and the canned vegetables are easily processed to insure against spoilage without overcooking at the same time. In 30 to 60 minutes can be accomplished at 240 degrees Fahrenheit in the steam pressure canner what would take six hours of boiling at 212 degrees Fahrenheit. The pressure canner is a time saver so far as the processing of all vegetables except tomatoes, pickled beets or other very acid mixtures are concerned.

A dish that is attractive and most tasty and one nice enough to serve on any occasion is:

Orange Jelly With Orange Custard.—Prepare a mold of orange jelly and when partly thickened beat well until light and foamy. Turn into a fancy mold and chill. Unmold and serve with:

Orange Custard.—Take two large oranges and arrange the sections in a serving dish. Scald a pint of milk in a double boiler and pour over four egg yolks beaten with four tablespoons of sugar, flavor with a half teaspoonful of the grated rind of the orange, add a pinch of salt and cook until the mixture coats the spoon. Cool, add the orange sections and pour around the unmolded jelly when serving.

Orange-Cherry Frozen Salad.—Soak a tablespoonful of gelatin in two tablespoonfuls of cold water and dissolve over hot water. Whip one cupful of heavy cream, add one-fourth cup of powdered sugar, one tablespoonful of lemon juice and one cupful of mayonnaise. Mix well and fold in one and one-half cups of orange sections and one-half cupful of chopped maraschino cherries. Pour into a mold and pack in layers of ice and salt, or put in the tray of an iceless refrigerator and chill until firm. Serve garnished with crisp hearts of lettuce.

Combination Fruit Salad.—Take one cupful of orange sections, one small can of diced pineapple, one banana cut into small pieces and one cupful of halved strawberries. Mix very carefully with mayonnaise to which three times the bulk is whipped cream and serve in lettuce cups topped by a whole strawberry.

Lemon Cream Sherbet.—Mix together one and one-third cups of sugar, one cupful of strained lemon juice, then add one pint of milk and a pint of this cream. Turn into the freezer and freeze. Serve in sherbet glasses; garnish with a sprig of frosted mint. Dip the mint into white of egg and then into granulated sugar, or powdered may be used if it is preferred.

With the fresh fruits and berries so plentiful each in its season, one may have variety with nearly every meal.

Blackberry Pie.—Line a plate with plain crust. Take two and one-half cups of fresh blackberries, sprinkle with three-fourths of a cupful of sugar, a few grains of salt, two tablespoonfuls of flour, and add two tablespoonfuls of currant jelly previously whipped with a fork. Turn into the pastry lined plate, moisten the rim with water and cover with a top crust of rich pastry. Flute the rim and bake thirty-five minutes in a hot oven at first, then reduce the heat and finish baking.

Fairy Tale for the Children

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

He had just met a new friend—the little boy adventurer whose name was David.

He wondered what the name of his friend might be and he had therefore just asked him.

The friend had told him that his name was Compass.

He seemed very pleased about his name, and as David asked him more questions Compass repeated his name once more.

"Yes, my name is Compass, and I always get the head and tail of everything. You know some ever do. They say they can't see the head or tail of anything. But I do because I make it a rule to always keep myself well brushed up on the four most important points, North, East, South and West.

"Beautiful earth, isn't it?" he asked suddenly. "You've no idea how much I'm attracted by it."

He seemed very much excited about this. "Yes, the earth attracts me and it is responsible for making me point with my head to the north and my feet to the south, while to the right of me is always the east and to the left of me is always the west."

"I keep in touch, too, with what is going on, for you may have heard that the first letters of the four points I the sun. I don't want to claim all the glory. Can't, for that matter, anyway.

"The midday sun is south of where you live and it casts its shadows toward the north."

"That is why, you know, the moss upon trees in your part of the world always grows so well on the north side of the trees."

"If you are ever lost in the woods, David, you can tell directions by seeing where the moss is. You know how people choose the cool part of the piazza—so do the mosses choose the cool part of trees."

"Of course there are always things we don't like about our jobs. I always have to look straight ahead and point to the north when I'm on duty. "No matter how much I should want to turn around and point south I couldn't do that."

"It would confuse people and I'd be a disgrace to the Compass family—I'd be considered a Compass of no use and of no value and a failure."

With that Compass was off and David watched him. He was facing the north but he held out his arms a little to either side as though to show that on the right he was pointing to the east and on the left he was pointing to the west and that back of him was the south.

"Good-by, Compass," David called.

"Good-by," Compass shouted. But he did not turn his head. He was on duty now.

Vegetables Liked With Roast Lamb

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Custom has placed special emphasis on two accompaniments to roast lamb—peas and mint sauce. But there is no rule, social, culinary, or dietary, requiring this combination, or preventing the use of other relishes and vegetables. Variety in the menus and contrast in flavor, color, and texture are assured by changing occasionally to other combinations, says the bureau of home economics, United States Department of Agriculture.

Vegetables which in themselves are pronounced in flavor are especially appropriate with a roast of lamb. The same is true of lamb chops, stuffed breast of lamb, and other lamb dishes. In a lamb stew, onion, green pepper, and turnip, all having decided flavor of their own, give zest to the meat flavor. And when roast lamb is reheated there is the fine and unusual relish obtained by making a curry sauce.

For the roast relishes like currant jelly, spiced preserves and pickles, and horseradish sauce are all good, in addition to any vegetables served. English cooks sometimes have caper sauce or mint sauce, both of which are made with vinegar to give a pleasant mild acidity of flavor. American cooks seem to like their mint occasionally in the form of a green-colored jelly made from apple pectin and flavored with mint, or as mint gelatin served as a salad or a garnish.

Separate Jacket Holds Popularity

By JULIA BOTTOMLEY

A vogue which has been flourishing since early spring and which is scheduled to carry over through midseason and into early fall, with even greater emphasis, is that of the separate jacket or short coat which gaily contrasts the dress over which it is worn. Throughout the advance fall showings the theme is being interpreted in versatile ways.

Just now jackets in bright red are quite the thing worn over white sports dresses or those of natural colored shantung. The costume in the picture is typical. This outdoor ensemble which tops a white frock with a vivid red jacket is made of a hemburg material especially woven for sports wear. The dress is very simple, to all appearances, but it asserts its chic in such style-convinced details as a fitted-at-the-hipline skirt which develops wide box pleating at the hemline, also the square-cut neckline finished with a soft-felt bow at one side. The gown has short sleeves which is really much smarter than sleeveless. Take note of the narrow red suede belt, the red heels on the white kid pumps, the white beret with a flange made of the same fabric as the dress, and the white washable pull-on gloves, for these are all items which merge into a unit of ultra modishness.

Jackets of most every color will enliven the autumn landscape. A sprightly effect is that of the orange-color coats worn over the dress of primrose yellow, and then there are those lovely pastel combinations such as a jacket in Paton pink with the frock of hyacinth blue. Bright navy blue with white, the navy coat cut along nautical lines, is ever so popular. Usually the white shoes boast trimming touches which repeat the gay tone of the jacket.

Those little paletots which are creating such a furore this season being so amusingly quaint and old-fashioned, are awfully smart. For these, velveteen is a favorite medium, tuned in coloring to the dress with which it is worn. For instance a brown and yellow print dress calls for a paletot of solid brown velveteen; if the paletot be fitted in basque-like form, if the sleeves be nothing more or less than shoulder-cap flaps over the arm, so much the better, for it is the novelty of the thing which counts.

Lesson for August 3

NAOMI AND RUTH: A STUDY IN RACIAL RELATIONSHIPS

LESSON TEXT.—The Book of Ruth, GOLDEN TEXT.—And hath made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth.

PRIMARY TOPIC.—Ruth a Hebraic Daughter.

JUNIOR TOPIC.—Naomi's Faithfulness Leads Ruth to God.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC.—Our Neighbors of Other Races.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC.—The Way to World Brotherhood.

I. How Naomi and Ruth Were Brought Together (1:1-15).

On account of famine in Bethlehem of Judah, Naomi with her husband and two sons sojourned in the land of Moab. After the death of her husband, her two sons married Moabite women. After a time her sons died also. After the death of her sons, Naomi resolved to return to her homeland, having heard that the Lord had visited his people in giving them bread. They went to Moab to escape trouble but only got into more. This is always the case when God's people go into the world to escape difficulties. It was not until Naomi was chastised that she resolved to return. When the time came for her to go, Ruth and Orpah accompanied her for a distance.

II. Ruth's Noble Choice (1:16-18).

Greatly as Naomi loved her daughters-in-law, she would not have them go into this matter blindly. She wished them to know the seriousness of their action.

1. No chance for them to marry again (v. 11).

Naomi told them that she had no more sons for whom they could wait. In that day for a woman to be unmarried was the greatest disgrace. Society differed then from now. No avenues were open by which women could earn their living.

2. Heathen gods must be renounced (v. 15).

Idolatrous worship could not be carried on in the land where God's people dwell. This was delicately touched upon when Orpah went back. She went back when it was plain that there was no chance for her to get a husband. After Orpah's return Naomi put an additional test upon Ruth, that of giving up her religion. Ruth was equal to the occasion. Her mind was fully made up. She was willing to accept as her God the One who was able to produce in his subjects the nobility of character she had observed in Naomi. Ruth's determination was so definite and unflinching that her expressions have come down to us in words which "no poetry has outwitted and no pathos has exceeded, and which has gone through centuries with the music which will not let them be forgotten." She was determined to share Naomi's journey, her home, her lot in life, and grave in death, whatever or wherever that would be. To crown it all, she renounced her heathen gods and worshiped Jehovah, the true God.

III. Blessings Which Attended Ruth's Choice.

1. She found the true God (1:16).

Instead of a heathen god who was unable to help her, she had the Living God, the God of Israel.

2. She found friends (ch. 2).

As she went to glean she was led to the field of Boaz, a man of grace and wealth. The servants of Boaz treated her with consideration.

3. A good husband and happy home (ch. 3 and 4).

4. An honored place in the Israelite nation (4:13-17).

5. She became a link in the chain of the Redeemer's ancestry (4:18-22 of Matt. 1:5).

The one who fully decides for Christ and gives up all for Him shall receive a hundredfold in this life and in the world to come eternal life.

The story of Ruth is a fine example, first, of right racial relationship. The union of Ruth with Israel was around the true God. And, second, of dispensational truth:

(1) The famine in the land indicates the testing of the Jews in the great tribulation.

(2) The going into Moab indicates the sojourn of the Israelites among the nations.

(3) The sickness and death in Moab indicates the chastisement of the Jews and their sorrows in the present age.

(4) The return to the land indicates the gathering of Israel to their own land, Palestine.

(5) Ruth's decision indicates the gathering of the Gentiles through the influence of the Jews.

(6) The marriage between Boaz and Ruth indicates the union of the church with Jesus Christ.

Add Charm to Character

Small kindnesses, small courtesies, small considerations, habitually practiced in our social intercourse, give a greater charm to the character than the display of great talents and accomplishments.—Kelly.

Sleeveless Garments Liked by Small Boys

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A small boy likes sleeveless garments on hot days as much as his sister does. Boys of any size will wear their sleeveless jerseys or bathing suits all day long, if allowed to do so. Most children under six, how-

Eradicate Roaches

The standard remedy for eradicating cockroaches is sodium fluoride dust sprinkled in the cracks and crevices. A dust gun or blower is the most effective method of application. The roaches come out, die in a few hours, and may then be swept up and disposed of. Sodium fluoride is poisonous to humans as well, so is handled with care.

GRABBED THE MACE

John Beckett, a left-wing labor member for Camberwell, England, was responsible for the worst scene witnessed in the English parliament in 300 years when he seized the golden mace—symbol of parliamentary authority—from the table before the speaker's chair. Hoisting it across his shoulder with the cry "Mr. Speaker, it's a d—d disgrace!" he marched toward an exit. The indignity to the prestige of the house shocked the members and they booed and hooted the offender and later suspended him by a vote of 320 to 4.

June Marriages and Luck

This is a relic of Roman superstition and mythology. "Good to the man and happy to the maid when married in June," was a proverb of Rome. Juno, the wife of Jupiter, was not only the guardian of the female sex from birth to death but also the patroness of happy marriages. The month of June was named after Juno, whose festival was held on the calends of that month. May was named after the goddess Maia; and that month is regarded as unpropitious for marriages by the superstitious. —Pathfinder Magazine.

THE SUMMER GIRL

The summer girl is with us again, more bewitching than ever, if such a thing be possible. No mere man could describe how she gets that way, least of all the typewriter pounder who writes this page.

But we have run across a little dissertation on the subject by an expert in matters feminine which may be of interest, especially to the summer girl herself, so we pass it along:

"Her summer wardrobe is made up of little frocks, simple affairs of cotton or linen, or of the less formal silks that she slips over her head and ties in the middle. Her favorite hat is a beret. Linen overalls with straps crossed in back, basket-weave coat with belt stitched in cotton pique suit with handkerchief linen blouse, French hand-made lingerie blouse with cotton pique skirt—these are some of the clever little outfits with which the 1930 summer girl or woman—and all women are girlish nowadays—enhances her attractiveness and finds comfort all day long.

"Summer time calls for plenty of such clothes, and they are kept spic and span by means as modern as the summer girl herself. Spinner washers operated in the home wash the clothes clean, spin them dry and keep the wardrobe always ready for this lively summer recreation seeker. Her swimming suit needs little attention, but it is a business-like affair that really lets her swim. Her beach suit begins in nothing much and ends in trousers. All in all, the 1930 summer girl is delightfully healthy and devastatingly chic."

To which we may only add: All hail to the summer girl; long may she wave!

Washington Current Comment

Debates as to when the last shot of the Civil War was fired were terminated a short time ago by the accidental explosion of a Gettysburg bomb which has served for two generations as an article of household furniture. History that apparently is closed, often has to be revised in the light of the incidents of a remotely later day.

Colleges lately have disgorged their load of aspirants for noble and useful toil. The science of ventilation is recommended to those trained to enter it. An expert in that line states that drafts are dangerous now, as they always have been. He simply confirms what the casual observer has not failed to note: that in spite of complicated and costly appliances, the air can not be changed in a large room without discomfort. Ventilation is a field in which there is much soil that no plow share has turned.

The Federal Radio Commission finds exorbitant what it denominates an excess of broadcasting. The phrase "free as the air" seems indeed to have lost some of its force. A reader can make his own selection from a newspaper, but with the average radio set there is often no relief for the listener who has put up with overlapping discourses on garden seed when he prefers the fainter background program of fiddling.

Congressional Resolution No. 251 seeks to minimize the profits of war. This must be an idle and useless investigation. The only ones having the genuine inside information are those suspected of being profiteers—and they have always insisted that they were patriots of a high order, having an eye single to the country's good.

Much is being written about unemployment, its cause, and its remedy. Political conditions undoubtedly have considerable to do with lack of work, but the introduction of machines to take the place of nine thousand clerks in the Census Bureau shows that the constantly changing relation of the worker with respect to the work to be done, will continue to produce idleness until some new and rapid means of adjustment has been found, or until the hour arrives when the world ceases to advance.

A special correspondent points out that M. Briand's plan for a United States of Europe is not making much headway. The foundation stone for such a union is a thorough mutual understanding, and there can be no such understanding, certainly among the populace, in the absence of a common means of expression. Until structurally remote forms of speech, for instance Swedish and Italian, have fused into a single composite tongue, the language barrier, alone, will be sufficient to keep the United States of Europe a dream in the heads of hopeful statesmen.

England is up in arms over wormy apples, and has placed an embargo on certain grades of the American fruit. It may be that the worm that has given rise to overseas objections is the new tariff bill.

M. D. FOSHEE, Manager

A good business man will not buy a farm or any property without first looking it over to see what it is worth. However, some will buy or loan money on land without an abstract. Isn't it equally as foolish to buy a farm without looking it over as to buy it and not know whether the titles are good or not? Without an abstract you do not know where you are getting the land you look at or not. Before investing in land in any way have an abstract made and be safe.

Army Worm Appears In Alabama Fields

Auburn, Ala., July 31.—Reports to Professor J. M. Robinson, head of the department of entomology of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute, show that the fall army worm has appeared in Alabama. This worm attacks corn, sugarcane, soybeans, grasses, sorghum, and other crops and in the past has done much damage in the State. This year farmers at Headland, Oneonta, and Hamilton have found the insect in their fields.

It has also been found at Auburn and Professor Robinson believes that it is present in most counties, although only a few have reported.

This is an old insect and is controlled easily by poisoning, Professor Robinson said. A standard recommendation is a mixture of 1 pound of calcium arsenate and 9 pounds of hydrated lime dusted on crops being attacked by these worms. Arsenate of lead may be substituted for calcium arsenate.

"This is not the well-known cotton-leaf worm," said Professor Robinson. "So far as we know, the fall army worm does not attack cotton, but it does attack many other farm crops and unless it is controlled big damage may be done by it wherever it appears in large numbers."

Farmers are being advised to report outbreaks to their county agents and ask for information as to what to do.

Candidate for State Senator
Fifteenth Senatorial District, comprising the counties of Autauga, Chilton and Shelby—Subject to the Democratic Primary.

To the Voters of this, the 15th Senatorial District:

I wish to say that I shall greatly appreciate your vote and influence in this campaign. To those of you whom I have not had the pleasure of seeing personally, I wish at this time to express my regrets that I have been unable to do so, and to extend to you in advance, my sincere thanks for your support.

Just a personal word. My home is Prattville, Alabama, Autauga County. I have lived my entire life there. My business is General Insurance. I am also interested in a retail mercantile business in that city. I am a member of the Baptist Church, Masonic Fraternity, and The American Legion.

I entered this race of my own accord and am not lined up with, or in any way obligated to, any individual, clique, organization or corporation. I have only one promise to make any one, and that is, if elected I will serve the entire District to the very best of my ability.

I have no fight to make on anyone. I have conducted my campaign strictly on a high plane and will continue to do so, even in the face of wrongful accusations should any come in the heat of the campaign.

It has been called to my attention that some statements have been circulated to the effect that I will be too friendly with the corporate interests of the State. These statements are unfounded, as I absolutely have no corporate connections whatsoever, and have no other purpose in mind except to serve the entire people of my District, if I am elected to the State Senate. I think of corporations in a friendly manner, but at the same time they should bear their share of state taxation. Having never had and not now having any corporate connections they have no claim whatsoever on me, except to the extent of what is right, and, if elected to the State Senate, I shall at all times adhere, so far as I can, to the wishes of the majority of the people in my District who elected me, and shall see to it, so far as I can, that everyone gets a fair and square deal.

News In Brief

Ice cream in America is regarded as a food and the consumption exceeds 348,000,000 gallons a year.

Hourly earnings in manufacturing industries of the United States in 1929 averaged 58 cents, as compared with 57 cents in 1928, according to a study made public by the National Industrial Conference Board.

Farmers of Alabama planted almost as much cotton this year as last. It is estimated that 3,652,000 acres were planted this year, the percentage this year of last being 99.

Though the farmers of America constitute only 4 per cent of the farmers of the world, they produce 70 per cent of the world's corn, 60 per cent of the cotton, 25 per cent of the wheat, oats and hay, 13 per cent of the barley and 7 per cent of the potatoes.

New York City, the 1930 census reveals, has 320 farms within its limits. Most of the rustic areas within the borders of the metropolis lie in Queens Borough, which has 250 farms. Staten Island has 66 farms and Brooklyn 4. All raise truck crops.

Forest planting by all the principal agencies engaged in the work of reforestation in the United States last year restored to tree growth a total of 111,175 acres, records just completed by the Forest Service, United States Department of Agriculture, show.

Romance of Home Heating

By Jones Hardware Company

It isn't hard to imagine the joy with which primitive man must have greeted the discovery of fire, and the comparative protection from the rigors of winter which that discovery afforded.

But when we consider how home-heating methods have improved from the first campfire in front of a cave down to a modern heating appliance such as Estate Heatrola—there's a world of romance in the story.

The Fireplace

For centuries, man depended on the campfire in front of his cave or tent, or inside, with a hole in the roof to carry off the smoke. Then came the open fireplace, a very inefficient heating method—little more than a glorified camp fire, depending on radiant heat—which warmed the face and left the back freezing.

The Franklin Stove

Benjamin Franklin developed the first heating stove. It was, in effect, a grate or fireplace in the center of the room—with a hood over it to carry off the smoke. It was better than the fireplace, because it radiated heat in all directions.

Natural later developments were "cannon" stoves, and still later the oak stoves and base burners.

The Warm Air Furnace

The first real development in heating since man first discovered fire, was the warm-air furnace. For the first time, homes were heated without depending upon radiant heat. Air in the space between the heating unit and the casing was heated by contact with the hot surfaces, and circulated through the house.

The Heatrola

Employing the principle of warm-air circulation for the first time in a first-floor heating plant, The Estate Stove Company of Hamilton, Ohio, developed Estate Heatrola ten years ago. Many features, which we will gladly explain, account for the advantages of Heatrola over the basement furnace.

4 Charged In Passing Of $4,000 Fake Money

Federal Officers Claim Ring Of Counterfeiters Is Working In State

Birmingham, Ala., July 29.—Federal agents Tuesday were seeking a fifth man wanted in connection with the passing of counterfeit bills in Alabama and Florida following the arrest late Monday of four men at Cullman in connection with the operation of an alleged counterfeiting ring.

The bills, hand drawn imitations, have been passed intermittently for six years, federal officers say.

The men indicted by the recent federal Grand Jury and now under arrest are Andrew Ponder, John W. Ponder, Feltus Estes and Jimmy Burres.

Feltus Estes was released under bond of $5,000 Monday night following a preliminary hearing before United States Commissioner Charlton. The other three men, unable to make bond, are being held in the county jail.

The men arrested are charged by federal authorities with having been instrumental in the passing of a large number of worthless bills done in pen and ink by Walter L. Alfred, of Cullman, now serving an eight-year sentence in Alabama on counterfeiting charges filed against him in February.

Approximately $4,000 worth of counterfeit currency is known to have been passed by members in recent years. The money, which has been made in both the new and old style currency, has been of $10, $20 and $50 denominations with the $20 bills in the majority.

The bills are said by federal secret service men here to be nearly perfect. Pen and ink work has never been produced in this section in quantities comparable to Alfred's work, officers stated.

The arrest of the trio followed the passing of fake bills in Florida and Southern Alabama in February, after Alfred had already been jailed. A. L. Cannon, Jr., was arrested in February and is now serving a term in the penitentiary for the alleged passing of these bills.

Notes of $20 denominations began to show up again in Birmingham in 1928. Finally, in January, the bills were traced to Alfred, and he and Lonnie Cook, also of Cullman, were arrested and sentenced to eight and three years, respectively.

It was slightly later that the bills which ultimately led to the four arrests made Monday were passed in Florida, in payment for liquor, officers said. In their recent operations, the counterfeiters passed virtually all the bills on bootleggers in the alleged belief that violators of the prohibition law are in no position to obtain the arrests of others.

Mrs. Bean and Mrs. Mathews Joint Hostesses.

Mrs. Willie Bean and Mrs. C. D. Matthews were joint hostesses to Circle Number one of the W. M. S. of the Baptist church at the home of Mrs. Bean in West Clanton Monday afternoon. After the regular business meeting a delicious ice course was served to the following:

Mrs. C. V. Heath, Mrs. Ben Sims, Mrs. Charles Cox, Mrs. F. M. Connell, Mrs. Klinner, Mrs. J. P. Hayes, Mrs. Andrew Jones, Mrs. Charles Raspberry, Mrs. Ludié Lenoir, Mrs. Willie Bean, and C. D. Matthews.

Mrs. Alvie Smith of Birmingham is spending some time as the guest of her sister, Mrs. A. L. Robinson.

Mr. and Mrs. Leighton Gibson and children of Ensley were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Willie Bean Sunday.

Mr. H. R. Oden, of the Isabella community was in Clanton on business last Tuesday.

Miss Lurleen Minor of Montgomery spent Monday in Clanton as the guest of Miss Alma Allen.

Bill Minor of Montgomery was a visitor to Clanton Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Martel Brett and little daughter of Birmingham spent Sunday in Clanton with relatives. Mr. Brett is connected with The Birmingham News.

Mr. J. S. Atchison of near Jamison spent last week as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Brockmeyer in Ensley.

Mrs. M. Z. Atchison and children spent part of last week with Mr. and Mrs. Willie Hayes at Six Mile, Ala.

Mr. and Mrs. "Jockey" Elder of Montgomery were visitors to Clanton last Sunday.

duced at a cost that will enable its marketing in competition with corn starch. Alabama is one of the leading sweet potato producing states.

Starch of a superior quality has been made from sweet potatoes, but the cost heretofore has operated against its general use. The research work to be undertaken by the United States Bureau of Standards at Auburn is expected to determine whether the production cost can be reduced to a level that will make its commercial use possible.

The building of several Kraft paper mills in the state and the prevalence of suitable timber, it is understood, led to the selection of Alabama for the pulp experimental work. The University of Alabama, located near one of the paper mills, will cooperate in this work.

A little more than a year ago the Bureau of Standards, cooperating with the Swann companies, established an experiment station at Anniston to investigate the feasibility of producing commercial xylene from cottonseed hulls. Approximately 2,000 tons of xylene has been produced and furnished to American and European laboratories where further experiments are to be made with the view to utilizing it in the manufacture of products requiring sweetening. Xylose is a non-fattening sugar.

Theodore Swann, vice president of the Alabama Industrial Development Board, was largely instrumental in bringing the Bureau of Standards' research stations to Alabama, and it was through him that the xylose experiment station was located at Anniston.

Chemists Will Arrive

Chemists from the Bureau of Standards are expected to arrive at Auburn and Tuscaloosa about August 15.

The Bureau of Standards, announcing the two projects, says:

"It is proposed to make a study of the uses of starch in the manufacture of textiles, and the properties required in starch for each use. Further it is planned to determine whether starch from one source is superior to that from another for given purposes, and if specific starches may be modified so as to better adapt them for particular uses.

"A fundamental study of chemical reactions involved in the sulphate pulping process is being initiated. This process is used for the production of the Southern Kraft papers which has attained huge proportions in recent years. More definite information on the complicated chemical reactions of this process is sought to extend its field of usefulness. Such information should be beneficial in several respects, such as in the production of by-products in the production of fibers having a greater variety of use, in the use of a wider variety of fibrous materials, and in more complete recovery of the pulping chemicals."

The Mazaroff Mystery

By J. S. FLETCHER

(©, by Alfred A. Knopf, Inc.)

THE STORY

Mervyn Holt is engaged by a man calling himself Mazaroff as a traveling companion. After a short tour they put up at the Woodcock Inn on Marmadale moor. They meet, casually, Mrs. Elphinstone and Sheila Marchion. Mazaroff tells Holt they are his wife and daughter and that his real name is Marchion. That night Mazaroff fails to return to the inn and his disappearance is unexplained. Holt meets Sheila and tells her of Mazaroff's disappearance. Holt is questioned by Police Sergeant Mannors and a reporter, Bowman. Mazaroff's murdered body is found. Crole, Mazaroff's lawyer, and Maythorne, private detective, arrive. Valuable diamonds that Mazaroff usually carried are missing. A gun, stolen from Musgrave, is found at the scene of the murder. Evidence at the inquest proves Mazaroff was Marchion. His will leaves all to Holt. Herman Klopp, close friend of Mazaroff is in London. From him it is learned that Mazaroff possessed two remarkable diamonds.

"Well, about a month or five weeks ago, I was called to the telephone one afternoon, and found Sir Samuel speaking to me. He wanted me to go round to Park lane there and then, to look at and estimate the value of a diamond that had been offered to him. I found Sir Samuel and Lady Locke in their library; they had with them a stranger whose appearance, as I recollect it, corresponds with the description of Mazaroff given in the newspapers—I particularly remember the cast in the left eye. He was not introduced to me by name. It appeared that the stranger was one who was interested in diamonds in a large way, had heard of Sir Samuel and his wife as possible buyers, and was willing to sell them something of very special value; to wit, a remarkable pair of blue diamonds, of which he had one in his pocket. It was this that I was asked to see. He told me that I was one of a pair—the other was equally fine. He further said that he had been in the diamond trade for some years, in South Africa, had now retired, and this would be his last deal. What the Lockes wanted to get at was—what were the two diamonds worth? The would-be vendor and myself had a good deal of talk about the matter. He was very fair and reasonable, and he and I eventually came to a decision as to a proper price for the pair."

"And what might that be?" asked Crole, eagerly.

"Well," answered Frobenius, "we agreed that a fair price would be a hundred and sixty thousand pounds." Crole let out an exclamation of astonishment.

"One hundred and sixty thousand pounds—for a couple of diamonds!" he said. "Where—that's a bit exceptional, isn't it?"

"You have to bear in mind that the diamonds are exceptional," answered Frobenius. "The sum we agreed upon was a reasonable price—not an extravagant one."

"And what happened?" asked Maythorne. "Was the deal carried out?"

"That I do not know," replied Frobenius. "I perceived that after having agreed with the seller as to what would be a fair price, my part was played, and I left seller and buyer talking the matter over."

"You've heard nothing since?" inquired Crole.

"Nothing. I haven't seen Sir Samuel Locke, nor Lady Locke, since that afternoon," said the jeweler. "And of course I haven't seen the blue diamond man. But I feel sure that he was the man who is referred to in the newspapers as Mazaroff."

"I don't think there's much doubt about that," assented Crole. "Well, now, we'd better get in touch with these Locke people," he continued, glancing at Mr. and Maythorne. "Park lane, you said?"

Mr. Frobenius gave us the exact address of Sir Samuel Locke and left us. Crole and I, as if by common impulse, looked at our companion.

"Well," said Crole. "What's Maythorne asking himself?"

Maythorne looked up from a pattern which he was mechanically tracing on the tablecloth.

"Only one thing to ask—at present," he said. "Did Mazaroff sell those diamonds to Sir Samuel Locke? If he didn't—"

"Well?" demanded Crole.

"Then, in that case, Armintorade got them—in my opinion. And—the job will be to prove that he has! Where have we got the slightest clue as to what we want to establish—that he and Mazaroff met on that first day after Mazaroff and Holt arrived at the Woodcock? But we're getting at something—and it all points to Armintorade. Now let's see this Sir Samuel man and get a step further."

We chartered a taxicab and were driven to Park lane, where we pulled up in front of an imposing mansion, the door of which we were encountered by footmen whose liveries were rather more gorgeous than the usual run of things in that way. The room into which we were ushered after we had sent in our cards looked as if some very high-class upholsterer had been given carte blanche to wreak his own will and fancy on it. A little, apple-cheeked, rotund man, who wore mutton-chop whiskers and a ready smile came bustling in, a big half-smoked cigar in one pudgy hand.

"I know what you chaps have come for!" he exclaimed, beaming from one to the other of us. "This Mazaroff affair—I've read it all in the papers, and your names, too, same as what I see on your cards—just so. Now then, what's it all about, gentlemen? It's a queer business, I think—what?"

"You're aware of it, then, Sir Samuel?" suggested Crole. "Well up in things as far as they've gone?"

"Who isn't?" exclaimed Sir Samuel. "Been plenty in the papers, anyway. Of course me and her ladyship's read all we could set our eyes to. It was only this morning she says to me, 'Sam!' she says, 'as sure as fate somebody'll be coming to us about this here affair!' And—there you are! But I'll tell you what—come this way, gentlemen, and then her ladyship can hear all you've got to say."

We followed Sir Samuel out of the cold grandeur of our first haven into the less formal and more comfortable harbor of another and smaller room, where we found Lady Locke. She was as rotund as her husband; her dress was of the latest fashion, and she had many rings on her fingers, and it struck me that she was somewhat sharper of intellect than Sir Samuel, not quite so open, and infinitely more watchful.

"Of course I knew we should have inquiries made here," she observed, in a slightly affected tone. "I said so, this morning, to Sir Samuel."

"As I've just told 'em," said Sir Samuel. "Though, to be sure, I've no idea as yet as to how they got here. Nobody knows about our transactions with Mazaroff outside ourselves—so far as I know. Of course, Mazaroff may have talked. But now—how did you come to hear of us?"

"My dear Sir Samuel," replied Crole, solemnly, "there are mysteries within mysteries! A man of your position, and your knowledge of the world will understand me when I say that is a big thing. You've already read a good deal about it now, to be brief, what can you tell us?"

Sir Samuel settled himself in a chair.

"Well," he said, with a glance at Lady Locke. This Mr. Mazaroff called here one day—just as you've done—and introduced himself as a man that had had big dealings in diamonds and the like in South Africa. He'd heard, so he told us, of Lady Locke as a likely purchaser of something exceptional in diamonds, and he'd thought she'd like to see a particularly fine bit of property that he'd got in that line o' goods. Then he told me it was a pair of very fine and rare blue diamonds, and he produced one."

"Only one?" inquired Maythorne.

"Only one. The other," continued Sir Samuel, "he said was in the possession of his agent, a Mr. Armintorade, of Courthouse bank, who was just then away holiday making in Northumberland. He said he should be seeing Mr. Armintorade very soon, and he would get the fellow diamond from him—"

"Unless!" interrupted Lady Locke. "There was an 'unless' about it."

"So there was," admitted Sir Samuel. "Yes—unless Armintorade had got a definite offer from some other custom—Armintorade, he said, had had the first blue diamond in his possession for some months and might have found an advantageous customer for the pair."

"Then you didn't buy?" asked Maythorne.

"No—we didn't buy," replied Sir Samuel. "What we did was this—I telephoned our regular jeweler, Frobenius, and got him to come here and examine the diamond that Mazaroff had with him. They agreed that a reasonable price for such a pair of blue diamonds would be a hundred and sixty thousand pounds. After Frobenius had gone, Mazaroff and I came to this agreement—if his agent, Armintorade, didn't get a better offer, or made some arrangement to which they were committed, Mazaroff was to get the second blue diamond from Armintorade, and, on his return to London, show me and her ladyship the pair. If then we decided to buy, we were to have the pair at the price I've just mentioned to you. And of course, that's where it ended. We've never seen the diamonds since."

"Unless!" interrupted Lady Locke. "There was an 'unless' about it."

"Did you ever see Mazaroff after that first call?" asked Maythorne.

"Oh, yes, we did," answered Sir Samuel, readily enough. "He was a very friendly, sociable pleasant sort of man, and we asked him to come and dine with us."

"Had you any other guests, Sir Samuel?" Maythorne asked.

"No, we hadn't, that night," replied Sir Samuel. "Leastwise, there was her ladyship's nephew, young Jim Mallison—but we don't reckon him a guest. Nobody else."

"And you never saw him again after that?" asked Maythorne. "Never met him anywhere about London?"

"No—never saw nor heard of him again," replied Sir Samuel. "Until we saw all this in the papers."

"Your nephew, Mr. James Mallison, I think you said," remarked Maythorne. "Did you ever hear him mention seeing Mazaroff in town—after that dinner?"

Sir Samuel looked at his wife.

"I never heard Jim mention that," he answered. "To be sure, Jim knocks about a good deal in fashionable places, and so on—he's away just now, or he could tell you himself. But I never heard him speak of meeting Mazaroff again—old you, Maria?"

"No—I never heard him say anything of that," replied Lady Locke.

We had a little more conversation with this worthy couple, and then left them. I was anxious to get out of the house: I had an announcement to make which I could not make before.

"I say!" I exclaimed, seizing my companion's elbow. "You remember that—this morning—I spoke of seeing Mazaroff in conversation with a man who was a stranger to me, but whom Mazaroff evidently knew? Well—there's a photograph of that man—the very man!—on Lady Locke's mantelpiece!"

The two men stopped, staring at me—Crole with an ordinary glare of surprise, but Maythorne with a sudden flash of the eye and an alertness that I had never noticed before in him: it was as if my remark had acted as an illumination.

"That's the man I saw talking to Mazaroff at Huntington and again at York," I asserted. "I recognized the photograph instantly."

"The probability is that that's the nephew we heard about—Mallison," said Maythorne. "Let's see—he was referred to as Lady Locke's nephew and Sir Samuel spoke of him as knowing his way about town pretty well. Now then, where are we? Mallison, according to what we've just heard, met Mazaroff at Locke's house, Mallison heard about, and saw, one of the blue diamonds. If the photograph is that of Mallison, as you assert, Holt, Mallison is the man to whom you saw Mazaroff talking first at Huntington and then at York. So—does Mallison know anything about this affair? That's to find out—when we can come across Mallison."

He paused for a moment in the middle of the sidewalk, hands plunged in his trousers pockets, eyes staring at the pavement. Suddenly he looked up, signalled to a passing taxicab, and motioned us to follow him into it.

"Come to my office," he said. "I've a chap there—my confidential clerk—who possesses one of the sharpest brains and most retentive memories in Europe. He'll know!"

Maythorne's office was in Conduit street, so we were there in a few minutes. At each end of the room we entered stood a table-desk; at that at the further end sat, when we walked in, a young man who would have attracted my attention wherever I had met him. He was a smallish-sized chap, and his thinness person was arrayed in a tweed suit of very large checks; he wore a hunting stock instead of an ordinary collar, and his folds were gathered together by a gold horseshoe pin; he might, indeed, have been a head stable boy as far as this sort of thing went. But he had the sharpest and queerest pair of blue eyes I have ever seen; the most inquisitive nose, and the straightest line of lip above the squarest and most obstinate of chins—and yet these things were not, severally or collectively, the most remarkable of his features. The thing that one's eye went to first was the fellow's red hair—absolutely, genuinely red, a veritable flame of color. I don't know what Crole thought of him—he had doubtless seen him before, perhaps often—but my own mind immediately crystallized its impressions into a word at sight of the vivid poll, the sharp nose, the general aspect of ready watchfulness: Ferret!

"Cottingley!" Maythorne said, going straight to the subject without preface. "Do we know the name Mallison?"

I saw a swift flash of light in the red-headed one's queer eyes—it was as if a lamp had suddenly been lighted somewhere behind them.

"We do! Mallison. James Mallison."

The creature's voice was as odd as his appearance. It was a sort of subdued falsetto—piping. Maythorne nodded.

"I thought you'd remember, Cottingley. In what connection, now?"

"Welminton square affair. No direct connection—with him. One of our clients was in it, though. Mallison—his name was in the list. Memorized it. James Mallison—no occupation. Address—Park lane. Lady Locke's nephew—that's who Mallison is."

"And that Welminton square affair, Cottingley? Gambling business wasn't it?"

"Police raid in a private gambling house in Welminton square. About three or four months ago. Thirty or forty arrests. Mallison was one of the men on the premises. If you remember, one of our clients was there—came to you in a blue funk. Nothing! Like the scrapbook?"

Maythorne nodded his head and held out a hand, and the clerk, turning to a big table that stood in the center of the room, took up a solidly bound volume which proved to contain newspaper cuttings, and with almost unusual celerity found a page and handed the book over. Maythorne glanced at the extract, and then twisted the volume toward Crole and me.

SUITABLE JOBS FOR THE OLD

By NOEL SARGENT, National Association of Manufacturers.

AN INCREASING number of industrial companies are intelligently considering the question of adapting older employees to different jobs. Older workers can be changed to less laborious and dangerous positions. The average man wants to keep active in the factory as long as possible. In one plant with which I am familiar it was found that at least 32 types of positions could be filled by older employees with profit to themselves and to the company.

This concern established an allowance fund to be drawn upon if necessary to pay each older worker the difference between what he actually earns and the amount he is paid. This was intended to prevent a hidden charge against production. Yet experience showed that among 89 men over 65 years of age only three were unable to actually earn the wages paid them. Do not we find here the solution of the problem for many factories in which conditions are such as to make possible the finding of suitable jobs for the old?

Man's ingratitude to man does not seem so great when we consider some actual facts. An analysis of 4,655 establishments, with a total of 2,605,815 workers, showed that sickness and accident benefits were provided for 1,098,390 persons; death benefits for 1,012,722; group life insurance for 1,130,817; pension plans for long-time service for 989,983; some form of stock purchase for 628,853 and organized savings plans for 627,164.

REFORM AND SOCIAL WORK

By DR. MIRIAM VAN WATERS, Los Angeles Juvenile Court.

Reform or uplift movements are far removed from genuine social work. Reformers commonly have a low opinion of mankind, but the attitude of the social worker is one of respect. Public opinion confuses the two, and is mistaken in this. The social worker finds in those with whom he deals qualities showing regard for others, self-sacrifice and loyalty quite as commonly as poverty, avarice and crime. To attempt by means of legislative and constitutional reform to arrange matters so that the interests of some will not conflict with those of their fellows wholly lacks the concept of personality and relies too much on rewards and punishments.

It is this attitude toward personality which sets the social worker apart from reformers adopting a program of militant warfare. The social worker has built up a concept of the laws which lie at the foundation of behavior. When the idea of causation appears, praise and blame disappear. We hear no more about the "worthy poor." But we hear a great deal about the vital quest of the way of life.

The subject matter of our study is the adjustment of men to their environment as to common, not separate wants; for example, we do not seek to aid a man to become a better mathematician, but a better member of his household and community.

TREAT CRIMINAL AS INDIVIDUAL

By DR. NATHAN CANTOR, University of Buffalo.

American criminology has failed to keep step with the rapid progress of psychology and related sciences. It has made very little use of our new knowledge of human nature and conduct. For the past 30 years or so a great deal of information has been laboriously gathered—much of which is uniformly accepted—by neurologists, physiologists and psychologists. This could all be applied to the field of crime.

Instead, our statesmen, lawyers, clerics and respectable people in general ignore, overlook or deny the far-reaching changes implied by altered views of the growth of human personality.

Our treatment of criminals reflects this contrasting point of view. Instead of treating each defendant as an individual whose social, economic and psychological background is quite unlike every other defendant's, we convict and punish criminals according to the crime committed.

The prevailing psychological philosophy is the reform of the criminal, while practically it is the revenge of society against the criminal. It is punishment, not reform.

PENOLGY NOT UP TO DATE

By JUDGE CHARLES W. HOFFMAN, Cincinnati.

The diagnosis and treatment of the behavior of criminals in concrete cases lags far behind the scientific knowledge and information now existing. We are sometimes led to wonder if decades will elapse before the public permits the use of the discoveries of modern science.

Intensive methods, physical and psychological examination of offenders after conviction could materially reduce the prison population. The sentencing of incurable defective delinquents and similar types to definite penal terms is a fatal policy and probably has done more than any other factor to bring about the present undesirable conditions in the field of crime. I would urge segregation and treatment in special institutions.

Probation recognizes the importance of scientific treatment of offenders against the law and works to save individuals as social assets. There are thousands of young men today in penal institutions who could have been redeemed and reinstated in the community after conviction without endangering any interests or values.

CONSISTENCY CAN BE OVERDONE

By REV. DR. ALVIN E. MAGARY (Presbyterian), Brooklyn.

A mind that is entirely consistent would be as dull as dishwater. No doubt a pig is consistent. His philosophy involves no discrepancies and his every act is a perfect expression of his conviction. That was the difference between the prodigal son, dreaming of home and heaven while he fed the hogs, and the hogs he fed. It is the curse of our modern life that it crushes down the glorious inconsistencies of human nature and tends to reduce us to the dull completeness and efficiency of machines.

We are told that a man should be the same on Monday, in the market place, as he is on Sunday, in the church. That, too, is nonsense. A man's life is like a diamond, with many facets. To reduce it to a single, plain surface, destroys its meaning and its beauty.

JOE SEWELL ALMOST MISSED TWO GAMES

JOE SEWELL just cannot get over the fact that he was forced to forego his drive on Everett Scott's record of playing in 1,307 consecutive games after he had participated in 1,103 straight combats. Not only was Scott's record the goal he set, but 1,500 games, and he believes he would have carried on but for the attack of flu he suffered. In only two games prior to his recent illness did the little iron man figure he might have difficulty in going through. One of these was in New York about three years ago and the other in Cleveland a half dozen seasons back. In both instances he had eaten something or other that did not agree with him.

Joe is regarded as one of the "old men" of the game, but he is still young as ball players go. Sewell has been with the Indians since 1920, stepping into the shoes of the late Ray Chapman, when Chapple died as the result of a fractured skull after being hit in the head by a pitched ball by Carl Mays. This means that Joe is in his tenth full season as a member of the Cleveland club, but he was only twenty years old when he reported to Speaker.

Sewell is anxious to remain as part and parcel of the Cleveland club for several more years for then he'll be set for life. Joe has invested his money wisely, holding first mortgages and having interests in a coal business, furniture business and cotton compressor. And even after he is through as an active participant in the grand old game he hopes to land a job as manager or coach. He says baseball has always been first in mind with him and he wants to stick to it as long as he can.

Joe Sewell.

Estimating the Cost of Auto for Home

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture)

Many men who do not see the advantage of other home accounts like to keep records on the cost of owning and operating their automobiles. Perhaps this is because the man of the house has more to do with the car than with other family commodities. The bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture has provided a special page for the automobile in the household account book it has designed. In the directions for keeping home accounts, the person who writes the record, whether husband or wife, is reminded of the various items which should not be overlooked in connection with owning and running the car.

A complete picture includes not only expenditures for gas, oil, repairs, tires and other replacements, fire, theft and liability insurance, tax, license plates, care such as washing and greasing, and garage if one is rented; but also annual depreciation as shown by comparing the turn-in at the end of the year with the buying price or list value at the beginning of the year. Cars depreciate both from use or wearing of parts, and from obsolescence or style changes, even when used very little. The turn-in value of a used car often bears little relation to its mileage or the care given it. Interest paid on installment notes and loss of interest on capital invested would also be added in an exact computation. The real running cost per mile is easily found by dividing the year's total cost for all these items by the year's total mileage. Some people reckon their cost per mile only in terms of gas, oil, and repairs or replacements.

As the running cost of a car will differ but little whether one person or five ride in it, it is obviously economical for a family to use the means of transportation, especially for long or roundabout trips. It also may happen that for the sake of companionship on such trips, an automobile owner will offer to take friends with him. This is a very delightful form of hospitality which most drivers enjoy. Another plan is for four or five friends to divide among themselves the cost of a long journey. But in this case it happens quite commonly that an unintentional injustice is done the owner of the car in estimating what his cost is. The real running cost includes "overhead" as well as cash expended en route.

To illustrate: Assuming that Mr. A owns an average medium-priced car, its running cost per mile, including everything, would probably range between 6 1/2 and 7 cents. The United States government reimburses its employees using their own cars on government business on a basis of 7 cents per mile. Mr. A and four friends, taking a 500-mile trip on an expense-sharing basis should estimate the total cost at $35, although less than $10 may be spent for gas and oil en route. A moment's thought should convince the fair-minded that either before or after such a trip the car would require putting into good condition; following it, washing and greasing would undoubtedly be required, the tires would be more worn even if not immediately replaced, and other expenses due to conditions of the trip might appear. While depreciation may be partly a matter of time as well as of mileage, these other costs are inescapable for the owner. The fact that his friends have had pleasure, comfort, convenience, and, after all, cheap transportation in the car, should lead to a generous point of view on their part in sharing the cost of the ride.

Club Refuses to Oust Roger Peckinpaugh, Pilot of Indians

Manager Roger Peckinpaugh of the Indians will not be made a "sacrifice to the fans," the owners of the Cleveland baseball club declared in a formal statement answering demands that Peckinpaugh be fired. The statement, issued by Alva Bradley, president of the club, expressed the faith of the owners in Peckinpaugh, and attributed the Indians' defeats to "unpreventable circumstances." The statement came just a few hours before the Indians took another beating from the Detroit Tigers—their twentieth defeat in 23 starts. The statement also made it clear that no drastic shakeup of the Tribe lineup is contemplated. "We, as owners of the club, feel that the public should know that we have confidence in Roger and his team," Bradley said, "and that we are making every effort possible to help him with additional material."

With the Athletics apparently set, sports editors here and there have gained an extra two inches of space by dropping the "if" table.

Sam Rice, Washington outfielder, who is thirty-eight, led the American league in base stealing during the first quarter of the present season.

Baseball is coming to the point, it seems, where the batter might as well knock out fungoes to any vacant spot, thus dispensing with the $10,000 pitcher.

There are times—and these warm, humid mornings are among them—when we wouldn't feel up to driving out of bounds on a Tom Thumb golf layout.

Outfielder Walter Bashore has been given a release by the Cumberland Colts. His batting was not heavy enough to win a regular job.

George Hildebrand of the American league staff of umpires has passed the 2,500 mark in consecutive games. He is in the eighteenth season with the American league.

Jack Coombs, former pitcher with the Philadelphia Athletics, now baseball coach at Duke university, has as one of his charges Raymond Coombs, his nephew, a pitcher.

Is there anything more pathetic, as the clock in the steeple strikes 11, than a small child outside a Tom Thumb golf course, crying, "Father, dear father, come home with me now?"

Max Schmeling, German heavy, eats five meals a day when training for a fight and generally six when not in training.

ACCOMMODATION FOR CAR DEPOSITORS

As an accommodation to bank depositors who have not enough time to park their auto, a "traffic window" has been installed by a local bank in St. Louis, Mo., at which persons can do business without leaving the seat of their machine.

Seeing Big League BASEBALL

By BILLY EVANS
Sports writer, Big League Umpire
and General Manager of the
Cleveland Indians

One of the things that contribute to the umpire's unpopularity is his habit of putting players out of the game. Much as I disliked to do it, it was frequently necessary if I would maintain discipline on the ball field—and the maintaining of discipline is one of the umpire's many jobs.

In the summer of 1907, my second season in the majors, an incident came up in a ball game that for a while threatened a lot of trouble for me, and as Hughie Jennings was the cause of it all I had to forget that he and I were fellow Cornellians and give him the well known "gate." Jennings tried to "put one over on me," but he happened to catch me looking—and out he went.

The Philadelphia Athletics were playing at Detroit that day and the game went into the ninth inning, a tie. Charley Schmidt, Detroit catcher, was on first base with two out as the result of a single. Then came Charley O'Leary, Tiger second sacker, with a terrific drive to left field. I knew as soon as the ball was hit that it would enable Schmidt to score with the winning run, so I kept careful watch on all the bases as Charley tore for home. He touched second all right and then, with plenty of time to spare, he cut third by about two feet.

Philadelphia's shortstop, Monte Cross, rushed over to me excitedly. "Did you see him, Bill? Did you see him cut the bag?"

Of course, I had seen it, but it was not my place to say anything. There was nothing for me to do until a play had been made. And so Schmidt kept on going. The fans, yelling like wild Indians, started to stream out of the park and the Tigers began hailing for the clubhouse.

Now Jennings was coaching at third base—pulling grass of course, and yelling his famous "ee-yah." And Jennings had seen Charley Schmidt cut third, and he had good reason to suspect that I had seen it, too. So when the outfielder threw the ball in, Jennings, instead of letting the Philadelphia player take the throw, ran into the diamond, caught the ball himself and ran for the clubhouse.

Well, there was a pretty kettle of fish. The fans all leaving and swarming onto the field thinking Detroit had won.

Monte Cross was crazy mad. "What the hell do you call that?" he sputtered. "Are you going to let him get away with that?"

"Nobody's going to get away with anything, Monte."

"Well, what are you going to do about it?"

"What are you going to do about it?" I countered.

"Did you see him run away with that ball?"

"Sure; what do you want me to do?"

"Give me a ball." Monte was mad clear through, but he was smart enough to know what was necessary to retire Charley Schmidt at third. I pulled a ball out of my pocket and gave it to him. He touched the bag.

"All right," I announced, "man's out. The run doesn't count. Now let's finish the game."

Well, sir, that was a mixup. Some of the Detroit players not yet off the field had seen what I had done, and soon I was surrounded by an angry, gesticulating crowd of them. In the midst of all the argument Jennings came out of the clubhouse retreat in center field, innocently demanding to know what it was all about.

"What's the trouble? What's the trouble?"

This was the last straw. "Trouble enough," I snapped. "And you caused it all. Just for being smart and getting me into this hole you can go right back to the clubhouse—and this time stay there. I'm going to clear the field and finish this game."

And that I did. The crowd was "on my neck" but fortunately Detroit won out in extra innings, otherwise a police escort or ambulance might have been necessary for me.

Mule Driver's Remarks Started Big "Ruction"

There had been a fight in an estaminet in Vauclouleurs between some regular soldiers and some members of one of the new divisions. After the M. P.'s had stopped the hullabaloo it appeared that Private Slim Gibbs, who was a mule driver in the Eighteenth Infantry wagon train and did not like recruits, had knocked the new division in this wise:

"Yes, sir," said Slim, "they landed at St. Nazaire and on their arm brassards was a rosin' tearin' wild animal—a grizzly bear—with claws a foot long and spittin' like a wildcat."

"When they got up near Bar le Duc that animal had lost his claws and he stopped spittin'." When they hit Beaumont, behind Scheprey, that fierce animal was just sittin' down, lookin' around kind of peaceful like.

"And, soldiers, when one of their motor artillery batteries passed us on the way to the front, that bear had disappeared and they had a dove on their brassards and the words: 'Let us have peace.'"

Then the fight began—Ted F. Smith in Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Exaggeration

Ivy Lee, who visited Soviet Russia in the Rockefeller interests, was congratulated at a luncheon in New York, on the excellent book he has written about his visit.

"My book at least has corrected some exaggerations," Mr. Lee said. "We don't want Sovietism here, of course, but its horrors have been exaggerated."

"Russian Sovietism has been treated like the Russian cockroach. A traveler, you know, said of this insect:

"The Russian cockroach is seven inches long. He is hairy and grows like a dog when disturbed. He drops from the ceiling onto the dinner table, and will carry off a chop, a leg of chicken or a bottle of vodka."

French Glove Industry

For centuries the French glove manufacturing industry has not only supplied practically the entire local demand, but exported to nearly all countries of the world. The average value of the annual exports is 175,000,000 francs, as compared with corresponding imports of about 1,000,000 francs. The principal centers of production are Grenoble, Millau and St. Julien, in the southeastern part of France and Niort (Deux-Sevres) and Chaumont (Haute-Marne), United States Department of Commerce reports.

Whale Leather Gloves Out

Women of Europe are again finding the whale an aid to their wardrobe. Whale "leather" is being used in making fashionable gloves, and style leaders have approved the new material composed of the intestines of the huge swimmers. The new gloves are delicately soft, but so tough that it is almost impossible to wear them out. The whale has not contributed to women's style since the days of the whalebone for corsets.

THE MOTOR QUIZ

(How Many Can You Answer?)

Q. When was the first oil well drilled?

Ans. Seventy years ago at Titusville, Pa. The start of the great industry was made when a well with a daily flow of 1,000 gallons was brought in.

Q. What should be done when a car is hard to start?

Ans. Have battery tested, make sure connections are clean and tight, check the spark plugs and breaker points for proper adjustment, and examine the choke.

Q. How many cars and trucks were produced in the United States and Canada in 1929?

Ans. Five million six hundred and 51 thousand, an increase of about 22 per cent over the previous year. Production included 4,840,000 cars and $95,000 trucks.

Q. How much gasoline are American motorists estimated to have used in 1929?

Ans. Approximately fourteen billion gallons. This would make a lake five miles in diameter and four miles deep.

SEVERAL ARE ARRESTED IN PAST FEW DAYS

Majority of Week End Arrests Were for Violating Prohibition Law

Last Saturday and Sunday showed that county officers have been making some noticeable inroads into the law violators of this section when about twelve persons were brought into the hands of the law. On last Saturday Sheriff Collins and Deputy George Murrah raided a group of men who were enjoying a game which is prohibited by law at certain places and times, and Sam Cleckler, Elijah Smitherman, Harvey Lee Jones and Lafayette Ellison were placed under bond, according to information. The arrests took place on the Lay Dam road near here.

Will Kennedy, negro, was arrested Saturday afternoon with a quantity of homebrew in his possession the information stated. He made bond.

D. E. Patterson and Eugene Stockdale were arrested, it was stated, north of Thorby Saturday afternoon. Both made bond.

The home of Luther Ward, near Lemison, was raided by county officers last Saturday, reports stated, and a quantity of liquor and home brew fixtures were found.

Odus Ellison was arrested Saturday near South Calera, charged with violating the prohibition law, according to the information, and was brought to jail here, later making bond.

Tom Middlebrooks was arrested Saturday night at Verbera with a quantity of whiskey in his possession, the information received stated. He made bond and was released.

Buster Darby, negro, was arrested Tuesday on charges of violating the prohibition law, it was stated and later made bond.

Sunday morning Mack Baker and Jade Foshee were arrested by county officers, having had in their possession a quantity of home brew. Both were released on bond.

MARLAR-HALL WEDDING IS INTERESTING EVENT

Billingsley, Ala., July 29.—The marriage of Miss Sallie Hall to Mr. Charles A. Marlar was solemnized this evening at seven o'clock at Big Springs church, a few miles out from here. Rev. O. P. Bentley performed the wedding ceremony in the presence of a few friends and relatives.

Mrs. Marlar was, before her marriage, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Hall.

The groom is the son of Dr. and Mrs. A. J. Marlar of Billingsley, and is at present employed by the M & O Railroad.

Mr. and Mrs. Marlar will make their home in Billingsley.

J. MELL MARTIN RETURNS FROM INTERESTING TRIP RECENTLY

J. Mell Martin, local undertaker and coroner, returned Sunday from a nine day trip which carried him to many points of interest in the United States and Canada.

Mr. Martin left Clanton and stopped at Norfolk, Va., Washington, New York City, Albany, N. Y., Buffalo, N. Y., visiting the Canadian side as well as the U. S. side of the falls. The entire trip, on which only a few miles were retraced by Mr. Martin was made in nine days, and his story of the trip and the many sights he saw, would make most anyone wish to take the same trip.

WILLIAM A. GANDY DIED AT HIS HOME LAST SUNDAY

William A. Gandy age 74, died at his home in Billingsley last Sunday night. Funeral services were held on the following Tuesday at Billingsley with Martin of Clanton in charge. The deceased is survived by his widow, Mrs. Minnie L. Gandy, one sister, Mrs. Gray, of Clanton and other relatives.

SUNBEAMS WILL MEET ON NEXT FRIDAY AFTERNOON

The Sunbeams will meet on next Friday afternoon at four o'clock at the home of their leader, Mrs. J. B. Atkinson, according to announcement given the News this week. All members are urged to be present and on time.

Every Citizen Should Vote In The Democratic Primary

Next Tuesday the Democratic Primary will be held in this County and throughout the entire State of Alabama, to nominate a candidate for Governor, Lieutenant Governor, Attorney General, Secretary of State, State Auditor, State Treasurer, State Superintendent of Education, Members of the Public Service Commission, Justices of the Supreme Court, State Senator, Representative in the Legislature, United States Senator, Member of Congress, Circuit Solicitor, Sheriff, Tax Collector, Tax Assessor, Members of the Commissioners Court and School Board, and party officers. The nominees of this Primary will no doubt, serve the people in the offices for which they are nominated, during the next ensuing term. This paper believes that the interests of the people can be best served by the voters going to the Democratic primary next Tuesday and casting their votes, without passion or prejudice, so that we may get together and work for the things that will be uplifting for our Moral, Business and Educational institutions. If we split over personal issues and allow ourselves to be divided by prejudice or passions we will soon lose sight of the traditions of the South and prejudice and personal feelings will be found creeping into our schools, businesses and churches and families will be divided and disorder and confusion will soon have us into a state of chaos. Unrest will prevail, where quiet and peaceful pursuit of happiness and contentment should prevail. Serious thought should be given by every qualified voter of this county between now and next Tuesday, as to what he or she will do. Because if every qualified voter in Alabama votes he or she will represent five people who are not voters, therefore there is involved in the question of the exercise of our franchise more than our own individual interests. We will represent at the polls next Tuesday the interest of our neighbors, who have, for certain causes failed to become qualified voters. Each voter should realize that he or she will be acting in a representative capacity, when they vote and we should let nothing cause us to swerve from doing our duty. Let us in the exercise of our franchise, vote so that we may look forward for a progressive and business administration of the affairs of our government in the Nation, State and County. Let us carefully select men for the offices who are sober and have the affairs of our government at heart. We should vote for those men, who are free from alignment with the special interests; men who know and can appreciate the hardships the common masses have to endure and the struggles they have in earning an honest livelihood. The voters have within their hands the future destiny of our country. It will require serious thought and study of the men who are offering for the places if the best is to come to us in the governmental affairs of our state. Therefore, we respectfully urge every elector of this county to give serious thought and consideration to our present condition, that they may be better enabled to vote intelligently and establish a sound precedent for the young men and women who will soon take our places, in the matter of running our Government,—to follow.

There are many good citizens offering for places of trust in this primary and each is entitled to have the voters investigate their records and qualifications and the things they stand for and when that is done, the voters should cast their ballot for those who they believe will best serve the people when in office.

"Jockey" Elder Out To Establish World's Record In Automobile Driving Endurance

Alabama has produced many persons who have gained renown over the entire world in many things. It has produced statesmen, honored soldiers and heroes, and now comes the time when Alabama is about to produce the world's champion endurance automobile driver—"Jockey" Elder completes his 150-hour non-stop drive in an automobile this week.

"Jockey" recently completed a non-stop drive of 100 hours and stood the strain well, showing no ill effects when he finished in Montgomery last month. He will be in Clanton this afternoon at five o'clock if his schedule runs true and he is still driving on this endurance test. He will be handcuffed to the steering wheel of a Plymouth automobile, and started this record establishing drive from the Johnson Motor Company in Selma last Sunday morning at nine o'clock. If he arrives in Clanton this afternoon at the designated time he will have driven 104 hours without stopping the wheels of the car.

The non-stop driver is scheduled to eat a chicken dinner here, which will be furnished by The Dixie Cafe, the food to be served him from the curb, a course at a time, while he eats it on the go. If "Jockey" remains in this automobile, continuously driving for 150 hours, he will have established the world's record in a non-stop automobile drive.

J. R. MULLINS IS TOURING WEST FOR SEVERAL DAYS

In a communication from J. Renfro Mullins who has been away for several days taking a trip through the Western states, he said that the people had money to burn out there, and that corn would be scarce, although that is in the corn growing sections. He also stated that it was dry and hot there also.

J. H. FOSHEE AND FAMILY MOVED TO MONTGOMERY

J. H. Foshee arrived in Clanton the latter part of last week to make arrangements to move his family to Kilby Prison, Montgomery, where he has been employed for some time. Mr. Foshee has been an officer for some time in Chilton County, later going to Kilby Prison where he is now employed, and expects to be located permanently.

Senator Watt T. Brown Our Next Governor

SENATOR WATT T. BROWN

Before another issue of this newspaper the people of Alabama will have chosen their next governor. Who will be picked? We hazard the guess that his name is Watt T. Brown. And we know if the masses enter the primaries and cast their ballots to their own best interests, then our prediction is bound to be right.

Senator Brown is of the masses, born and reared on a farm, and his entire life has been one that has demonstrated (Continued On Editorial Page)

BLACK SOUNDS PLEA TO VOTE TRUST DEFEAT

Junior Senator Stirs 4,000 DeKalb Counties With Harmony Appeal

By HUBERT BAUGHN
Chief of Washington Bureau, Journal and Associated Newspapers

Fort Payne, Ala., August 5.—Four thousand citizens of DeKalb and adjoining counties staged an old fashioned democratic rally here Saturday afternoon and cheered Senator Hugo Black to the echo when he denounced the republican party as the "slave of predatory wealth," and called on the people of Alabama to forget past differences and go into the democratic primary of August 12 to protect them (continued to editorial page)

BOY SCOUTS ORGANIZING IN CLANTON

Local Kiwanis Club Sponsors Organization With Stapp As The Leader

The Clanton Kiwanis Club recently agreed to sponsor the organization of a Boy Scout troop in Clanton and appointed C. E. Stapp, chairman of the special committee on the work, to make steps to form the Scout organization.

Mr. Seigwald, a Scout Executive of this district was in town recently to assist in this organization. The boys who were interested and of age to become members of the Boy Scouts held their first meeting on Saturday night, July 26th, at the office of C. E. Stapp. Another meeting was held last Saturday night, and much interest is being shown by the boys at these meetings. Those who have already signed up for membership are Norman Childs, Bud Gerald, John Ezell, Joe Moore, Morgan Reynolds, Grady Reynolds, Jr., Hal Broadhead, Phillip Nelson, Ted Reynolds, Sidney Reynolds, Dan Smith, Wesley Danforth, Quinton Bookholdt, and Raymond Cobb. Junior members are Joe Hall Johnson and Edward Childs.

Many of the boys are ready for their Tenderfoot test, which when passed will allow them to wear the Scout uniform and Badge. They will meet again next Friday night at seven-thirty at the office of C. E. Stapp.

TOM SMITHERMAN AND SON INJURED IN SUNDAY WRECK

Tom Smitherman, and his son, Claudy, were seriously injured last Sunday afternoon late, when the Ford cut-down on which they were riding was struck from behind by another car according to information given the News. The accident occurred on the Lay Dam road, and Smitherman stated that he had the names of the persons driving the other car and that they lived near the cotton mill village here. It was stated that they were driving a new Ford roadster.

The elder Smitherman was badly bruised up while Claudy was carried to the Central Alabama Hospital here for treatment. Elijah, another son, was also on the cut-down, but was not injured to any great extent, it was stated. The elder Smitherman stated that the car that struck them practically went completely over their smaller car, dragging Claudy several feet before stopping. No action had been taken against the driver of the new Ford, Monday, according to information.

MR. AND MRS. LANDE VISITING MARKETS FOR NEXT 2 WEEKS

Mr. and Mrs. M. Lande left the first part of this week in their car for the dry goods markets where they will be able to take advantage of purchases which will enable them to give to the customers of The Leader, one of the popular dry goods stores of Clanton, the very best in value at their usual low prices. Mr. Lande stated that he expected to be away for something like two weeks, during which time they will visit New York, St. Louis, and other markets.

Mr. and Mrs. Lande were accompanied by Miss Bertha Margolis, Harry Margolis and little Ervin Lande.

GET BUSY ON COTTON WORM ADVISES THE COUNTY AGENT

County Agent Stapp stated this week that the Army Worm is showing up on the cotton over the county and advises that all farmers be on the lookout for the worm on their cotton, and when found take immediate steps to poison the worm with calcium arsenate at once, so as to keep the worm under control over the county. For further particulars see Mr. Stapp.

SIDNEY H. BLAN IS VISITOR TO CLANTON LAST TUE 32 AY

Sidney H. Blan, of Montgomery, State Auditor and candidate for the office of State Treasurer, was in Clanton last Tuesday.

Mr. Blan spent some time here shaking hands with his many friends,

Love Piracy Man Exposed as Woman

Minneapolis, Minn.—For 24 years Eva Mary Hotelling lived as a man because she could get better jobs and earn more money. She even married a girl to save the family honor when her brother fled to avoid responsibility. And now she has been named as the "man" who stole a married woman's affections!

The suit was filed in the shape of a divorce complaint by Edward S. Halstad, prominent and well-to-do jeweler, against Mrs. Maunna Halstad, who, he charges, treated him "cruelly and inhumanly" after she met "Donald Hotelling," which is the name under which Eva Mary has gone for almost a quarter of a century.

Halstad's amazement when he learned that his supposed rival was a woman—a fact that reached the authorities because some one close to Mrs. Halstad babbled—may be imagined. He and his wife have been estranged for some time as a result, she said, of threats which he made against her life.

When she sued for divorce he retaliated by naming the supposed man who had been a frequent visitor at his home and whose friendliness with his wife he believed to be due to a clandestine love affair between them.

Mrs. Hotelling, admitting she was the "Donald" named in the jeweler's complaint, expressed regret that she had been found out and her sex revealed.

"I was just fifteen when I first donned male attire," she said. "It was not done as a lark, but as the result of a deliberate plan when, seeking work, I discovered that it was very hard for a girl to get a decent job at living wages."

To detectives she said that when-her brother, Donald, refused to marry a girl who was in trouble through him, she took his place and led her to the altar. For seven years they lived together, she said, and not even the girl's own family knew the truth until she died in 1923.

After an investigation the authorities held that if Eva Mary chose to wear trousers and call herself Donald there was nothing that could be done about it legally and she was permitted to go about her affairs.

Cuckoo (the Clock Kind) Always Is in Season

Morehead City, N. C.—It may be illegal to shoot song birds but Jim Kelly got away with shooting the "cuckoo" in the clock. Game Warden Stas Brown said he was not justified in arresting Kelly for picking off the artificial bird. Jim was awakened at 3 a. m. by the cuckoo clock. He reached for a shotgun, fired at the bird and the noise ceased immediately. The bird retired in fragments behind its doors.

Bobs Was a Good Beggar

By CLARISSA MACKIE

OUTSIDE the hardware store on Gay street was a low stand piled with kitchenware. A few mischievous boys played around, trying to make friends with a huge mastiff which sat patiently on the sidewalk, waiting for some one within the store.

"You don't dare!" challenged one boy to another.

Jimmy Smith elevated a freckled nose and maneuvered his way to the display stand. In a moment he had a shining pall and was offering the handle to Bobs, the dog. That was how it happened that people smiled as they saw the big dog sitting patiently, holding the pall in his mouth. Around the corner peered four freckled faces, eyes ashine with delight.

An old lady walking slowly along dropped a dime in the pall, and went on. Bobs moved an appreciative tail. A young man absorbed in his newspaper saw the outline of the supplicant's figure, dropped another dime in the pall, and to this day believes that he contributed to the welfare of a hunchbacked blind man.

Then, at last, came Jerry Lamson. He was late in getting to his office and had not a moment to spare, but when he saw the shining pall and the great golden eyes of Bobs, he paused long enough to pat Bobs on his splendid head and flick a dollar bill into the pall.

This was too much for the watching boys and they made a dash for the pall. Jerry, suspicious, watched them and smiled. Bobs growled deep in his chest and showed his fangs. He had something to guard.

"It's darned queer," thought Jerry Lamson, and hurried as he went back to the hardware store and entered. The proprietor was in the distant background talking to a customer.

"Is that your dog out there?" asked Jerry. "The one holding a pall for pennies."

"A pall for pennies?" asked a new voice, and the customer turned around. Jerry watched as she came down the street, walking with the free stride of an outdoors girl; her fair hair shone under a bright little felt hat, her face was charming, her clothes expensively simple. From one gloved hand dangled a leash. "I left my dog outside," she said, going to the door.

"Poor old boy," murmured the girl. "Some one played a cruel joke on us, didn't they? I'll take the pall, Bobs. We will give the money to the blind man in the next block." She emptied the money into her hand, and replaced the pall.

Jerry bared his head. "There isn't anything amusing about it," he said a little stiffly. He smiled down at Bobs, and Bobs thrust a friendly muzzle into his hand.

Jerry replaced his hat and went on. Jean Manners watched him out of sight. "Isn't he splendid?" she thought, and blushed in the thinking. "Bobs liked him, and his judgment of men is infallible."

Not long afterwards Jean and Jerry met in a conventional manner at an evening party, and mutual attraction led to a rapid wooing on the part of Jerry, a very successful lawyer, and within four months the engagement was announced. By this time Bobs and Jerry were devoted friends.

Then, when a lovers' quarrel came, and stayed, black and menacing so that the two strong natures clashed, and parted, then Bobs was lonesome and depressed.

The young couple were aching to make up again, but the same lofty pride dominated each of them. They both resolved to forget.

Bobs didn't forget, and one morning he ran away from home. Strained down the shady street, turning into Center street, down Center to Main, trotting along, sure of his destination. When he reached the hardware store he paused and looked up at Mr. Peet, standing in the doorway.

"Julio, Bobs," he said.

Bobs barked a response and looked at the display table and wagged his tail. Mr. Peet laughed. "Want something to carry, eh?" he asked. Reaching back he picked up a little broken basket and offered it to the open mouth. Clamped went the big jaws, and there was Bobs, the mendicant, once more.

Mr. Peet dropped a bright penny in the basket, and Bobs dashed off down the street, the little basket dangling from his mouth. Two blocks down, and up a familiar staircase to the first floor. The door was opened and the office boy laughed when Bobs cleared the railing and went straight toward Jerry Lamson's door marked "Private." Nothing was private to Bobs when he was after one he adored. He pushed open the door and walked in, sitting down beside Jerry's chair, and looking up with such appeal in his eyes that Jerry dropped his own sad face down on the massive head. "Why did you come alone, Bobs?" he asked.

There was the smell of fresh violets, and there was Jean, a little breathless, wistful.

"Forgive me, dearest," they said in unison and Bobs beamed his approval.

Pigeons Aid Photographers

In Germany the carrier pigeons are used in making aerial photographs. A small automatic camera is fastened to the bird's body and as it flies the shutter opens and closes, thus making pictures which are later used as guides in the drafting of accurate maps for the army.

If You Had a Million Dollars

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

Would you work if you did not have to do so? If by some unexpected circumstances you should fall heir to a million dollars, how would that fact change your present plans and your present occupation? Would you farm, or keep store, or run the garage?

The curse of Eden was that because of his dereliction Adam should in the future earn his bread by the sweat of his brow. Not that he had been wholly idle before his misdeed, for his job had been to keep the garden trimmed up, to dig about things a little, but the work was apparently pleasant and all but negligible.

Nothing has engaged scientists and engineers more during the last twenty-five years than the devising and construction of labor-saving machines. Everything that could possibly reduce or ameliorate work has been hailed with delight. We seem not to enjoy work. Anything that will reduce the hours of labor or make our jobs a little softer and a little more white collared we received with enthusiasm. Middle-aged people—young fellows even—look forward to the time when they will not be enslaved by the mandates of a job, but will be free to do nothing and to come and go as they like.

I have watched the men in an office with which I am acquainted—fifty of them possibly and all under twenty-five years of age. They come hurrying in in the morning, a little late often, and settle down with evident reluctance to the routine of the day. Almost any one of them could be replaced without embarrassment or loss to the organization. They are earning a living, but only a small per cent of them care for the job they are holding or would keep it if keeping it were not necessary to existence. If these fellows should each come suddenly into the possession of a million dollars they probably would not look inside of the office again.

One of the professors at an eastern university recently sent out a questionnaire to two groups of professional men and women propounding this question of what their procedure would be if they had a million dollars suddenly given to them. Eighty-one per cent of the teachers addressed said that they would give up teaching if it were possible to do so, and 67 per cent of nurses agreed that under similar conditions they would give up nursing. That is, an overwhelming majority showed that they were not especially interested in their work as such but clung to it merely because it furnished them a living.

If it is generally true that the great majority of men—laboring men and professional men—are working only because they must, if you keep to your job simply because it affords you and your family subsistence or even a comfortable living, then there are a great many jobs being badly done.

Every one should enjoy his work; he should like it so well that even if he should fall heir to a million dollars he would go on loving it and doing his best in it.

Los Angeles.—Primitive life seems to have palled on Dr. Friedrich Ritter, noted German scientist, although his affinity, Frau Doran, with whom he ran away, still clings to romance in the raw on the lonely Galapagos island off Ecuador.

It takes the average man most of his three-score and ten years to learn that he doesn't amount to very much in this old world of ours.

Rheumatic Fever Traced to Teeth

Philadelphia.—Jefferson Medical college has just completed experiments tending to prove definitely that rheumatic fever is the direct result of focal infections, such as infected teeth and tonsils.

This was achieved by managing for the first time to produce satisfactory infections artificially in animals and studying the immediate and subsequent results.

Dr. Virgil Holland Moon of the college laboratory announced the results and explained the methods of these experiments at clinical sessions in the amphitheater of Jefferson hospital, arranged by and for ex-interns of the institution.

He said that previous efforts at artificially inducing chronic focal infections in experimental animals had failed because the viruses used had been introduced under the skin by injection.

The new method employed an infected cotton swab, which was sealed in muscles or under the skin of the animals after incisions had been made.

This set up a chronic infection, which permitted development of symptoms in the animals corresponding "nearly exactly" to the symptoms of human patients suffering from rheumatic fever.

Autopsies on the animals proved that changes in the heart and artery tissues were identical with those found in autopsy on human rheumatic fever victims.

For several years physicians have suspected the direct relation of chronic focal infections to rheumatic fever, but experimental methods never before had permitted conclusive proof of the theory, Doctor Moon said.

Indians Adopt Friendly

Crow as a Lucky Omen

Glacier Park, Mont.—Mrs. Yellow Kidney of the Glacier National park reservation, recently adopted a crow which flew into her tepee through the open flap. She allows the bird its freedom, and it has steadfastly stayed by her, even sleeping in the wigwam nights. The Indians regard the friendliness of this bird as a good omen, and the tribe is making "good medicine" over it.

Montana Voters O. K.

New Yellowstone Span

Sidney, Mont.—Richland county's electorate has given Montana's building program added impetus by approving at the polls the proposed $35,000 bond issue which will help finance construction of a new bridge across the Yellowstone river east of Sidney. Construction of the span will entail expenditure of $350,000, of which federal and state governments will contribute $265,000.

Children should be taught self-restraint, not self-expression. It is something everybody has to learn.

Mosquitoes Gentlemen, They Prefer Blondes

Philadelphia.—Mosquitoes prefer blondes and will pass up a brunette nine times out of ten when there is a blond in sight.

This was the assertion of Herman Horning, city entomologist and an authority on mosquitoes and their habits.

"Mosquitoes and flies are sensitive to light," explained Mr. Horning. "They are easily attracted to light-haired folks, both men and women, and seem to prefer fair people to dark."

"Another noticeable thing is that in fields where mosquitoes buzz around cows or horses it will be found that fair-colored animals are the greater sufferers."

WATCH AMOUNT OF FEED PULLETS EATDrop in Mash and Grain Used May Bring Slump.

A coming slump in egg laying of early hatched pullets can be detected by watching the amount of feed consumed, warns the poultry department at Cornell university.

A flock of 100 leghorn pullets laying 50 per cent must eat from 24 to 25 pounds of grain and mash daily. A decline of only two pounds of feed from the necessary amount that should be eaten by one hundred birds is enough to cause a falling off of egg production.

The feeder's problem is to have the flock eat the required amount daily. For various reasons, some difficult to determine, the birds may refuse to eat what they should. At the same time they become increasingly inactive. If the slump continues, a partial molt may result. Such conditions may start as the result of changes in feeds and feeding and general management, outbreaks of disease, poor ventilation, or poor breeding, but probably most frequently from violent changes in the weather.

It is best to try to check the slump before it has progressed far. If, however, the birds have dropped off in production, the next best thing is to bring them out of it as quickly as possible. In either case there are several practices that may prove helpful at this season.

Increase the hours of artificial illumination, if necessary, so that the birds have a 14-hour day. Feed cod liver oil, mixing a pint in each 100 pounds of dry mash or 1 ounce daily in the scratch grain or in the wet mash for 50 hens. Feed a wet mash composed of the regular dry mash moistened with skim milk or water, preferably just before the night feeding of grain. Continue to keep the dry mash before the birds. Liquid skim milk is advised even though there is powdered milk in the mash. The revised Cornell mash formula calls for 50 pounds of dried skinned milk or buttermilk in every 500 pounds of the mixture.

Breeding Peafowl for Ornament and Profit

On a farm peafowl may be kept without much trouble. They are very ornamental birds, and always attract attention. It is perhaps expensive to start off with a pen of these birds, which would require to consist of four hens and one cock, but doubtless they would return a profit in hatching eggs and in young birds for sale.

When birds are first installed it is necessary to watch that they do not wander too far away, which they might be inclined to do, before they get settled down to a new place, which they will do in two or three weeks' time. The owner should endeavor to encourage them to roost in an open-fronted shed. Like the turkey the peafowl likes to select a hedge to hatch out her young. As a rule she will sit when she has laid from 8 to 10 eggs. The incubation period is one of 28 days, and the youngsters are, as a rule, very active and bright. The mother hen broods them for a long time.

Rotate Chick Ranges to Avoid Coccidiosis

Rotate chick ranges as you would crops. Chick ranges should not be allowed to range on the same ground often more than once in three years. Rotating the range will avoid coccidiosis and intestinal parasites that live on the ground for several years after the chicks have been taken off.

Any range with plenty of grass is desirable for sanitation and economy. A green range is more sanitary than one with only bare ground. The growing grass hides and utilizes most of the organic waste.

Feed bills are cut materially if ample range with good grass is available. It will supply a tender, juicy feed, along with all the necessary minerals and vitamins.

Time to Fight Mite

Summer is the time when lice and mites do their most deadly work in the poultry flock. Lice live on the birds, while the mites hide in cracks and crevices in the nests, roosts and dropping boards in the day time and get on the birds at night and suck the blood. Both of these pests sap the birds' vitality and lower egg production. The birds should be treated for lice and the houses cleaned and disinfected, the droppings boards, roosts and nests being painted.

Fattening Turkeys

Begin on the first of October by gradually increasing the feeds morning and evening. If the birds are fed enough they will not move about very much. There is no advantage in shutting them up. The more milk fed the better the bird; so feed as much buttermilk as possible during this time.

Keep all hoppers and troughs clean at all times. Provide the birds with deep wooden troughs for wet mash, made from 10-inch or 12-inch boards or planks.

Chemical Checks
Mexican BeetleMagnesium Arsenate as a Spray Is Most Effective Control Measure.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The Mexican bean beetle will cause serious damage to the bean crop of many of the eastern states this season unless bean growers control the pest, says the bureau of entomology, United States Department of Agriculture. After testing many different chemicals over a period of nine years the federal entomologists recommend the application of magnesium arsenate as a spray as the most effective control measure.

Applying Poison.
The poison is applied at the rate of about two pounds to the acre. The spray is prepared by mixing two pounds of the magnesium arsenate in 100 gallons of water. In small quantities, use one ounce of the chemical to three gallons of water. Agitate the mixture before spraying, and also while spraying.

Magnesium arsenate is also effective as a dust. For dusting, entomologists recommend a mixture of one part of magnesium arsenate to three parts of hydrated lime. Dust first as soon as the beetles or young are noticed in the bean fields. For effective control it is absolutely necessary to apply the spray or the dust to the under surfaces of the leaves. Three or four applications at ten-day intervals may be necessary.

Life History of Beetle.

The Mexican bean beetle, which has invaded the greater number of the states east of the Mississippi river, passes the winter in the adult or beetle stage. The beetles appear in the fields when the first beans are from three to four inches high and begin to feed upon the leaves of the plants. After feeding for a short time the females lay their eggs on the lower sides of the leaves in groups of from 40 to 60. The time required for the eggs to hatch will vary somewhat according to weather conditions, but on the average it requires about ten days. After hatching, the larvae feed on the lower surfaces of the leaves, completing their growth in from three to four weeks. They then enter what is known as the resting or pupal stage, which lasts for about ten days. From this stage the adult beetle emerges, and another generation starts an attack upon the bean crop. From two to three generations of the insect may appear each season.

Pasture Plays Big Role in Management of Farm

"Pastures are receiving more consideration in recent years than formerly," said G. E. Young, farm management specialist of Indiana. "This increasing importance of pasture in our farming system has back of it a number of important economic influences:

"First, the importance of pastures in a rotation to maintain soil fertility and to prevent soil erosion;

"Second, the importance of production of pastures in economical live stock production;

"Third, the importance of pastures in efficient economic utilization for thousands of acres of land not well enough adapted to efficient crop production to compete successfully for that purpose with better grades of land.

"The gradual changing of our farming to a commercial basis has placed an increasing premium of greater efficiency on the use of the land, labor and capital resources at the command of each farmer. Our present type of agriculture forces on each farmer the problem of how much labor and how much investment to each acre of land will yield the greatest return for wages and interest."

FARM NOTES

Time is essential in the growing of alfalfa.

Most fungous or bacterial parasites thrive best where moisture is plentiful.

Asparagus needs heavy fertilization. Complete commercial fertilizers are of great value for this crop.

Carbon bisulfide is a good thing to rid lawns of ants. It is highly inflammable, however, and has to be used with care.

Bees need plenty of room for storing honey or they will swarm. First put on shallow supers and then section supers to provide storage space.

One of the most profitable improvements that can be made to the farm buildings and particularly to the dwelling house is a coat of good paint.

Where they can be grown, clovers, alfalfa and bluegrass make an ideal range. Either rape or kale make a good substitute where the others are not possible.

A material much used for coating silo walls is paraffin, applied either hot or as a thin paint using gasoline as a vehicle. The walls should be clean, dry and warm for satisfactory application of asphalt or paraffin coatings.

Soy Bean Increases in Use for ForageHigh Feeding Value for All Kinds of Stock.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Extensive use of the soy bean for forage and increased use of the beans for oil, meal and human food have resulted in a phenomenal increase in acreage and production of the crop, says the bureau of entomology, United States Department of Agriculture. The feeding value of soy bean seed compares favorably with that of other concentrates. Soy bean seed will furnish, at moderate cost, at least part of the high-protein concentrates necessary for stock feeding and milk production.

Soy bean hay can be fed profitably to all kinds of live stock. It makes an excellent winter ration for young cattle, sheep, horses, and mules, and can be used to good advantage for hogs and poultry. As pasture, the soy bean is valuable for all kinds of stock. Hogs glean a maximum of profit from soy bean pasture when it supplements a corn ration. Soy bean pasture may be used in late summer and early fall when perennial pastures are short.

The fertilizing value of soy beans compares favorably with that of other legumes usually grown for green manure. Straw from soy beans is valuable as roughage for wintering dry dairy cows and beef cattle. It is also a good roughage for sheep.

Ventilation in Storing Fruits and Vegetables

Fruits and vegetables put in storage this fall should have lots of ventilation during the first few weeks. Fruits ripen even after being picked, and should be given every opportunity to breathe. A shaded shed or corn crib is as good a place as any available on the ordinary farm for fall storage.

If the fruit or vegetables begin to wilt or shrivel, the air is too dry. Moisture may be added by placing pans of water in the room or by sprinkling the floor every day. Dry heat will cause spoiling more rapidly than any other condition.

Before freezing weather comes, carrots, beets and similar root crops can be buried in an outdoor pit. The dirt should be removed for about a foot down into the ground, and this pit lined with straw. The roots are then piled up in a peaked cone and covered with about six inches of straw. The straw is covered with four to six inches of dirt excepting at the top where a kind of chimney or flue is made by letting the straw stick out through the dirt. This will give ventilation during the early part of the winter. If the weather becomes very cold another layer of straw and dirt may be added and the ventilator may be closed up almost entirely. The pit should be opened up early in the spring.

Much Phosphate Wasted
in Manner of Applying

Farmers who desire to get the full dollar value from phosphate fertilizers are warned by members of the state department at Michigan State college that the method of applying this plant food is very important on some soils.

On many heavy, upland soils, broadcast applications of phosphates will not be effective, the specialists say. The character of such soils prevents the free movement of surface water into and through them and the phosphorus which has been sown on the surface does not penetrate to the soil depths where the plant roots are taking up food.

Broadcast applications of phosphates are successful on light, porous soil where the free movement of water carries the plant food to the proper depth.

Tests made by the soils department have shown that when phosphate fertilizers are sown at depth of four to six inches proper distribution of the plant food will follow, even on heavy soils. Fertilizer drills will get the material into the ground at the proper depths.

Expel Carbon Dioxide
Before Entering Silo

A danger we can't see is often ignored or forgotten. When filling a silo, always start the blower a few minutes before going into the silo yourself or permitting anyone else to go in. When necessary to go into a partly filled silo, when the carbon dioxide cannot be diluted or driven out by the blower, always test the air with a lighted lantern. If the lantern goes out or burns with a tiny flickering flame, it indicates the presence of the deadly carbon dioxide, produced during the fermentation of the corn.

Fall Plowing Favored for Best Germination

Under most conditions land should be plowed, fall plowed. The freezing and thawing during the winter leaves the soil in better physical condition than can be obtained by any mechanical means. Spring plowing often leaves the soil too loose or too cloddy for favorable seed germination, especially where small seed is necessarily shallow planted. Obviously, the soil particles do not come in close enough contact with the seed to supply sufficient moisture for germination.

Here's Latest Addition to "Pet Snake" Stories

For his own particular pet Alec Milne of Mount Vernon, N. H., prefers a snake, and for an excellent reason. Most people select pets for companionship or because of a fondness for a particular species. Not so with Mr. Milne; he says he likes his pet snake because it performs a good day's work and asks nothing in return. Mr. Milne is a truck farmer and is hampered in his work by a leg injury, which makes it impossible for him to reach down to remove stubs, worms and insects which destroy plants. So every morning the three-foot striped snake starts out with his master and follows him along through rows of vegetables. The snake enjoys itself immensely, removing the pests and eating them, says the Boston Globe. At the end of the day the "pet" returns to its haunts in a nearby pile of rocks to rest for the night.

Judge Couldn't Overlook

Such Flagrant Braggings
"Next case," called out the clerk, and a middle-aged couple were ushered into the court room. They made a pitiful picture—the strong, healthy, tall, broad woman, and her poor, meek, battered little husband.

The magistrate adjusted his glasses, then turned to the man and asked, "You are accused of beating your wife. Do you plead guilty or not guilty?"

"Guilty, sir," said the little man, without a moment's hesitation. "Thirty shillings or seven days," said the magistrate.

After the session was over, one of the court officials asked the magistrate if he hadn't been rather severe in punishing the little fellow.

"Oh, no," exclaimed the magistrate. "I had to give him something for bragging."—London Tit-Bits.

New Berry Resists Drought

Fruit growers are interested in a wild variety of black raspberry which was found in the Oregon woods. It thrived during a hot, dry season when domestic kinds languished, did not die down in winter and even produced berries in the late fall.

It is believed the specimen is a hybrid of the black raspberry with some species of blackberry. Its leaves and growing habits are much the same as those of the latter. Experts are examining the fruit to determine if it is suited to commercial shipping and canning.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

"Evil Spirit" Kills Seven

Superstition has gripped the people of Altun Kara Eissar, in Central Anatolia, following the deaths of seven Turkish women in a ravine. The side of the ravine caved in, burying the unfortunate under tons of stone and earth. They were part of a party who were collecting lime to beautify the walls of their homes in preparation of the festival of Kourban Bairam, and as similar accidents happened in 1896 and 1923, the villagers are convinced that an evil spirit dwells in the ravine and at times demands women as victims to appease its anger.

Knew What He Meant

The late Jim Pound had a woman witness on the stand complaining about her husband's persistent refusal to give her money.

"The last time you asked him, did he refuse?" asked the attorney. "Well, not exactly. I told him I had to have some and he turned around and knocked the cold without saying a word, but I knew right away what he meant."—Detroit News.

Restless CHILDREN

CHILDREN will fret, often for no apparent reason. But there's always Castoria! Harmless as the recipe on the wrapper; mild and bland as its taste. But its gentle action soothes a youngster more surely than a more powerful medicine.

That's the beauty of this special children's remedy! It may be given the tiniest infant—as often as there is need. In cases of colic, diarrhea or similar disturbance, it is invaluable. A coated tongue calls for just a few drops to ward off constipation; so does any suggestion of bad breath. Whenever children don't eat well, don't rest well, or have any little upset—this pure vegetable preparation is usually all that's needed.

Business Sentiment Changing For The Better, Bank Declares

Business sentiment is changing for the better, in the opinion of several of the leading financial authorities of the country. The Union Trust Co., of Cleveland, Ohio, in a statement issued through its magazine, "Trade Winds," says: "As the year advances prospects are for increasing industrial activities. In many lines the feeling is spreading that the low level of recession has passed and that an upturn is near at hand."

"The basis for this conviction apparently lies in the realization that on the whole in recent months consumption has exceeded production," says the bank. "The feeling is growing that surplus stocks have now been thoroughly worked off, that merchandise purchased by the public last fall must be to a large extent in need of replacement and that before long a general demand for merchandise will make itself felt to a large extent."

"That the American public will have the capacity to buy as the season progresses is indicated by the fact that savings deposits in banks throughout the United States have on the whole shown a definite increase. Although there is still a great deal of unemployment among industrial work, this is being offset to a large extent by construction work, road building projects and other seasonal activities which are adding to payroll totals."

"In spite of the industrial depression and decline in industrial earnings stockholders in leading industrial companies during the first half of the year received a greater total of dividend disbursements than they did during the first half of 1929. The credit situation is also encouraging."

Business recovery must necessarily be a slow process, the bank points out. This is but natural. Many difficulties are in the way of quick recovery, and as the period of depression has been a lengthy one, the return to normal must be accomplished by gradual steps. The important thing to note, however, is that ultra conservative financiers and financial institutions that do not take things for granted, see a substantial improvement in conditions and voice the prediction that a return to normal is seemingly assured.

Locally there is a marked improvement in business conditions and confidence in the future of business and industry is rapidly being restored. This is also true of Birmingham, where the Ensley plant of the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railway Co. has resumed operations during the past week, giving employment to 800 men who had been idle.

How To Keep Cool

A doctor friend passes along this advice: eat little or no meat; drink plenty of hydrant water—not ice water; don't over-exercise; don't fret and worry. The weather's the weather, and no one can change it. Accept it with resigned composure.

Does It Pay To Advertise?

Again this week we are reminded of the fact that "IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE." This is no longer an argument. Practically all successful business firms have brought about their success through advertising.

While we never patronize out of town merchants, and if there's one thing we do avoid is the mail order houses, but we will have to hand it to some mail order houses for advertising, and going after business.

A few months ago, and during what is called the dull season, or the season between Christmas and spring, a certain large mail order house filled all the newspapers in the country with page ads and showered the post offices all over the United States with advertising literature, this literature having been enclosed in an envelope carrying an illustration of a "BAG OF GOLD," and the suggestion that these BAGS OF GOLD could be had by trading with them at A DOLLAR DOWN, with A YEAR TO PAY.

Now during the second dull season of the year, or the period between spring and fall, similar messages were sent out, but this envelope brought with it a warning to "STOP" and a "LAST CHANCE TO BUY MERCHANDISE AT A CERTAIN PRICE, AND WITH CERTAIN PRIVILEGES."

Now the point is this: When this big business firm thinks the dull season may catch them, they put on a special advertising campaign. They spend millions of dollars annually for advertising. They know that so much money is going to be spent, dull season or no dull season, and the firm that advertises gets the business.

If they acted upon the principle that "EVERYBODY KNOWS WE ARE IN BUSINESS, THEREFORE THEY WILL PATRONIZE US IF THEY WANT ANYTHING," their doors would have been closed long ago, wherein their business flourishes, and it's all because they go after business through the medium of advertising.

That old day of people knowing you are in business, and therefore they will trade with you, is past and gone forever. In the first place, the trading public likes to be asked for their patronage. In the second place, the trading public likes to know that you have merchandise that your good name and business standing can back up. In the third place, this is the day of the "early bird getting the worm." Competition is entirely too keen and people are not going to trade with you just because you are in business.

We fight the MAIL ORDER HOUSES every day in the week, but we can not keep from admiring the manner in which they go after business.

All leading firms in the country acknowledge the benefit and great necessity for advertising. Today more is budgeted for advertising than ever before in the world. Why? Because wide awake firms know that advertising, regularly and systematically, gets the business.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE.

"ROUND TOWN"

—by Doug

Opinions expressed in this column by this writer have no connection with the general policies of this paper, being wholly those of the writer, in the manner they are written.

After some long and careful study I have at last realized one of my ambitions, and received my official credentials as the Certified Chilton County Critter-Sizer last Sunday, from the Great Dooker Pooker, International Authority on the subject of Wimmim. Homocratic candidate for U. S. Senator, organizer of The Critters Matrimonial Club, for women, and originator of the famous Dooker Pooker Pucker, the latest thing in osculatory art. I am reproducing the letter here:

To Whom It May Concern:

WHEREAS "DOUG", the Conductor of this here column has made a careful study of that immortal book "The Menace of Wimmim" and has did credit to himself in the mastery of the subject treated,

NOW THEREFORE, I THE GREAT DOOKER POOKER hereby signify honour the said "Doug" by conferring upon him the title "CHILTON COUNTY'S CERTIFIED CRITTER-SIZER," with full authority and power to demonstrate and administer the famous DOOKER POOKER PUCKER when, as and if necessary.

However, methinks it wise to warn him against three kinds of wimmim: blondes, brunettes and red heads. There is little difference in the relative worthlessness of the first two, although the brunettes are generally less undesirable than blondes. So, if I was "Doug" I wouldn't monkey around no blondes although the brunettes ain't nothin' to write home about. And if any of our men is suffering from entangling alliances with either or both of such critters and wishes to bring them to their sense, if any, they might try taking them gently by the hair and draggin' them around the house a couple times.

But redheads is the dangerousist of all animals, not excepting the wampus kitty and our men should avoid them at all times. If any of our men is already entangled with them and wishes relief, I hope they may find it through some procedure other than pushin' them very gently in front of a fast moving freight train.

Now Clantonians, that you have a local adviser, I am expecting great improvements down here. So if your wife is puttin' bread crumbs in your bed, if any, sand in your spinach, hiding your slippers, beatin' you up, or is otherwise makin' a Jiggs out of you, just write to Doug because he is qualified now, prepared and anxious to help you.

Signed with the blood of my body,

DOOKER POOKER.

Dooker Pooker delivered his immortal address last Friday evening at six o'clock over Station WAPI, stating that he was organizing his first club in Clanton, having appointed me as official manager here.

Judging from expressions heard over town from members of the fair and warmer sex, there is some opposition to the manner in which their merits and demerits are being handled by this column. Of course all this is hearsay and I cannot afford to believe it all, so in view of this, I am inviting any criticism by letter from any who wishes to criticize.

Last week I dealt generally with the unmarried group of the fair and warmer sex, so this week I will enter on a discussion of the married kind, although having not had any experience along that line myself, I may be a little off. But I am basing my opinions on the complaints from men who have been entangled by some member of the fair sex.

In my careful study round town, I have found a class of women who have buffaloed their husbands into believing they (the wives) are bosses, and seem to be getting away with it. Now this is not right and should be stopped, and can be provided I am given the proper cooperation from the said husbands. This crusade is still in its infancy and great things are anticipated in the very near future. One device of showing the wife that the husband is still boss is to administer the famous Dooker Pooker Pucker to her whenever she is inclined to do the bossing. This is the first step and must be used extensively to begin with—not by me, but by the said husband. Aside from the blondes, brunettes and redheads—married ladies are among the most dangerous and at present I have no desire for such excitement.

Then we have in town a group of the married ladies who having been married for a number of years, have the idea that they know everything about everybody and have a failing of expressing their belief which tends to throw many in the shadows of doubt. This type could easily be pointed out by one who has lived here for a certain number of years and faced this type.

It is very difficult to discuss this particular group of women on account of them not going out much and causing my affiliations with them to be cut short, which is unlike that with the single members of the fair and warmer sex. So I will have to make a special and un-interrupted study of the former before I can really go into the subject, and give it justice as should be done.

The Great Dooker Pooker is very anxious to come to Clanton and enter into a debate with the women on "The Menace of Wimmim", he taking the affirmative side of course. He is fully capable of handling this subject and success is practically assured, whether he debates or not, because his knowledge of such is astonishing. Just as soon as I can get this thing organized down here, the Dook will be down to look the situation over, so I am asking that all who have any opinions to express before the Dook gets here, that they send them in to this column as soon as possible so that due consideration will be given them. Unless the fair and warmer sex of Clanton come to their own defense I am afraid they are slated for a downfall and will draw into their shells, allowing the men to take the lead forever and ever. I am just merely giving them a chance during the next several days to come and speak for themselves.

LETTER IN MEMORY OF MRS. LIZZIE WILLIAMS

In memory of my loving grandmother, Mrs. Lizzie Williams, who departed this life June 12th.

Dear grandmother, we are lonely here.

Since you have crossed the tide,
But your noble record seems to cheer
While we stay on the stormy side,
Earth has lost many happy charms for me

Since you have gone away
But heaven will the brighter be

Since you've gone there to stay,
We miss your smiling face,

We miss your words of cheer;
We miss you all about the place—

We miss you everywhere.

We miss you in the early morn,

We miss your vacant chair;

We miss you when the day is done,

When we say our evening prayer.

Farewell, our dearest, loved one;

We'll travel on in pain,

And When our work on earth is done

We hope to meet again.

Senator Watt T. Brown

his sympathies with that element. He has never attempted to array class against class, but during four terms in the legislature his votes have shown him to be thoroughly sympathetic with the common masses of the people. It was this sympathy, and his desire to help, that caused him to make the long and finally successful fight for the establishment of the Alabama School of Trades at Gadsden, an institution where our poor boys from the farms and elsewhere may attend and get an education while learning a trade. And he can do this regardless of whether he has a penny to pay on his tuition or expenses. That is one thing that illustrates the character of Watt T. Brown.

But most important to the mass of the voters just now is Senator Brown's fight to retain the single primary system in Alabama. His two chief opponents have been making their campaign on a pledge to return to the double primary system under the guise of "majority rule." Senator Brown points out that a double primary does not provide majority rule, but that it does make it easy for selfish interests to control.

In a recent address over radio Senator Brown pointed out that a man of moderate means cannot run for office in Alabama under the double primary plan, as he would be unable to finance a second campaign. He says this would suit the selfish interests for they could easily raise all necessary funds to get out the vote for their candidate in a second race and thus obtain control of the government. Senator Brown further points out that the candidate with a plurality in the first primary has always won out in the second, and by one-third fewer votes than he polled in the first. The farmers and laborers are too busy to spend the necessary time voting in a second primary, and consequently the candidate of special interests has all the advantage when making a second race.

De we want such a condition in Alabama? This newspaper does not so believe, and the best means to prevent it is by voting for Watt T. Brown in the primary next Tuesday.

There are many things in Senator Brown's platform which appeal to us in the interest of the masses. He favors better schools, free text books, up through the sixth grade and the abolishing of all incidental fees in our public schools.

Senator Brown offers the only reasonable plan for completion of our state highway system through his Bond-as-You-Go plan. This means that bonds would be issued each year in amounts that could be cared for by tax returns from gasoline and oil. No more tax necessary. That is both sensible and good business, and with Senator Brown in the governor's chair, we could be assured of a real business administration such as has characterized his life. He has succeeded on his own account and he would succeed for the state.

Senator Brown favors giving all possible aid to our agricultural interests; he is opposed to working convicts in competition with free labor; he favors a workmen's compensation law that will be fair and equitable to all concerned; he favors banking laws that will guarantee to depositors that their money will be in the bank when the depositor wants it.

Senator Brown was elected Democratic National Committeeman two years ago when the fight was more or less dry against wet. He is a consistent dry and believes in upholding the prohibition law.

While we have no fight to make on other candidates, we commend the candidacy of Watt T. Brown as offering the best solution of issues now before the people of Alabama. Go to the polls next Tuesday and drop in a vote and help swell the plurality for Watt T. Brown.

Black Sounds Plea

selves "against the forces of monopoly and greed."

Senator Unsparring

The junior senator was unsparring in his denunciation of the Alabama Power company and its allies, charging that these interests are continuing to wring unjust profits from the pockets of the people while preventing the operation of Muscle Shoals for the public benefit. He lashed the capitalistic combine which he said was seeking to gain complete control of the food supply of the nation, and declared it is up to the forces of progressive democracy to keep up the fight for justice for the average citizens of Alabama and the country.

Lays Record Bare

He laid bare the record of the republican party during the ten years it has been in power, and declared that "never before has special privilege had such a grip on the federal government." He asserted that "the myth that republican rule brings prosperity has been exploded," and told the vast audience that real and lasting prosperity for the common people of Alabama and the country will not become a reality until the march of greedy monopolistic interests is halted by the forces of progressive democracy.

"Do not let anybody fool you," Senator Black shouted. "The big issue of the day is whether we are going to let predatory wealth and monopoly continue to run roughshod over us. If you stay out of the democratic primary soon to be held in Alabama, you will play into the hands of these selfish groups."

"If you believe in a government of, by and for monopoly, you belong in the republican party and ought to affiliate with that party. But if you believe in the principle of equal justice to all and special privileges to none, you belong in that great democratic party, the party of your fathers and mine."

People Oppose Monopoly
"I know that the overwhelming majority of the people of Alabama are opposed to monopoly. I know they do not believe in the divine ordination of wealth to rule the world. I know that the administration now in power does not speak the language of the Alabama people, or think their thoughts or reflect their views on economic questions. I appeal to the people of this state to enter the democratic primary of August 12 and cast their votes for those candidates who will give us the surest hope of a continuation of democratic progress. I appeal to the people of my state not to throw away their chance to name the kind of democrats who believe in their sort of democracy."

Senator Black was given an ovation when Judge W. W. Haralson, a veteran democratic wheelhorse of DeKalb county, introduced him to the huge audience.

Apostle of Peace

"I am here as an apostle of peace," the senator began. "I feel no resentment against anyone. I am here to appeal to you to come into the democratic primary to be held one week from next Tuesday."

The senator said he had no criticism to make of DeKalb county citizens who have often voted the republican ticket in the past, "as Thomas Jefferson wrote it into the constitution that this is a free country."

"But," he continued, "I am going to show you that you voted against your own interests when you voted the republican ticket."

"Now, my friends, there may be some leaders in the democratic party you don't like, but they are not the democratic party; they are individuals. If you stay out of the democratic primary, you will be surrendering your party to those who do not represent your views."

Appeals to Reason

"I appeal to you not to be led astray merely because you do not agree with the action of some democratic leaders. I, myself, was opposed to the action taken by the democratic executive committee of this state last December. I thought the action was neither wise nor expedient but the rule was adopted by the committee, and if you leave the democratic party where are you going? Certainly the republican party offers you no place of refuge. It is the party of monopoly."

Asserting that "extraneous issues are being raised by those who want to blind the eyes of the people of Alabama," Senator Black told his audience not to forget that "the fundamental issue is whether we are to have a government devoted to the cause of the average citizen, or a government that responds to the whip and lash of monopoly."

Issue Fundamental

"Prohibition is not the line of demarcation between the two parties in this country," he continued. "The real issue is whether the common people shall govern themselves or submit to the extortions of selfish interests."

Senator Black said a few men who control the Alabama Power company and other electric corporations have decreed that the people of Alabama shall not receive any benefits from the great Muscle Shoals properties, and that leaders of the republican administration are aiding and abetting their plan to chat the farmers out of cheaper fertilizer and prevent electric consumers from enjoying the reduced rates to which they are entitled.

"At the last session of congress we passed a bill through the senate to put Muscle Shoals in operation, cut the fertilizer bills of our farmers in half and give the people the benefit of cheaper electric current, but President Hoover's republican leaders in the house stifled that progressive measure, and sponsored a substitute to turn over the great Alabama asset to the Alabama Power company in perpetuity," he declared.

Tells of Blockade

Telling how the senate's offer to compromise the difference between the two houses was blocked by house republican leaders by direction of President Hoover, Senator Black continued.

"While this outrageous affront to the southern farmers and electric consumers was taking place, it came to light before the federal trade commission that the Southeastern Power and Light company, which owns the Alabama Power company, made a profit of 3-102 per cent on its investment in the year of 1927."

"At eight per cent, this would have paid dividends for 388 years. At six per cent it would have paid dividends for 517 years. While these unjust profits are being wrung from the people, 88 per cent of the power at Muscle Shoals goes to waste, while the Alabama Power company exploited you and me with the 12 per cent which it chose to purchase from the government. How much longer will the hard working men and women of Alabama stand for such treatment?"

Citizen Loses Out

Senator Black read statistics showing that the national wealth has doubled in the last 16 years, but that the average citizen has not benefited.

"Last year," he said, "95 corporations made 50 per cent of the country's profits. Ninety per cent of the wealth of the country is now concentrated in the hands of 13 per cent of the population—in the hands of a few privileged favorites of the republican party."

Only 2,500,000 people made enough last year to pay income taxes. More than 116,000,000 did not make enough.

"Twenty-five men today divide 193 directorships of huge capitalistic combinations. These 25 men control 82 per cent of the railroad systems, 75 per cent of the coal mines in the country, the largest steel company and most of the electric power corporations."

"These 25 despoilers are the men who control the republican party. They are the men who are plundering the consumers of the United States. They are the men who control the heartless monopolies which are striking down the anti-trust laws. They are the men who have given us prosperity for a few and poverty for many."

Democratic Party Hopes

"There is only one way to combat the greed and monopoly that now stalk abroad in this land. The democratic party offers that hope."

"Of course, there are some democrats who do not look with abhorrence on the drift towards monopoly, mergers and greed, but the party of Jefferson and Jackson and Cleveland and Bryan and Wilson stands for the doctrine of equal justice to all and special privileges to none, and most democrats stand by that principle. The people of Alabama do not belong in the republican party—the party of Hamilton and Thad Stevens and Harding and Daugherty and Coolidge and Dwight Morrow and Hoover."

"I remind you that the democratic party has carried us far in Alabama. It has taxed the interests best able to bear taxation in order to give our boys and girls educational advantages. May the time never come when an Alabama democrat elected by the people will so far forget democratic principles as to oppose taxes to keep our schools open nine months of each year."

Party Achieves All

"Everything we have accomplished in Alabama has been through the democratic party. It is the party of the common people. The other party is the party of reaction, special privilege and the plunderbund."

"I don't care how you voted in the past. Just let it be in the past, and come into the primary of August 12 to protect yourself from the forces of monopoly and greed."

It took Senator Black more than an hour to shake the hands of those who filed by to congratulate him after he concluded. It was a big day for democracy in DeKalb county, and veteran party leaders predicted that the vote here on August 12 will be a death blow to the republican organization which is hoping to carry DeKalb in November.

Mrs. Mabel Jones West and Mrs. Louise O. Charlton, of Birmingham, delivered addresses here Saturday morning in behalf of a united democracy in the state.

NEWS FROM THE NATIONAL DEMOCRATIC COMMITTEE

The Hoover administration will go down into history as the Five-Billion-Dollar-a Year administration.

Latin-America Trade Drops 20 Per Cent in Five Months

Washington, Aug. 7.—United States exports to Latin America have fallen off $100,000,000 in dollar values, or 24 per cent in the first five months of 1930, as compared with the same period of 1929, according to an analysis by the Latin-American section of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce. In adjusted dollar values—that is, taking decline in prices into consideration, the decline has been about 20 per cent.

The total trade loss in the first five months this year with Latin America is stated as $233,000,000.

In this connection, interesting figures are cited in the analysis to show that from 1912 to 1923, a period which includes eight years of Democratic administration, American exports to Latin America increased $363,000,000 as against a gain of only $278,000,000 from 1923 to 1929 under Republican administration.

On top of all this, though not mentioned in the analysis is the fact that some of the Latin-American countries are boycotting the products of the United States as a result of the Grundy ill-will tariff, which in the opinion of many is rapidly neutralizing the effect of good will utterances and Mr. Hoover's pre-Presidential good will visit.

From Herbert Hoover's Speech at Newark, N. J., Sept. 17, 1928.—"Continuous employment and prosperity of labor depends upon the continuance of those (Republican) policies."

Well, those policies have been continued.

What Do They Care?

Washington, Aug. 7.—Referring to a statement by Representative Fish (Rep. N. Y.) chairman of the Red Herring Committee, that Peter A. Bogdanov has no right in this country at all, the Baltimore Evening Sun says:

"Bogdanov is head of the Amtorg Trading Corporation—the commercial representative of the Soviet Government in this country. He explained at the hearing yesterday that he is under orders not to talk politics while he is in America, but he is doing an enormous amount of business with American manufacturers. Since the first of January he has purchased in this country for export to Russia $87,000,000 worth of American goods, and last year he bought $110,000,000 worth. If he were expelled from the country this business would go with him. Is this the time to expel a customer who buys at the rate of $150,000,000 a year?"

"Business men will answer with a fervent and whole-hearted No, but business men are not running the Red Herring investigation. That is being run by politicians, who have an election to win next November. If Representative Fish, who is a Republican, can keep the public thinking about Communism instead of about the Hoover slump, the putrescent tariff, . . . the Republican party will have a much better chance to win.

"And if they win the election, what do the politicians care if, in the process, they deprive the country of business worth $150,000,000 at a time when such business is badly needed?"

June Decline In Farm Prices 14 Per Cent Below 1929

Washington, Aug. 7.—Farm products as a whole decreased nearly 4½ per cent in average price from May to June, according to the index of Wholesale Prices and computed by the Bureau of Labor Statistics of the Department of Labor. This index shows further declines in barley, corn, oats, rye, wheat, beef cattle, hogs, sheep, poultry, cotton, alfalfa, and potatoes. Prices for the month of June averaged almost 14 per cent below those of June 1929. Textiles of all kinds also showed declines.

The declines in prices on many of these products took place despite the fact that the tariff on corn, oats, beef cattle, hogs and sheep was increased in the Grundy bill and the duty on wheat permitted to remain at 42 cents a bushel. This from the economist's viewpoint is only another illustration of the futility of tariff rates on exportable staple agricultural products.

In even such products as butter, cheese, evaporated milk, beef, button, and dressed poultry on some of which there were tariff increases, there was a decline of 1½ per cent from the May level, although the farmers were given to understand that the tariff protection of dairy products would result in increased prices.

Senator Borah who "sold" Mr. Hoover to the voters in the 1928 campaign, will take the stump again this fall, according to report, in opposition to the Hoover program of farm relief and the Grundy-Hoover tariff and this, as the cartoonist would say, is "the end of a beautiful friendship."

CIVILIANS INVITED TO VISIT FORT McCLELLAN, ANNISTON

Civilians of Alabama are extended an invitation to visit Fort McClellan at Anniston during the two weeks training period beginning August 17, when 3,000 members of the Alabama National Guard will coordinate their training activities with guardsmen from Mississippi, Florida and Georgia.

"Popoli Voluntati Subsamus," or "To the will of the people we subordinate ourselves," is the motto of the Alabama National Guard and officers are anxious to have as many civilians as possible see for themselves the work that is being carried on in camp and to become better acquainted with the purposes and activities of the guard.

Many branches of the military service will be represented at Fort McClellan including aviation, infantry, cavalry, tank corps, machine guns and gas.

The camp training program, drafted with a view to development of Alabama guardsmen both physically and spiritually, provides for military work until the noon lunch hour. All of the afternoons will be devoted to some form of supervised athletics, including baseball, track, swimming, boxing, wrestling, golf and other games.

Especial emphasis is laid by officers on the fact that all athletics are supervised and regulated, thereby enabling the men to go about their preferred sport in a systematic manner to derive the most benefit therefrom.

The Mazaroff Mystery

—By—

J. S. FLETCHER

W. N. U. Service

THE STORY

Mervyn Holt is engaged by a man calling himself Mazaroff as a traveling companion. After a short tour they put up at the Woodcock Inn on Mardale moor. They meet, casually, Mrs. Elphinstone and Sheila Mericholson. Mazaroff tells Holt they are his wife and daughter and that his real name is Mericholson. That night Mazaroff fails to return to the inn and his disappearance is unexplained. Holt meets Sheila and tells her of Mazaroff's disappearance. Holt is questioned by Police Sergeant Bannan and a reporter, Bownan. Mazaroff's murdered body is found. Crole, Mazaroff's lawyer, and Maythorne, private detective, arrive. Valuable diamonds that Mazaroff usually carried are missing. A gun, stolen from Musgrave, is found at the scene of the murder. Evidence at the inquest proves Mazaroff was Mericholson. His will leaves all to Holt. Herman Kloop, close friend of Mazaroff, is in London. From him it is learned that Mazaroff possessed two remarkable diamonds, which he had offered for sale to Lord and Lady Locke. Locke says Mazaroff had one of the stones and his agent, Armintrade, the other.

"There you are," he said. "James Mallison, no occupation, Park Lane—which seems to argue that Mr. Mallison lives with his aunt and his uncle-in-law. But perhaps Cottingley knows? Cottingley knows a lot! Do you know anything about Mallison, Cottingley?"

"Very little! Young man about town. A bit—foppish. Sporty—in a way. Lives with Sir Samuel and Lady Locke. They say this Mallison will come in for Sir Samuel's money."

"And that's all you know, Cottingley?"

"All!"

Maythorne threw the scrapbook on the table.

"Well, that's that!" he said. "We know a bit more now about Mallison. Doubtless he's the man Mazaroff spoke to at Huntingdon and at York. Now, there's nothing much in that, but it seems that Mallison was going north. And what I'd like to know is this—did he and Mazaroff ever meet again? What we want to get at is the relationship of Mazaroff's murder to the fact that Mazaroff had Blue Diamond Number Two on him when he was murdered. How many people know that he had? Well, from all we can make out, there was a man—Mallison—who certainly knew it. Mallison had seen the blue diamond—Number Two—in Mazaroff's possession. Probably, when they encountered at Huntingdon and at York, the blue diamond deal with Sir Samuel Locke was the subject of their conversation. We'll have to get and talk with Mallison, certainly. And—Armintrade? That man has got to be seen, too—he knows more than he's told; in fact, he's told nothing. And in the meantime, he must be carefully watched. Holt—is that man you left at the Woodcock, the chauffeur, Webster, a man of good intelligence?"

"Webster's a sharp, clever chap," I answered. "Smart—trusty."

"Give me some telegraph forms, Cottingley," said Maythorne. "Holt, I'm going to send Webster a wire in your name, telling him of certain things I want him to do there as regards keeping an eye on High Cap Lodge. We shall have to go back there, I expect, but it mayn't be tomorrow. As for tomorrow, will you two come here at ten o'clock in the morning?"

Crole and I went away, leaving Maythorne connecting his telegram to Webster.

I bought the evening newspapers and went off to Jernyn street, resolved on going to bed at exactly nine o'clock. I should have kept my resolution if, just as I was about to make the definite move backward, Maythorne had not turned up.

"I've seen Sir Samuel Locke, again, Holt," he said. "I've found out a certain fact that may or may not be relevant. About this chap Mallison, of course."

"Yes!" I said.

"Mallison," continued Maythorne, "went up north just about the time you and Mazaroff did. Old Locke wants to rent a shooting next year—grouse, moor, you know—and he thought it would be a good notion if Mallison went and inspected some shootings while guns were actually at work. From what he told me, I'm pretty dead certain that Mallison was in the immediate neighborhood of Mardale at the very time you and Mazaroff reached the Woodcock Inn. Eh?"

"I saw that he expected me to make some comment. I had no comment to make; all I could say was that I never seen anything of Mallison in these regions. He smiled."

"Why, no!" he answered. "Of course you didn't—or, I might say, wouldn't, but still, that's all in the clouds. Yet—Mallison was certainly there or thereabouts."

"I wonder if we shall ever find out about it?" I said.

"He gave me a queer, knowing look. We shall find out all about it, Holt," he replied. "And when we do, there'll be a fine surprise! Look here!

Do you remember that when we were at Reiver's den I picked up something close by where Mazaroff's body was found? You do? Well, now—"

He broke off short. Somebody was knocking, gently but persistently, at my outer door. I walked out of the room, across the little hall, and opened the door—to stand back amazed. Sheila stood there—alone!

CHAPTER VI

How Was It Got?

Her name sprang to my lips involuntarily as I stood there, staring at her. She laughed, half shyly, as I let it out, but she was more collected than I, and she stepped into the hall as readily as if there were nothing strange in this—to me—surprising visit. I had left the door of the sitting room open; she glanced through and saw Maythorne, and her first words were businesslike enough.

"You're Mr. Maythorne there? That's better!" she said. "Well—"

I followed her into the room and closed the door. Maythorne had jumped to his feet; for a second or two

"Yes," She Answered, "I Know a Lot More Than That."

the three of us stood gazing at each other. As for myself, I felt utterly at a loss. Maythorne was quite calm. He drew a chair in front of the fire, silently motioning Sheila to sit.

"Miss Mericholson is here because—something has happened," he said. "Exactly!"

She thrust her hand into some inner pocket and drew out a folded paper. As quietly as if she were giving me an ordinary letter to read she held it out to me.

"Mr. Maythorne is right," she said. "Something has happened. That's the will I brought it to you—myself."

I gave one glance at the signature at its foot—here, without doubt, was the will, made at York, of which Postlethwaite had spoken at the inquest. I handed it across to Maythorne.

"Where did you get this, Miss Mericholson?" he asked.

The answer came promptly and sharply—with a certain hardness of tone.

"Stole it?"

"Stole it? From—whom?"

"No use beating about the bush, now! I stole it from my own mother!"

Maythorne and I exchanged glances: Sheila looked from one to the other.

"I dare say you've heard, perhaps known, of cases where daughters have had to tell the truth about their own mothers, Mr. Maythorne?" she said.

"Well—whether it's wrong or not, I'm going to tell the truth about mine. I stole that will from her this morning, because I knew she'd no right whatever to be in possession of it, and when I'd got it, I jumped on my bicycle and made off to Black Gill Junction, and caught the next train going south—to hand it over! If I hadn't, who knows what would have become of it?"

"Yes?" said Maythorne. "Exactly. But—you know a lot more than that, Miss Mericholson. And—we three are alone."

She put her fingers together in her lap—I noticed they trembled a little.

"Yes," she answered. "I know a lot more than that. Let me tell you, for it's no use denying it, that my mother is one of those women who love money—money, to her, means all sorts of things—never mind what. I saw from the beginning that as soon as it was put into her mind that Mazaroff was really Mericholson, the idea of getting hold of his fortune began to shape itself."

"Well, I didn't know what my mother might do. I don't know now, I tell you both, and at once, what she has done—I only know that somehow or other she became possessed of that will, and that I've stolen it from her and given it up to you. That came about in this way. Night before last, late in the evening, my mother did a most unusual thing for her. Some little time after dinner, she went out, saying that she was going to see an old man who is lying ill in the village. Now, my mother is not by no means an anxious sort about old men and women who are ill and I was surprised that she should take so much trouble in this particular instance. I tell you both I suspected something then, but I didn't know what! Could I help it?"

"Go on," said Maythorne, quietly.

"Tell us everything."

"Well, last night, the same thing occurred again," continued Sheila. "She went out, on the same excuse, and she was away still longer. I heard her come in—I went to see if there was anything I could do for her. And it was then I made a discovery. She was in the inner library. I saw her through the curtains that shut it off from the big library. There was a small lamp on the table in the center; she stood by it examining a sheet of paper. And—I don't know if it was intuition, or what—it flashed across me that what she was looking at was the missing will! So—well, then I watched her—I'll confess it. She read the paper through, folded it up, looked round, and then went over to one of the bookcases, and slipped the paper into a big volume in a corner. Then I went off—and I didn't sleep. I knew there was mischief. I was certain—dead certain!—that paper was the will, wherever and however she had got it. And in the middle of the night I got up, and went down, and got the paper out in the dark, and then just struck a match—and of course one glance was enough. I put it back, and went back to bed. And then there was no sleep. I felt—oh, I don't know what I felt! There was devilry somewhere—close at hand. My own mother or not!—what business had she with that will? Where did she get it? By what means? Was she mixed up with?—but I didn't dare to think about what she might be mixed up with. What I did realize was this—the probability was that if the will remained in her possession, she'd destroy it, and then—well, then, all sorts of things would happen that I didn't want to happen. And so I determined to take matters into my own hands. I got up early. I took the will, got on my bicycle, and set off for Black Gill Junction—it was just dark when I set out. I got down to Cartle—then, of course, it was plain sailing up to town. And—yes, you've got the will!"

"You're a good looking 'un!" Maythorne said, with obvious admiration. "You know at any rate how to act without hesitation. Well!—this is a queer tale, Holt. How does it strike you?"

"It may be," I answered, "that Mrs. Elphinstone could give a perfectly proper and valid explanation as to how she became possessed of the will."

Sheila turned on me like a flash.

"Mervyn!" she exclaimed, "I believe you think I should have asked her that before I stole the will and ran off with it—to you!"

"No—no!" I protested. "I—"

"I believe you do—I believe you do!" she exclaimed. "A pretty fool I should have been if I'd as much as let her know that I knew it was there! I know what would have happened if I'd told her that I knew what was hidden in the book! She'd have burned it before my very eyes. I know! No!—knowing what I did, there was only one thing to do, and that was to place it in safety."

"Miss Mericholson's right," said Maythorne. "That was the only thing to do. And here it is, and tomorrow morning I'll hand it over to Crole. Mind you, Miss Mericholson, your mother, as Holt suggests, may have a perfectly good explanation as to how she got the will. But, under the circumstances, you took the best step you could."

Sheila jumped up, suddenly, and began to button her coat.

"Then that's all right," she said. "I've done my bit, anyway—and now I'm off—I'll sleep tonight."

"Where are you going?" I asked as Maythorne and I rose. "Wherever it is, you must let me see you there, safely!"

"Oh, you can do that," she answered, half-carelessly. "I'm going to my old school friend, Rhoda Apperley. She lives in a flat of her own in Ashington mansions, in Maida Vale. I'm all right—but you can get me a taxi and ride there with me if you like."

"And tomorrow, in the morning," said Maythorne, "let Holt call for you and bring you to my office. And by-the-by, before we go out, I've got something in my pocket, Miss Mericholson, that I'd like to show you. Come to the light."

Suddenly, from some inner pocket, he produced and laid on the table in the full glare of the lamp, an old-fashioned cairngorm brooch, set in fine, much-worn silver. He looked closely at Sheila.

"Here you've ever seen that before?" he asked. "This?"

"No!" replied Sheila. "Never! Whose is it?—What is it?"

Maythorne picked up the brooch, and began to finger it. Turning it over, he pointed to the pin at the back, which was considerably worn, and fitted loosely to its socket.

"It would easily slip out of any woman's gown," he said. "And—I picked it up at Reiver's den, close to the spot where Mazaroff's dead body was found."

"So—to the best of your recollection—you've never seen it before?" he said.

"Never!" she repeated. "Never!"

Presently we all three went down stairs, and into the street. I got a taxicab, and Sheila and I got into it. Maythorne said good-night and went off; we, too, set out on our ride to Maida Vale. She suddenly laughed shyly.

"Mervyn!" she said. "Were—were you glad to see me?"

"Will it be an answer," said I, "if I tell you that I'd been thinking about you all the evening?"

"That's a nice answer," she laughed. "Oh, well—now don't let's talk—well talk tomorrow, or next day, or some other day. But you can hold my hand, if you like, till we get to the end of the ride."

We held each other's hands—in silence—all the way to Maida Vale. I saw her safely in charge of her friend, and went back home in the same cab. Wondering, of course—wondering . . . what next?

CHAPTER VII

The Missing Man

I was back at Ashington mansions soon after nine o'clock on the following morning, and by half past Sheila and I were walking down Edgware road on our way to Maythorne's office. Amidst the crowded London streets, we were alone in a sense in which we could not have been alone in the solitudes of Mardale, and the sensation was as novel as it was delightful. Yet I knew I could not last, and we had not been walking far when Sheila voiced exactly what I was feeling.

"Mervyn!—I'll have to go back, you know!" she said. "You don't what I came for—given you the will—and now I'll have to go home—soon, anyway—and face the music. Of course, my mother has guessed long since what's happened. And—there'll be a nice row! I shall have the liveliest quarter of an hour I ever had in my life. And I shall only have one re-actor to make—not a nice one to make to one's own mother—and that's to ask her what she was doing with that will and how she got it? And, if I know her, she won't say."

"There may be developments before it comes to that," I remarked. "The fact is, we none of us know where we are. I don't, anyhow! I feel as if I didn't know what on earth's going to turn up next."

"Anything may," said Sheila. "I suppose the thing is, in these cases, to be ready for anything and surprised at nothing."

And at that very moment a surprise was within touching distance of us. Suddenly Sheila stopped dead and clutched my arm; turning sharply on her, I saw that she was staring as if fascinated at the open door of a tobacconist's shop, a few yards ahead of us.

Hard to Grasp Facts of the Stellar System

At first the brain reels a little in the attempt to grasp the facts of the stellar system, even explained with the lucidity and exactness of which Sir James Jeans is a master. From the vast extensions of the sky he carries us into the inmost recesses of the atom, where the electron whirls around its perpetual circuit several thousand million times every second. These numbers, says the London Spectator, are but dazzle painting, and it is simpler to say that the electron travels as far in a second as our latest seaplane travels in an hour. Sir James Jeans has a happy fertility in such comparisons, and forcibly strikes the imagination when he tells us that if the carbon atom were magnified to the size of Waterloo station, its electrons would be represented by six wasps flying round in the vast vacuity. All the rest is emptiness; and so in the celestial spaces it is immense odds against any given spot being occupied. "We live in a gossamer universe; pattern, plan and design are there in abundance, but solid substance is rare."

Put Health First

The views of students as to what makes life happy are revealed by a ballot competition conducted by the National Union of Students throughout the universities of England and Wales, says the London Observer. The following was the order of importance voted for the various attributes conducive to a happy life:

A sound constitution; a sense of humor; a congenial occupation; an assured future; a charming wife (or husband); a blameless reputation; £400 a year; a brilliant career; a thick skin; a good cook; a persuasive manner; a library and a poker game (equal); an artistic temperament; a schoolgirl complexion.

He Knew the Law

The late Halsey Fiske of insurance fame told this story at an insurance men's banquet in New York.

"An American company," he said, "opened a branch in eastern Europe and was soon doing well."

"A rich peasant visited the main office one day, insured his farm, and then said to the manager:

"Now, then, sir, I must have everything plain and clear before I go. Exactly what would I get if my house and barn were to burn down tonight?"

"Not more than ten years and not less than three," said the manager.

HOME STUDY BEING OVERDONE

By LOUISE STRACHAN, National Child Health Director.

EXCESSIVE home study and gainful occupation for children outside of school hours are partly responsible for deaths from tuberculosis and heart disease among high-school pupils. The death rate from tuberculosis and heart disease in children between the ages of fifteen and twenty is greater than it is at any other age level.

In the last decade this group has shown less decrease in morbidity and mortality from these two diseases than has any other five-year-age group. This is singularly true in the case of cardiac conditions.

One of the great problems which has given rise to this condition is outside employment of school children. All persons must have rest and the adolescent at school is especially in need of it. Another problem is excessive home study assignments. There is a decided need for a central authority in the assignment of home lessons. Teachers must have knowledge of the home conditions and consider the child as an individual, so that if he has to work after school hours he need not be burdened with too much home study.

At the present time the American child suffers from too much home work. Most assignments given to high school children require one to two hours and with several teachers assigning work the tasks may require six to eight hours. This cannot be permitted if good health is to be maintained. A central authority in assignment of home tasks would moderate these tasks in proportion to the ability of the child and his home conditions.

CARING FOR THE UNEMPLOYED

By GOVERNOR ROOSEVELT, New York.

Shorter working days and shorter working weeks, better planning of work to prevent periods of unemployment, increased public works, while they may relieve unemployment, will not eliminate it. Unemployment insurance we shall come to in this country just as certainly as we have come to workmen's compensation for industrial injury.

Ninety per cent of unemployment is wholly without the fault of the worker. Other nations and governments have undertaken various systems which insure their workers when unemployment comes. Why should we fear to undertake the task?

I warn against the possibility of old-age insurance becoming a mere dolo, and also against a national tendency to pay the cost of unemployment insurance out of current revenues of government.

Unemployment insurance should be upon an actuarial basis, with the workers themselves contributing to its support. The old-age security law passed this year in New York may be characterized as one short step in the right direction, and the real solution would create a fund, not contributed by state and county governments alone, but which would be raised in part by workers and possibly by the employers.

WORLD NEED OF BROTHERHOOD

By DAVID LLOYD GEORGE, Former British Premier.

Every country of the world is preparing for war and there are more men trained for war in Europe, Asia and America than before the catastrophe of 1914. I speak from personal experience when I say that although I have gone to live in a quiet place in Surrey, I hear every day the rattle of machine guns in one camp, the hoarse roar of cannon in another, and, carried by the westerly breeze, I hear the boom of naval artillery from the direction of Portsmouth, and the drone of airplanes.

That is going on in every civilized land on earth. It is really time the churches took this thing in hand. The international situation is bad. We are building up barriers against each other, putting up fences against each other. We are blockading each other, and we are trying to starve each other. Trade is treated as if it were contraband. The atmosphere is poisoned with suspicion and mistrust.

Let us have brotherhood. It is only the Christian churches that can do it.

INJUSTICE IN EXCLUSION ACT

By JANE ADDAMS, Pioneer Social Worker, Chicago.

The present immigration exclusion act is a dead hand on the future. Wives or husbands who come on a visit to their families and overstay their permits are deported and the family can never be reunited in this country. Students who may change the school they are attending here to one which is not on the accredited list of the Department of Labor are ejected and can never return. Such hard-and-fast exclusion provisions, regardless of the effect on the persons regulated, cannot possibly work to the advantage of America.

The total number of deportations shows an enormous increase during the last ten years. From a rate which approximated several thousand a year at the time the drives were instituted, the number increased to 9,495 in the year after the passage of the immigration act of 1924; to 10,904 in 1926; 11,662 in 1927; 11,625 in 1928; and 12,908 in 1929.

There is anguish in the family groups where such experiences take place. To make an old mistake indelible is always of doubtful value.

TRADE HAMPERED BY LAWS

By MATTHEW WOLL, Vice President A. F. of L.

I would scrap the Sherman anti-trust law and allow employers to exchange cost and price data as the best means of stabilizing the textile industry. The restrictions imposed today by law are a relic of a business era long since gone, but these restrictions penalize every social force by the tremendous waste of unintelligent production.

America has outlived the era of competitive philosophy. Limited manufacture and the subsequent rivalry for business are working to the detriment of all classes. The only way we can improve the situation is by allowing manufacturers, in co-operation with their employees, to adjust their output to consumer needs.

I believe an increase in consuming power would result from a repeal of these laws, because employers would be able to stabilize their wage cost without the anarchistic, blind, cut-throat tactics used in present business conditions.

Spark Plugs Cause of Many Faults of Engine

Spark plugs that are worn out, improperly adjusted or dirty, cause misfiring of the engine, resulting in hard starting, excessive drain on the battery, poor engine performance, higher gasoline consumption, and larger engine repair expense.

All that is needed to correct such faults is to clean or re-gap the plugs; or if the car has gone some 10,000 miles with the same spark plugs, to replace them with new ones.

This mileage is about the limit at which engineers put the efficient life of spark plugs.

If the spark plugs need cleaning, fill the lower part of the plug with alcohol or equal parts of ammonia and water, and let stand for a few minutes. Rub the carbon from the insulator with a cloth-covered stiff wire or wooden peg. Then wipe the plug dry. Clean points with emery cloth.

The spark plugs are equipped with two electrodes set in such a manner that the electric current must jump across a small gap from one to the other. In making this jump a spark occurs. It is this spark that ignites the mixture of gasoline and air in the cylinder. The size of the gap between the electrodes affects the type of spark adjustment. The gap for use in average motors should be no wider than .025 inch. For high compression motors it should be .020 inch. At the same time the distributor contact points should be adjusted. These should be between .015 inch and .020 inch in width of gap.

Tests show that a motor in which spark plugs had been used for a little over 10,000 miles developed 31.2 horse power, when run at an engine speed equivalent to 20 miles an hour. The same motor run at the same speed equipped with a new set of spark plugs gave a horse power reading of 38.0, an increase of 6.8 horse power.

The importance of inspecting the spark plugs and breaker contact points at least twice a year cannot be over emphasized as high compression engines of today impose a greater demand upon them than ever before.

Son Making Good

Walter Johnson, Jr., son of the "Big Train," appeared on the mound for the Bethesda Juniors in the Capital City league for the first time since he was injured when struck by an automobile several months ago. His father, at the same time, was piloting the Nationals into first place in the American league. This photo shows Walter, Jr., warming up on the mound.

THE MOTOR QUIZ

(How Many Can You Answer?)

Q. What is the cause of an engine back-firing through the carburetor?

Ans. Improper valve or ignition timing, crossed or defective ignition wires, lean mixture or sticking valves.

Q. What is the cause of back-firing in the muffler?

Ans. An intermittent spark caused by improper adjustment of distributor breaker points, sticking breaker mechanics, loose or badly worn distributor brush, short-circuited wires or loose connections. Turning off the switch and coasting with the car in gear will cause gas to collect in the muffler which will often ignite when the switch is turned on.

Q. What percentage of stolen cars is recovered?

Ans. Ninety-three per cent. Seven years ago this percentage was only 74.

Q. What percentage of the 5,198,167 motor vehicles produced in the world in 1929 were made in the United States?

Ans. Eighty-three and one-half per cent.

PITCHER PENNOCK FIGHTS OLD AGE

HERE'S an old saying that youth must be served and that old age must fall by the wayside. Herb Pennock, the slender southpaw, is quietly and earnestly fighting to hold his own with Col. T. Ruppert's ball club, and it appears as if he will succeed in his task of keeping youthful, for a while, anyhow.

Pennock has reached the heights of big league baseball more than once. He has passed the peak of greatness as a pitcher and is now on the road that leads to the way out or to the minors. The southpaw no doubt realizes this much himself, but he would like to have another season or two before he quits the game he loves so well and retires to his home in Kennett Square to give all his time to his family and the breeding of foxes.

Pennock believes that he will have a successful season and help the Yankees to overthrow Connie Mack and his world's champion Athletics in the American league race. Bob Shawkey, manager, holds the same opinion as his veteran southpaw. According to Bob the "Doc" and "Doc" Frazier, the trainer, there is nothing out of gear with Pennock's arm and Herbie should be able to take his regular turn on the mound, not every four days, but once in about every five or six days.

This is great news as there is no more likeable or affable individual in baseball than this same Herb Pennock.

Herb Pennock.

Book on Sports Reveals Few Causes of Genuine Fatigue

The athlete who has wondered about the tired feeling that follows unusual exertion is given the "inside dope" by Professor Elwyn of Columbia University in his new book, "Yourself, Inc." The runner or swimmer isn't simply tired; he has been poisoned—and the villain in the case is himself.

Research has shown that exercise develops in the muscles a poison called lactic acid, which must be slowly burned up by oxygen to effect recovery. In the few seconds of a 100-yard dash more than an ounce of acid is formed, requiring over an hour before the last drop is burned away. The heat generated in an active person's muscles consumes the oxygen and releases the carbon dioxide.

Experiments have shown that a swimmer exhales 12 times as much carbon dioxide as an idle person does. A marching man with a heavy pack develops sufficient heat every five minutes to raise the heat of his body one degree Fahrenheit; at the end of 10 hours, however, he does not reach boiling point, thanks to his wonderful automatic cooling system.

AUTOMOBILE HINTS

Kentucky has one automobile for every nine persons.

Motorists who want to rob nature of its wild flowers ought to be taken into custody along with the other bandits.

Noise under the floor board, when the car is coasting with the clutch disengaged, may be a clue to wear in the universal joints.

To the reckless speeder in the underworld every pedestrian is a "jay walker" who takes his chance of having placed himself accidentally on the spot.

Don't, if you are a woman driver, presume that every man will give way to you. Even if he should want to in this unchivalrous age, he cannot be expected to inspect the driver of each car.

There is a clue to what is wrong with the car in the color of the smoke that issues from the exhaust pipe. If it is black, the meaning is too much gasoline. Blue or white smoke indicates an excess of oil in the engine.

An efficacious means of keeping awake while motoring is to keep one foot off the floor, says Time, the Newsmagazine. The probable explanation is that the strained position forces constant attention, and wakefulness.

Control Drivers

The age limit for driving automobiles in England is now at seventeen. All operators are required to obtain a driver's license. This license is issued only with certain specifications. Most important of these is that which requires the applicant to make a declaration as to whether or not he is suffering from any mental disease or physical ailment which to his knowledge would cause the vehicle while under his control to be a danger to the public.

Progress in Forestry

Making Rapid Strides

A quarter of a century has brought an extraordinary change in the forestry-policies of the government, marking notable progress in conservation, says World's Work. In 1905, when the forest service was created, there were 60 reserves, with an area of 50,000,000 acres. The area today is 160,000,000 acres, embraced in 150 national forests.

The physical development of the forests has progressed continuously in the last 25 years. In 1905 there were no fire towers or lookout stations; today 631 are maintained. As many as 1,180 public camp grounds have been improved during the period. Since 1907 the mileage of national forest roads has been extended from 330 to 16,730. Forest trails have increased from 5,844 to 47,175 miles. Mileage of telephone lines built for fire protection and administration purposes has increased from 539 to 85,926.

Receipts of the forest reserves in 1905 amounted to $35,500, all for timber sold. Receipts last year totaled $6,299,802. Of this amount more than $4,000,000 came from the sale of timber cut under forest service supervision on a sustained or continuous "crop" basis.

Conquering Diphtheria

Modern publicity methods allied with the application on a vast scale of the latest principles of public health administration, were so effectively used against diphtheria in New York last year that the disease is expected to be extinct there within five years. Such was the purport of the first annual report of the diphtheria commission concerning its work in 1929 under Dr. Shirley Wynne, commissioner of health, which pointed out that a half century ago one out of every two contracting the disease died of it.

"No, I'm not," said Bobby, "we don't have the same speech on our faces."

Pope's Title Changed

The pope's title has been changed according to the last issue of the Vatican directory. Formerly, in addition to the numerous titles, the Roman pontiff bore the title "Sovereign of the Temporal Domains of the Holy Roman Church," referring to the papal territories taken from the Holy See by the Italian government. Now the temporal title is simply "Sovereign of the State of Vatican City."

Working Over Old Dumps

A Utah copper company is producing about 100,000 pounds of copper daily from the huge dumps of tailings that have risen in the course of years. The dumps are estimated to contain at least 1,000,000,000 tons of waste and oxidized ore.

Acidity

The common cause of digestive difficulties is excess acid. Soda cannot alter this condition, and it burns the stomach. Something that will neutralize the acidity is the sensible thing to take. That is why physicians tell the public to use Phillips Milk of Magnesia.

One spoonful of this delightful preparation can neutralize many times its volume in acid. It acts instantly; relief is quick, and very apparent. All gas is dispelled; all sourness is soon gone; the whole system is sweetened. Do try this perfect anti-acid, and remember it is just as good for children, too, and pleasant for them to take.

Any drug store has the genuine, prescriptive product.

College Baseball Players Not Agreed on Coaches on Bench

College baseball in the East and West differed in one unimportant respect. To keep the coaches from haranguing the umpires the Big Ten had an agreement to keep the coaches on the bench, but in the East the tendency was to keep the coaches off the bench.

Fifteen years ago, when Tack Hardwick was Harvard's baseball coach, Yale asked that the coaches be kept off the bench during the Harvard-Yale series and the same arrangement was in effect in the sixty-second annual series this spring.

Hardwick, however, says that the system is no good. "College baseball is miles and miles behind professional baseball in strategy, skill and everything else," he says. "Yet the professionals have directors on the bench. It will take a lot of argument to convince me that college players do not need a bench director."

It really takes the college boys to prove how intricate baseball is. They play pretty smart football and basketball, but it is really astonishing to see how many simple and fundamental mental mistakes they make in almost every game of baseball which they play.

Tuesday and vote without prejudice or passion for the Democratic candidates of their choice and then wage an aggressive fight to put Chilton County into the Democratic column in the General election. He stated that the longer he saw the working of the National Republican Party and saw its efforts in behalf of special interests and the privileged few and big interests in oppressing the small industry and caused the farmers and laborers to go with empty dinner pails, the more convinced he was that the people will soon place the Democratic Party in power at Washington. He said he believed that those who have heretofore voted the Republican ticket in Chilton County should now be convinced of the utter folly of principle platforms of the Republican Party and urges every one of these men and women to come into the Democratic Party and help put over a great victory for the Democratic Party in Chilton County and Nation next November. He pointed out that those who vote the Democratic ticket will have the privilege of taking part in selecting the officers who will have control of the government for the next four years, a privilege they will not have if they vote in the Republican primary, as only county officers will be on the Republican ticket. Congressman Jeffers stated that he would visit Chilton County within the next few weeks.

MR. AND MRS. JAMES RETURN FROM TRIP TO CANADA

Mr. and Mrs. Frank P. James returned last Friday from a motor trip to Canada, New York, Washington and other points of interest. They were accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Beard of Birmingham. The party attended the convention of the Associated Sign Contractors of North America. Among the many points of interest visited by the party on this trip were Coney Island, Chinatown in New York, Niagara Falls, the U. S. Capitol, including various departments of the government there, and Albany, N. Y.

J. G. Duncan, Jr.

Candidate for State Senator
Fifteenth Senatorial District, comprising the counties of Autauga, Chilton and Shelby—Subject to the Democratic Primary.

To the Voters of this, the 15th Senatorial District:

I wish to say that I shall greatly appreciate your vote and influence in this campaign. To those of you whom I have not had the pleasure of seeing personally, I wish at this time to express my regrets that I have been unable to do so, and to extend to you in advance, my sincere thanks for your support.

Just a personal word. My home is Prattville, Alabama, Autauga County. I have lived my entire life there. My business is General Insurance. I am also interested in a retail mercantile business in that city. I am a member of the Baptist Church, Masonic Fraternity, and The American Legion.

I entered this race of my own accord and am not lined up with, or in any way obligated to, any individual, clique, organization or corporation. I have only one promise to make any one, and that is, if elected I will serve the entire District to the very best of my ability.

I have no fight to make on anyone. I have conducted my campaign strictly on a high plane and will continue to do so, even in the face of wrongful accusations should any come in the heat of the campaign.

It has been called to my attention that some statements have been circulated to the effect that I will be too friendly with the corporate interests of the State. These statements are unfounded, as I absolutely have no corporate connections whatsoever, and have no other purpose in mind except to serve the entire people of my District, if I am elected to the State Senate. I think of corporations in a friendly manner, but at the same time they should bear their share of state taxation. Having never had and not now having any corporate connections they have no claim whatsoever on me, except to the extent of what is right, and, if elected to the State Senate, I shall at all times adhere, so far as I can, to the wishes of the majority of the people in my District who elected me, and shall see to it, so far as I can, that everyone gets a fair and square deal.

2½ Cents in the Dollar

Not Wall Street's idea of money making

Why has A & P more customers than any other grocer on earth? ... "It sells for cash at the lowest price possible," answers The Business Week, a magazine that studies business methods.

And why are A & P's prices so low? ... "It buys direct from original producers, and makes every known short cut in distribution," says The Business Week.

Then, not satisfied with other people's say-so, Business Week digs into the official records of A & P's sales and profits, and by a simple sum in arithmetic gets the rest of the story—namely, that A & P keeps only 2½ cents of every dollar taken over its counter.

"Two-and-a-half cents profit is not Wall Street's idea of something to capitalize," says Business Week, explaining Wall Street's complete separation from so large a business enterprise as A & P. But it is A & P's idea of fair treatment of the housewife.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Dirigible R-100 Makes Safe Flight From Britain to Montreal, Canada.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

GRAND BRITAIN'S big dirigible, the R-100, made a successful and uneventful crossing of the Atlantic ocean, taking off from Cardington, Wales, and reaching Montreal about 16 hours later. There, at St. Hubert airport, she was tied up to the mooring mast that had been built for the purpose, and her passengers landed, well pleased with the trip.

Until the airship reached the vicinity of Newfoundland she maintained a speed of between 50 and 70 knots, but the ever-present fogs then forced a slowing down until she got well into the Gulf of St. Lawrence, having passed over the Belle Isle straits. While passing over Quebec the airship sustained some damage to the fabric covering one of the fins, and the motors were shot off until repairs had been made. This delayed the arrival at Montreal somewhat and prevented the tying up of the ship to the mooring mast until early Friday morning. Throughout the voyage radio communication was kept up with bases in England and Canada and with ocean liners. The northerly route was taken, following the great circle by way of north Ireland to a point south of Cape Farewell, Greenland, then to Belle Isle and along the St. Lawrence river to Montreal.

Squadron Leader R. S. Booth was in command, with four officers and a civilian crew of 30 men. Among the few passengers were: Lieut. Com. Charles Dennistoun Burney, managing director of the firm that built the R-100; Lieut. Com. R. St. John Prentice of the British aircraft carrier Courageous; and Maj. G. H. Scott, famous British airship commander.

CANADA'S parliamentary elections were watched with great interest because the results are likely to be important to the United States as well as to the Dominion. The Liberal government, headed by Mackenzie King, was decisively defeated by the Conservatives, and Richard B. Bennett, Conservative chief, will be the new premier. Mr. King himself was re-elected to parliament, but many members of his cabinet lost out, these including Finance Minister Charles A. Dunning, who drew up the budget increasing tariffs against the United States and lowering them to Great Britain, which constituted the main issue of the campaign.

A quick call to a session of the Canadian parliament is considered one certain result of the political upset.

Canada's extension of tariff preferences to Great Britain, without exacting tariff preferences in return, can be expected to be withdrawn or modified as the result of the election. The electors turned it down in defeating the government candidates. Canada, in other words, will make its trade treaties with the world, irrespective of empire ties and sentiment.

The St. Lawrence seaway plan is once more thrown in the realm of political controversy and uncertainty. Higher tariffs against the United States, in the absence of a Canadian-American trade agreement, are to be expected under a Bennett premiership.

STARTLING news came from China. A large Communist army took possession of Changsha, capital of Hunan province, the government troops retiring without making any defense, and the city of half a million inhabitants, a commercial, political and educational metropolis, was looted and partially destroyed by the Reds. Ten government buildings were burned, as were numerous foreign properties and the Japanese consulate, and the offices of the Standard and Texas Oil companies were robbed. Wealthy residents who were unable to escape were tortured to death. The Red invaders proclaimed a Soviet republic.

The burning and looting, says a dispatch from Shanghai, was carried on in a systematic manner. The city was divided into 50 wards, each administered by a Communist leader with a group of ruffians. All power was centered in a supreme Soviet committee. Gangs of Communists, headed by squads of Red troops, surrounded buildings marked off by the supreme command for depredation.

Orators proclaimed the Communist purpose "to distribute the surplus wealth," and selected followers entered the buildings and transported furniture and valuables to the street, where they were auctioned off.

The proceeds were pocketed, after which the coolies and town ruffians were invited to enter and complete the looting. After this the places were burned and the crowd moved on to the next building scheduled for destruction.

More than 200 foreigners, 20 of them Americans, were at the summer resort at Kuling, near Kiukiang, and were considered to be in grave danger. On Wednesday the American gunboat Palos, which was approaching Changsha, was fired upon by Communists and five of her crew wounded. The Palos returned the fire, using machine guns and three-inch rifles at close range, and finally dispersed the Reds. The Palos had previously helped evacuate foreigners from Changsha and was returning to survey the ruins of the city. Two American missionaries, Rev. William Lingle of Salisbury, N. C., and Rev. Allen Cameron of Lawrence, Kan., remained in Changsha because they had conscientious objections against accepting protection from gunboats.

UNDER the guidance of Prohibition Director Amos W. W. Woodcock, dry enforcement is to be carried out in a manner that will not be so likely to arouse the rage of the citizenry. Mr. Woodcock proposes to have the dry law agents trained "to act always as gentlemen" and to resort to the use of firearms only in self-defense. He called the administrators and special agents all in to Washington and laid before them a statement of his policies which was said to have been approved by President Hoover and Attorney General Mitchell. Schools will be set up to teach the agents "to use their brains rather than their brawn in discharging their duties," to train them in methods of gathering evidence, in knowledge of the law and in habits of discipline.

Five major points were emphasized in the Woodcock statement aside from the proposal to maintain high personal standards for agents. These were: (1) Establishment of a system of daily reports to Washington by deputy administrators; (2) scientific research into such problems as drunkenness statistics, alcoholism deaths, and hop and corn sugar production; (3) efforts to obtain more state aid in dry law enforcement; (4) efforts to secure more uniform sentences for violators; and (5) concentration upon the commercial liquor traffic rather than upon "pitiful, plebeian, non-commercial cases."

Supervisors of industrial alcohol permits also met in Washington and, with their chief, James M. Doran, considered how they might best combine their efforts with those of the prohibition enforcement unit.

President Hoover's law enforcement commission will issue a second formal report of its work this fall. Arrangements for formulation of the document will be completed at a meeting here early in October.

Leaders of nearly all the dry organizations in the country issued a signed declaration of policy which was looked upon by many as a recognition of the growing antagonism to prohibition enforcement as it has been carried on in the past. In it they repudiate all enforcement policies that do not regard and safeguard every personal right guaranteed by the Constitution, and pledge themselves to a campaign of education. The declaration states it is the paramount purpose of the Eighteenth amendment to destroy traffic in intoxicating beverages, and that the enemies of prohibition try to make this appear as offensive sumptuary legislation.

OUT of the welter of Democratic aspirants for the gubernatorial nomination in Texas, "Ma" Ferguson, former governor, and Ross S. Sterling, wealthy Houston publisher, emerged in the lead, and the victor will be determined in a run-off primary, since neither of them had a majority. State Senator Love, who led the successful bid in Texas from Al Smith in 1925, was among those badly beaten. United States Senator Morris Sheppard was renominated.

There will have to be a run-off election in Oklahoma also. The leaders in the Democratic race for governor were "Alfalfa Bill" Murray and Frank Buttram; and for United States senator, Thomas P. Gore, the blind former senator, and Charles J. Wrightman.

WITH virtually no opposition the London naval treaty was passed by both houses of the British parliament and then was made effective so far as Great Britain is concerned by receiving the formal approval of King George under quaint procedure instituted during the reign of Henry VIII.

IN LINE with the Hoover program helping business, representatives of the various branches of the building industry and allied agencies of finance met in Chicago and created a permanent national conference on construction. Julius H. Barnes, chairman of the national building survey conference last fall, presided and was made head of a committee to complete arrangements for the organization of the conference.

RUSSIAN goods will not be kept out of this country merely because they come from a Soviet state. This in a sentence was the stand taken by President Hoover, and consequently Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Lowman had to reconsider his decision denying the entry of two shiploads of Russian wool pulp at New York imported by the Amtorg Trading corporation. Any action barring Soviet goods the President held must be based solely on the law applicable to all nations and designed to exclude convict made goods and prevent "dumping" practices on the part of countries competing in American trade.

IF THE Wafdists or nationalists of Egypt succeed in their campaign against King Fuad, Abbas Hilmi, former khedive who was deposed by the British, may be restored to the throne. The British government is said to be disposed to accept this result, though both Italy and France have declared their opposition. The Wafdists assert that as long as Fuad is on the throne there will be no peace in Egypt and no possibility of settling disputes with Great Britain.

Greater Rumania

One of Bucharest's Modern Public Buildings.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

RUMANIA, the latest of the world's monarchies to change kings, has undergone such great changes in the past dozen years that it has in effect had a bloodless revolution. This period has seen the distribution of 5,500,000 acres of land to more than 1,400,000 peasants.

Before the war Rumania was a country of the landed rich and the landless poor. Today the maximum holding permitted to one individual is 1,235 acres. King and nobles gave up their estates to fulfill the demands of the agrarian reform. What Russia, Mexico and other countries have done in the matter of land distribution at the cost of many lives and much money, Rumania accomplished without a shot.

But reform was not without cost. Uncertainties, lack of organization to meet new conditions, and lack of transportation facilities increased the cost of borrowed money to 12 and 14 per cent. Credit is tight in a country where all the money in circulation must pass through the national treasury as taxes three times per year.

Greater Rumania is nearly three times as large as pre-war Rumania. The new nation took in Transylvania, the Banat, Bucovina and Bessarabia, and has yet to digest them. Old Rumania was the size of England. Greater Rumania is larger than England adding to itself Wales, Scotland and Ireland. Like the units of Great Britain, each is different; Bessarabia is an extension of the Russian black earth prairie; Bucovina, a forested region; Transylvania an upland notable for industries as well as agriculture; the Banat a lowland.

Farming Comes First. After the war Rumania saw visions of an industrial future. The country has ample resources: oil, water power, wood, ore, and a good labor supply. Ten years have dimmed the vision but have not wiped it out. Eight out of ten Rumanians still are farmers so the nation has decided to make a good job of farming before turning to industry. Co-operatives have been organized. Groups of peasants find they can afford to buy American farm machinery. A grain grading law was passed in 1925. Silk culture started from nothing has increased to an enterprise employing 4,000 workers and $15,000,000 capital.

Since the World War Rumanians have turned definitely from wheat to American corn. Greater acreage is planted in corn than wheat. Corn must displace bread as a national food. Bessarabia looks like Kansas. But in 1928 a second drought hit the country. The corn crop was a failure and Rumania, a country which has exported cereals for years, had to import corn. The government acted to forestall famine in some regions.

The similarity of parts of Rumania to Kansas extends to sunflowers for which both regions are famous. In Rumania sunflowers are a standard crop; 394,355 acres were planted in sunflowers last year. Oil pressed from sunflower seeds serves as a constituent of butter substitutes.

Four foundation stones support life in Rumania: cereals, oil, lumber, and live stock. Production of oil and lumber has progressed vigorously, not enough, however, to offset losses in cereals and live stock.

Buy American Automobiles.

Despite the depression, and lack of roads, sales of automobiles, most of them American, continue to increase. In 1928 12,000 were sold—a record. Many of them go to the oil fields where they permit the engineers in charge of outlying wells to get to Ploesti occasionally for the enjoyment of companionship in the International club.

Automobiles are the biggest item of American imports which include accessories, films, oil field equipment, radios, phonographs and records, engines, insecticides and electric refrigerators to the amount of $12,000,000. Walnuts and fur skins are Rumania's chief exports to the United States.

Among the improvements to which Rumania looks forward is the reclamation of vast areas of swamp land. Seven thousand square miles of marsh will afford ample land for the remaining landless peasants, numbering about 600,000.

Bucharest (Bucuresti), capital of Rumania, has long been known as "The Little Paris of the Balkans." It has many earmarks of the French capital. One of its wide tree-lined thoroughfares is called the "Little Champs Elysee" and there is an Arc de Triomphe, both of which suggest the atmosphere of Paris. The bridge paths flanking the thoroughfare constantly resound with the thud of hoofs of blooded horses, mounted by smart looking men and women; and the seemingly endless mass of pedestrians strolls in a gay mood with no apparent destination.

Bucharest Has Fine Shops.

Bucharest impresses the traveler from the time he emerges from one of its modern hotels downtown. Shops as fine as can be found in most capitals of the world line the business streets. Behind large plate glass windows the American traveler finds such familiar articles as American-made flashlights, radios and phonographs.

It is not necessary to find an automobile salesman to see American automobiles on display. The streets are full of them. In front of a hotel or business building six to eight of a dozen automobiles are popular American makes and across the street a billboard is plastered with an advertisement of a popular car made in Michigan. The doorways of the large movie or elms houses display bright colored advertisements with the names of American actresses emblazoned in large letters.

Bucharest is a walled town, without the wall. Crowded, as was the custom when city walls were the main defense, Bucharest drops away from the glitter of the Calea Victoriei and the boulevards to the run-down Orientalism of the outer sections and then abruptly to the empty, dusty plain. Its population has more than doubled in the last decade and houses, as elsewhere in eastern Europe, are at a premium. It requires influence, persistence and bribery to get into one of the few hotels the main attractions of which are the dining rooms, often open to the sky.

Surrounded as it is by rich farming country, Bucharest has not lacked for food, and the restaurants are well filled at all times. The Rumanian loves the uniform, and high heels on soft laced boots like those of the French aviators suit the fancy of the young dandies whose perfumed mustaches preserve their dignity by reaching straight out instead of turning up at the ends. The women are chic.

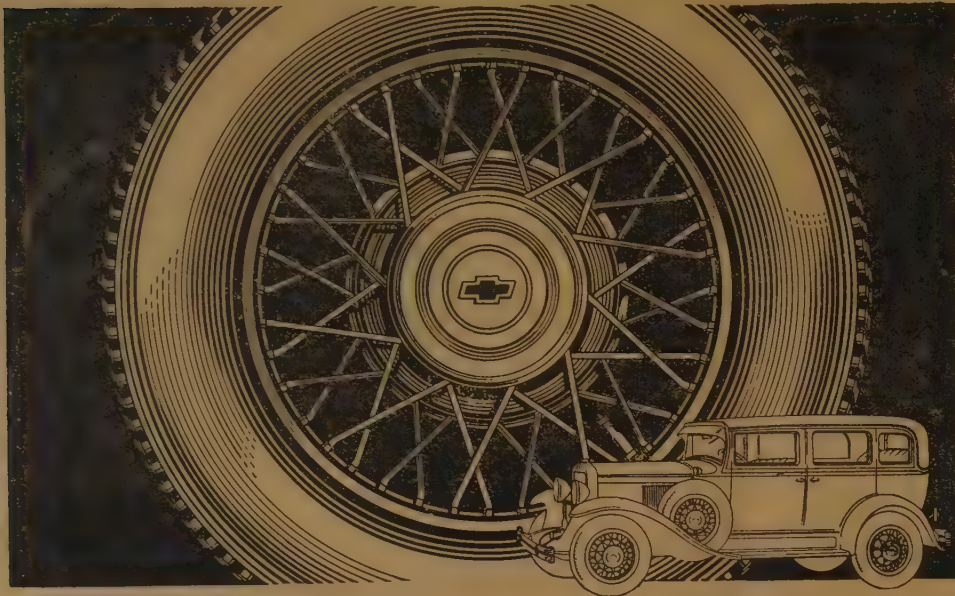

Some Striking Contrasts.

The few fine buildings are mixed in with unassuming structures which would never be at home in Paris or Berlin, and opposite the imposing Wafi College (Tigane women may be working at a noisy power saw which is reducing crooked poles to firewood. The few main streets are lined with modern buildings and new residence avenues are stretching out toward the periphery of the circular city; but in the crowded center of the town the confusing litter of tiny streets and alleys reminds one of a rabbit warren.

In the market place, the traveler gets a glimpse of the rural folk who cluster about stands of vegetables which they bring to the city from the rolling farm land nearby. Here the men seem to display no particular type of costume, most of them wearing European coats and trousers and there are as many derbies as there are caps and soft hats and fez-shaped woaden head coverings. On the other hand the women folk blaze forth in bright-colored shawls which cover the head and shoulders, and aprons with stripes of a half dozen unblending colors. Their dresses are just short enough to reveal in the summer time that all feet are not shod.

HUGH D. MERRILL asks your support in his candidacy for

LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR

Subject to the Action of the Democratic Primary, August 12, 1930

"Having enjoyed a long and varied legislative experience, having been elevated to the highest position in the Lower House by his fellows that of the Speakership; having made a success as a lawyer in the private practice of his profession, Judge Merrill is equipped as few men are to preside over the State Senate and to serve in lieu of the Governor during his extended absence from the State, should that occur, and to take over the reins of the office of Chief Executive in case of a vacancy. But the greatest responsibility that attaches to the office of Lieutenant Governor comes in connection with his appointment of the Senate committee. In that way he is given the opportunity of exercising a strong voice over legislation, and by reason of his commitments as a candidate in this race the voters should feel safe in reposing this great responsibility in his hands."—Anniston Star.

O'Neal Re-Elected Without Opposition

Montgomery, Ala., July 31.—Without opposition, Edward A. O'Neal, was Friday re-elected president of the Alabama Farm Bureau Federation.

The election was by unanimous vote, no other being nominated. If any opposition to him was intended it "pettered out" before the time for nominations.

R. F. Croom of Evergreen and W. M. Hester of Russellville were re-elected vice presidents. These three officers and L. M. Griffin, Moundville, J. L. Edwards, Selma, Dr. W. C. Braswell, Elba, J. H. Thompson, Fort Payne and E. S. Pace, Eastaboga, will compose the executive committee for the ensuing year. All were re-elected.

Instead of making a fight on Mr. O'Neal as had been threatened by the Montgomery County delegation, he came in for strong praise and many eulogies. Delegate after delegate arose and praised him for what he is and what he has done in behalf of the organization of which he has served as president during seven consecutive years.

A resolution pledged to him "our continued support and cooperation in carrying out the policies of our organization which he has done with honor and distinction."

Allen Northington, manager of the Farm Bureau Cotton Association, and all other Farm Bureau officers were thanked and praised for the work they have done.

Seal Finklestein Killed In Wreck

Montgomery, Ala., Aug. 3.—Seal Finklestein, prominent young attorney, and Mrs. Martha Feldt, both of Montgomery, were found dead beneath their automobile which had plunged into a ravine near a lake resort in Autauga County, 10 miles from here, early Sunday.

The woman's neck was broken and Finklestein apparently had smothered to death.

From the position of the bodies it was believed Mrs. Feldt was driving when the automobile missed a narrow bridge and plunged into the ravine, pinning both occupants beneath it.

A group of negroes walking along the road found the overturned automobile and the bodies and notified authorities at Prattville, county seat of Autauga. Finklestein and his companion, who had attended a dance at the Lake Haven Inn, left Prattville at 12:15 and the accident was believed to have occurred a few minutes later.

A. Feldt, husband of Mrs. Feldt, is said to live in Mitchell, Iowa. Finklestein was unmarried.

Seal Finklestein was born Feb. 16, 1905, at Union Springs. After attending the elementary grades at Union Springs, he moved to Montgomery with his family in 1918, and entered high school. He was graduated from Sidney Lanier High School in 1922.

After finishing high school, Mr. Finklestein enrolled in the College of Law at the University of Alabama, where he completed the three-year course in law in 1925, and returned to Montgomery to practice. He had offices at 19 1-2 South Perry Street. He recently took over the case of Mose Daniels, negro, who was convicted of criminal assault upon a white woman on North Hull Street early this year and sentenced to die, and recently obtained a stay of sentence for the negro, whose case is

New Ideas For Home Learned At Auburn

Auburn, Ala., Aug. 7.—After studying the latest findings in clothing, cookery, nutrition, household economy, and home decoration during Farmers' Week at Auburn, more than 300 women from rural Alabama returned to their homes to make practical application of these new developments in conducting their households.

The comprehensive home makers' program was arranged by Miss Helen Johnston, state home demonstration agent, and her staff of specialists.

President Bradford Knapp of Auburn officially bestowed the mark of distinction on 151 farm women from 40 counties for qualities of leadership displayed in the improvement of Alabama homes.

Climaxing the program, the annual meeting of the Alabama Council of Home Demonstration Clubs convened to report on progress made for the past year and to project future lines of endeavor. Plans for 1931 include an even more extensive betterment campaign in all phases of rural home life through the leadership of local home demonstration clubs and agents.

Officers for the ensuing year are Mrs. J. D. Giles, Dallas County, president; Mrs. W. F. Jeffers, Etowah, first vice president; Mrs. Gordon DeRamus, Autauga, secretary; and Mrs. Sears Lee, Perry, treasurer. Mrs. Wilbur Hull, Limestone, was elected director for the first district to serve with Mrs. Hugh Tompkins, Bullock, second district; Mrs. Hugh Morton, Perry, district three.

still pending.

Surviving Mr. Finklestein are his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph C. Finklestein of Montgomery; one sister, Mrs. Morris Shulman, of Georgia; and three brothers, Julius, Leo, and Morris, all of Montgomery. The funeral will be held from Leak's Chapel at 10 a. m. today.

A NON-POLITICAL OFFICIAL FOR A NON-POLITICAL OFFICE

A. F. Harman has spent his life in the school rooms of Alabama. He has the view-point of the teacher and educational worker and is familiar with every phase of public Elementary and High School work, rural and urban.

Harman is now serving as State Superintendent of Education by appointment. His appointment was NOT POLITICAL but in recognition of his long years of outstanding work for Education in Alabama.

FULL TERM FREE SCHOOLS

Harman favors full term schools free of tuition or incidental fees:
A simplified plan for distribution of State School Funds;
Favors State Aid for transportation of school children;
Favors a substantial increase in state aid for rural school buildings, repair and equipment on a basis of two dollars by the State to one dollar by the community.

THE OLD BOSSES OPPOSE HARMAN

A. F. Harman is being opposed by those who built up the so-called "School Trust" and is also being opposed by the School Book Monopoly and those agencies which made possible such a monopoly. They are opposing Harman because they cannot control him.

Harman is young and vigorous enough, and sufficiently trained, to conduct the office himself instead of having to call in one or more of the ring bosses to help.

He believes in giving a dollar's worth of education for every dollar's worth in schools.

It Is Well to FIND OUT:

What is best for your Children and Alabama? Which candidate has a record for economy? Which candidate has made a national reputation for patriotic work for rural schools? Which candidate is competent? Which candidate has shown he knows how to reduce overhead? Which candidate has always been and is now free from private money making interests so as to be able to give his whole time and interest to public school work he is paid to do?

The answer to these questions will help you to vote for the interest of the children and not of the school ring, which opposes A. F. Harman because it cannot control him.

Man Slain In B'ham

Birmingham, Ala., Aug. 3.—Shot twice with his own gun after he had slain one of his attackers, Everege Ingle, night watchman at the Spaulding mines was killed here tonight in a gun battle with several negroes.

Ingle was shot through the right eye and upper arm. He died a few moments after he was admitted to a hospital. The negro was killed instantly.

Witnesses of the shooting told investigating officers that a negro girl went to Ingle's home and asked him to her own home to quell a disturbance among a number of negroes whom she said were fighting.

When Ingle arrived at the scene, three negroes attacked him, witnesses told officers. Ingle drew his pistol, killing one negro. The other two are said to have disarmed him.

Deputy sheriffs began a search of the entire negro community in the vicinity of the slaying, searching for the men who attacked Ingle.

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE FALL GARDEN

Present day conditions should cause every home, regardless of location or limitations, to make the very best possible use of the home garden. The home garden has always been a very important factor in the economics of the household, and conditions at this time make it almost indispensable. A good garden means food for the home and a good part of a good living. So let us exert a little extra effort at this time and plant for a large variety of vegetables for the fall and early winter.

Things To Plant

We should make the fall garden as good as the best spring garden. The following may be planted during August or early September, depending on the section of the State and amount of moisture present: Beans, beets, carrots, radish, parsnips, mustard, turnips, tendergreen, spinach, kale, chard, cabbage, collards, Chinese cabbage, parsley, salsify, onions, lettuce, Kohlrabi, endive and Brussels sprouts. There are others which may be added to this list in certain sections of the State. Do you realize just what such a garden would mean to you in health—well in dollars and cents? The real value is usually underestimated.

Snap beans should not be planted until within two months of your first frost date. Beets, carrots, radish, and parsnips provide root crops that are very important. Carrots and parsnips should surely be planted in every garden. They both stand lots of cold, parsnips remaining in the garden in good condition throughout the winter. Mustard, turnips, tendergreen, spinach, kale, chard, cabbage, collards and Chinese cabbage will provide a good supply of leafy vegetables over a long period of time. It is particularly urged that all of you grow tendergreen. Once you grow it you will surely add it to your permanent list. Chard and Chinese cabbage should also be grown in more home gardens. The Japanese turnip is particularly recommended as a good type for producing fall turnip greens. It produces more greens than either of the other types and is resistant to plant lice (aphids). Of the spinach varieties or types the Bloomsdale, King of Denmark, Savoy, or Aragon should be planted at this time. All of the vegetables mentioned are good and will do well in the fall where properly planted and care for.

Nurse Tells How CARDUI Helped Her

Mrs. W. A. Cox, a well-known professional nurse, of Burnside, Ky., writes:

"I was in very bad health, and only weighed 110 pounds. I read in the papers about Cardui, and thought I would give it a try-out. After I had taken one bottle, I could see that I was improving. After I had taken it a month or two, I began to gain, and I weigh at present 168, and have weighed that for some time. I am now 55 years old, and can do as much work as the average middle-aged woman can."

"I would advise any woman, who is weakly and in a run-down condition, to try Cardui, but not to expect one bottle to make her well. I take two or three bottles a year, now, and I feel fine."

News In Brief

Some of the cotton harvested in Alabama this fall will be shipped instead of picked, predicts Prof. M. L. Nichols of the agricultural engineering department at Auburn. Investigation in DeKalb County showed, he said, that snapping and ginning cotton cost $17 per bale, while it cost $21.75 to pick and gin a bale.

A steady decline in the prevalence of bovine tuberculosis in the United States has taken place in the last few years as a result of the cooperative campaign to eradicate the infection, the U. S. Department of Agriculture reports. The average infection among cattle, for the entire country, is now 1.7 per cent, whereas in 1922 it was 4 per cent. Alabama has made notable progress.

Something like 17,500,000 acres of land that were formerly cultivated in this country have been destroyed by gully, or so severely washed that farmers can not afford to attempt their cultivation or reclamation, according to the U. S. Bureau of Soils and Chemistry.

A new and promising fumigant that may prove to be more satisfactory than carbon disulphide is ethylene oxide, a material discovered in the course of a search for better fumigants conducted by the U. S. Department of Agriculture. Preliminary tests with this gas have given encouraging results in the fumigation of dried fruits. It appears to be more effective pound for pound, than carbon disulphide and apparently can be used with greater safety.

A total of about 122,957,000 people—just a few thousands under 123,000,000—probably will be shown as the population of the United States for 1930, when the final count is announced at Washington by W. M. Stewart, director of the census. The 1920 population was 105,710,620.

prepare your ground and plant when you have sufficient moisture present to bring them up. Most of the seed should be planted about twice as deep as you ordinarily plant in the spring. Order double the amount of seed you think you will actually need. If one planting is sufficient, keep the extra seed for spring plantings. Many home gardeners wait too late to start the fall garden. Start in time, plant a good variety, and you will be repaid many times your investment.

LINCOLN'S ELEPHANTS

Few persons, perhaps know that Abraham Lincoln at one time, virtually had a herd of twelve elephants on his hands. He did not exactly have them in his possession, but they were offered to him, and it took all the tact for which he was famous to gracefully decline them.

The letter in which he turned down the proffered gift has only recently come to light, according to a writer in the Pathfinder, who relates that the elephants were presented to President Lincoln for the United States government by the King of Siam, as a token of friendship. Lincoln's letter to the king was written on February 3, 1862, and contained this paragraph:

"This government would not hesitate to avail itself of so generous an offer if the object were one which could be made practically useful in the present condition of the United States. Our political jurisdiction, however, does not reach a latitude so low as to favor the multiplication of the elephants."

Lincoln's reference to his lack of jurisdiction over warm latitudes is given point by the fact that the South was not then under Federal control, and illustrates the subtle humor which often characterized his utterances.

EARLY BATHTUBS

If certain data we have run across lately are authentic, the joke about the Saturday night bath is not so old as we had imagined. It is recorded that the first bath tub put in commission in the United States was christened on Christmas Day, 1842.

Looking up the day of the week in a perpetual calendar, we find that this was Sunday, but it is possible that the first bath was really taken on Christmas eve, thus establishing the Saturday night tradition.

Upon its introduction the bath tub was looked upon with much suspicion, as it is by small boys until this day. In Boston an ordinance was passed prohibiting baths except upon the advice of a physician. About 1844 the Philadelphia city council came within two votes of passing an ordinance prohibiting baths altogether between November 1 and March 15.

Bath tubs were heavily taxed in those early days, even as the modern automobile. Shortly after they were introduced into Virginia a state tax of $36 was imposed on each tub installed.

Still Americans of those times were more given to bathing than the old Russians. We have read somewhere that Peter the Great bathed only once a year. But there were extenuating circumstances. Russia is a very cold country.

Pajamas Are Liked by the Wee Tots

By JULIA BOTTOMLEY

very prettily with a narrow scarf which is tied in a soft bow over one shoulder.

In all children's style displays nowadays particular attention is called to pajama fashions. Just now the chief attraction is beach pajamas and overalls. A pert little model for beach wear boasts an Eton jacket. The material for this cunning outfit has a red background with huge pink, blue, black and white polka dots floating over its surface like so many toy balloons. The jacket is sleeveless, worn over a sleeveless white dimity blouse. The trousers are very full and finish at the waistline with a picturesque tunic-like sash.

Overalls are frequently made of gay as gay can be prints. These are for the most part trimmed with a solid color. It is said that pajama suits for children from seven to fourteen are far outselling nightgowns.

(©, 1930, Western Newspaper Union)

HELPS FOR HOUSEKEEPERS

Goloshes and rubbers should fit the child's shoes but should be large enough for the child to put on and take off.

Let the baby be comfortable in hot weather by dressing him only in the kind of clothing his elders would like to wear.

Children need as much sleep in summer as in winter. Sleeping hours and naptimes should not be shortened by long hours of daylight.

To keep berries, cherries or other small fruit fresh in hot weather, pick them over and spread them out in the refrigerator on a shallow plate or flat wire sieve.

The pockets are adequate to store the trinkets which children take such joy in carrying about with them during play hours. The neckline is finished

If there's one place more than another where pajama costumes seem to fit into their environment becoming, that place is in the children's realm. Bless their dear hearts, how cunning they look flitting about in their little trouser and blouse outfits, and with what enthusiasm designers are creating pajama styles for wee folks. There are as many kinds of pajama styles for fashionable youngsters as there are for grownups, ranging from lounging to beach types.

For the making of juvenile pajama costumes shantung is proving a most adaptable material. It has so many arguments in its favor, first among which is the fact of its perfect laundering qualities. Then too the lovely colors of shantung fit charmingly into the happy scenes of the illiputian world.

Shantung in a delightfully cool-looking light green was the choice of the designer who styled the attractive and very practical suit illustrated. Borderings of white shantung make a pretty trimming. A unique feature is the group of tucks down the front, the blouse buttoning at the shoulders.

Some Food Hints

By NELLIE MAXWELL

Who does his duty is a question too complex to be solved by me! But he, I venture the suggestion does part of two, that plants a tree.

—Lowell.

Some of these salads are more adapted for entertaining than for every day's use:

Butterfly Salad.—Split a small banana into halves and dip into lemon juice to keep it from discoloring. On either side of the banana, placed on lettuce, put half slices of pineapple to form the wings to the banana body, the rounded edge toward the banana. Garnish the wing with red and yellow apples or fruit gelatin. Garnish the banana with chopped ripe olives and capers. Serve with french dressing after being well chilled.

Beach Club Salad.—Fill a scalloped grapefruit shell with shredded lettuce and diced grapefruit which have been well mixed with mayonnaise. Decorate the top with halved cherries. Serve on lettuce leaves.

Cheese Salad.—Arrange a nest of shredded lettuce and place on it finely shredded celery, apples and radishes all cut into small shavings. Mix with creamy mayonnaise, using two tablespoons of mayonnaise to a half cupful of shredded lettuce. Decorate with rings of olives in the center of which has been piped a rose of cream cheese. Serve with french dressing.

A dainty dessert and one easy to prepare is always popular with all housewives. Here is one:

Marshmallow Dessert.—Cut into small bits a cupful or more of marshmallows, add a handful of blanched and shredded almonds, cover with a cupful of whipped cream and at serving time serve in sherbet glasses topped with shredded pineapple.

Fruit Salad.—Prepare a bed of shredded lettuce. Place a slice of canned pineapple upon it. Fill one-half of a canned pear with diced bananas and celery mixed with mayonnaise dressing. Lay on top of the pineapple. Garnish with strips of green pepper. Serve with french dressing.

A potato salad is one of the easiest salads to make and one which is often the poorest. Potatoes are tasteless when cold and should always be marinated with a french dressing for two or three hours before the mayonnaise is added.

Carrot, Coconut and Pineapple Salad.—Take one can of crushed pineapple, two cupfuls of grated raw carrots. One-half cupful of shredded coconut, mix with mayonnaise and serve on lettuce. Sprinkle the top of each with coconut.

Use Judgment in Choosing Food

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The thoroughly modern girl—and boy, too—wants to know something about good diet. Whether the main concern is choosing meals at a cafeteria or lunch room, or helping with meals at home, it is clearly important to everybody to know what to eat to keep well and store up energy, and what food combinations are suitable together. The older boys and girls in many families can be of great help if they can from time to time relieve their mothers of the task of planning and preparing meals.

What a real "day off" a mother might have if the meals on Saturdays, for example, could be attended to entirely by one of her daughters, leaving her free to go shopping, visit her friends, attend a club meeting, make a trip to another town, or get caught up on other things! And the daughter would not only enjoy the change from books and lessons, although she would actually be learning something of permanent use to her, but she would have the satisfaction of releasing her mother for a few hours from her daily routine.

A girl of eleven or twelve is not too young to try planning and assembling a simple dinner without help. After she has gained confidence in handling food materials and the kitchen range, she might do this regularly

Sun Suits Are Easily Made

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A sun suit, after all, is only an abbreviated form of rompers, with certain features about its construction which expose as much skin surface especially in front, and the legs short. At the back the neck is not cut down too much or the suit will tend to slide off the shoulders.

A mother can make a sun suit very easily by adapting a plain romper pattern. If she is adapting a romper pattern, it should be of the fold-in-crotch or "French panty" style, with a drop seat. The main proportions should not be changed. The length from shoulder to crotch and the width through the trunk should be ample enough to permit all normal activity, such as running, jumping, climbing, squatting or swinging.

In a girl's tailored ensemble, the sun suit takes the place of underwear or bloomers. Light blue chambray is used for both the overdress and the panties, which are stitched flat to an open mesh top of matching marquisette. The latter can usually be bought among curtain goods. Plain soft cream scrim or net might be used for the top. The shoulder straps are planned to let out for growth. They are tacked at shoulder level and held down with a button sewed through both thicknesses of goods and stayed with a small piece of tape, since a stay button might scratch.

The long front opening finished with a flat band and three medium sized flat buttons makes it easy for the child to learn to put the sun suit on without help. The buttons are the five-eighths inch size. A pocket for a "hanky" is placed on the panties.

Handy Self-Starter on Washer Big Help

With the many labor saving devices that are constantly coming on the market the housewife is getting a good share that will help her in her household duties. The power washer has done a great deal to give the homemaker more time to do some of the things she likes to do.

One of the latest conveniences to come to our attention is an electric self-starter for gasoline-powered washing machines. This works just like the starter on your automobile. A touch on the starter sets the engine going.

Fill Ice Chamber to Capacity

Lower Temperatures Result From a Well-Filled Ice Chamber.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A well-filled ice chamber in a good refrigerator soon chills the entire box to temperatures at which the more perishable foods can be safely kept. It is important therefore, not to allow the temperatures to rise very much after the box is once properly chilled. The next time the ice man calls he should be asked to fill the ice chamber to capacity again, and continue to keep it filled. If the first large piece of ice that is put in is allowed to melt away until it is half gone or more before another piece is put in, or if only 25 or 35 pounds of ice are added when 50 pounds are needed to bring it up to capacity, the temperatures in the refrigerator will rise above a safe point. Then the new piece of ice will be melted faster to chill the box again below 45 degrees Fahrenheit than if the box were colder when refilled.

The chart, which was made by the bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture, shows that a box made to hold 80-100 pounds of ice, when filled, will have a temperature of about 42 degrees Fahrenheit in the coldest part directly under the ice compartment when the room is 75 degrees Fahrenheit. It is here that milk, meat, and other perishable food should be kept. The top shelf may be 10 degrees higher, but this temperature will be satisfactory for storing vegetables or fruits. The dotted line represents a temperature of 45 degrees Fahrenheit, which is considered the maximum for safe holding of milk and meats.

When the ice has melted down to 50 pounds in this box the danger line is almost reached. Both lower and upper shelves will be two degrees higher than they were and the box needs refilling to capacity at the earliest possible moment. In this case a 25 pound piece might do but a 35 pound piece will maintain a steady low temperature better, and last relatively longer.

If the ice is allowed to melt down to 20 pounds before refilling, the lower shelf temperature will rise three degrees more and the upper, four degrees. The addition of 25 or even 35 pounds of ice then will not be adequate, as so much of the ice will be melted in chilling the box that there will not be enough left to keep the box steadily cold until the next delivery. The temperature will begin to rise much sooner than in the other instance, and in the long run more ice will be bought with less satisfactory results.

Lesson for August 10

HANNAH, A GODLY MOTHER

LESSON TEXT—I Samuel 1:8-18, 24:23-25

GOLDEN TEXT—My son, hear the instruction of thy father, and thou shalt not be the law of thy mother.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Hannah's Prayer Answered.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Hannah's Prayer Answered.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How Can We Honor Our Parents? YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Value of a Godly Home.

I. Hannah's Sore Trial (1:8-18).

Elkanah had two wives in violation of God's law. God's primal thought for man was one wife. Therefore, for Adam he made Eve. Hannah's sore trial grew out of jealousy which naturally springs up between two women, wives of one man. The violation of this law of God concerning marriage has always been attended with trouble.

II. Hannah's Prayer (1:18-23). She had the good sense to take her troubles to the Lord. This believers should do, even though the trouble result from sin.

1. Her bitterness of soul (v. 10). Though Elkanah loved her and sought to lighten her burden, he was unable to bring to her the needed solace.

2. Her vow (v. 11).

Hannah prayed, asking God for a son. The name Samuel means "I have heard of God." In connection with receiving this gift from God, she vowed to give the child back to God. Men are expected of children born into the world under such circumstances.

3. Hannah misjudged by Elkanah (v. 12-16).

The priest observing the motive of her lips and not hearing the sound of her voice concluded that she was intoxicated and demanded that she put away wine. She defended herself against this inference.

4. Blessed by Eli (v. 17, 18).

Following her explanation he pronounced a blessing upon her, joining in the prayer that God would grant her petition.

III. Hannah Gives Samuel to the Lord (v. 24-25).

For a time she cared for Samuel in the home. Always the best nurse for a child is its mother. According to her vow, at an early age she took Samuel to the sanctuary and gave him over to the charge of Eli, the priest, to minister therein. We thus see in his tender years Samuel's ministering before the Lord.

IV. Samuel's Ministry (ch. 3).

1. His call (v. 1-10).

(1) The occasion. From his birth Samuel was dedicated to the service of the Lord. While going about his regular duties the Lord spoke unto him. In Samuel we have a striking pattern of child religion. In the Scriptures we have set forth two types of experience. First, the one who experiences God's saving grace after having lived in sin; second, the one brought up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord from infancy.

(2) His obedience. When the divine voice was discerned Samuel rendered immediate obedience. He expressed his willingness before he knew what was required. He did not inquire what was wanted and then let his obedience depend upon the agreeableness of the command.

2. Samuel's prophetic message (v. 11-15).

The time has now come for him to pass from the authority of Eli to that of the Lord. The first message entrusted to him was a most terrible one. He hesitated to tell it to Eli, but being pressed, he manifested true courage. It must have been a bitter experience to Eli to see Samuel recognized and himself passed by. This fearful visitation of judgment upon Eli's house was due to the sins of his sons. Eli was held responsible for not restraining them. He seems to have been a good man, but lax in the discipline of his children. Parental laxity is most cruel. To tolerate evil when one has the power to restrain it is to become party to it.

V. Samuel Established in the Prophetic Office (3:16-21).

"And Samuel grew, and the Lord was with him, and did not leave him. The words fell to the ground. And all Israel from Dan even to Beersheba knew that Samuel was established to be a prophet to the Lord." Little did Hannah know that the boy who had been given in answer to her prayer would one day become the spiritual leader of the nation. Truly, he that honors God shall be honored by God.

Crowding the chicks not only causes ecclesiastical and cannibalism among them, but also delays their feathering out. When six weeks of age they should have at least double the space that they have when first hatched.

MOTHER AT TWELVE

The stork has paid its first visit to Mrs. Ralph Moody, near York, Pa., at the age of twelve. The birth of a son to the child-mother has given directors of the Warrington township school district something to ponder over. The school code compels children between six and sixteen years to attend school regularly, but motherhood apparently was not considered when legislators framed this law.

"That's the....
NEW OIL
you've been waiting for"

This new Texaco Motor Oil combines in one oil all the desirable qualities a motor oil should have. Many oils flow at zero. Some oils are free from hard-carbon-forming impurities. A few oils have an outstandingly enduring body. The new Texaco has all these qualities. It lasts longer! It's crack-proof!

Summer or winter, you'll find this new Texaco a remarkable lubricant. Special Texaco processes and special Texaco crudes are responsible. It meant years of research and the perfection of new refining practices. It's manufactured in five grades: C, D, E, F, and G, conforming with S. A. E. (Society of Automotive Engineers) viscosity ratings.

Try it. Note the clean engine work and the extraordinarily low oil consumption—there's the proof of its longer-lasting, crack-proof body. Its price is 30c a quart (35c for Grade G).

BOY'S JAW IS BROKEN WHEN RIDING ON BUS

Missile Comes Thru Window Striking Youth On Way Home

William Bailey, 19, of Athens, Alabama was brought to the Central Alabama Hospital here last Saturday night suffering with a severe cut on his face and a broken jaw received while riding on a north bound bus.

According to the story received by the News, Bailey stated that they had been riding for about thirty minutes out of Montgomery on one of the Birmingham bound busses when a large rock came through the window by which he was sitting, striking him on the jaw. He was brought here where his condition was reported as better last Tuesday at the hospital.

It was stated that the rock was found in the bus after the accident but no information could be received as to who threw the missile into the bus.

"JOCKEY" ELDER IN CLANTON ON NON-STOP ENDURANCE DRIVE

Arriving a little behind schedule time, "Jockey" Elder drove into Clanton last Thursday afternoon about six o'clock on his Non-stop endurance automobile drive of 150 hours. When here, "Jockey" had driven several hours past the 100 hour mark and appeared to be in fair condition after continuously driving since Sunday morning, August 3.

"Jockey" had been beset with many and various obstacles, he told a representative of the News, during his record establishing drive which ended last Saturday afternoon at three o'clock, making 150 hours of continuous driving an automobile, handcuffed to the steering wheel. "Jockey" used a Plymouth automobile in this drive which was furnished by the Johnson Motor Company of Selma, where the drive began. After making a 100 hour non-stop drive in Montgomery last month, "Jockey" set his mark at 150 hours which is said to be the world's record. While in Clanton he was served a chicken dinner by the Dixie Cafe—each course being served on the go, and enjoyed by "Jockey" who with the aid of his charming wife managed to feed himself.

BOARD OF EDUCATION TO MEET NEXT FRIDAY

The Chilton County Board of Education will have a special meeting on Friday, August 15. This meeting is for the purpose of completing some business from the last meeting on July 25th, it was stated.

WALLACE FOX VISITS PARENTS AT MAPLEVILLE, ALABAMA

Mr. Wallace Fox, of Detroit, Mich., has returned after spending two weeks with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Fox in the Mulberry Community. Mr. Fox holds a responsible position in Detroit as an inspector and stated before leaving that his visit with his relatives and other friends here was a most enjoyable one.

WADSWORTH ANNOUNCES CUT IN PRICES OF ADMISSION

The management of the Wadsworth Theatre here made formal announcement this week of a reduction in prices of admission to the shows. Beginning this week the price of admission will be 15 cents for children, thirty cents for balcony and thirty-five cents for adults in main auditorium. On Saturday matinees, the price will now be ten and twenty-five cents, and on Saturday nights fifteen cents for children, twenty-five cents for balcony and thirty cents for the main auditorium. This reduction in price by the local theatre will be met with approval by the theatre going people of this section. Heretofore the prices have ranged from thirty cents to fifty cents for children and adults. Special attention is called to the price of admission for the Saturday afternoon showings, which is straight 10 and 25 cents, with the Saturday night performance cut to 15 and 30 cents instead of forty cents.

Tonight the Wadsworth offers to the public the famous picture, "Boardway Scandals" a Columbia musical comedy, all talking, also other items on this program which will show Friday night and Saturday matinee and night. Attention is also called to the program for next week which can be found elsewhere in this issue.

CLANTON PLAYS MONTEVALLO HERE THIS AFTERNOON

The Clanton baseball team is scheduled to meet the Montevallo team on the local diamond this afternoon, according to information. Local fans are urged to go out to this game and give the local players some backing.

The Clanton team defeated the strong Helena team last Thursday by a score of 3 to 1. The Clanton team is very grateful to Horsley White of the Nehi Bottling Company for the three cases of drinks he donated to aid in the defraying of the team's expenses. The drinks were sold at the game Thursday.

HOSPITAL SITE MAY BE NAMED IN FEW DAYS

Sites Near Here Have Been Given Due Consideration Washington Reports

Just as we go to press, The News received a message from Washington, D. C., which stated that a recent communication with Gen. Frank P. Hines, chairman of the Veterans Hospital Board, it was learned that the site for the Veterans Hospital for Alabama has not yet been selected, however, it was also stated that it is believed that the site will be definitely selected and announced this week.

Latest reports yesterday afternoon also went on to state that the site to be selected as final location for the hospital will depend largely upon the possibilities of the various sites in view, to give the disabled veterans the best services capable of being rendered by such an institution. The message received by The News also stated that the locations near Clanton have been given due consideration, and in fact a thorough study made of all sites offered in the specified area which includes Clanton.

Congressman Lamar Jeffers from this district has been active in the interest of the Alabama Veterans Hospital and through his efforts the general board has been aided in gathering the information necessary to the location of the hospital.

CLANTON JUNIOR TEAM WINS ALL OF GAMES THIS SEASON

The Clanton Junior Base Ball Team won over the Coopers team last Tuesday afternoon, by a score of 16 to 10. The junior team has won all of the games played so far this season, and it is expected they may play the Boy's Club of Birmingham next Monday.

Pecan Growers Face Future Hopefully

Alabama Pecan Growers need no longer fear problems in marketing large crops, according to J. Lloyd Abbot of Spring Hill, Alabama, who has recently taken a leading part in organizing the National Pecan Marketing Organization with a capital stock of a half million dollars. Mr. Abbot's national reputation among pecan growers and his success with other pecan organizations is ample assurance of continued development of organized selling.

This National Selling Organization followed, after a recent meeting in Montgomery, at which seventy-five growers from representative Southern and Western States were present with representatives from the Federal Farm Board.

T. H. McHatton, President of the National Pecan Association, C. C. Teague, President of the California Walnut and Fruit Growers Exchange, spoke as representatives of organizations selling a hundred and fifty millions worth of produce annually; C. S. Wilson, fruit growing representative of the Federal Farm Board, explained the working plan of the Board in detail. (continued to back page—1st Sec.)

Revival Going On At New Salem

The News has been requested to announce this week that a revival meeting is in progress at the New Salem church this week. The services are being conducted by Rev. Ben F. Dykes, who is doing some mighty fine preaching, being assisted by Z. Y. Appleton.

Services are being held each morning at ten-thirty and at seven-thirty at night. The meeting began last Sunday and will continue for the remainder of this week, it was stated. The public is cordially invited to attend these services.

Following the meeting at New Salem Rev. Dykes will go to Collins Chapel to conduct a revival meeting there for one week.

PARRISH FAMILY RE- UNION NEXT SUNDAY

The family of Rev. M. J. Parrish will have a reunion at the home of Rev. Parrish, near Providence, in Beat 16, on next Sunday, August 17. All the children and grandchildren, together with all the family connections, are invited to attend. Also any friends of the family who will come are welcome. All who come are asked to bring a basket lunch and spend the day.—Mrs. Annie Armstrong.

Miss Gene Griffin of Isabella spent a few days here with friends the past week end.

W. D. Nix and C. M. Lawrence of near Jemison were visitors to Clanton Friday.

Ready For Business Say Goodgame Bros.

In a statement to a representative of the News, F. B. (Burns) Goodgame stated that he and his brother, Bill Goodgame, are ready for the ginning business. They operate the Farmers Gin & Warehouse Co., which was formerly the Wade gin near West End.

Mr. Goodgame said they have overhauled the gin and it is now in fine shape to begin the ginning season right. Burns will be in charge of the gin, while Bill Goodgame will have charge of the warehouse.

AMERICAN LEGION INSTALLS NEW OFFICERS MONDAY NIGHT

The Chilton County Post of the American Legion held a meeting at the courthouse last Monday night for the purpose of electing and installing new officers for the coming year. At this meeting, Rurus Bethea, newly elected State Commander of the American Legion was present and delivered an inspiring address to the Legionnaires present. Commander Bethea stated that his slogan for the year was "Maximum Relief for the Disabled," which met with approval from the local members.

Joe Calloway was elected and installed as Commander of the Chilton County Post, and Vaughn C. McKee was elected as Adjutant. These offices were heretofore filled by C. E. Stapp and J. H. Plier.

A special meeting of the Chilton County Post is called for Friday night, August 22nd. At this meeting further plans will be discussed and made, such as setting a regular meeting night for the legion, so as not to conflict with the meetings of other organizations here. Plans will also be discussed at this meeting Friday night to stage an other chicken barbecue in the very near future.

All Legionnaires and ex-service men with their wives are urged and invited to attend this special meeting next Friday night, after which further plans of the legion will be announced.

MR. AND MRS. STAPP TO RETURN HOME LATTER PART OF WEEK

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Stapp who have been spending several days at Atlantic Beach, Fla., are expected to return sometime during the latter part of this week.

COTTON GINNING SEASON IS EXPECTED TO BEGIN SOON

It is expected by the various operators of the gins in this section that the ginning season will begin this week. Some expected to gin some bales the earlier part of the week, but the sudden rain last Sunday was a slight drawback in this expectation. All the gins here are in readiness for operation according to reports coming in to the News office.

Price On Cream Is On Incline, Report

Recent reports from the office of the County Agent here stated that the price on shipped cream is on the incline. A new height of thirty-four cents per pound has been reached, it was stated, coming up from twenty-seven cents. It was also noted that the outlook is much better for cream shippers this fall. There is an average of something like forty who are shipping cream through the county agent's office now.

MR AND MRS. LANDE AND PAR- TY EXPECTED BACK THIS WEEK

Mr. and Mrs. M. Lande, who have been in Chicago for the past several days are expected to return the latter part of this week. Mr. Lande has been looking over the markets there and states that he has some real good news for the people of Chilton County, as he has found that dry goods are much cheaper now than ever. He has purchased a full line of fall goods for his store here, The Leader, and will soon have them in stock.

When Mr. Lande receives his new stock of goods for his store he will be well equipped to serve the people of Chilton County in a much better way than before the misfortune of the fire recently. The stock of The Leader will be refurnished with new goods throughout and the people of this section may rest assured that Mr. Lande will continue to offer them bargains.

Opportunity Schools Fourth Week Report

The report from the Opportunity Schools over the county for the fourth week has just been handed in. The attendance average for various schools seems to be picking up to a certain extent, and the interest seems to be better, however, this is the fourth week and the schools are to be conducted for only six weeks. MISS KATIE MAE ROGERS IS ELECTED CLANTON "QUEEN"

In the Popularity Contest recently sponsored by the local Kiwanis Club, Miss Katie Mae Rogers was elected "Queen" of Clanton by a large majority of votes, winning over something like a dozen other young ladies who represented various business houses in Clanton. Miss Rogers represented The Dixie Cafe of this place.

The contest opened Monday, August 4, and closed last Saturday, August 9. The winner of the contest was determined by the largest number of votes sold by the contestants composed of Clanton's many popular young ladies.

A parade was staged on the streets of Clanton Tuesday in which all the contestants participated, with Miss Rogers as "Miss Clanton" leading the parade. The contest was in charge of Miss Mildred Clark of Birmingham.

Mrs. O. J. Mooney and daughter, of Weoka, spent Sunday in Clanton as guests of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Teel and family.

Mr. N. H. Harrell, of Billingsley, was among the visitors to Clanton Saturday.

KELLY GENTRY IS VISITOR HERE LAST TUESDAY, 12TH

Mr. and Mrs. Kelley Gentry and daughter of Montgomery, Alabama, were visiting relatives and friends in Clanton and Chilton County last Tuesday. Mr. Gentry is the son of Mr. W. J. Gentry who resides on Lock 12 road east of Clanton. While here the younger Mr. Gentry tried his hand at fishing on the Coosa and reported splendid luck.

Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Baker of Tarrant, were guests of friends and relatives here Sunday.

The many friends of John D. Martin, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Martin of the Isabella Community, will be glad to know that he is doing nicely following an operation for appendicitis last Friday at the T. C. I. Hospital in Fairfield.

NEGRO KILLED ANOTHER SHOT LAST THURSDAY

Shooting Scrape Takes Place At Mitchell Dam; One Placed in Jail

Mose Wallace, negro, was placed in jail here last Thursday night and his wife is in the Central Alabama Hospital here and Leonard Shelton, another negro, is dead, as the result of a misunderstanding between the trio which occurred at Mitchell Dam last Thursday night, according to information received by the News.

The report stated that Wallace, who was employed as cook at the dam went home and found Shelton in his house with the former's wife. Wallace is said to have shot his wife, the bullet entering her body near the neck and coming out at the back, and Wallace is said to have shot Shelton as he jumped out a window.

Shelton was found a short distance away dead. Wallace's wife was rushed to the hospital here in a Martin's ambulance. Wallace was being held here Tuesday pending preliminary hearing.

PARTY FROM HERE MOTOR TO MOBILE AND BILOXI

A party composed of J. H. Broadhead, prominent merchant of West End, Garland Foshee, of Clanton, Kermit Coburn and John Allen Foshee, of Maplesville left here Tuesday of last week to spend several days in Mobile and Biloxi, Miss.

The party returned the latter part of last week and reported a very interesting vacation spent in fishing and enjoying the ocean swimming and the breezes.

GEORGE HOWARD BREAKS ARM WHILE SWIMMING SATURDAY

George Howard, of Jemison was brought to the Central Alabama Hospital here Saturday night suffering with a broken arm. It was stated he was in swimming when he was injured. His arm was set and he returned to his home, that night.

Annual Deep Sea Rodeo Interesting

Registration for Alabama's Second Annual Deep Sea Rodeo will soon be closed, and the opportunity to take a part in this great sporting event will be a thing of the past. The central committee has placed the final touches to the plans and Chairman L. G. Adams, of Mobile, announces that all is in readiness for the arrival of the fishermen.

The idea of holding an annual fishing rodeo was conceived last year by Commissioner I. T. Quinn, in an effort to demonstrate to the people of Alabama the wonderful fishing opportunities which our coastal waters offer and to convey to the outside world the information that the waters of Alabama as a sportsman's paradise, are unsurpassed anywhere.

The first rodeo met with a success which far exceeded the hopes of even the most sanguine of those interested. Nearly every county in the State was represented and contestants from eleven other states and the District of Columbia. This year, registrations have already been received from more states than were represented last year, and all indications point to the most successful.

LIGHTS OF NEW YORK

By Walter Trumbull

The Long Island home of a New York society woman is famous among her guests for the fact that all rooms are supplied with flowers from her garden and the manner in which they are arranged. There is a reason. At a certain fashionable resort hotel, some time ago, it was noticeable that one dining room table always had lovelier flowers than any of the others. This was peculiar, as the flowers came from the hotel gardens and were allotted by the head waiter. A watchman solved the mystery, when early one morning he discovered the waitress assigned to the table in question, in the garden picking the choicest blossoms. She had formed the habit of getting up at sunrise, stealing out of the dormitory which housed the female help and gathering the flowers she loved. The girl was discharged. The Long Island woman, who was among the hotel guests, happened to hear the story, sent for the girl, talked to her and hired her. Now the girl's chief duties are to keep the rooms in the Long Island place bright with floral decoration. The girl originally came from a section of New York where the only flowers are spicy specimens to the pots on fire escapes.

Almos' every one has a favorite game. Baseball, football, golf, chess, checkers, cross-word puzzles, poker, anagrams, hearts, backgammon, and solitaire all have their devoted followers, but the hobby of William P. Carey, head of Madison Square Garden, is pinochle. This is the game he is never too busy to play. Once when Carey was building a railroad in South America, he took a man all the way to the Argentine with him, just so he would have a pinochle opponent on the boat. The other day, Carey and a friend had been playing pinochle at the Carey apartment so long that they felt it might be a good thing to get a little exercise by walking in Central park. The friend kept insisting that Carey had been exceedingly lucky.

"Nothing of the sort," said Carey. "That was skill. If we had a pinochle deck here I could beat you right now."

"We have," said his friend. "I put a pack in my pocket."

So a couple of the best known men in New York picked out a nice spot on the park grass, sat down and commenced to play pinochle. In a few minutes they were surrounded by a ring of interested spectators which bothered them not at all. The president of the garden vindicated himself by winning again.

Arthur Houghton, who has managed musical comedy troupes for Dillingham and Ziegfeld, had a new experience last season. He headed a company which was largely English and seven of the chorus men had hyphenated names. Houghton thinks the most unusual name he ever encountered belonged to a girl. She was programmed as Myawafawny Jenkins.

Apparently you don't have to be mad at a person to throw acid at them. One of our city boys explained that he heaved acid on his sweetie, because he was infatuated with her. It probably was just an affectionate gesture, but the judge couldn't see it. The girl will get out before the boy does.

A New York lawyer has employed in his household for several years a maid who was born abroad. Recently the domestic obtained a leave of absence to go back to the old country and see her parents. She came to her employer with a diamond ring, which she said belonged to her, and asked him if he would have it appraised, as she might want to sell it to get more money for her trip. He agreed and put the ring in his pocket. The next day he looked for it and couldn't find it.

United States Claims Polar Lands

Washington.—The United States is planning to lay claim not only to the Bryd discoveries in the Antarctic but to various islands in the Arctic and to establish ownership to some fifty islands in the Caribbean, and the South seas.

It. This worried him considerably; first because he had no idea of the ring's value, and secondly because he didn't very well see how anybody except the maid herself, whom the family always had trusted implicitly, could have known he had the ring. After he had worried about the ring for a couple of days, the maid's honesty was demonstrated. She brought him the ring for the second time, having found it in his handkerchief drawer, where he hasn't the faintest recollection of putting it. Now he is worrying about himself.

The English have their own fashion of pronouncing names. There is the famous Marjoribanks, pronounced Marshbanks, and Derby, pronounced Darby. The name of Evelyn Laye, star of "Bitter Sweet," is pronounced Eve-lin' Lay. Evelyn is a family name in England, but in that case it is pronounced Ev-lin.

THE QUEER ONES

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

If things went on normally in every community and every one was regular and conventional and followed custom, life would be duller than it is. It is the unusual that gives zest and color and interest to life. It gives one something to talk about, it changes the dull monotony of a regular routine to have some one in the community who refuses to go the regular road which the crowd follows.

We should have missed a good deal if we had not had Horton in our village. He ran the grocery store in town. Long after every merchant was delivering his merchandise by automobile Horton continued to drive his old plebeian one to a rickety delivery wagon. He did not care for automobiles. He did the delivering himself, sitting on the high seat of the cart as unrelaxed as a wooden Indian, his crock coat tails hanging over the back of the seat and his old "stove pipe" hat cocked at a perceptible angle on his gray head. He was a figure that no one ever forgot. He kept to his old ways and his old dress until the undertaker conveyed him to the cemetery, but as long as he lived he gave class to the town.

They have automobiles and electric lights and furnaces and running water and radios and safety razors and telephones in most of the farm houses in the community in which I once lived—that is they all do but McGinnis. He lets his whiskers grow, he rides to town still in a glittering surly behind a span of spilted horses. He wouldn't trade a good horse for the best automobile he ever set eyes on. He is the richest man in the community who could have everything he wants, but the facts are, he wants nothing modern. The old ways are good enough for him. He has no use for a telephone and the radio drives him crazy. He carries all the water

NEW ZEALAND CHAMP

Gordon Bridson, outstanding swimming champion of New Zealand, who will be a member of the team representing the dominion at the empire games in Canada. Bridson holds the New Zealand swimming championships for all distances from 100 yards to one mile.

he uses from a spring a hundred yards or so from the house. Why dig a well or put in a force pump? He still clings to the old base burner and thinks a kerosene lamp quite good enough for any of his purposes. He is just a freak, the neighbors say, but it is immensely interesting to see, in a community where every one else is crazy to get some place else in a hurry, one man who is satisfied to go slowly and contented with the same conveniences as his grandfather had.

Mrs. Clester, who leads the social procession in the town, like Queen Mary, has never followed the styles as reproduced in the pages of the fashion magazines. She sets her own. She has never fallen for short skirts or the uneven hemline or bobbed hair or even silk stockings. Lisle thread ones are good enough for her, and she still wears these big wide brimmed floppy hats covered with waving feathers and flowers. But she attracts attention when she walks down the street.

They have courage these queer ones. They help to stabilize custom and to keep the radicals from going wild over social and sartorial novelties. More power to them.

"Oh, I say... is there no end to this?"

IT'S Sir Walter speaking. What, Sir Walter Raleigh? The same.

Some months ago he offered pipe lovers a free booklet on "How to take care of your pipe." And the poor chap's been buried under requests ever since.

However, we've succeeded in engaging two of Queen Elizabeth's ladies-in-waiting to help the old boy out with his mail—so don't hesitate to send for your copy. It tells you how to break in a new pipe—how to keep it sweet and mellow—how to make an old pipe smoke smoother and better—the proper way to clean a pipe—and a lot of worth-while hints on pipe hygiene.

If you're a pipe smoker, you'll want to read this booklet. It's free. Just write to the Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corporation, Louisville, Ky.

TUNE IN on "The Raleigh Revue" every Friday, 10:00 to 11:00 p. m. (New York Time), over the WEAF coast-to-coast network of N.B.C.

Makes Life Sweeter

Children's stomachs sour, and need an anti-acid. Keep their systems sweet with Phillips Milk of Magnesia!

When tongue or breath tells of acid condition—correct it with a spoonful of Phillips. Most men and women have been comforted by this universal sweetener—more mothers should invoke its aid for their children. It is a pleasant thing to take, yet neutralizes more acid than the harsher things too often employed for the purpose. No household should be without it.

Phillips is the genuine, prescription product physicians endorse for general use; the name is important. "Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. registered trade mark of the Charles H. Phillips Chemical Co. and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.

Beef Cuts

Do you know how many "cuts" there are in a beef after it has been slaughtered and dressed? Fifteen. They are: neck, chuck, ribs, shoulder, fore shank, brisket, cross ribs, plate, navel, loin, flank, rump, round, second cut round, hind shank. From the Bible we learn beef was eaten before the days of Abraham.

POULTRY

IMPROVED HOUSES MEET MUCH FAVOR

Not Necessary to Build Expensive Buildings for Hens.

There is nothing that will have a greater influence on the poultryman's success or failure than the way in which he houses his birds, declares O. C. Ufford, extension poultryman for the Colorado Agricultural college. The shed-type poultry house built deep is the safest and most satisfactory for Colorado conditions because it is economical, warm, dry and comfortable when properly built, Mr. Ufford says in a recent well illustrated bulletin, "An Improved Poultry House for Colorado Flocks," copies of which may be obtained by writing to the college.

It is not necessary to build an expensive laying house, the bulletin states. The cost need not exceed $2 per hen when the best materials are used, and it is possible to put up a satisfactory building in some localities at a much lower cost.

Poultry houses should be constructed to make use of the abundance of sunshine, especially during the winter months when it is most needed. A concrete floor built at least six inches above the highest point of ground nearby to eliminate moisture is recommended.

The shed-type of laying house is the most comfortable and economical when built 20, 22 or 24 feet deep, with not over a 9-foot front wall and a rear wall 5 1/2 feet high, it is stated. Windows along the back under the dropping boards.

Openings 3 1/2 to 4 feet square placed across the front of the house will provide ample sunshine when and where it is most needed.

Muslin is warm and cheap and is preferred over glass in the front of laying houses, the bulletin states. Numerous details of construction are explained and illustrated for the benefit of men and women interested in improved poultry houses.

Too Much Mineral for Chickens Is Mistake

Tests made by L. E. Card of the University of Illinois indicate that it is a mistake to feed too much mineral mixtures to chickens. One lot of chicks was fed on a ration of 60 parts yellow corn meal, 20 parts soy bean oil meal, 13 parts wheat middlings, 1 part salt, 2 parts cod liver oil, 2 parts steamed bonemeal and 2 parts ground limestone. These chicks averaged 253 grams in weight at six weeks. A similar lot receiving the same ration, except 4 parts steamed bonemeal instead of 2 parts, weighed only 212 grams at the same age. Another lot receiving the same ration, but 4 parts ground limestone, instead of 2 parts, weighed only 187 grams at six weeks of age.

Dependable Source of Income in Choice Hens

During the past few years every section of the country has suffered from the sudden and severe decline in the price level of most farm products. For this reason, it is rather significant that in the Middle West where the agricultural depression has been the most acute, poultry and egg prices have remained firm. This, more than any other factor, has caused farmers to realize that a standard bred, high producing flock of chickens properly handled, is a dependable source of income and that poultry keeping compares favorably with any other farm activity.

Poultry Facts

In the United States last year 46,500 eggs were laid for every minute.

Dead chicks pay no bills. Use of clean practices means more live chicks and better profits. Sanitation will save one more chick in five than will live under dirty conditions.

Exposure to cold, damp or drafts, adds materially in bringing on roup among the chickens.

Don't wash eggs. Keep them from becoming dirty by having plenty of nests, keeping the hen house clean and gathering the eggs often.

Lice are more numerous and active in hot weather. To curb their activities apply nicotine-sulphate in full strength to the top of the perches before the birds go to roost.

A chicken sent to the Kentucky, experiment station for post-mortem was found to have 2,511 internal parasites. No wonder the chicken died.

Drugs are useless in the control of coccidiosis among chickens. At the first symptoms of the disease the birds should be placed on a heavy milk diet.

The late maturing turkeys that would not dress out as number ones at Thanksgiving because of lack of size may be confined and fed heavily on corn for the coming holidays.

Fertilizer Types and Distributors

Little Known of Merits of American Machine and Drilling Quality.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Up to the present no accurate information has been available as to the relative merits of the American types of fertilizer distributing machines. Also, little has been known regarding the factors which affect the drilling qualities of fertilizers. To obtain reliable data the United States Department of Agriculture undertook an experimental study of fertilizers and distributors the results of which have been published in Technical Bulletin 182-T, entitled, "Factors Affecting the Mechanical Application of Fertilizers to the Soil."

Test Atmospheric Conditions. Atmospheric conditions, especially relative humidity, were known to have a marked effect on the drillability of fertilizers, so it was necessary, for the purposes of these experiments, to construct a room in which the temperature and humidity were fully under the control of the experimenter. This room was lined with insulating board and the space between this lining and the outside walls was filled with sawdust. The only entrance to the room was through a vestibule equipped with three tight fitting doors. By means of thermostats it was possible to keep the air in the room at any desired temperature and humidity. The fertilizers used in the experiments were stored in trays in this room. Fertilizer distributors of various makes were installed successively in the room and the fertilizers were run through the machines with the air at various humidities to determine the effect of humidity on the rate of delivery.

Distributors representative of various types were also operated and tested to show the relationship of construction and principle of operation to evenness of distribution and control of delivery rate.

Effect of Weather. The experimenters noted the effect of weather conditions on fertilizers and also the effects of other factors, such as hygroscopicity, size and shape of particles, specific gravity of the fertilizers, and friction between particles. In the study of distribution they also observed the effects of the depth of fertilizer in the hopper, the inclination of the distributor, the use of agitators, and other factors.

This bulletin may be obtained, while the supply for free distribution lasts, upon application to the Office of Information, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

As Is Best Treatment to Give Sick Turkeys

Here's bad news for ailing turkeys. It sounds very much like the usual Thanksgiving prescription, but the directions in this case are not to wait for November to give it. Dr. W. A. Billings, extension veterinary specialist at University farm, St. Paul, Minn., nationally known "turkey talker," says the best treatment for a sick turkey is the as is. "Let's have as few sick ones as possible," he writes in his turkey news letter mailed to turkey raisers all over the United States.

As another timely hint, Doctor Billings suggests: "When your poults get out on greens for the first time, take care they do not gorge themselves. Break the good news to them gently. Their eyes are bigger than their tummies and some may load up and die because they are gluttons. If the little fellows are starved for greens they should be handled carefully to prevent such trouble. This applies to alfalfa, rape or any other green, leafy plant."

Predictions that this is to be a "good grasshopper year" hold little promise for modern turkey growers, Doctor Billings opines, because if the birds are to be grown to eat the hops they will likely die off from other causes. He urges keeping the poults confined in pens on clean ground, entirely away from chickens and at a safe distance from farm buildings.

Effective Control of Cucumber Beetle Pest

One part of arsenate of calcium and twenty parts of land plaster, mixed thoroughly together and applied in dust form at the rate of thirty to sixty pounds per acre, has been found by the Ohio experiment station to be an effective measure of control for the cucumber beetle. The station made a duster by using a half gallon tin cans get out on greens for the first time, take care they do not gorge themselves. Break the good news to them gently. Their eyes are bigger than their tummies and some may load up and die because they are gluttons. If the little fellows are starved for greens they should be handled carefully to prevent such trouble. This applies to alfalfa, rape or any other green, leafy plant."

Clean Up Grain Bins Before Harvest Time

Farmers will find it worth while to repair their cribs and grain bins before the harvest season. The job is both more simple and easier at this time of the year because the posts and beams are not loaded. Windows may be added for more light and ventilation and greater convenience may be secured by placing the doors where the are needed to save steps in taking out feed. The outside of the buildings may be improved by cleaning up and painting.

Perpetuate Forests by Careful Logging

Trees Less Than Twelve Inches Are Unprofitable.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Forests that last indefinitely and sawmills saving up these forests without ever running out of logs are pictured by the forest service, United States Department of Agriculture, in reporting the results of a study of selective logging in the northern hardwoods of the Lake states.

The key to perpetual timber production is selective logging, the forest service states, which means a partial cutting of the forest involving judicious selection of trees to be felled, so as to perpetuate and improve the forest and at the same time maintain or increase the profit. Lumbermen in the Lake states with no virgin timber in prospect for cutting after present holdings are exhausted, must choose between going out of business in a comparatively short time or taking steps to put their remaining stands on a self-perpetuating basis.

Costs of logging and milling as determined by the study indicate that in typical Lake state forests trees less than 12 inches in diameter are unprofitable to convert into lumber. By taking only the trees larger than that size the lumberman obtains a better profit and at the same time leaves many thrifty trees to grow for the next cutting and reseed the bare places. In the region investigated, successive "crops" of lumber can probably be harvested on this basis every 25 to 30 years.

Technical Bulletin No. 100, Selective Logging in the Northern Hardwoods of the Lake states, which gives the results of the study, may be procured by writing the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Cod Liver Oil Gives Poultry Fishy Taste

Although cod liver oil is highly recommended for feeding poultry under certain conditions, it has a tendency to cause the flesh to have a fishy taste and therefore should be omitted from the ration fed broilers for at least two weeks prior to marketing, says Dr. F. B. Hutt, poultry specialist, University farm, St. Paul, Minn.

Doctor Hutt cites some experiments conducted at Purdue university which indicate that cod liver oil should be left out of the ration for about 16 to 18 days before marketing. The amount of cod liver oil and the length of time used, the method of cooking and the temperature of the meat when served, affected the intensity of the fishy flavor. One lot was fed two per cent cod liver oil in the ration, and after the oil had been discontinued two weeks, no bad taste was apparent while warm but a trace was detected when allowed to become cold. Another lot received four per cent cod liver oil in the ration. One bite of one of these birds was enough, for fishy taste was so evident. However, after the oil had been removed from the lot for two weeks, only a slight trace of fishy flavor could be detected.

The experiments show no evidence that the omission of cod liver oil for a short period will cause any bad effects upon chickens of marketable size.

Feeding Orphan Lambs Quite Important Task

In the feeding of orphan lambs the following points must be kept in mind.
1. The milk should be taken from a cow whose milk tests high in fat.
2. For the first three or four weeks the milk from this one selected cow only should be fed to the lamb.
3. For the first few days and nights the lamb should be fed every two or three hours, and a small amount (say two or three tablespoonfuls, with a gradual increase) given it each time, so as not to overload its stomach.
4. The milk should be warmed up to 92 degrees, which is about the warmth of sheep's milk. Care must be taken not to let the milk boil.
5. The bottle and nipple should be thoroughly washed each time after use to keep bottles sweet.

FARM FACTS

The husker-shredder will destroy corn borers.

Silage forms an important part of the ration for fattening lambs.

When a team will not pull together cross the inside traces, hitching each to the inside of the opposite single-tree.

In order to grow chicks well they must be supplied with an abundance of a suitable ration. At least one hopper four feet long is needed for 100 chicks. As they grow larger they will need more space.

Dipping the hens in a solution of two ounces of sodium fluoride to each gallon of water helps them to be better layers by ridding them of body pests. Carbollinum or any of the stock dips kill mites.

A large barrel, buried in a horizontal position in the side of a bank, makes a convenient place to store small amounts of root crops and cabbage. Soil and straw or leaves are used for covering the barrel. The barrel head makes a convenient door for this storage pit.

Italy Accords Honors to Mothers of Nation

Taking their cue from the ancient Israelites, who honored lamb's blood on their doors during the Egyptian captivity when the angel of the Lord was about to kill the first born of the Egyptians, in order that their children might be recognized and spared, the Italians now place white ribbons in front of their houses in which children have been newly born. This custom, which was instituted in Turin, has now spread to Milan and is expected to become nationwide. It is designed to show the esteem in which the regime holds those women who, in the words of one newspaper, "have given to the country sons who tomorrow will be soldiers." Everything is being done to continue interest in the "demographic battle" through which Mussolini hopes to raise the man power of the country to the maximum and to recover the power of ancient Rome.

Figures Show Rapidity of Forest Destruction

According to the estimate of the American Tree association, there are three and two-tenths acres of forest land for every human being in the world.

North America has about 20 per cent of the trees of the world, Europe and Africa 10 per cent each, South America and Asia about 23 per cent each, with Asia teeming with people and South America scantily populated. Canada has the largest forest area on our own continent, but much of it is of slow growth and little timber value.

This compilation also reminds us most of the original forests of the world are gone. The wonder, it seems to us, is that there are any of these forests left, seeing the centuries upon centuries that men have hacked and hewed at them in times of peace and brutally destroyed them in time of war, and at all times exposed them to the pitiless ravages of fire.—Knoxville Journal.

Royal Canaanite City

Evidence of a great find, probably the source of the account in the Book of Genesis, has been found at Kish as well as at Ur of the Chaldees, Dr. George Duncan, of American university, an authority on Biblical archeology, says. The mound known as Bel-Misrin, which is being excavated by Xenia theological seminary, probably represents a Canaanite royal city conquered by Joshua and mentioned in the Bible as Kishath-Sopher. In the opinion of Doctor Duncan, evidence of worship of the sun and worship of the serpent has been found at various cities of Biblical lands now being excavated, he points out.

Americans Living Abroad

Apart from the seasonal tides of tourist travel, 392,698 American citizens remain abroad in permanent residence. The greatest number, according to the figures compiled by the State department, based upon reports from 330 consulates, is found in Canada, where 234,147 of our citizens reside. Europe is next with 77,063. Mexico and Central America total 19,614; the Caribbean islands, 19,579; South America, 12,198; Asia, 24,119; while Africa reports 3,673, and Australasia and Oceania, 2,367.

"Dipped" Herrings for Health

Mrs. Anna Kreiser, the oldest inhabitant of Latvia, who died at the age of 129, lived for many years almost entirely on raw herrings, which she ate after dipping them in weak black coffee. She attributed her longevity to this diet.

for ANY BABY
We can never be sure just what makes an infant restless, but the remedy can always be the same. Good old Castoria! There's comfort in every drop of this pure vegetable preparation, and not the slightest harm in its frequent use. As often as Baby has a fretful sleep, is feverish, or cries and can't sleep, let Castoria soothe and quiet him. Sometimes it's a touch of cold. Sometimes constipation. Or diarrhea—a condition that should always be checked without delay. Just keep Castoria handy, and give it promptly. Relief will follow very promptly; if it doesn't, you should call a physician.

Recovery From Unemployment Era Slow, Now Well Underway

Always there is more unemployment in July than in other months of the year. This is the case even when industry has been running at full speed and there apparently is no lack of work, for the month of July usually is taken by manufacturers for the overhauling of plants, making additions or changes, and for a general preparation for meeting an expected larger demand for products in the fall.

This being the case there need be no uneasiness over the statement that in July just passed unemployment showed a gain of one per cent. This was reported by William Green, President of the American Federation of Labor, who stated that reports from trade unions in 24 cities showed 21 per cent out of work in July, as compared with 20 in June. Mr. Green explained that an increase in unemployment in July is not unusual.

In the building trades, he found, unemployment is still at the high May level, with 37 per cent, out of work—twice the number unemployed in July of last year.

Weighing his figures for the building trades, he reports unemployment in large cities only as 16.3 per cent, an increase of 14.8 over June.

Recovery from the widespread and very general unemployment of six months ago naturally is very slow. Conditions have not been readjusted in industry to the extent that employment is approaching normal, but there has been improvement and the number of idle in the country today is many thousands less than six months or a year ago.

With revived industrial activity in the Fall, it may be expected that work will be available for a very considerable number of those now idle. The promise, viewed from every angle, is for a decided improvement in the situation within the next three months.

Still further cause for optimism may be found in the reports that about 1,000 employees of the Frisco Railway locomotive and coach shops returned to work yesterday after a brief layoff and the announcement of officials of the company that they were hopeful of preventing further shutdowns this year. Added to this were reports Monday that 116,500 employees had been put back on their jobs at Detroit automobile plants and that orders issued by the New York Central Railroad Company had sent more than 6,000 men back to work in the repair shops all along the line.

Why Not Quit Blaming Crash In Stocks and Get Down to Business?

There is suspicion that a good deal is being blamed on the stock market crash of last October that should not be charged to that unfortunate and demoralizing slump. It is so easy for one to say their inability to meet an obligation is the direct result of the near-panic that followed the stock crash. Perhaps the real reason in many cases is lack of business judgment or an unwise overloading of obligations at a time when conditions were unfavorable for meeting them.

It is easy to trace back the recent and present dull business period to the October stock crash, and indirectly that may have been responsible for the general depression in business and industry, but the stock crash did not cause all of the trouble that individuals and concerns are having. Some of it is due to failure to grasp opportunities, some to over-speculation in various ways, most of it probably to fear from which the general public seems still to be suffering, that the worst may yet be coming.

Complete recovery from the near-panic of the past ten months is well under way and the need now is for confidence on the part of firms, and individuals in the present stability of business and finance, and in the future of both. American business, despite near-panics, remains fundamentally strong. It has not been more than shaken by the events of last fall. It has not in any instance gone into a collapse. It now is firmly on the road to complete recovery.

If the stock market crash of nearly a year ago could be relegated to the dim and distant past, where it belongs and everyone, in Anniston and all over the country, could take courage and start in with a determination to take advantage of the really good opportunity that is being presented for business development, reach out into the field of trade for business that only awaits invitation to come, start up industry to meet the demand that assuredly is to be met, spend where spending is wise and curb the speculative tendency where there is doubt of the outcome, this city and the entire country would soon be on a normal basis.

Confidence is the chief need and with it determination to put forth the best efforts we have to overcoming whatever remains of the feeling of fear.

"ROUND TOWN"

—by Doug

Opinions expressed in this column by this writer have no connection with the general policies of this paper, being wholly those of the writer, in no manner they are written.

Now that I have been appointed Certified Chilton County Critter Sizer, I find so many things that need to be critter sized, or rather criticised round this part of the universe. After looking into my duties I have found that I am not to confine my work to the members of the fairer and warmer sex, but that I may cover things in general. Now that makes it much easier for me to write this column each week.

Since last week I have been able to delve into the private affairs of a few certain members of the above referred to sex and find that my suspicion is correct. On some I was somewhat surprised, although I am supposed to be thrill and shock proof. Now this week I will tip the men off to something—perhaps they knew it long before I did—but don't let any of the ladies tell you what perfect angels they are, and that they are different, because they are all just humans, although some do not appear that way to me, and I wonder how they are going to make out in life—later finding out.

Have a letter this week, and am pleased to reply to it. This is the letter:

Clanton, Ala., August 8, 1930.

Editor Round Town Column, The News, Clanton.

If you are who I think you are, I would like to know how you find out so much, or just think you find it out. I am not married and would like to tell you a thing or two that you do not know and I think it would help you some—at least it might teach you how to keep quiet, when you apparently know nothing about women.

Sallie B. Good.

Now Sallie, was very nice with her letter, but I don't think I am who you think I am. But by studying your handwriting, I find that you really meant the opposite thing in your letter. And I invite you to please tell me that thing or two. I will call on you personally if you wish and maybe I can teach you a thing or two. Now, Sallie B. Good.

Verbena, Ala., August 7, 1930.

To "Doug" Chilton Co. News, Clanton.

Have just read your column today, and I think you are about the most cracked person I have ever heard of. You don't know a thing about "the fair and warmer sex." I'll bet you wouldn't know how to go out with one of us. I am a red head and am not dangerous as Dooker Pooker claims, and I don't think he has any grounds for his un-called-for criticisms of the women. I'll bet he is so old it is pitiful, and I'll bet you have grey hairs in your head.

"Red Head."

Clanton, Ala., Aug. 8, 1930.

"Doug" Round Town Column, The News.

I am a married woman and do not like the things you and Dooker Pooker have said about us. You have no right to say these things. My husband knows that he is boss at our house. I hope to have some one else to write you a real straight, fact giving letter next week and would like to meet Dooker Pooker in a debate sometime.

A Reader.

Well, seems like me and Dook are in for it now, so if things become too heated down here for me, I'm going to have to call him for help.

The above letters go to show that women are funny. You never know which way to turn when they are concerned. The Popularity Contest conducted here last week gave me an opportunity to make a real study of the critters, speaking mostly of the young ones, in all of their roles. It just won't do to trust them. If you will watch them closely you can see that they are misrepresenting the truth when they want you to believe them. I have seen the critters acting like spiders, weaving their web with one eye on some member of the masculine sex, using all in their power to vamp him, and the poor fool falls for it and is caught in the web, to be devoured and played with and then turned loose to wonder, and wander. I am warning the men against this, it is dangerous to your constitution. Squash the critters before they have a chance to get hold of you.

Now if the women want to come to their defense, there is no time like the present. Speak now or forever hold your peace and acknowledge that the great Dooker Pooker and his assistant, Doug, have won the fight for the men. The women have been trying to get the upper hand for a long time. Even the other day I read where it was predicted that within fifty years, the majority of the nation's wealth would be in the hands of the women. Now, men, think of this. Suppose you wanted a Coca-Cola, you would have to ask your wife for a nickel. She would pay for your shaves, buy your clothes, tell you whether or not you could buy a package of cigarettes. Men, if this keeps up, we are lost. We must take the time worn worm and turn him before it is too late and he dies in the hands of the women—the inferior humans, who are trying to run our country. They can't run an automobile, so what would they do with a country, being they are all natural born back-seat drivers. Join in on the battle for masculine supremacy, and elect Dooker Pooker as chairman on the Homocratic ticket. All letters will be taken care of by this column. Names will not be used.

ANOTHER LETTER FROM DOOKER POOKER

Doug, Esq., Chilton County's Certified Critter-Sizer, Clanton, Ala.

Dear Doug:

I am distressed, but not surprised, to learn from your masterful article last week, that they lots of yimmin down there which thinks that they is so smart and bosses their man.

Now Doug, I have always believed that the wimmin is a necessary evil and that every man should oughter have as many as one of them, but I insist that odd one is too many if they is going to hen-peck our men.

As you state you haven't had no experience with married critters, I thought maybe you wouldn't mind if I suggest that our wimmin oughter go to the dogs and learn about love from them. A man loves his dog so because the dog loves him so. But whenever you see a shy dog you can safely bet a horse and buggy that he has been mistreated or Miss-treated. Thus the life of a hen-pecked man becomes a Mrs.-treated dog's life.

If you need any help, just holler.

DOOKER POOKER.

Elsewhere in this issue will be found an ad from the Verbena Service Station, at Verbena, Alabama, in which they have listed some new low prices on Mansfield and Olympia tires. Mr. Chas. Gulleddge, proprietor of the Verbena Service Station, stated that all they ask is for you to drive in to see them and allow them to tell you about their tires and give you prices on them. They also stress the idea that they give you real service along this line. Watch this newspaper for further news from the Verbena Service Station about their tires.

HARVESTING BY OLD AND NEW METHODS

When wheat was harvested with a sickle and threshed with a flail, from 35 to 50 hours of labor were required for harvesting and threshing an acre with a yield of 15 bushels. The Department of Agriculture shows how this was changed by the introduction of the cradle which saved about ten hours per acre. At present farmers in the Great Plains use from four to five hours in harvesting an acre of wheat with a binder and threshing from the shock with a stationary thresher; from three to four hours when the crop is harvested with a header and threshed with a stationary thresher; and an average of three-fourths of an hour when the combined harvester-thresher is used.

WEATHER FORECASTING BY NEW METHODS

Revolution in the present methods of weather forecasting is predicted by Mr. H. H. Clayton of the Smithsonian Institution, who foresees that forecasting of pressure and temperature will soon be made in much the same way that ocean tides are now predicted, except that the periods used will be solar periods rather than lunar periods and will need to be treated in a special way owing to changes in phase and amplitude. He predicts that processes will be simplified and machinery like the tidal machines will be introduced in order to handle the immense amount of data which will be needed for world wide forecasts, or even for forecasts over a large area like the United States.

Results of twenty years research on the relation of the sun's activity to atmospheric changes are condensed in a publication of 49 pages issued by the Smithsonian. Complicated pulses of the sun's radiation occur both as long-period changes in terms of years and also as shorter variations of only a few days duration, as shown by Doctor C. G. Abbott, Chief at the Smithsonian, and his associates. The pulses in the sun's radiation, Mr. Clayton shows, are attended by variations in atmospheric pressure, which increases the contrasts in pressure and speed up the circulation of the atmosphere. When solar activity increases, the pressure falls in the equatorial region, rises in middle latitudes, and falls in the polar regions. The regularity of these changes is interfered with by the distribution of land and water and by the seasonal changes, so that the rate of progression of the atmospheric waves is greatly complicated.

Mr. Clayton's method of forecasting is by means of these periodic vibrations in the sun and atmosphere. An analysis of such periodic terms in the weather at any point on the earth would make it possible to project the periodic terms ahead to any length of time desired. Unfortunately there are variations in the amplitude and phase of the periods and it is therefore necessary to redetermine the periodic terms at short intervals and to limit the time in advance which they are made to cover. When these inversions and displacements in the periodic term become calculable, this method of forecasting will Mr. Clayton thinks, probably replace all others. Already considerable progress has been made along this line.

AGE SECRET UNKNOWN

Often interviewed on his birthday and asked the secret of his long life, Major Charles Manly Stedman of North Carolina, now 89, and the oldest member of Congress, has had little light to throw on the subject.

Once he said: "The whole secret of my long and active life is the providence of God." This answer was concise enough, but it would perhaps be of little benefit to anyone else. Pressed further for details, he went on to tell something of his personal habits.

"I smoke more cigars than the ordinary man, and have smoked a great deal most of my life. I eat anything I like that is set on the table before me. I do much walking at home, but in Washington I take no particular form of exercise."

Surely this is not a difficult regimen, but it might not work out with others as it has with the venerable Major, who first went to Congress when he was 70, and is now in his 20th year of service at Washington.

While persons of extreme age often believe that certain habits of life, or lack of habits, are responsible for their longevity there appears to be no old age secret. Some folks just happen to live a long time, usually without making any special effort to do so.

Chairman Shouse's Preview of Hoover Campaign Book Collected at Government Expense

Washington, August 14.—Jouett Shouse, Chairman of the Democratic National Executive Committee, commenting upon a United Press dispatch to the effect that every government department and bureau had been called upon to submit a report of the Hoover administration activities for use by campaign speakers and to be published in book form, said:

"It might seem that had the accomplishments been of sufficient importance, the country would know about them without this advertisement at government expense."

Chairman Shouse cited among the major accomplishments to appear in the proposed campaign book, "The Tariff law, which will not be referred to therein as the Grundy tariff; the London Naval Treaty—without any reference to the circumstance that it was the Democratic Senate vote and the efforts of Senator Joseph Robinson, the Democratic leader, that made possible the ratification of the treaty, and the Federal Farm Legislation—without of course the accompaniment of the prevailing market prices of agricultural products."

Some administration achievements which Chairman Shouse thinks will not appear in the book will be the effort "to place on the Supreme Bench a judge of purely political distinction or the repudiation of the government ownership principle with reference to Muscle Shoals in a letter to a Tennessee Congressman to help the latter in his primary campaign."

"The forthcoming book," says Chairman Shouse, "doubtless will be formidable in bulk, but will hardly be convincing to the farmer selling his wheat at 60 cents a bushel, to the manufacturer forced to run at half time or less because of the crippling of the foreign markets, to the merchant as he contemplates his almost empty aisles, or the man out of a job."

Political Bunk

Chairman Legge of the Federal Farm Board, boiling over because the failure of his board has been commented on, says:

Farmers as a class are doing a lot of thinking for themselves these days, and many of them seem to be aware that their present unhappy condition is a result of long years of unregulated production while they listened to gigantic schemes that high-powered statesmen have had to offer, rather than any action of this board. Present and future orations written by the Democratic National Committee and fathered by various orators, to broadcast the alleged failures of the Farm Board, are only more of the same kind of political bunk by virtue of which the farmer arrived at his present position.

"Political bunk," are apt words here. It was political bunk that promised farm relief by way of the Federal Farm Board.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

THE INDIVIDUAL YET NEEDED BY BUSINESS

By JOHN G. LONSDALE President American Bankers Association

SOME seem to think that the day of the individual in business has passed. But they are wrong. While the individual may not attract such outstanding attention as he did in the days of old when institutions were conducted on a smaller scale, he nevertheless is to be found in any large corporation, dominating the situation, giving orders here, cooperating there and shouldering the responsibility of keeping a large group of lieutenants, captains and privates working in unison and moving forward under the banner of progress. And all of these are held accountable to the public because the public has entered into a partnership agreement with the corporation through purchase of stock.

Welfare of Workers Even in the gigantic mergers that have taken place within the last two years there remains more than ever the necessity for a leader, an aggressive personality, whose duty it is to see that basic principles are not forgotten, that the rights and privileges of the individual workers and the customers they serve are as well provided for as in the smaller business units.

It is gratifying to note that our corporations are giving more and more concern to the welfare of their workers. Numerous benefit organizations have been formed, opportunities offered for advancement of education and position, hospital service established and insurance and retirement pensions provided.

This general humanitarian movement in reality is the outgrowth of analysis, which has disclosed the need of improving the well-being of our individual workers, realizing at the same time that our institutions will benefit.

PREPAREDNESS IN BUSINESS

By R. S. HECHT,

American Bankers Association.

My observations for many years, both as an employee and as an executive, have convinced me that the reason some men and women go ahead and others do not is that some keep themselves constantly prepared to accept and fulfill larger duties and responsibilities as they offer, and some do not.

Grant, as we must, that there is a certain element of luck in the conditions under which opportunity for promotion comes to different men and women, we nevertheless must also see that it is each individual's own state of preparedness which determines his ability to seize opportunity if and when it comes, and having seized it, to succeed in meeting the greater demands which it inevitably places upon him.

Real advancement never means going ahead to easier tasks, but always to harder ones. Opportunity for advancement is worthless unless in accepting it you are able to carry with you the abilities and qualifications that prepare you to meet the heavier exactions that are an inherent part of opportunity.

It is far better to go into action in the field of enlarged responsibility prepared and qualified, rather than that you and the institution you work for shall be exposed to the hazard of your having to build up to new responsibilities after having assumed them.

The new spirit of all business seeks to prepare its people in advance through education for the higher duties it holds in store for them.

Bank Bandits Active

The greatest number of bandit raids on American banking ever recorded in the figures of the protective department of the American Bankers Association were reported during the six months ending last February. Bank members of the association reported for investigation 311 forgery cases, 107 holdup robberies, 15 burglaries, 2 sneak thefts and 8 mortgage swindles while non-member banks, numbering less than half the total enrolled in the association, suffered 86 holdup robberies and 9 burglaries, non-members being burglarized or held up once for every 89 banks, as compared with once for every 164 member banks. The association detective agents caused the arrest of 143 of the 236 bank criminals apprehended during the period covered.

The association's report on these conditions urges support of the movement to provide city police departments with radio-equipped cruising automobiles which have proved particularly effective in Cleveland and Detroit in the broadcasting of alarms and the closing in on criminals immediately after or even in the midst of the perpetration of crimes. Last year the average time elapsed between the receipt of radio calls by these cars and the 1325 arrests which followed was one minute and forty-two seconds, the report says.

The Mazaroff Mystery

THE STORY

Mervyn Holt is enraptured by a man calling himself Mazaroff as a traveling companion. After a short tour they put up at the Woodcock Inn on Marrasdale moor. They meet, casually, Mrs. Elphinstone and Sheila Marchionne. Mazaroff tells Holt they are his wife and daughter and that his real name is Marchionne. That night Mazaroff fails to return to the inn and his disappearance is unexplained. Holt meets Sheila and tells her of Mazaroff's disappearance. Holt is questioned by Police Sergeant Manners and a reporter, Bowman. Mazaroff's murdered body is found. Crole, Manners' lawyer, and Maythorne, private detective, arrive. Valuable diamonds that Mazaroff usually carried are missing. A gun, stolen from Musgrave, is found at the scene of the murder. Evidence at the inquest proves Mazaroff was Marchionne. He will leave all to Holt. Herman Klop, close friend of Mazaroff, is in London. From him it is learned that Mazaroff possessed two remarkable diamonds, which he had offered for sale to Lord and Lady Lookes. Lookes says Mazaroff had one of the stones and his agent, Armtrude, the other. Miss Marchionne arrives at Holt's rooms with the missing will which she had stolen from her mother.

"Mervyn!" she whispered. "Parslave! Gone in there!"

"Parslave!" I exclaimed. "The man missing from Marrasdale? Impossible!"

"I tell you Parslave has just gone into that shop—the tobacco shop! Parslave is in there! Come back!"

"You're certain?" I said.

"I'm certain! Parslave is in there! Watch for him—let me stand in this shop door."

"He'll know you?"

"Of course! If he comes this way, I'll slip into this shop and buy something—anything. If he goes the other way—follow. Good heavens!—what is he doing here!—in London?"

It was a drapery establishment by which we were standing, with a deep doorway—Sheila slipped within its shelter; I, half-hidden, kept an eye on the tobaccoist's door. And presently came a tall, wiry fellow, obviously a countryman, bronzed in cheek and cheek; he turned along the pavement, away from us.

Sheila came out of the doorway and glanced down the street.

"That's Parslave!" she said. "But I knew it was. What next?"

"We must follow him," I answered. "No matter where he goes, I'm going to track him. Look here—I'll keep a little way behind him; you keep a little way behind me."

So we began our chase of this man who had disappeared from Birnside on the night of Mazaroff's murder, and for whom the police had already instituted a hue-and-cry.

Parslave went slowly away in front, and just as slowly Sheila glanced after me in the rear. He was an easy man to follow, and it needed little watchfulness on my part to see that he had not the ghost of an idea that he was being followed.

We turned to his right sharply, into Praed street, crossed the roadway, and a little further along the other side, turned again. Sauntering after him, at a considerable distance, I saw him enter the side door of a house—a rather bigger, more pretentious house than those that flanked it. Then he disappeared. I hastened my steps, walked swiftly past the house he had entered, and on the side door, to a dirty, uncleaned brass plate read, to my utter amazement:

"Dr. Eccleshare
Surgery Hours 9:30 to 11 a. m. 7 to 8:30 p. m."

I hurried back to the top of the street, where Sheila was already hanging about.

"Got him?" she asked.

I touched her arm with one hand, pointing with the other to the house at the further end of the street.

"You see that house down there?"

"That's the one that stands out from the rest?"

"I see it!"

"That's Eccleshare's! Eccleshare's, do you understand? Doctor Eccleshare. Eccleshare's—good Lord! And—Parslave is in there!"

Then silence fell upon us. We stood, mutually questioning each other. Sheila spoke first.

"Eccleshare's house!—and Parslave in it? Then here's some devilry at work. Mervyn—what's to be done?"

"Of course, I see how things are. Eccleshare sent Parslave here—to hide!"

But I had been thinking during that moment of silence—thinking fast.

"There's only one thing to be done."

"I said. Look here—you do just what I tell you. Get a taxicab. Go straight to Maythorne's—103b Conduit street—see that?—and tell him exactly what's happened. Get him to come back here with you, and to bring his clerk, Cottingley. Meanwhile, I'll keep an eye on Parslave and that house. Now—hurry!"

"The went off on the instant, without so much as a word, and I turned to watch the house fifty yards away.

And I had not watched long before Parslave came out again, and came my way, too. He was carrying a rush basket, such as servants use when they go shopping. I sauntered after him (on the opposite side). He went to a grocer's shop; he bought potatoes and a couple of fine cauliflowers. And that little domestic mission fulfilled, he went leisurely back to Doctor Eccleshare's. I pictured him and some housekeeper woman in there—Parslave would doubtless be peeling the potatoes; like any tame family man, and exchanging pleasant talk with the female presiding genius—and yonder in the Northumbrian wilds, three hundred miles away, the police were wanting him . . . on suspicion of murder!

I was laughing softly over this when a hand was laid on my arm. I looked sharply round—to see Maythorne's queer clerk, Cottingley. He jerked a thumb over his left shoulder, silently, and following the gesture I saw, a few yards away, Sheila, Maythorne, and a strange man, somebody or other got up for the part of the confirmed loafer, the type that just hangs about, and hangs about.

"Gu'nori!" said Cottingley, as if introducing Maythorne. "Here!"

I went up to Maythorne and Sheila, Cottingley at my heels. The loafer person made a slinking movement to the rear, and began to study the contents of a shop window. Maythorne gave me a glance that meant more things than I could realize.

"Mervyn!" She Whispered. "Parslave! Gone in there!"

"Now then, Holt," he said, plunging straight into business, "Miss Marchionne's given us a description of this man Parslave—just you give us another, so that Cottingley and this other man of mine will know him to the last detail. Here—Johnson!"

The loafer individual slid close to us, like a shadow sifted by a moving light, and he kept his eyes on me without blinking while I rapidly but thoroughly detailed a description of Parslave.

Cottingley nodded at Maythorne, nudged the loafer, and they turned away, with seeming utter indifference. Sheila stared after them in obvious wonder.

Maythorne laughed and motioned us toward the end of Praed street.

"You two young people can go off duty now," he said. "Parslave is as safe as if we'd got him inside the jewel case at the Tower! Take my advice—go somewhere and have the day to yourselves. Leave all this to me—the only thing is that I want you, Holt, to look in at my office at six o'clock sharp this evening. Now—I'm off! Business!"

Minimum of Waste in Sardine-Canning Plant

In a Down East sardine canning factory the only thing that is wasted is the odor. That may not be a dead loss, for there are persons who assert they like the smell of a sardine factory. The scales are sold to the manufacturers of artificial pearls. The fish meal is in demand in Germany and in this country. The waste oil is collected and utilized in the production of paints and varnishes. Even the tin cuttings from the cans are baled and shipped to England for reprocessing into new sheets of the metal.

Down East sardines are sent to 95 different countries. In Java, when representatives sought a new market, the natives would have nothing to do with the "little fishes boiled in oil."

Two hundred free cases were offered if the prospective customers would place a 1,000 case order. At last the deal was made. The sardines with heaped high on trucks, together with a band of native musicians, taken from bazaar to bazaar, and sold. Thus introduced, there was no further difficulty in adding Java to the list of sardine consumers.—New York Times.

Early Handkerchiefs

The white handkerchief was considered bad form in ancient Rome. Although colored cloth squares were used for such purposes as headpieces, neckerchiefs and barber's accessories, the practice of "mopping" or "blowing" in public was frowned upon by the elite. Commentaries on Roman life cite the lack of the necessity to use a "nose" handkerchief as a desirable quality in a slave, and, conversely, the frequent need of a "sweet" handkerchief as a just cause for divorce.

He was in the taxicab which he had kept waiting and was being driven away before we could say anything. We both looked at each other and laughed.

"That's good advice of Maythorne's, anyhow," I said. "Let's follow it. Let's go somewhere where we can talk about it—"

"What?" she said as I hesitated. "Ourselves!" said I. "We've had enough of other people."

We had a delightful lunch in a delightful, old-fashioned inn; we spent the afternoon amongst the autumn-tinted lanes, and . . .

But that, after all, has nothing to do with this story, though it has all to do with Sheila and myself. At half past five I took her back to her friend's flat, and then went on to Conduit street and Maythorne. He immediately waved a telegram at me.

"Here you are, Holt," he said. "More developments. A wire from your man, Webster."

There was no great amount of wording in Webster's telegram, but such words as were there conveyed a good deal of highly important information. This is what Webster said:

"Courthouse, Armtrude, Eccleshare, Mr. and Mrs. Elphinstone all left here for Carlisle by eight o'clock train this morning."

I handed back the telegram without comment.

"Carlisle, of course, means London," Maythorne said. "The scene of operation's shifted, Holt—we've got some of the chief actors close at hand."

"Mrs. Elphinstone, of course, has come after her daughter," I suggested.

"And the will," he answered. "Or to find out what her daughter's done with the will. Well—there are two men we'll have to have a pretty straight talk with tomorrow. We're going to have it out with Armtrude. After that, we're going to interview Eccleshare—and Parslave, possibly with a little police assistance, if need be. But tonight you and I are going to see Mrs. Elphinstone. We know where she's to be found—and we'll go now and find her."

"Where?" I asked, wondering if he had some further information.

"Can you doubt?" he answered with a laugh. "She'll be found at Ashington mansions—where, I suppose, you've just left her daughter. I want to ask Mrs. Elphinstone a question or two. And I may as well tell you, Holt—she won't answer 'em! Tonight, at any rate."

"That I quite expect," said I.

"Just so! But she'll answer 'em tomorrow—or next day—or the day after that," he said, with a significant glance. "The thing is, first, to put them to her."

We rode up to Malda Vale and got out of our cab some twenty or thirty yards short of Ashington mansions. Maythorne immediately nudged my elbow.

"What did I tell you?" he said.

"They're here, now!"

In front of the main entrance to the flats a taxicab stood. And within it sat a woman—a tall, angular, elderly woman, dressed in somewhat rusty black, who stared straight in front of her until, attracted by our momentary halt and seeing our eyes turn in her direction, she gave us a quick side glance only to withdraw it sharply and to look ahead again, still more steadily. We passed on and entered the door.

"I've seen that woman before, remarked Maythorne, as we crossed the hall to the elevator. "At Marrasdale."

"So have I," I answered. "I saw her about the Woodcock—in fact, I took her for the cook. What can she be doing here?"

"Mrs. Elphinstone will know," he said. "But—I shan't ask her that now. Well—what's this Miss Apperley's number?" he went on, as we were whirled upwards. "Twenty-seven? Right! Now then, Holt—we walk straight in! We'll excuse ourselves to Miss Apperley afterward."

I did as he bade me. Without ceremony as much as a tap, I opened the door of Miss Apperley's sitting room, and Maythorne and I entered, abreast. We plunged into the middle of things. An acrimonious debate was already at its full height. Sheila stood, indignant and defiant, by the center table. Mrs. Elphinstone was enthroned, obviously in a fine temper, in an elbow chair by the hearth. Mr. Elphinstone was perched on the edge of a chair in another corner, nursing the handle of his umbrella and apparently as uncomfortable as a nervous and peaceable man can be.

"—not one word, good mother, till you tell me how you came into possession of that will!" Sheila was saying, and saying with emphasis, as we strode in. "It's up to you to speak first—you're . . ."

She broke off there, or, rather, Maythorne broke things off for her. He strode forward and took the words out of Sheila's mouth.

"Your daughter's in the right, Mrs. Elphinstone," he said in cool, even accents. "It's up to you to give explanations. Now, come, Mrs. Elphinstone—how did you obtain possession of Mazaroff's will—which is now safe, let me tell you, safe—in Mr. Crole's strong room. Come?"

But Mrs. Elphinstone groaned—wearily. Mr. Elphinstone showed temper and fight.

"How dare you speak to me—me!—like that?" she demanded. "What right—"

"My dear lady!" interrupted Maythorne. "Be calm, and don't be foolish. Think a little. Here is a very wealthy man murdered under most suspicious circumstances. He has his will in his pocket, with other papers, and with valuables, and with money. He is not only murdered, but he is robbed of everything he has on him. Nothing can be discovered about his missing property. Then a few nights later, your daughter accidentally finds out that the will is in—your hands! What do you suppose the police authorities will say to that, Mrs. Elphinstone? I'm asking you."

Mrs. Elphinstone looked at him half-wonderingly, as thoroughly obstinate and slightly stupid people will look at a questioner: I could see quite well that she was wondering how he dared to be so plain-spoken and unceremonious.

Mr. Elphinstone groaned once more—audibly. "Most distressing!" he murmured. "Most unpleasant! Really—I—I think, Marion, that—er—you know—if I were you—I—I think I should say how you got this—er document—I should—really."

"Mrs. Elphinstone will have to say how she got it, and from whom," observed Maythorne. "That will was without doubt abstracted—stolen—from Mazaroff's pocket by the man who murdered him. And Mr. Elphinstone, it is later discovered in Mrs. Elphinstone's keeping. How came it there?"

Mrs. Elphinstone suddenly gathered up her wraps and her umbrella and rose from her chair.

"What right have you to ask me questions?" she demanded, facing Maythorne. "You're not a policeman, as far as I'm aware, and I don't know that you've any authority. I am going, and whoever wishes to see me will find me at Short's hotel. You'll find me there, Sheila—I shall not run after you again."

"That's a useful thing to know, Mrs. Elphinstone," said Maythorne, still perturbed. "You will no doubt be called upon at Short's. This is a matter of murder! And whether you like it or not, Mrs. Elphinstone—or, as it should be, Marchionne—I am going to know who murdered Mazaroff. If you know, you're already an accessory after the fact, are you not?"

Mrs. Elphinstone was at the door by this time, and her eyes were as hard as ever as she swept us all with a contemptuous glance. "Are you coming, Malcolm? As for you, Sheila, if you want me again, you'll have to come to me. Otherwise—"

She made a gesture which seemed to indicate that she washed her hands of her daughter and of everybody present, and without waiting for Mr. Elphinstone, she marched off down the corridor.

Mr. Elphinstone shook his head—wearily and despondently. He looked round at all of us as if he wanted to speak, but no words came, and he presently turned and went after his wife. Maythorne closed the door, and glanced at us.

"You may think I was too explicit—perhaps brutal—with Mrs. Elphinstone," he said, "but I don't believe any of you understand. Knowing what I do—and Crole, of course, knows it now—I cannot keep this information from the police! It's impossible! We know—the police know—that Mazaroff was robbed as well as murdered. That will was on him! How did Mrs. Elphinstone get it? She is shielding somebody. That's the truth! Now, then—who is it?" Then, without waiting for any reply or remark, he tapped my shoulder and set off. I lingered a moment, to exchange a word or two with Sheila, and then followed him.

INTERDEPENDENCE ON INCREASE

By JOHN H. FINLEY, Associate Editor New York Times.

SO VAST are our boundaries becoming, in the sense of interdependence, that the Angel Gabriel on Judgment day might well be able to discard his trumpet for the radio, which at that time will reach every human being at the self-same moment, Boston to Bombay and back again. I would repeat in peace the word which was on our lips in war—interdependence—to make and keep the whole world, and patches of it here and there, a fit place to which we may conscientiously invite children to come and go to school.

Self-determination is a brave word if it thought only of self. Interdependence is the law of the universe from the atoms to the stars. Our supreme national achievement has been the demonstration of the practicability of federation on a large scale. John Fisk, 50 years ago, said that it would become desirable at the end of a century for the states of Europe to enter into a federal union.

We are only a half century on the way from the time when the prophecy was made, but Europe is already asir with that vision. Agriculture, in mineralogy, in estheticism and in culture the law of interdependence is demonstrating itself. The children of America, I predict, will be the leaders of an interdependent civilization.

"PUT DOLLARS IN ADVERTISING"

By MERLE THORPE, Editor Nation's Business.

A general increase in advertising appropriations, coupled with intelligent use of money expended, and sensible salesmanship are America's greatest current needs. Despite the fact that $1,000,000,000 was spent this country last year for advertising, manufacturers and merchants should increase their appropriations for the next year if they are to insure prosperity for all.

For the most part, factories are equipped with modern machinery. Their finances were never better. They stand ready to do a bigger job now than ever before. That is, they will do just as big a job as the selling forces of the nation can set up for them to do.

The nation is not "broke." Individuals still have their salaries. They still have their potential desires. It is advertising's opportunity to translate these desires into purchases, keep the factory wheels turning, and the pay envelopes will take care of the increased production. Such a vicious circle moving this way is as easy to start as a vicious circle which moves the other way.

Advertising is the chief tool of selling and one of the most important contributions to our present day life.

PEACE AND TARIFF BARRIERS

By SIR HENRY THORNTON, Canadian National Railways.

As the armies of trade march across nations, they immediately come into conflict with the barriers of tariff and national pride. Even today signs are not wanting of the effect upon international relations of tariff barriers and commercial invasions. In the struggle for markets, which both offensive and defensive, lies unquestionably the real menace to world peace.

The fundamental obstacle to peace is our hereditary contentions in psychology, perhaps dormant, but always explosive.

He is a courageous man who attempts to advise a nation, and it is dangerous performance if he happens to be a visitor from abroad. He only excuse must rest upon the fact that this is an international conference, the Rotary, and that frank speech, which I hope finds its source in sincerity and is clothed with courtesy, can offer no offense.

No theory can become the policy of any nation until the great majority of the electorate is sufficiently impressed with its necessity to demand its adoption. Peace among nations will appear only when a majority of each nation and sufficient nations themselves are inspired to strive for such an objective.

COLLEGES NOT FOR ALL

By PROF. BEN. D. WOOD, Columbia University.

It is embezzlement and waste of public funds to prepare all school students for college when only 10 per cent of them belong to the placards fill the high school halls of our country stating values of a college education in dollars and cents. The result of this is the annual American circus all over the country in September with hundreds of pupils standing in line to get into college during registration week.

There never was anything like it until 25 years ago. It does not exist in any place on the globe but this country. It is the biggest racket in the world.

The curriculum idea should be smashed. The whole system needs to be loosened up and the "sacredness of the school room" should be destroyed.

One might compare the use of the curriculum in prescribing education for students to the incredible idea of issuing a blanket prescription for 10,000 patients in a large hospital.

RAISING FUNDS FOR COLLEGES

By PROFESSOR SELIGMAN, Columbia University.

Acceptance of funds from private sources by professors and colleges I would describe as undesirable. It is an interesting fact that in every case of alleged improper activity of college professors the individual in question was either a subordinate instructor or connected with extension department or with some technical day or night school.

If it is undesirable for a university to accept funds from private sources on controversial topics of public policy, it seems equally undesirable for individual members of the faculty to do so. The university professor must be like the judge. His reputation for impartiality must be equally unswerving. Higher education and scientific research must be in the public mind the same confidence as does the system of justice. There is in this respect no difference between the ermine of the robe of the professor. If the belief in the integrity of the ermine, a mortal blow has been struck.

Seeing Big League Baseball

By BILLY EVANS
Sports writer, Big League Umpire and General Manager of the Cleveland Indians

One of the real classics of fan history, as I view it, occurred at Washington some years ago with Frank Isbell, former White Sox player, the Sox called into town not very long after the memorable visit by Mary Garden. On this occasion the celebrated prima donna had run afoul of the law because of a costume worn by her in a portrayal of Salome. Perhaps it would be better if I said lack of costume. At any rate, the incident attracted widespread attention and Mary's misadventure was still fresh in the minds of Washingtonians when the White Sox arrived for their series with the Nationals.

Now, Isbell—Iszy as he was called—was ordinarily a very tractable player. He seldom kicked at a decision, and was only when he thought he had sufficient reasons for kicking. On such occasions he broadcast his belief. Iszy was baldheaded. His hair was as devoid of hair as the Sahara desert is of wheat. When he took off his cap it looked as if a full moon had risen.

In the first game of the series, Isbell was called out at second on a close play. He got to his feet with murder in his eye, and the umpire, sensing that here was a difference of opinion, held his arms in traditional fashion and turned his back. Speechless with rage, Iszy resorted to one of the most elegant gestures of the diamond, one that is almost invariably rewarded with an invitation to the showers. He snatched off his cap and flung it to the ground with all his force.

There was a brief second of quiet and then, clear as a bell, the drawing voice of a Washington fan floated from the stands: "Have a care, Iszy. They plinched Mary Garden for less than that."

Like most human beings, a ball player can always enjoy a joke on the other fellow and sometimes on himself. But when the going has been tough, he sometimes finds it a little difficult to see the humor in the sally that singles him out as its victim.

The White Sox had an outfielder some years ago named Danny Green. He was a good performer, very fast, and might have been a great star if he had had a decent throwing arm. But his wing was weak, and the opposition knew it and frequently ran the bases wild on him. During the game I have in mind, the opposition scored twice from second base on Texas leaguers that had been fielded by Green. Green had fielded both of them cleanly and had plenty of time to cut off his men at the plate, but his two throws had been atrocious. Late in the game another ball was hit to him under exactly the same conditions, and a rabid rooster, quick to grasp the situation, decided to give Danny a little coaching.

"Bring it in, Danny," he pleaded. "Don't throw it; run with it." Every one on the field got a huge laugh out of it except Green. I imagine he thought it a pretty poor joke.

Larry Chappelle, an outfielder who cost the White Sox about $15,000 in the days when that was a lot of money, was called into the lineup one day as

Sudden Stop Harmful to Automobile Chassis

How long would your present automobile last if you installed a 350 horsepower engine in the chassis and drove it wide open?

There isn't a motorist in the world who would impose such a load on an ordinary chassis, because every driver knows that no standard automobile could withstand the terrific stresses imposed by so powerful an engine.

Nevertheless, many motorists habitually impose equal stresses on their cars without realizing it, a fact brought out by a Detroit manager of a large automobile concern, in a discussion of brakes and braking.

"Few persons realize how much energy must be dissipated to stop a car," he said. "Motor-wise drivers who know that it requires tremendous horsepower to give rapid acceleration never seem to think of braking in similar terms.

"With hydraulic four-wheel brakes, a car running at any speed can be brought to a dead stop in one-fifth the time that it takes to attain that speed. A 2,000-pound car, therefore, would require an engine of 350 horsepower to accelerate to 30 miles an hour in the same time that it may be stopped when going at that speed.

"Some drivers who would not expect a standard chassis to stand up to a 350 horsepower engine make it a practice to use the brakes to their full power for every stop. That is, they maintain speed to the last possible moment even when they know long in advance that they must come to a standstill, and then bring the car to a sudden halt.

"It is a great advantage to have the ability to make sudden stops in emergencies, but it is a gross abuse of a car to use this power harshly every time.

"Drivers should use their brakes moderately for all service stops. When they see a red light a block ahead they should let the car slow down gradually, bringing it to a standstill finally with gentle brake pressure.

"This practice, if followed regularly, not only saves the tires and brake linings, but guards the whole chassis from undue stresses."

Lost Son Found

In a newspaper picture of the champion newsboy marble shooter of New York, Vincent Sullivan, thirteen, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Philip of Fall River, Mass., discovered their runaway foster child.

Missing for several months from his Fall River home, the boy had been staying at the Brace Memorial Newsboys' home here, earning his own living by selling newspapers and incidentally acquiring considerable fame at marbles.

Tommy Connolly, the dean of American league umpires, has a ready sense of humor under a mask that bespeaks considerable seriousness. One day when the fans were on the umpires a little harder than usual, Tommy had occasion to call upon his wit in reply to a jibe from a fan.

As the umpire was leaving the park with that usual stolid expression on his face, some fan leaned over the railing of the stands and called to the arbiter.

"Hey, Connolly," he cried, "don't you ever smile?"

"Why should I?" replied Tommy, still in a serious vein. "Did you ever see the villain in a show smile?"

PENN CREW COMPETES IN BELGIUM

Manager Del Pratt of Waco Favors Baseball at Night

Life a political landslide started long before election day, the switch to night baseball by minor leagues throughout the country has been accelerated by the warning signs of red ink on the office books.

On dozens of fields and in at least half of the principal circuits, including all three "AA" leagues, the incandescents are flickering for the benefit of bigger and better crowds. Night baseball has passed the experimental stage. In many cities it has saved clubs from going under, financially. This will offset any disadvantages under which the players may operate. In the opinion of most managers it takes only a few nights to become accustomed to the different conditions.

Del Pratt, pilot of the Waco club of the Texas league, believes it possible to play to improve under the electric lights. Del points out that the light is steady and not subject to shifting shadows as in the daytime. Moreover he sees the players spurred on by the presence of larger crowds, which may mean bigger and better salaries.

In other words, the more spotlights the merrier!

Distinct Species of Rats

White rats will not live with brown ones because they are two different species of rat and the brown ones are inclined to be much more vicious than the white ones.

INTERESTING

Paul Easterling, hard-hitting Beaumont left fielder, has been sold to the Detroit Tigers.

Golf has its fascinations for men in public life and during the summer months some of them appear more interested in Bobby Jones than they are in Daniel Webster.

SPORT NOTES OF ALL

Utica, N. Y., is completing the organization of an industrial golf league. It will consist of eight-five man teams from industries of that city.

Jess Petty, pitcher of the Newark club in the International league, is planning to become a golf professional when his baseball days are ended.

Experts are picking Jimmy Foss of the Philadelphia Athletics as the coming batting champion. He is expected to outdo Babe Ruth in home runs.

All of the Mississippi Valley league teams will have night baseball before the end of the present season, according to the announcements from the various clubs.

Only three major league clubs are restrained from playing games on Sundays—the Athletics, Phillies and Pirates—due to the blue laws passed by Pennsylvania many years ago.

W. L. (Young) Stribling, Georgia heavyweight boxer, is a lieutenant in the United States army air reserve corps. He also holds a transport pilot's license and rated an excellent stunt flyer as well.

A slugging giant named Collins is likely to be the regular St. Louis first baseman next year, binging upon whether Breardon can make a satisfactory deal for Sunny Jim Bottomley. Collins is another Rochester farm hand.

Paddy Ryan, old-time boxer, won the heavyweight championship in his first fight and lost it in the second. His entire career consisted of five contests against three men, John L. Sullivan, Joe McAuliffe and Joe Goss.

DESCRIPTIONS

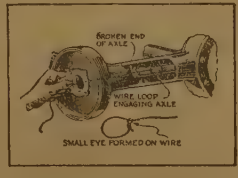

Bobby Jones and Walter Hagen are now tied in the number of major golf championships to their credit, with 11 each.

Harry Rice of the Yankees holds the modern major league record for assists by outfielders, having thrown out 30 runners in 1925.

Ray Kremer has pitched consistently for the Pirates. In 1924 he won 18, the following year 17, in 1926 20, in 1927 19, in 1928 15 and in 1929 18.

Wire Useful to Remove Broken End of an Axle

With some types of rear axles it is difficult to remove the broken end without taking off the differential housing cover. The picture shows how to accomplish this job without disturbing the cover. A loop is formed on end of the wire as shown. The wire, of course, should be so stiff that

The loop can be slipped down over the end of the axle. The slush nose arrangement will afford a sufficiently good purchase on the end of the axle to pull it out.—Popular Science Monthly.

Air Fighter Will Take Title From Victories

For many centuries it has been the habit of men who have acquired renown in war and been rewarded thereafter with the titles of chivalry to embody in those honorable titles the names of the places where their claims to distinction were acquired.

Recent instances that Americans will readily recognize are Lord Roberts of Kandahar, Lord Kitchener of Khartoum, Lord French of Ypres and so forth. Now for the first time in history a warrior has fetched a title out of the sky.

The Chevalier Willy Coppens, air attaché to the Belgian embassies at London and Paris, has been authorized by the king of the Belgians to add to his family name the title "de Houthuist." It was over the Houthuist sector on the Flanders front that the Chevalier Willy Coppens de Houthuist achieved the majority of his very notable aerial victories during the World war.—The Argonaut.

Ancient Weapons of War

A rare specimen of a gun known to be at least 300 years old has been added to the collection at the Hastings (Neb.) museum. The gun is one of the earliest types of matchlocks, and the barrel is more than five feet long with a bore of more than an inch. For many years this gun was a part of the famous collection of firearms owned by the duke of Austria. There are now more than 600 projectile arms in the museum collection, also about 200 swords, bayonets and other varieties of side arms.

Reach Eighth Grade

According to statistics of the United States bureau of education, out of every 1,000 children who enter school, 634 reach the eighth grade, 423 enter high school and 139 graduate from high school. In 1920 there were 230,902 high school graduates. Of this number, 64,479 went to college and 94,553 continued their education either at college or some other type of school.—New York Telegram.

tail, while other men of prominence were heard.

A large Committee from the South, with J. Lloyd Abbot of Spring Hill, and J. A. Kernodle of Camp Hill representing Alabama, were appointed and later spent four days in Washington, working with various Departments of the U. S. Government, in organizing details of the new Selling Organization. This Committee found the same cordial degree of cooperation which had featured the general meeting in Montgomery.

Following this organization, Messrs. Abbot and Kernodle returned from Washington filled with enthusiasm regarding the favorable beginning made by pecan growers. Pecan growers have realized for some time that they were facing a time of overproduction and unprofitable prices, unless means were taken to advertise, increase marketing outlets, and stabilize the market.

Since Alabama is the leading pecan state East of the Mississippi, this decision of Alabama leaders to join the big cooperative organization means prosperity to Alabama growers. With leading growers in Alabama and in the South on the Committee, there is every assurance that the rights of individual growers will be safeguarded. The organizations from the different states have worked in entire harmony. Their identity has been lost in the present organization, but all are working in harmony, for the common good in the New National Pecan Marketing Association.

J. Lloyd Abbot of Spring Hill is Vice-President of the newly organized National Pecan Marketing Organization. Mr. Abbot is a member of the State Board of Agriculture; he has been secretary-treasurer of the National Pecan Association for the past ten years. He brings to this great organization a long career as a grower, experimenter and salesman.

Messrs. Abbot and Kernodle will soon hold a group meeting with representatives of the Extension Service, Farm Bureau, State Board of Agriculture, and district and county agents of pecan producing counties and make plans for a sign-up campaign in Alabama. It is hoped that H. G. Lucas, president of the National Organization and S. H. Gibbons, in charge of field work, will be present. Mr. Gibbons was formerly a member of the Auburn teaching staff, and County Agent of Baldwin County.

Pioneer Resident of Clanton In Hospital Following Stroke Sunday

Latest reports from the bedside of Mrs. J. M. Potts, pioneer resident of Clanton, at the Central Alabama Hospital stated that she is doing better following a stroke last Sunday afternoon while walking near her home here. Friends who were walking with Mrs. Potts carried her into her home and summoned a doctor. For a while, reports stated, it was thought she would die. She was carried to the hospital here late Sunday afternoon and appeared to be better last Monday.

Mrs. Potts is considered as one of the old settlers of this place and will be remembered as the wife of J. M. Potts who was active in the grocery business here for many years, and who died several years ago.

Chairman Shouse Credits Senator Robinson With Treaty Adoption

Washington, Aug. 7.—President Hoover's statement expressing satisfaction that the London Naval Treaty "has received the united support of both political parties" is construed here as the final repudiation of the Republican National Committee's statement sponsored by Congressman Temple, (Rep. Pa.) who hailed the treaty as "the leading accomplishment of the Hoover administration," with the implied purpose of using the ratification as ammunition in the coming Congressional campaign. Now is the time for all good men to join the fight.

Jouett Shouse, Chairman of the Democratic National Executive Committee, in a public statement, pointed out the implied purpose of the Republican National Committee's statement at the time it was made. The fact that only two Democratic votes were cast against the treaty, and that it could not have been ratified without practically the united support of Democratic Senators, operated to still further discredit the Republican Committee statement sponsored by Congressman Temple, and the President's acknowledgment of this united support was the final blow to that attempt to make political capital out of an international treaty.

In a statement following the signing of the treaty, Chairman Shouse called attention to the fact that "during the whole treaty fight there has not issued from the Democratic Executive Committee one word of opposition or one statement that might have tended to destroy the work of the London conference." He adds, "there was, of course, the political temptation to give President Hoover a dose of the same medicine that the Republicans measured out to President Wilson when he negotiated a treaty. . . . However, those directing Democratic affairs took the position that foreign relations were not legitimate questions in domestic politics."

Chairman Shouse attributes ratification of the treaty principally to Senator Robinson of Arkansas, the minority leader, "whose defense of the London covenant, in the negotiation of which he participated, was not only the best argument in favor of the treaty but one that produced the most definite effect."

Chairman Shouse at the same time warned that "we will doubtless have more statements (like that of Congressman Temple's) claiming the ratification of the treaty as a great achievement of the Republican party."

Look To Your Throat If You Want To Look Young

Why is it that so many women do not seem to realize that the neck needs just as much attention as the face? One's neck, however beautiful, will not keep its smooth contour long if it is not given regular daily care. Unless the neck is given a thorough cleansing each time one's face is cleaned, it is found to have a neglected look. Worse still, some day you will face the mirror and be startled to realize that your neck looks old and wrinkled.

After the regular daily cleansing, the following treatment will do much to keep your neck contours young, and the skin fresh and smooth:

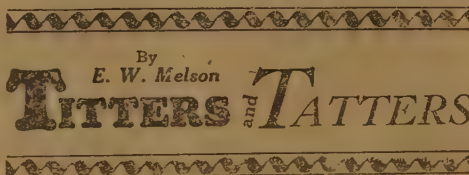

Spread a generous amount of tissue cream (substitute a rich, nourishing skin food if your skin is inclined to be dry), on your neck, working it up from your chest to your chin. Circle your neck with both hands, smoothing and pressing gently upward.

After the cream has been worked in, oil the inner surface of your hands with muscle oil and repeat the gentle upward movement with alternate hands. You will notice a pleasant tingling as the tissues are stimulated, and your skin is coaxed back to its normal functioning. Then dampen a small pad of cotton with a mild astringent, and whisk it up over your neck.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Huge Crop Losses Due to Drought Boost Prices and Rouse Government.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

PROTRACTED drought and excessively hot weather brought to the farmers of the United States a mixture of good and evil and aroused the administration to the consideration of relief measures beyond those contemplated by the act creating the federal farm board.

Both government and private crop reports led to estimates that the new corn crop had been damaged to the extent of at least 500,000,000 bushels, and the rains that fell throughout much of the corn belt during the week were said to have come too late to have much influence on the yield since pollination had failed.

Private reports by one of the leading experts of the Middle West indicated that a large part of the crop was beyond any material recovery. In Ohio the corn was deteriorating rapidly, and in southern Indiana it was badly damaged. In Illinois the situation was at its worst in the southern part of the state. The crop in northern and western Kentucky was said to be entirely ruined, and the condition in Missouri and Iowa was not much better. Throughout the whole drought region, also, pasturage and all fodder crops were burned up to an alarming extent.

On the other hand, these bad crop prospects led to a sensational rise in the prices of grain on the exchanges, and within a few days there was an estimated increase of about $650,000,000 in the theoretical value of farmers' products. The market in Chicago went wild and corn led in the swift advance, followed by wheat and the other grains. For the first time in five years the public came in on a big scale, and there were heavy buying orders from foreign countries. It was believed there would be a heavy substitution of wheat, oats, rye and barley for corn as live stock feed, and consequently the demand for those grains was large. Also the estimates of the Canadian wheat crop were slashed as a result of damage by drought, heat and black rust. The yield of rye in Europe, exclusive of Russia, will be far below normal, and the Prussian oats crop is greatly reduced.

PRESIDENT HOOVER conferred with Secretary of Agriculture Hyde on plans for a government program to aid the farmers threatened with ruin by the drought, and he asked both Mr. Hyde and Chairman Lodge of the farm board to make recommendations within a few days. It was stated at the White House that the President had received prompt and favorable response to his appeal to railroad executives for co-operation in reducing rail rates for the emergency movement of live stock and feed in the stricken areas.

The farm loan board said it was willing to do all possible to extend credit through the intermediate credit banks, the farm land banks and joint stock land banks. From congressional quarters came many requests for help, and to those was added the offer of Senator Robinson of Arkansas, the Democratic leader, to undertake a refund by congress to the farm board if the latter would divert all its available funds to drought relief.

The measures of assistance that the farm board and the other agencies of the federal government can and should undertake are being determined," said Mr. Hoover. "It is too early to determine the precise character of relief; much depends upon the further spread of the drought; but no stone will be left unturned by the federal government in giving assistance to local authorities."

IN OTHER ways the drought had serious results. There were numerous destructive forest fires in both the West and the East; the milk shortage in many regions was serious; and the water in the Mississippi river was so low that barges and towboats were stuck on sandbars and mud flats all along the river. At the same time the levels of Lakes Michigan, Superior and Huron were higher; which led commentators on the lake diversion controversy to think that the policy of the government has resulted in giving the citizens who use the Great Lakes more water than they need, at the same time depriving the manufacturers and farmers of the Mississippi valley of sufficient water to float their cargoes to the sea.

WHEAT prices and drought did not have much effect on the Republican primaries in Kansas as many persons had expected. Gov. Clyde M. Reed, who sought to champion the cause of the farmers and severely criticized the policies of the federal farm board, was defeated for re-nomination by Frank Hauck, farmer, World war veteran, and former state commander of the American Legion. Senator Henry J. Allen, who was appointed by Governor Reed and is a staunch supporter of the Hoover administration, was nominated for the senate term ending in 1933, and Senator Capper was unopposed for re-nomination for the long term.

On the Democratic ticket Harry H. Woodring will oppose Hauck for the governorship, and Jonathan M. Davis, former governor, will try to defeat Senator Capper.

SOUTHERNERS who voted for Hoover in 1928, through Horace Mann, formally announced their rebellion against the administration of southern federal patronage and political affairs generally by Postmaster Walter H. Brown. Mr. Mann's statement, which was issued on the eve of a meeting of the Republican national executive committee in Washington, outlined plans adopted by a group of prominent southern Hoovers to incorporate in "all-southern" Republican organization and throw off the yoke of northern "patronage carpet-baggers" as well as of "designating political hijackers."

The Republican executive committee accepted the resignation of Claudius M. Huston as national chairman and elected Senator Pess as his successor. Robert H. Lucas was made executive director, and he quits his post as internal revenue commissioner to give his full time to the work.

BEFORE a crowd of 5,000 persons, two negroes were lynched by a mob in Marion, Ind. They had been arrested for murdering a white man and attacking his girl companion, and were said to have confessed. The sheriff, police and fire department, tried in vain to scatter the lynchers with tear bombs and fire hose streams.

GRAT interest was felt in a conference which Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York held with John J. Raskob, former Gov. of Al Smith and other party leaders. It was understood that Mr. Roosevelt would seek re-election on a "drifting-net" platform and would make a leading issue of public electricity rates. The belief was that Mr. Smith would place

Mr. Roosevelt in nomination at the state convention.

PRESIDENT HOOVER announced the appointment of Maj. Gen. Douglas MacArthur to be chief of staff of the army to succeed Maj. Gen. C. P. Summerall when the latter retires in November. General MacArthur, who is head of the army department in the Philippines, is now on temporary duty in China. He is fifty years old, the youngest army officer of his rank in active service, and was advanced over the heads of several older officers, the President said, because he is the senior major general whose age would permit him to serve the full four-year term as chief of staff. He graduated from West Point in 1903 and his career, especially in the World war, was brilliant.

At the same time the President appointed Brig. Gen. Ben H. Fuller to be commandant of the marine corps to fill the vacancy left by the death of General Neville.

REAL foreign intervention in China may soon result from the bloody doings of the Chinese Communists in Hunan province. If it is not already in effect, the British are leading the way, sending a considerable number of soldiers up the Yangtze to Hankow, which was threatened by the Reds. The troops were to be placed on a cruiser ready to be landed if necessary to protect British property. The American gunboat Tutuila left for upriver to reinforce the Palos, and the flagship Pittsburgh of the Asiatic fleet, with a destroyer division, was on the way from Tsingtao to Shanghai. Japan also was in action, sending a number of destroyers with landing parties of marines to Hankow, Kiangling and other river ports threatened by Communist invasion.

The Nationalist government had admitted its inability to guarantee protection for foreign residents of Hankow, though it was sending additional troops to that region and had occupied Changsha. The Communists were still entrenched in the hills about the city and were continuing their sanguinary course, having already slain two thousand Chinese residents of the place and captured four thousand. Outrages against British Nationals included the sending of a severed finger of Miss Edith Nettleton, missionary, with a demand for $50,000 ransom for herself and Miss Edith Harrison, held captive a month, to the British legation.

JOHN HENRY MEARS and his pilot, H. J. Brown, who intended to make a record-breaking airplane flight around the world, have had to postpone it, for their plane was wrecked as it was leaving the runway at Harbor Grace, Newfoundland.

The German aviators, Hirth and Weller, who were on their way from Berlin to Chicago by way of Iceland and Greenland, reached Reykjavik, Iceland, safely, but abandoned their project for want of a suitable landing place in Greenland and because their supply of gas did not arrive.

Capt. Frank Hawks set a new record for flight from New York to Los Angeles, making the distance in a swift little monoplane in 14 hours, 50 minutes and 48 seconds, with five stops for refueling.

OFFICIAL but unverified census figures give the total population of continental United States as 122,729,472. The outlying possessions bring the grand total to 137,501,561, this including an estimate for the Philippine islands where an enumeration has not been made for several years. The proportions of population east and west of the Mississippi have shifted less than one-half of 1 per cent in ten years, being respectively 69.6 per cent and 30.4 per cent.

Scarcity of water in the two large reservoirs which furnish the city water supply has led the Athens city council to decree that no water may be used for sprinkling lawns and shrubs until the present crisis is past.

Natural gas customers of the Alabama Utilities Service company at Florence and Selma will save approximately $121,000 annually under a schedule of rates prescribed by the Alabama public service commission.

J. D. Parker, chief deputy of Etowah county and candidate for the office of sheriff, was at liberty under $5,000 bond on charges of conspiracy to violate the national prohibition act and soliciting and accepting a bribe.

Clyde Cox, 11, of near Bessemer, indicted by the federal grand jury several months ago on charges of selling liquor to federal agents, will face trial in district criminal court at Birmingham during the week of August 25.

The slaying of a Bullock County farmer 23 years ago has been brought to light for investigation with the arrest of a negro woman in Birmingham, who was being held in connection with a probe of the case.

Police said that three persons saw Vernie Mitchell, 19, pry open the lock of the main door of Gadsden city jail with a crowbar and lead Joe Dees and Jack Lawson and a man named Shaneyfelt to freedom.

More than 300 good roads advocates from all sections of the state were in Montgomery recently urging that state highway funds now available be used for the completion of at least one trunk line highway.

Sentence of 13 months in the federal penitentiary was imposed in United States district court at Gadsden on E. C. Weems, 36, of Attalla, Ala., on a charge of using the mails to defraud.

A merchant and the managers of two Baldwin County hotels were arrested on charges of violating the prohibition laws, following widespread raids by federal, state and county officers.

Will T. Rice, 55, farmer of Chalkville, was found dead in a cornfield in Grove land community, near Woodlawn.

Kurds, Good and Bad

A Kurd of the Turkey-Persia Border.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

THE Kurds, who have revolted along the Turkish-Persian border and against whom large Turkish forces have been operating near famous Mount Ararat, have been fighting periodically against the established states of Asia Minor for thousands of years. Always their favorite method of strife has been guerrilla warfare. They have been historic marauders, but perhaps they have every reason, so far as environment is concerned, to lead such lives. State after state has struck against them with forces more powerful than any they could raise.

When Xenophon retreated from Asia Minor in 401 B. C. the Kurds (then called the Carduchi) attacked his 10,000 Greeks, rolling great stones down on them from cliffs and mountains. They fought continually against the Bagdad caliphs. Since the Turks rose to power in Asia Minor the Kurds have fought them repeatedly; in fact, the Turks never established any considerable measure of control over these fierce, freedom-loving highlanders.

Since the World war the European territory of Turkey has been negligible. The country has consisted almost solely of the big, fat peninsula lying between the Black sea on the north and the eastern arm of the Mediterranean on the south, and an extension to the east about as broad as the Asia Minor peninsula, reaching roughly half way from the Black sea to the Caspian. The southern half of this eastern extension—the southeastern corner of postwar Turkey—is what is loosely called Kurdistan. The other half of the eastern extension, immediately north of Kurdistan, was once Turkish Armenia.

Kurdish Sphere Is Large.

Now that tens of thousands of the Armenian residents have been driven across the Russian border, while other tens of thousands have perished, the region hardly deserves the old name. The Kurdish population was always high in Turkish Armenia; now it is proportionately more; greater. The whole eastern end of present Turkey, constituting almost a third of the territory of the country, therefore, may roughly be considered the Kurdish sphere of influence. It is in the northeast corner of Turkey that the Kurds have recently been most active. Geographic and political and economic complications aplenty are found in this region. On the east Kurdistan touches Persia, and the people for a considerable distance into that country are Kurds, too. Indeed, Kurdish people inhabit the entire Zagros mountain range which extends from Turkey for 600 miles to the southeast, forming the boundary between Persia and Iraq.

The Kurds belong to the Iranian branch of the white race. Because of the open-air lives which they live, most of them have harsh features. The great majority are nominally Mohammedans.

The plateau region lying partly in old Armenia, partly in Kurdistan, where many of the most warlike Kurds live, presents a good example of the effects on man of a mixture of rugged uplands and fertile valleys. Limestone mountains and recently extinct volcanoes occupy the upper levels. Lower are magnificent canyons cut by the Tigris and Euphrates headstreams, and numerous broad, basin-shaped valleys whose floors are fertile plains. The ancestors of the Kurds were pushed from many of these desirable lowlands by the Armenian invasion and from others by the later arriving Turks.

Some Recent Revolts.

Even the fairly recent regime of Kemal Pasha has had several Kurdish revolts on its hands. There was a sporadic uprising in 1929; and in 1923 the tribesmen made an unsuccessful effort to set up their own government. The scrapping of the caliphate at Constantinople aroused them and nearly every change in old Moslem customs has irritated them. Revolt after revolt has been quelled but as soon as the Kurd replenishes his forces and supplies, he is ready to attack again.

The Kurd farmers of the Iraq plains are more prosperous than the tribesmen of the hill country. Travelers climb the trails of Kurdistan for miles without seeing a village. When one does appear, it is usually situated in a well protected spot. Houses are placed without regard to building line and a bird's-eye view of a village reveals a jumble of mud and stone structures.

The peasant's house is a one-room structure which might be mistaken for a stable. The tribesmen reserves one side of his abode for his animals while his family occupies the other side. Kurds sit on the floor when they rest or eat, therefore they do not need tables or chairs.

The tribal chief or headman fares better. He has a house for his family and a guest house where he lives and entertains guests.

They Buy Their Wives.

Under Moslem law, the Kurd may take four wives. Wives are bought, so the peasant usually has only one. The chiefs take the full quota. Wives are priced according to their rank. The tribesman can get a wife in exchange for a pony or goat, or one may cost the equivalent of $2,500. The wedding entails a season of merry-making in which the whole tribe joins, but it takes less than a minute to dissolve a union. The man simply says "I divorce you" three times and the parties are free.

To the foreigner, the Kurds seem to know little else than the "art" of highway robbery. Many of the mountain tribesmen are adept thieves, but in the hills as well as the plains, many Kurds earn honest livings by farming and cattle raising. Kurds are pastoral people, seldom moving from their villages except to migrate to higher altitudes during the summer for new pasturage.

In spite of exciting events in the fighting history of the Kurds, the tribesmen were almost unknown outside the Near East before the World war. When a delegation of Kurds appeared at the peace conferences in 1919 newspaper men did not know who the sunburnt tribesmen might be. When their identity was revealed the Kurds went on the front pages and frequently have been there since.

The presence of Kurds in the Mosul region of what is now northern Iraq was a hard diplomatic problem for the treaty drafters to solve after the World war. Excent in Mosul City, the population of this region is almost solidly Kurdish. It is the odor and power of petroleum that in some ways dominate all else in this region. What promises to become one of the major oil fields of the world centers about Mosul.

Leaf Worms Found On Alabama Cotton

Auburn, Ala., Aug. 14.—Danger is foreseen by Prof. J. M. Robinson and W. A. Ruffin, entomologists of the College of Agriculture at Auburn, in the appearance of the cottonleaf worm in at least nine counties in Alabama. Marshall and Perry were the first to report an outbreak of this well known cotton enemy. Other counties reporting are Colbert, Madison, Morgan, Monroe, Talladega, Fayette and Pickens. They may be found in most counties of the State before the end of August.

Several weeks ago a warning was issued by Auburn that these insects were en route to Alabama because outbreaks were reported in Texas. Knowing their habits and their rate of travel, Prof. Robinson and Mr. Ruffin made this prediction.

Where these worms appear in large numbers they defoliate cotton. They are gourmands. It is not unusual for them to consume the foliage within two or three days.

"Fortunately," said Prof. Robinson and Mr. Ruffin, "control measures are effective and inexpensive. Where dust guns are used calcium arsenate should be applied at the rate of 8 to 10 pounds per acre. If the 'pole and bag' method is used one pound of calcium arsenate should be mixed with four parts of hydrated lime and the mixture applied at the rate of 1 to 14 pounds per acre. If the first application does not stop them a second should be made. Ordinarily one good application is sufficient."

It is suggested that farmers keep in touch with their county agents who will advise them concerning control measures.

Because he failed to show up for their scheduled wedding, Miss Annie Lorben of Dresden shot and wounded Friedrich Moeller.

Andre Patienne of Marseilles died at the age of 92 and was buried in a coffin in which he had slept every night for three years.

Henry Sunshine and Violet Storm were charged with intoxication before a Chicago court on the same day.

Charles Rosner of Brooklyn found $75 in a shoe he was repairing and returned the money to his customer who had used the shoe as a savings bank.

Brief News Notes

The Census Bureau at Washington reports that the population of Alaska is now approximately 59,000 as against 55,036 ten years ago.

By a recent ruling of the Alabama Public Service Commission rural rates on hydro-electricity were lowered in Alabama. An official estimate is that it will save rural customers $27,000 annually.

Cotton leaf worms have appeared in at least nine counties of Alabama, and county agents are advising with farmers as to control measures. Entomologists at Auburn say that a big outbreak would result in serious damage to cotton.

Farmers in the Ohio and Mississippi Valleys are suffering heavy losses due to the severe drouth which has prevailed several weeks. Corn and wheat prices have advanced recently as a result of this drouth.

Press reports from Washington say that there will be a shift of 26 congressmen as a result of the 1930 census as based upon a law passed recently by congress. Alabama will lose one, while California will gain eight and Michigan four or five. States in every section of the country will be affected by the shift.

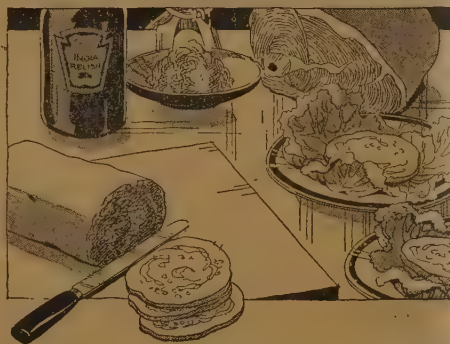

During the last year the Alabama Farm Bureau Federation and its subsidiary organizations did a cooperative business of buying and selling totaling $16,000,000, according to a report presented by President Edward A. O'Neal at the annual convention in Auburn. During the first nine years of its existence this organization did a cooperative business of $100,000,000.

Crisp Salads to Serve When Days Grow Warm

By JOSEPHINE B. GIBSON
Director, Home Economics Dept.,
H. J. Heinz Company.

A CRISP vegetable salad or a dainty concoction of fruit will make even the simplest meal attractive. And on these glorious spring days, when we wish to get away entirely from thought of winter—even in the foods we serve—salads are more than ever welcome.

Wise housewives take full advantage of the numerous fresh vegetables available during the spring and summer months. Instead of continually serving hot dishes for dinner, they frequently substitute a thoroughly chilled vegetable salad, prepared with a zesty, well-seasoned French Dressing, or with Mayonnaise. Many a woman, too, finds that a dainty fruit salad often will take the place of a dessert, and thus save her long hours in a hot kitchen making puddings, pies or cakes.

Following are recipes for a number of vegetable salads which are suitable for serving either as the main dish for luncheon or supper, or in place of cooked vegetables for dinner:

Jellied Vegetable Salad:—1½ tablespoons gelatin, ¼ cup cold water, 1/3 cup boiling water, 3 tablespoons vinegar, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, 1/3 cup sugar, 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ cup diced celery, 1 cup shredded cabbage, 1 cup cooked peas, and a few drops of onion juice. Soak gelatin in the cold water five minutes and dissolve in the boiling water. Add vinegar, lemon juice, sugar, salt, onion juice and vegetables and mix thoroughly. Turn into a ring mold which has been dipped in cold water, and chill. Remove from mold to salad plate. Fill center with crisp lettuce, and serve with Mayonnaise Salad Dressing.

Lettuce Roll Salad:—Dash a package of soft cream cheese. Add ¼ cup cold cooked ham, 2½ cups ground, and 2 tablespoons India Relish. Spread a thin layer of this mixture on crisp lettuce leaves. Roll as you do jelly roll and put in a cool place to chill. Cut into ½ inch slices and place several slices on a crisp lettuce leaf. Serve with French Dressing, or with Mayonnaise Salad Dressing.

Tomato Sandwich Salad:—Dice small red tomatoes into scalping water for a moment so the skin will come off easily—then chill and cut in half crosswise through the center. On one half place a generous layer of Sandwich Relish or Cream Cheese mixed with Stuffed Spanish Olives. Cover with the other half of the tomato. In the top of the tomato make a little incision with a sharp knife and insert a sprig of crisp parsley.

Chicken and Vegetable Salad:—2 cups cold diced chicken, ¼ cup cooked carrots, ¼ cup cooked peas, ¼ cup cooked string beans, cut in pieces, ½ cup cooked beets, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon paprika, 1 tablespoon chopped parsley. Mix the chicken and vegetables and add salt, paprika and parsley. Mix well with French Dressing and let stand in ice box until thoroughly chilled. Arrange in nests of lettuce leaves and top with Mayonnaise Salad Dressing. Garnish with beets cut in fancy shapes and asparagus tips.

Macedoine Salad:—1 small cooked cauliflower, 1 cup cooked peas, 1 cup cooked carrots, cut in cubes, 1 chopped green pepper. Separate cauliflower in small pieces. Marinate each vegetable separately in French Dressing and let stand in ice box until thoroughly chilled. Arrange vegetables on crisp lettuce leaves in separate nests, and sprinkle with chopped green pepper. Serve with French Dressing.

One reason for the President's decision not to make any speeches on his Western trip, according to the New York World, is based in part on the fact that Republican Senators from that region have refrained pointedly from asking him to make political speeches.

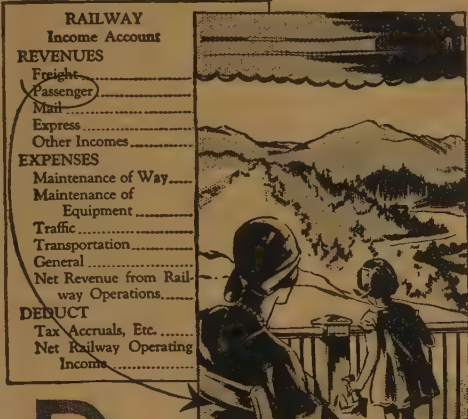

The special and regular session of the 71st Congress, which has just adjourned, enacted 927 laws, and Senator Fess is preparing to claim every single one of them as an outstanding achievement and national triumph for the Hoover administration.

When the Farm Board was organized, it was widely heralded as the Hoover Farm Board to carry out Mr. Hoover's idea of farm relief, but now that the Farm Board is "down to its last chip," even the White House, according to J. Fred Essary's dispatch in the Baltimore Sun, regards the Farm Board as merely "the agent of Congress," and Congress has adjourned and can not "pass the buck" back.

Here is Senator Capper asking Chairman Legge to buy 100,000,000 bushels of wheat and Chairman Legge already has wheat to burn.

AN ILLUSTRATED INCOME ACCOUNT

Passengers

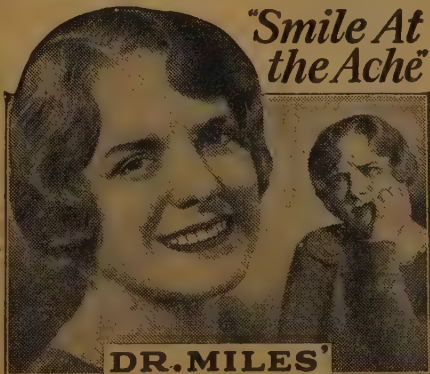

Here's what real passenger service means: A father placed his wife and child on "The Pan-American" of the Louisville & Nashville R.R. They were going to New Orleans to visit the wife's mother. The father had a comfortable feeling regarding their safety. Not a single passenger's life has been lost in twelve years in a train accident on the Louisville & Nashville Railroad. He knew that his wife and daughter would be well cared for. There was a ladies' lounge room, an observation car, a radio. The mother and child went comfortably about the train as if they were at home. Attendants were courteous and solicitous of their welfare. During the trip, the mother had her hair dressed by the maid on the train. Both the mother and child had their accustomed shower in the morning. They left the train rested, refreshed.

On the income account of the railroad, this event was recorded by a small figure under Passenger Revenues. But how much more it meant to the railroad than this is indicated by the elaborate preparations made for the event; by the millions spent for cars, locomotives, proper maintenance, wages, safety, and comfort.

To provide safety and comfort, to pay employees, to contribute to prosperity, railroads must receive their share of revenues and must not be over-burdened with taxes.

YOU'LL GET RELIEF OR YOUR MONEY BACK

Excerpts From L & N Employees Magazine

Henry Clay and Edward VII of England when he was Prince of Wales, were among the guests said to have stopped at the famous inn that once flourished adjacent to the L & N Railroad tracks at Glasgow Junction, Ky. Now there stand massive stone ruins that have caused much finger-pointing on the part of travelers, tourists and strangers generally. According to an article in the L & N Employees Magazine they represent all that is left of one of America's most widely-known inns—Bell's Tavern.

Bell's Tavern, founded in 1820 by William Bell, was world-famous for its cuisine and all visitors to Mammoth Cave made it a point to stop there. The present stone walls which extend along the Dixie Highway for about 105 feet were to have been part of a bigger and better inn but construction was stopped because of the Civil War and was never resumed, chiefly because the advent of the railroad had sounded the death knell for the stage coaches which had made use of the Tavern as a relay station and which were a vital factor in the inn's prosperity.

Three veteran employees of the L & N Railroad Company were presented with 50-year diamond service buttons recently, according to the L & N Employees Magazine. One of the recipients was General Baggage Agent W. P. Hines, Louisville, Ky., who has the distinction of being one of the youngest 50-year men in the service. He is only 65 years old. Another was C. A. Baker of the Auditor Passenger Accounts' Office at Louisville. The third was H. M. "Bud" Holderman, warehouseman at Stanford, Ky. W. R. Cole, president of the road, made the presentation to Messrs. Baker and Hines while Superintendent Sheridan of the Louisville Division tendered Mr. Holderman his.

One of the recent contributions to the Museum of Science and Industry was an old time telegraph register from the L & N Railroad Company. This register was of the tape sort, that is, the message coming in over it was received via the eye from the tape and not via the ear by listening to the sounder as is now the case. A great many years ago these were the only kind of registers used, but the sounder type, now in use, being more rapid, displaced them, at first partially and then entirely.

Construction on the Left Fork Extension of Straight Creek Branch on the Cumberland Valley Division of the L & N was just recently completed and placed in operation on July 10. This Left Fork Extension, near Pineville, Ky., is 7.67 miles in length and was constructed to facilitate development of the vast timber and coal resources in its vicinity, according to the August L & N Employees Magazine.

8,500 miles! It sounds like a "far piece" but to Frank Byrne, an employee of the New Zealand Government Railways at Wellington, N. Z., and Mac Murray of the Car Accountant's Office of the L & N Railroad at Louisville, Ky., it offered no more of a conversational barrier than a backyard fence. Mr. Byrne, a young New Zealander of Irish descent, noticed and was attracted by a picture of Miss Murray in the L & N Employee's Magazine, and having long wished to correspond with some sympathetic person in America with whom he could exchange information about their respective countries, wrote her a letter. Miss Murray answered, and other letters followed and today this long distance friendship and correspondence still continues. Strangely enough Miss Murray was born in Ireland and has been in this country only about three years.

A dog and a cat, pets of the railroad men in the L & N's North Yard at Birmingham, Ala., are fast friends and live together in perfect peace and harmony in a shack in the Yard, according to the Employees Magazine of that road. The names of the actors in this "Damon-Pythias" partnership are Carlo, the dog, and Wampus, the cat. Both, needless to say, are great favorites with the men.

A dog belonging to little Jackie Mason of Albany saved the boy from drowning by holding to his clothing until help came.

Dr. J. B. Williams

NEWS FROM THE NATIONAL DEMOCRATIC COMMITTEE

White House Appropriations, Federal Employees Increasing Under Hoover

Washington, August 14.—President Hoover has repeated his plea to government departments, bureaus, independent agencies, etc., for a reduction of expenses to avoid a deficit at the end of the fiscal year because reports on possible reduction requested from them on July 18 have not been coming in as rapidly as expected.

In this connection, Joseph W. Byrns, (Dem. Tenn.), ranking minority member of the House Appropriations Committee who pointed out that the appropriations of the special and the first regular session of the 71st Congress were in excess of $5,000,000,000, which was $23,785,185.61 less than asked Congress to appropriate, said in his review of these appropriations:

"As evidence of the disregard of his (the President's) own warning he has three secretaries at a salary of $10,000 per annum each, whereas his predecessors considered that one was entirely sufficient. The White House appropriations under Mr. Hoover were $529,020 as compared with $437,180 the last made under President Coolidge. This was an increase in the first year of President Hoover of $91,840 exclusive of reconstruction due to fire loss."

As an illustration of how White House appropriations, which are under the absolute control of the President, have increased since the last Democratic administration, the following appropriation figures for the Wilson and Harding administrations are taken from prior reports of Mr. Byrns:

"Last year of Wilson, $197,341.
"Last year of Harding, $349,380.
Last year of Coolidge, $437,180.
First year of Hoover, $529,020."

Representative Byrns also calls attention to the enormous increase in the number of Federal employees, citing 587,665 employees under Civil Service as of June 30, 1929, an increase of 18,950 over June 30, 1928, and only 330,095 fewer than employed on November 11, 1918 when the Armistice halted war-time expense. Since these figures were given, the number of employees on December 31, 1929, according to the Civil Service Commission was 589,145, a further increase of 1,840 in the last six months of 1929, and 20,430 over June 30, 1928.

"Many governmental positions are not under Civil Service," Mr. Byrns adds.

The Louisville Courier-Journal refuses to become impatient over President Hoover's delay in naming the Tariff Commission, it says:

"Mr. Hoover has had six weeks since he signed the Grundy-Hoover tariff act in which to appoint a tariff commission which he promised was to right the wrongs inflicted upon American consumers by the new schedules. The President has acted as tardily in this matter as Tariff Commissions always have acted in their work. But very little disappointment will be felt because of the President's failure to name his commission, as there is no general expectation of good to come of it when named."

Hoover's Naming of Unemployment Commission Called "Belated Action"

Washington, August 14.—President Hoover's latest commission is one on unemployment, presumably to devise means to carry out the one Wagner bill passed at the last session of Congress providing for adequate employment statistics. Referring to what it calls the President's "belated action," the New York World editorially says: "Hoover has long been in close contact with the employment problem. In 1921 he served as Chairman of President Harding's commission on unemployment. It was no surprise to him, therefore, when the industrial depression of last winter revealed the inadequacy of the employment statistics compiled by the Department of Labor. Yet he did not lift a finger to correct this situation. Instead, he joined with Secretaries Davis and Lamont last February and March in belittling the unemployment problem and in trying to restore prosperity by proclamation. "In the meantime there were measures before Congress—the Wagner bills—which provided for the compilation of more accurate information regarding employment, the long-range planning of public works and a nationwide system of employment offices. In none of these measures did the administration show the slightest interest. Only one of them was enacted (the first named). The President has now named a committee to advise with the government as to the best methods to be employed for obtaining this additional information. Less than that he could hardly do. More than that the country has had a right to expect."

President Hoover has one way left to solve the unemployment problem by appointing all of the unemployed on some of his Commissions.

Knitted Cotton for Children

By JULIA BOTTOMLEY

that they do. It is a knitted dress not of wool, for children draw the line at wearing wool, not of silk for silk is far too dressy for ordinary wear, but guess what. Give up? Well, the answer is beautiful sturdy and at the same time soft-to-the-touch cotton, durable cotton. If you please. Durable cotton is really mercerized cotton, the fiber being treated in a way to bring out a subtle luster, and best of all to withstand intensive wear and endless laundering.

These practical fashions of knitted cotton which children's specialty shops and departments are displaying with such pride are not beset with frills and furbelows (another point in their favor), but they are charmingly colorful, coming in a range of beguiling pastel shades. The little two-piece school frock illustrated is in an adorable shade of blue.

Youngsters with a desire for gay color can have many kinds of both underwear and outerwear in this sturdy knitted pastel cotton such as fine-mesh durable shirts, panties, union suits, sun suits and cunning costumes with smartly styled skirts and clever cardigans and sleeveless sweaters.

The typical undergarment for infants has been serviceable and unimaginative for years. It is only just recently that stylists have interested themselves in fashion appeal as well as that of service, and so it is that emphasis is now being placed on pastel colors for "young" underwear as well as upon outer apparel.

(© 1930, Western Newspaper Union.)

Oh! If some genius would only invent durable, comfortable, practical, attractive frocks for little girls, outfits for little boys, and sunsuits for both that will not continuously rip, tear and wrinkle during the siege of hours of play and hours of school—garments that do not demand a repeat-and-repeat performance of starching, of ironing and that come from their tubbing almost if not quite as prettily colorful as new. Mothers do indulge in dreams just like that. Sometimes dreams come true. We are inclined to think that the little dress pictured is pretty good evidence

How to Cope With the Ant Nuisance

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

There are a number of common species of ants which get into houses from time to time and cause annoyance by appearing on foods, especially sugar, cakes, candies and other sweets, and cooked foods of animal origin. An ant having once gained access to foods of these sorts, reports the discovery to the colony, and in an incredibly short time the premises may be swarming with these unwelcome visitors.

According to the bureau of entomology of the United States Department of Agriculture, both house and garden ants at times become a pest in the pantry and kitchen. The species that live entirely within doors nest in woodwork, masonry or articles of furniture. They are often very difficult to eradicate because of their inaccessibility. If the nest can be located by following the trail of the workers back to the point of their disappearance, the inmates of the nest may sometimes be reached and destroyed by injecting a little carbon disulphide, kerosene or gasoline into the opening, by means of an oil can or small syringe. In the use of these substances, precautions should be taken to see that no fire is present, as they are all inflammable.

The removal of attracting substances from their reach should be the first step. Keep food supplies which are likely to attract ants in tight containers or in the refrigerator, and sweep up promptly any crumbs of cake or bread scattered by children. Find and destroy the nest as soon as possible. It ought not to be necessary to take up the flooring to get at it, for poison baits can be used to kill the queens and the brood. Almost any of the common garden or lawn ants which build their little crater nests in the soil about houses may become temporarily house pests in their search for food substances. When ants are found swarming up kept on hand. Bait of this kind is put into a paraffined paper bag with one side folded down to admit the ants. It is nailed on the tree as shown, out of reach of little children. Small lawns may be sprayed with kerosene emulsion, or a very strong soap solution, to destroy ants. Dissolve half a pound of any common laundry soap in one gallon of water for use in this way.

Food for the Family Table

By NELLIE MAXWELL

The foundation of education consists of training a child to work, to love work, to put the energy of his entire being into work; to do that work which develops his body, mind and soul; to do that work most needed for the elevation of mankind.—Parker.

A simple dessert well made and daintily served gives just the finishing touch to a plain dinner. Here are a few desserts that may be helpful in planning a luncheon and the dinner menus:

On baking day when the oven is not too well occupied, prepare and bake a pastry shell or two, or bake the shells on paty tins for individual pies. These will keep well for a few days and it will be found most helpful to put in a filling of lemon, cover with a meringue and have a dessert in a very few minutes. These shells may be filled with crushed fruit, topped with whipped cream, or they may be filled with a butterscotch filling or chocolate, thus having any kind that seems desirable or is well liked.

The following will be another filling that takes but a few moments to prepare:

Marshmallow and Fruit Pudding.—Soak one-fourth of a cupful of candied cherries and pineapple cut into pieces either in the pineapple juice or any fruit juice either canned or fresh, for an hour or more. Use marshmallow cherries and their own syrup if preferred. Cut one-half pound of marshmallows into six pieces each. Beat one cupful of whipping cream until stiff, add three tablespoons of confectioner's sugar gradually, then a half teaspoonful of almond with a few drops of vanilla. Mix the marshmallows with one-half cupful of pecan meats broken into pieces and fold all together. Chill and serve in the pastry cups.

A Dainty Luncheon Dessert.—Spread the round butter crackers with marshmallow cream and in the center of each place a teaspoonful of pineapple or orange marmalade. Beat the whites of two eggs until stiff and dry, add one-fourth cupful of powdered sugar and with a pastry tube pipe this meringue around the edge of the cracker, then set a rose of meringue in the center. Sprinkle with granulated sugar and brown lightly in oven.

Spice Cake.—Sift two and one-half cupfuls of pastry flour with one-half teaspoonful of soda, one teaspoonful of baking powder, one-fourth teaspoonful each of allspice, nutmeg, mace and one-half teaspoonful of cinnamon. Sift three times. Cream one-half cupful of butter, add two cupfuls of sifted brown sugar and cream together until light and fluffy. Add four eggs well beaten and the flour mixture alternately with the cupful of sour milk. Beat well after each addition and bake in a greased tin eight by eight inches. Bake fifty minutes.

Cooked minced carrot may be sliced in the same way. Beans, peas, onion or cabbage used in the same proportion will give variety.

Home-Grown Products Are Valuable

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

In counting up the advantages of living on a farm the things supplied to the family table from the kitchen garden, the orchard, poultry and other live stock are an important consideration. Again, most farms furnish firewood and often ice.

The farm homemaker's budget and household accounts do not give a true picture of the economic status of the family unless these home-grown products are recorded and evaluated. Most farm women also can store a good part of their garden surplus, put up jams, jellies, and pickles, and "put down" eggs. When they take these preserved foods from the shelf and put them on the table they do not always stop to think that if they lived in the city each glass of jam or can of string beans would have to be paid for in cash. They are sometimes richer than they had thought they were. Some of the farm woman's products are sold—butter and eggs, young broilers, beans that have outlived their usefulness, vegetables, both fresh and canned, and various other things. Whether the income from such sales is looked on as belonging personally to the homemaker or is pooled with the family cash, one certainly should know what it amounts to, in order to judge which activities pay and which do not.

"But," complains the average farm homemaker, "it's too complicated to keep track of every basket of vegetables I bring in the house, or every jar of pickles I put away. I never had a head for figures, anyway."

The bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture had this objection in mind when Farmers' Bulletin 1533-F, "Planning and Recording Family Expenditures" was written, and in devising a practical loose-leaf household account book. The first suggestion made is that a pad or large card be kept hanging in the kitchen. Whenever anything is brought in for household use the kind and quantity can be entered at once. Materials for home canning can be written down when they are gathered, and then they will not need to be recorded at the time of use. With a little care the person who does the recording—and it is best for one person, usually the homemaker, to attend to this entirely—can avoid the mistake of entering materials more than once.

At the end of a week or a month, the entries on the pad or card can be transferred to a special page in the account book headed "Products furnished by the farm for family use."

Food That Are Needed for Good Teeth

A large amount of sugar and certain bacteria cause an acid condition which dissolves the enamel of the teeth. Calcium, phosphorus and vitamin D are essential for good teeth. The health of the teeth is quite dependent upon vitamin C found in tomatoes, oranges, grapefruit and raw vegetables. The two former are found in milk, the latter in cod liver oil, liver, egg yolks and chicken fat. Contrary to popular opinion, there is a great amount of circulation in a tooth.

Evening Story for the Children

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

"It Did in a Way."

Mrs. Pelican, "their wings will be strong."

"Every one knows how the pelicans can fly."

While Mrs. White Duck and Mrs. Tan-and-White Duck are listening, they were feeling unhappy.

They could not fly nearly so well as the pelicans could, and their feet were just as bad.

The pelicans noticed that they had made the ducks very quiet, and at once they knew that what they had said about feet was what made the ducks feel unhappy.

"We are having a fish dinner," said Mrs. Pelican, in a society voice which she thought was very superior and smart, "and we would be honored if you would join us."

"It is to be given on the bank by the pond and we'd enjoy having fine guests like the ducks."

That made the ducks feel quite happy again and they quacked delightedly. "I would like to bring some delicious insects along with me," said Mrs. Duck.

"I have some wonderful bugs—fresh today," said Mrs. Tan-and-White Duck. "Can't we join our dinners together and all have a party?"

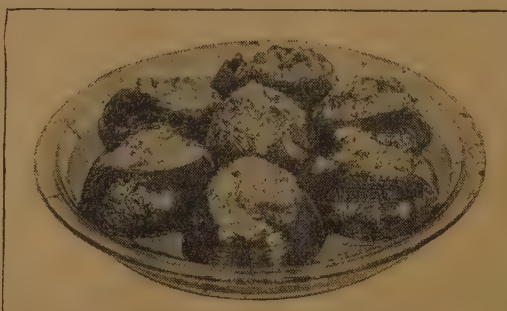

"It will be every one's party. Every one will be able to enjoy it."

"Fine scheme," said Mrs. Pelican. "I approve of it," said Mr. Pelican, "as I do a great deal of the marketing, and I like to see folks and creatures share things and be friendly."

So they all had a fine party and such a quack-quacking as was heard!

Serve Foods in the Baking Dishes

Stuffed Tomatoes Served in a Pie Plate.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

When foods can be served in the same dishes in which they were cooked, there is considerable saving in time and trouble for the homemaker. Glass and earthenware casseroles, pie plates, and dishes of other shapes are all attractive enough to be put on the table, and as foods baked in them almost always have a pleasing color of browned crumbs or a pastry top, they appeal immediately to the eye as well as to the palate.

Stuffed tomatoes, served in a shallow baking dish or pie plate are a good example of colorful, flavorful food prepared with a minimum of effort. There is either no cooking pad, or no serving dish—whichever way you look at it—to be washed. One utensil at least eliminated. The bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture gives these directions for stuffing tomatoes:

6 large firm tomatoes
1 1/2 cups celery
1/2 cup onion
1/2 cup salt
1/2 cup pepper
1/2 cup butter
1 cup dry bread

Wash the tomatoes, remove a thin slice from the stem end, and carefully scoop out the pulp so that the tomato shells will not be broken. Fry the bacon until crisp, remove from the pan, and break the bacon into small pieces. Add the parsley and onion to the fat, cook for a few minutes, add the cup of dry bread crumbs, celery seed, salt, pepper, crisped bacon and tomato pulp. Stir until well mixed and add more salt if necessary. Fill the tomato cups with this mixture, cover the top with the buttered crumbs, place in a shallow baking dish, and bake in a moderate oven for 45 to 60 minutes, or until the tomatoes are tender and the crumbs are brown. Serve from the baking dish.

SOME HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Overcrowding the refrigerator prevents circulation of cool air and cuts down its efficiency.

Milk and fruit drinks in hot weather are not only refreshing but contain valuable food materials.

A tempting appearance adds to the success of a vegetable dinner. Color, attractive arrangement of food on the plate and daintiness all count.

Careful mothers remember that picnic meals for the children should be as well balanced and as thoroughly supervised as regular meals at home.

Lesson for August 17

SAUL, A MAN OF GREAT POSSIBILITIES WHO FAILED

LESSON TEXT—1 Samuel 9:15-17, 28: 27; 10:1; 19:9-11; 31:1-4.

GOLDEN TEXT—Wherefore let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall.

PRIMARY TOPIC—A King That Disobeyed.

JUNIOR TOPIC—A King Who Failed, INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How to Avoid Failure.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—How to Profit from Failure.

The sad failure of Saul should be a warning to every young man. Few men in history had greater advantages.

1. Saul's Advantages.

His father was "a mighty man of power." One's inheritance is a strong factor in determining his success or failure in life.

2. His natural gifts (9:2).

He was a "choice young man."

(1) He was humble (10:22).

When facing the responsibility of national leadership, he hid himself.

(2) He was considerate of his father (9:3).

Not being successful in the mission committed unto him by his father and thinking that his father would be concerned about him, he proposed to go back.

(3) The grace of God was upon him (10:5-7).

"God visited him with his grace to enable him to see the divine choice."

(4) The Holy Spirit came upon him (10:10).

Acceptable service can be rendered only in the energy of the Holy Spirit.

(5) He was zealous for God (11:4-15).

As the leader of his people, he performed service because of his zeal for God.

3. The friendship of Samuel (15:35).

So strong was Samuel's attachment for Saul—that he greatly mourned his death.

1. Saul Made King (1 Sam. 8:10).

1. The demand of the people (8:1-22).

The reason for this demand was threefold:

(1) Samuel was incapacitated by old age (v. 5).

(2) His sons were unfaithful (v. 5).

Samuel, though a good man, greatly blundered in the appointment of his sons as judges of Israel.

(3) Desire to be like other nations (v. 5).

The surrounding nations had strong leaders as rulers. Therefore, it was but natural that the Israelites should desire such leadership. Samuel protested against their action and took the matter to the Lord in prayer.

The Lord directed him to point out to the people the meaning of their action.

2. Saul chosen to be king (9:1-11).

While Saul was on an errand for his father Samuel found him and anointed him. (1 Sam. 10:1-16). In due time the divine choice was confirmed by the people at Mizpeh.

3. Saul displays leadership (1 Sam. 11).

He displayed his military genius in effecting a great victory at Jabes over the Ammonites.

III. Saul's Failure (ch. 15).

1. The command to Saul (vv. 1-3).

He was commanded utterly to destroy the Amalekites. The reason assigned was their evil treatment of Israel after they came out of Egypt. (Ex. 17:8; Deut. 25:17-19).

2. Saul's disobedience (vv. 4-9).

The command was only partially carried out. Azael, the king, was spared and the best of the goods appropriated.

3. Saul rejected by God (vv. 10-25).

(1) Samuel cried to God (v. 11).

The news of this disgraceful affair greatly distressed Samuel, moving him to pray in God day and night.

(2) Saul's hypocritical pretense (vv. 15, 16).

This pretense carried a lie upon its face.

(3) Samuel rehearses before Saul God's dealing with him (vv. 17-23).

God is more concerned with having his commands obeyed than he is to have sacrifices offered unto him.

IV. The Divine Judgment Falls (15:26-35).

1. The loss of his kingdom.

For the presumptuous offering of sacrifice the dynasty passed from Saul's house.

2. Under control of the evil spirit (15:19-11).

When allegiance to God is refused Satan takes control.

3. His shameful death (31:1-4).

Samuel forsook him, leaving him alone to suffer in disgrace.

"Worm" Pullet in Fall

It is well to "worm" pullets before putting them into their laying quarters in the fall by giving tobacco. In their food for several weeks. It should have a guaranteed nicotine content exceeding 1 per cent, as it is the nicotine that does the work and tobacco with a low nicotine content is worthless. This is administered by mixing one pound of the dust with fifty pounds of the mash fed, or giving the regular mash a 2 per cent tobacco dust content for three of four weeks at a time.

Justices' Franking Privileges

The justices of the United States Supreme court enjoy the franking privilege when writing on official business. The clerk of the court handles most of the correspondence, and his office is supported by fees paid by litigants, and most of his correspondence is to litigants about their cases. The fees of the clerk are paid by litigants, and if the government were to grant the franking privileges on such matters it would amount to paying postage on private cases.—Washington Star.

Power Company Takes Capacity Of Wilson Dam

But Must Operate Steam Plants Unless Rains Fall by August 15

Birmingham, Ala., Aug. 6.—Though it has taken over 99 per cent of the available power of Wilson Dam at Muscle Shoals in July and expects to continue takings, Alabama Power Company must start up its Gorgas Steam Plant in the Warrior coal fields by August 15th unless rains fall in the watersheds of the Coosa and Tallapoosa in the meantime, officials stated here today.

Beginning with June 13th, the Power Company used 81 per cent of the available flow of the Tennessee at Wilson Dam for the balance of that month, and over 99 per cent in July. In addition, it operated its run of river plants to full capacity and drew heavily on Martin Dam's stored waters.

But with the drawing down of the Martin Dam reservoir and the normal dry season still ahead, preparations have been ordered for heavy generation at Gorgas Steam Plant about August 15th unless rains occur before that time.

The turning over of the big 80,000 horsepower unit of the Gorgas No. 2 plant, the testing out of boilers, and inspection of auxiliaries is going forward, and everything will be in readiness by the middle of August for full load generation, should it be necessary. The three other units at Gorgas in Plant No. 1, which total 100,000 horsepower, are also being gotten in readiness, and should the drought which has gripped the Southeast since early summer continue unabated, the operation of other steam units of the Power Company may be necessary.

Nearly 150,000 tons of coal is in storage on the yards adjacent to the Gorgas plants. This is sufficient, Power officials state, for 166 days' operation of Plant No. 2 at 900 tons per day, for 100 days' operation of Plant No. 1 at 1,500 tons per day, and 62 days' operation of both plants at 2,400 tons per

FARMERS WANT MORE BOOKS, SAY THE COUNTY AGENTS

Mr. M. T. Gowder, Farm Agent, Jackson County, and Mr. J. W. Pate, Farm Agent from DeKalb, were among the many who examined the county library exhibit in front of Langdon Hall, at Auburn, during the State Farmers meeting July 28th-August 2.

"I've always noticed that the progressive farmer is the one who reads, and I suppose that's because farming is about the most far-reaching and interesting business on earth. Our interests don't stop with crops, stock, poultry, soil; they go on even past co-operative marketing to export and foreign trade conditions. These aren't things we ought to know about, they're things we've got to know about. The farmer who keeps his eye only on the weather is being left behind. No wonder his children's chief ambition is to leave the farm," was said.

When Mr. J. E. Bonner, of Sumter county, and Mrs. Annette S. Brendon, Demonstration Agent of Dallas county, asked what the county library means to the farmer, they were shown in the exhibit how the county library belongs to the age of R. F. D. service, of telephones, and radio stations and automobiles. I reaches out to the most isolated farm. It makes books as convenient and universal as the farm journal or the daily paper. It drops them into the farmer's mail box or delivers them at his door.

Mr. R. O. Shaver discussed with the librarian how his small county of Lamar might be easily covered by a book truck. Mr. H. B. Helms and Mr. B. F. Williams, of Geneva, told of the new library just built in their town and of the need of books for the country people.

Through these books the library day.

Nearly four times as much power has been purchased from the Government at Muscle Shoals this year as in 1929, Power officials said, takings to August 1st coming to 159,979,000 kilowatt hours against 40,657,000 the previous year.

BUILDING MUST GO ON

Eleven million homes in America, occupied today, were built twenty years ago. A large percentage of these homes are suffering from obsolescence and must be replaced. When the work of replacement begins, as it must very soon, a wave of residential building will move across the country.

This conclusion of leading experts is confirmed by a recent statement by the heating research bureau of the C. A. Dunham Company in Chicago, which also declares that like residences, thousands of other buildings—business blocks, hotels, apartments, theatres and banks—are seriously impaired through obsolescence.

In many of these remodeling and modernizing is proceeding now, with the probability that the next few weeks will see substantial totals for this type of work. The statement further says:

"Reports to the bureau from branch offices in seventy cities show that many heating engineers are carrying on vigorous campaigns of modernization. Large operating economies are being effected by building owners thru banishment of obsolete plants, with substitution of scientific differential systems. Such changes are paid for within a comparatively short time by the savings in fuel which range from 25 to 40 per cent."

Reports further indicate that funds to meet demands for conservative building projects are becoming available in most sections of the country, so that on the whole the prospects for a substantial building revival seem better than at any time during the past year.

helps the progressive farmer build a concrete silo, or repair a tractor—problems his father never met. It gives new light on the old matters of fertilizers and drainage. To the farmer's wife it offers new canning methods, or suggestions for a club entertainment. To the forward-looking, it gives ideas in cooperative marketing.

"The county librarian works with the County Agent and the Farm Bureau in choosing the books that fit that particular county and in spreading the news of them. The service is an economy rather than an additional expense. The average man cannot afford to spend four dollars on the new edition of Henry's "Feeds and Feeding." But a County Library copy is a good public investment for it is read over and over again," explained Mr. Charles W. Edwards, Registrar of Auburn to Mr. Martin of Coffee. Mr. Martin thinks that Coffee county needs books.

To the "tired farmer" as to the "tired business man" the county library offers wholesome recreation in the form of good stories, and for the man of broad interests, it has, for example, the beautifully illustrated, readable "Outline of Science," and books that tell of other lands or discuss the national and international problems that have followed the World War.

ODORS TO ORDER

One of the most interesting of recent developments in chemistry is the synthetic production of perfumes or scents in almost endless variety, and the many practical uses to which they are being put. Dr. Donald A. Laird of Colgate University described some of these developments in a recent article.

These artificial scents are used for their pleasing odor alone, as ordinary perfumes are used, or to overcome unpleasant odors, such as those from certain foods while being cooked. They are also used to neutralize the smell of shoe polish, rubber, moth balls and the like. Dr. Laird also tells of some new fads in scented clothing.

"Last spring gowns were created with a heliotrope shade carrying a fragrance of that aroma in the very fibers of the cloth itself. Lilac hues were impregnated with lasting lilac scents, and sports ensembles were given an aroma of pines and outdoor scents. A yarn manufacturer is using synthetic perfumes which will always have a distinctive and good smell, and other textiles will carry pleasing odors to enhance their charm."

It may be that soon the housewife can sprinkle a few drops of synthetic perfume about the house and banish the pungency of father's ancient pipe—or a moonshine still might be caused to emit the innocent smelling aroma of steaming coffee.

President Hoover Takes Sides In Tennessee G. O. P. Primary Fight

Washington, August 14.—President Hoover has been roundly criticised for his letter to Carol Reece, (Rep. Tenn.) for supporting that candidate's view in favor of the private operation of the disposal of the surplus power of Muscle Shoals by lease to private corporations, which Mr. Reece is using in his campaign for re-nomination against his Republican opponent.

Aside from the fact that this letter is construed as a repudiation of the views expressed by Mr. Hoover concerning the ownership and operation of Muscle Shoals in his campaign speech at Elizabethton, Tennessee, the letter is cited as a direct participation of the President in the primary campaign in favor of one Republican candidate as against another. Politically, this action is held to be indefensible on the part of the President, who is supposed to maintain neutrality between contending candidate of his party for nomination.

"I have used Black-Draught for heartburn, as I have had spells of this kind, off and on, for years. This follows indigestion, and indigestion comes close on constipation.

"I have found that the best way to head off trouble is to begin taking Black-Draught in time. It relieves me of dizziness, tightness in the chest and backache.

"By getting rid of impurities, Black-Draught helps to keep the system in good order. I always keep it in the home, and have recommended it to many people, in my time."

Chilton County Abstract Co.

M. D. FOSHEE, Manager

A good business man will not buy a farm or any property without first looking it over to see what it is worth. However, some will buy or loan money on land without an abstract.

Isn't it equally as foolish to buy a farm without looking it over as to buy it and not know whether the titles are good or not? Without an abstract you do not know where you are getting the land you look at or not.

Before investing in land in any way have an abstract made and be safe.

News In Brief

Between 40,000 and 50,000 bushels of the D. P. L. 4-8 variety of cotton seed will be ginned at "gin days" this fall and kept pure for planting next spring, according to J. C. Lowery, extension agronomist at Auburn.

Alabama teachers of vocational agriculture, numbering 115, spent three weeks at Auburn in special training at the summer school of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute. These teachers are scattered throughout the state and do their work in connection with different schools and the county boards of education.

Ugly Little Frown Lines Can Be Smoothed Away Easily

THERE is no reason why frown lines should be tolerated, if the vision is normal and you do not abuse your eyes. If you should notice little perpendicular lines beginning to form between your eyes, just see how they will vanish before this simple treatment:

First, thoroughly cleanse your skin by smoothing cleansing cream up over your neck and face. Then remove the cream with soft tissues, and wipe a pad of cotton saturated with skin tonic over your face.

Now you are ready for the real frown line treatment. Spread a generous quantity of skin food or tissue cream on your face, and especially just above the bridge of your nose, where the lines are forming. If your face is overdry, use skin food, but tissue cream is better if your skin is normal or inclined to be oily.

Next dip your fingers into muscle oil. Lay the index and middle fingers of one hand on the bridge of your nose, and gently smooth upward, with a brisk, firm movement. Alternate with the same fingers of your other hand, and repeat until your skin feels warm and tingly.

If you take this treatment just before going to bed, leave the massage cream and muscle oil on your forehead all night. Or if you wish, remove the excess cream and oil with a little cleansing cream or skin tonic.

NAMES OF TOWNS

If an "ask me another" fiend were to ask you what is the most popular name for towns in the United States, what would be your guess? Unless you had checked up the names in the United States Postal Guide, it is safe to say that you would not hit upon the right name in a dozen guesses.

Of course, Washington would suggest itself, also Springfield, possibly Paris. But neither of them is the leader, although Washington stands in the second rank.

The most popular town name in the United States is Clinton, of which there are 30.

Next comes Chester, Florence, and Washington with 28 of each; Clayton, Madison, Marion and Troy, 27; Glenwood, Kingsport, Newport and Salem, 26; Ashland and Centerville, 25.

There are 24 Clevelands and the same number of Springfields, several of them being important cities. Other names range from this number downward. There is only one New York, but 2 Chicagos, 6 Philadelphias and 8 Detroits.

The outstanding popularity of the name Clinton is somewhat difficult to understand, although two statesmen of that name were very prominent in the early days of the Republic.

George Clinton was the first governor of the state of New York and was vice president of the United States at the time of his death in 1812. His nephew, DeWitt Clinton, was also governor of New York and an unsuccessful candidate for the presidency, being defeated by Madison.

Whether it be through the fame of these statesmen or the euphony of the name itself, Clinton is the favorite name for towns in the United States.

NEWS FROM ALABAMA NATIONAL GUARD

Why soldiers salute, a military courtesy that substitutes for the handshake and hat tip of the civilian, is one of the first things a member of the Alabama National Guard is taught. The guardsmen, who go into two weeks training at Fort McClellan, Aniston, on August 17th, find the explanation as given in their Manual of Basic Training an interesting one.

In the old days the freemen of Europe were allowed to carry weapons, the manual says, and when they met each would hold up his right hand to show that he had no weapon in it and that they met as friends. Slaves or serfs, however, were not allowed to carry weapons and slunk past the freemen without making any sign.

In this way the salute came to be the symbol or sign by which soldiers or freemen might recognize each other. The lower classes began to imitate the soldiers in this respect, although in a clumsy, apologetic way and thence crept into civil life the custom of raising the right hand or nodding as one passed an acquaintance.

The soldiers, however, kept their individual salute and purposely made it intricate and difficult to learn in order that it could be acquired only by the constant training all real soldiers received. To this day armies have preserved their salute and when correctly done it is at once recognized and never mistaken for that of the civilian.

All soldiers, says the manual, should be careful to execute the salute exactly as prescribed. The civilian who tries to imitate the military salute invariably makes some mistake which shows that he is not a real soldier; he gives it in an apologetic manner, he fails to stand or march at attention, his coat is unbuttoned or hat awry, or he fails to look the person saluted in the eye. There is a wide difference in the method of rendering and the meaning between the civilian salute as used by friends in passing, or by servants to their employers, and the military salute, the symbol and sign of the military profession.

In all walks of life men who are gentlemen and of good breeding are always respectful and courteous to those about them, the guardsmen are told. It helps to make life move along more smoothly. In civil life this courtesy is shown by the custom of tipping the hat to ladies, shaking hands with friends, and greeting persons with a nod or a friendly "Good Morning." In the Army courtesy is just as necessary and for the same reasons. It helps to keep the great machine moving without friction. One method of extending this courtesy is by saluting.

Better Cotton Seed For Alabama Is Aim

Auburn, Ala., Aug. 14.—To have cotton seed of the best varieties for planting next spring, farmers in at least fifteen counties of Alabama will observe "gin days" this fall. It will be done under the direction of the county agents. J. C. Lowery, extension agronomist of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute, Auburn, estimates that more than 40,000 bushels of one variety, D. P. L. 4-8, will be kept pure for planting.

Another variety to be included in the "gin days" program is Cook 1627. This variety was developed by the Experiment Station at Auburn. A third variety to be included is Cook 307-6, which is a wilt-resistant variety. It, too, was originated by the Alabama Experiment Station.

At each of these "gin days" only one variety will be ginned. Before any of this cotton goes into the hopper the gin will be cleaned thoroughly in order to keep the seed pure. As an extra precaution for pureness the seed of the first two or three bales ginned will either be sold to oil mills or be classed as seconds for seed.

Although this procedure calls for extra work returns from it will more than offset the handicap, Mr. Lowery said. It means that next year a much larger acreage of Alabama cotton will be of these leading varieties without the presence of inferior varieties. It means also that Alabama will be a step nearer to the production of cotton with staple which meets the requirements of spinners in Alabama and other states. The aim is to replace varieties of inferior staples with varieties of the desired staple. These varieties produce the desired staple, and also produce large yields per acre.

According to the United States Department of Agriculture, the Russian cotton planting campaign is now almost completed with the total acreage sown to June 10th reported at 4,183,403 acres, or approximately 63 per cent more than last year. On the basis of average yield per acre for the four years, 1925-28, production on this will amount to 2,029,000 bales of 478 pounds net, or about 58 per cent above last season's crop.

WOES OF A PREACHER

Perceiving the difficulty of pleasing all the members of his flock, and reflecting upon the criticisms which he had long endured, the Rev. Basil Matthews, vicar of Holy Trinity Church, London, voiced his lamentations recently in a rather humorous vein, in part as follows:

"Be he! (the minister) grave in his demeanor, seeking to uphold the dignity of his cloth, he is said to be standoffish and upbraid; yea, the ungodly call him 'Holy Joe.'"

"So then he trieth to be gay, but this, too, displeaseth some."

"With young men and maidens, if from them he hold aloof, they mislike him much. So that when they should turn to him as a friend, with them he cutteth no ice."

"If he exhorteth all men to abstain from strong drink, he is said to be a killjoy, and inhuman. But if he entereth a tavern and putteth his foot upon the rail of brass, there be those who say, 'Behold a winebibber.' So when he bloweth froth he committeth iniquity, and when he bloweth it not he is likewise a sinner."

"Let the servant therefore walk in the steps of his Master, and care nought for the opinion of men."

Auburn Says

What cotton farmers need most are supplements to cotton—not substitutes. The only thing rarer than a day in June is profit from scrub seed or scrub livestock.

Garbage that is to be fed to hogs should be clean. Hogs do not like dish water and soap.

Lack of feed and not tormenting flies is often the cause of a decided drop in milk flow in the summer.

Prosperous farmers are not found on poor land. Austrian winter peas or hairy vetch planted in the fall will enrich soil.

Never allow Bermuda grass and weeds to grow around your shrubs. They rob the plants and cause the mass to appear untidy.

Nothing less than community cooperation will bring to country life the best advantages enjoyed by town and city life.

Early in the morning or late in the afternoon are the best times to water shrubs and flowers. Do not just sprinkle but wet the ground until it will not absorb more water.

SCHOOLS OVER COUNTY NEAR OPENING DATE

High Schools To Open Sept.
8, While Others Will Open Oct. 8

In information received from the office of the Superintendent of Education this week, it was stated that preparations are being made for the schools of the county to open within the next few weeks.

The high schools of the county are scheduled to open on Monday, September 8, at eight o'clock. Other schools over the county will open October 8, it was stated.

It was also pointed out that it is advisable for parents of school children not to purchase any books until the child has secured an exact list from their teacher as to just what they will need in their work, as much useless buying has heretofore resulted in the purchasing of books before it was found exactly what was needed. Each student is also asked to bring to school on the opening date their promotion card.

The Mount Pisgah school has recently been consolidated with the Enterprise school and will hereafter be taught at the latter place with Prof. H. A. Harris as principal. An addition has been added to the Enterprise school building to take care of the increased number of pupils.

Announcement was made this week of the Teachers Institute for Chilton County to be held here on October 6 and 7. The institute will be held at the Chilton County High School and all teachers of the county must attend, it was stated, including music and agriculture teachers.

TWO ONE-ACT PLAYS PRESENTED AT HAYNES-VIDA SCHOOL

There will be two one-act plays given at the Haynes-Vida Schoolhouse Saturday night, August 23rd. The first will be, "Help Yourself," and the last, "Not Quite Such a Goose." The plays are given for the benefit of the Vida M. E. Church, and everybody is invited to come. Between the two plays there will be enough amusement to keep everybody laughing.

The first play will begin at 8:00 and it won't do to be late. Admission 15 and 25 cents.

LOG CABIN BEACH GROWING FAST IN POPULARITY

Clanton people who wish to go to the river to spend a day, a week end or a whole week will probably find just the place they are looking for at Log Cabin Beach on the Coosa River.

Log Cabin Beach is located about fifteen miles from Clanton on the road to Rockford. Nine miles of this road is on the pavement and the road leading to the Log Cabin Beach turns off the pavement about a mile north of Verbena, Alabama, and from there on the road is a state aid gravelled road in good condition.

There are cabins and boats that can be rented at Log Cabin Beach which is under responsible management. It is not uncommon to find a large and jolly crowd at Log Cabin Beach during weeks ends. A fine view of Mitchell Dam is afforded from the water at the beach and they say that fishing is fine in season there.

The ferry that connects the two sides of the road to Rockford is located directly at Log Cabin Beach and is also in charge of competent hands, insuring safety to those who are crossing over to either side. This connection makes the trip to Rockford much shorter than by going the old route.

M. Lande Returns From Market With Bargains

Mr. and Mrs. M. Lande returned the first part of the week from Chicago where they have been buying goods for their store, The Leader. In a statement to a representative of the News Mr. Lande said, "Within a very few days our store will be stocked in full with an entire supply of new goods, fresh from the markets where I have been for the past several days. Goods are arriving daily and are being placed in stock as fast as possible. I was able to take advantage of many bargains and by doing so, will be able to offer the people of this county some real savings in purchasing their fall goods."

On the back page of this issue will be found the ad from The Leader.

REPRESENTATIVE NOMINEE

HOWARD R. ODEN

Mr. Howard R. Oden, of Maplesville, Alabama, Route, was nominated for Representative in the Legislature of Alabama from Chilton County in the Democratic Primary held August 12. Although he was not a candidate for the office, his friends in his progressive community, that of Isabella near here, wrote his name in on the ticket, giving him a good vote. Others whose names were written in for representative and receiving good votes were, J. R. Mullins, C. Fenn Jones, and Dr. J. E. Gowen, all of Clanton.

FINAL COUNT FROM PRIMARY ON AUGUST 12

News Gives Official Figures Of Result Of Democratic Primary Election

Last week the News published an unofficial count of the result of the Democratic Primary which was held on August 12. This week we are publishing the official and final count of the Democratic primary held in this county.

The result of the Republican primary of this county showed Percy M. Pitts nominated for Representative, W. H. Gillespie for Sheriff, W. G. Culp for Tax Collector, Akiss Collins for Tax Assessor, Jos. E. Cobb for commissioner from First District, J. M. Mims, commissioner Second District, and W. L. Sanders as member of the School Board.

On the back page of this issue will be found the tabulated official returns from the various boxes in the county offices. Following is the official count—(continued to editorial page)

CLANTON GRAMMAR SCHOOL WILL OPEN SEPTEMBER 8TH

Preparations are being made by Prof. I. J. Quinn, the principal, for the opening of the Clanton Grammar School on the 8th of September. The building is being made ready with all the necessary fixings so that everything will be in its proper place when the bell rings on the very first day.

The list of teachers for this year will be largely the same as last year. Prof. Quinn is principal, with the following assistants:

Miss Bess Thomas, Miss Avis Grantham, Miss Lucile Sherwood, Mrs. W. H. Thomas, Miss Jewell Vessels, Miss Emma Sue Morris, Miss Louise Pack, Miss Lizzie Benagh, Miss Sarah Polard.

The new board of trustees of the school is J. M. Martin, chairman; V. J. Elmore and W. M. Wyatt.

At a recent meeting the board of trustees were faced with the proposition of having an eight-month school term, or raising the matriculation fees. The latter course was adopted, as it was felt that the patrons of the school had rather pay $1.50 more matriculation fees than to have the children lose one month of school.

Therefore, the matriculation fee was adopted as $5.00. All students of the school will be required as heretofore, to present a receipt showing that they have paid the matriculation fee. These receipts may be obtained at Alfred Drug Company as in former years.

Miss Kathryn Black of St. Petersburg, Fla., and Mrs. A. L. Thompson, of Montgomery spent the past week end as guests of Dr. and Mrs. P. T. Hinkle.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Lett of Verbena were among the visitors to Clanton last Thursday.

Tuscaloosa To Get Veterans Hospital

Tuscaloosa will be the location for the new veterans hospital to be established in Alabama at a cost of $1,100,000 according to information from Washington. This location was decided Friday by the Federal Hospitalization Board after a conference of several hours.

A site two and a half miles east of the University of Alabama on the Birmingham highway and convenient to the Southern Railway has been selected as the exact location and will be acquired, if the attorney general approves the titles, it was stated. The site contains 220 acres and the purchase price will be $70,000.

Work on the building is expected to start within a few months.

American Legion To Have Special Meeting Here

A special meeting of the Chilton County Post of the American Legion has been called for tomorrow night at the courthouse, according to Post Commander Joe Calloway.

This meeting is called for the purpose of electing officers and to take care of all preliminaries in preparation for the big chicken barbecue and watermelon cutting to be staged by the local post.

All members of the local post, ex-service men and their wives are invited to attend this special meeting at the courthouse Friday night.

REVIVAL MEETING CLOSED AT MACEDONIA LAST FRIDAY

The revival meeting which has been in progress at the Macedonia church for several days, closed last Friday night. The meeting was being conducted by the Rev. Mr. Tom B. Beal, of Birmingham, and who was assisted by B. Lawrence.

There were eighteen additions to the church from this meeting, two of whom were by letter and the remainder by baptism.

Dief's Putting On Big Goodyear Tire Sale

"Dief Says, Now is the time to get yours," is the heading of a large ad which appears in this issue from the Dief's Service Station of this place, who are putting on a big Goodyear tire and tube sale now.

Mr. Diefenderfer stated that the prices which have been placed on the genuine Goodyear tires and tubes for this sale are extremely low, in fact they are said to be the lowest in history. The ad in this issue carries the prices that have been placed on tires by the Dief's Service Station.

This sale begins today and will continue until September 1st. The service station will give the tires you are using a thorough inspection without cost and advise you on the purchase of tires suitable for your needs. Mr. Diefenderfer is a contestant in winning a free trip to the Goodyear plants in Akron, Ohio, and is nearing his goal by selling a specified number of the various styles of tires manufactured by the Goodyear company. Turn to the large ad from Dief's and look over the prices if you are contemplating purchasing tires.

JOHN D. MARTIN AT HOME FOLLOWING AN OPERATION

The friends of John D. Martin, who underwent an operation for appendicitis at the T. C. I. Hospital in Fairfield last week, will be glad to learn that he is at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Martin in the Isabella community and doing well.

SPECIAL ATTRACTION ON PRO- GRAM AT WADESONIAN

The Wadesonian Theatre announces a special added attraction on their program for the first part of next week. Jimmie A. Mitchell, Jr., (in person), the black face comedian, with his dizzy blondes and dangerous brunettes will all appear in person on the stage next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights. Special attention is also called to Jeanette, the tap dancing girl of note.

This added attraction will appear on the same program with the picture, "The Grand Parade," all-talking, with other all-talking added attractions. Elsewhere in this issue is the program of the theatre for the entire week.

Mr. Louis Curlee of Birmingham was the guest of his mother, Mrs. J. M. Curlee, Sunday.

G. O. P. Re-Elect County Chiefs

The rumored fight to oust the negro officers of the Montgomery county republican organization failed to materialize at the regular meeting held at noon Tuesday. Dr. R. H. Harris was re-elected unanimously as chairman for a term of two years, as was also M. C. Jackson, secretary, also a negro.

A delegation of white republicans to represent this county in the state convention at Birmingham, August 21, was chosen as follows: Warren S. Reese, W. Y. Acker, J. P. KKnabe, A. A. McKinnel and Roy A. Lifsey.

By actual count 83 members of the party were present and voting. The majority of this number were negro men, a few negro women and a few white men.

Dr. T. J. Marcus And Family Return From Western Trip

Dr. and Mrs. T. J. Marcus, their son, Raymond, of Selma and daughter, Louise, returned last Monday night from a months tour of the Western States.

Dr. Marcus and his party left Clanton on July 12, and during their motor trip, visited fourteen states, which were Tennessee, Arkansas, Texas, Nevada, Arizona, New Mexico, Colorado, Wyoming, Nebraska, Utah, Kansas, California, Louisiana and Mississippi.

The party spent several days in Los Angeles, where they visited Claud Marcus, another son of Dr. Marcus, and while there they also saw several persons from Alabama. To hear Dr. Marcus relate some of their experiences is a most interesting story, as they saw many unusual and entertaining things during the motor trip through the country. Very little trouble was encountered on the trip, Dr. Marcus stated, and was very interesting. We are glad to see Dr. Marcus and his party back home again, and after hearing him tell of the trip would like to take one just like it.

Conducting Revival At Collins Chapel

The Rev. M. B. F. Dykes has just completed a most successful revival meeting at the New Salem church, ending the latter part of last week. A report from the meeting showed 46 additions, 36 of which were by baptism and 10 by letter. Rev. Dykes was assisted by Z. Y. Appleton.

These two gentlemen are now conducting a revival meeting at Collins Chapel. This meeting began last Sunday and will continue throughout this week. The public is cordially invited to attend all the services.

MOTHER OF REV. EZELL LAID TO REST LAST FRIDAY

Rev. and Mrs. S. J. Ezell were suddenly called to Chesnee, S. C., last week on account of the death of the former's mother.

A recent communication from Rev. Ezell stated that the funeral services were held last Friday afternoon at two o'clock. He also stated that he would leave for Clanton either Wednesday or Thursday and will be here to conduct services at the Baptist church next Sunday. The News joins the countless friends of our Baptist pastor in extending deepest sympathy.

PROF. AND MRS. L. C. WARR RETURN FROM NEW YORK

Prof. and Mrs. L. C. Warr returned last Monday from New York City where they have been for several weeks. Both Mr. and Mrs. Warr attended Columbia University while in the city, and are here now making preparations for the opening of the local high school of which Prof. Warr is principal.

CEMETERY CLEANING AT BETH- ANY CHURCH TUESDAY, AUG. 26

Notice has been given that there will be a cemetery cleaning at the Bethany Cemetery, located eight miles south of Clanton, on Tuesday, August 26. All who are interested are requested to meet there and bring necessary tools to do the work.

Mr. I. B. Yeargan, of Clanton Route 3, was in Clanton yesterday attending to business matters. While in town, Mr. Yeargan was a caller at the News office.

GUBERNATORIAL NOMINEE

JUDGE B. M. MILLER

In the final count of the Democratic Primary held over the state Tuesday, August 12, Judge B. M. Miller was nominated for the office of the Governor of the State of Alabama, winning over his five opponents by a large majority over the entire state. Judge Miller was welcomed in Camden, his home town, by a large enthusiastic crowd of admirers congratulating him on his nomination.

Miss Sallye Mae Heflin of Moulton, Alabama is the guest of her brother, Grady Heflin, and Mrs. Heflin.

MRS. J. M. POTTS SUCCUMBS TO SHORT ILLNESS

Deceased Was A Resident Of Clanton For Many Years

Funeral services for Mrs. Emma Mac Potts, age 67, were held last Monday morning at the Clanton Methodist church. The Rev. Mr. Ernest A. Childs, pastor of the church, conducted the services. Interment followed in the Clanton Cemetery with Martin in charge.

Mrs. Potts died last Sunday morning early at the Central Alabama Hospital following a short illness which was the result of a stroke of paralysis on Sunday afternoon, August 10, at her home here.

The deceased has been a resident of Clanton for many years and will be remembered as the wife of J. M. Potts, widely known grocer here for a number of years, and who preceded his wife to the grave something like ten years ago. Mrs. Potts was a member of the Methodist church, and an active worker until she became practically unable to work. Her presence will be greatly missed by her countless friends over the county.

Surviving are two sisters, Mrs. J. C. Rogers, of Hartselle, and Mrs. Mae Williams of LaGrange, Ga. One brother John W. Rhinehart, of Cullman; two step-daughters, Mrs. J. M. Nix of Amarillo, Texas, and Mrs. Claud Jones of Minden, Alabama, and other relatives.

CO. AGENT STAPP AND CLUB BOYS WILL TO SPECIAL WORK

All 4-H Club boys who have pledged Jersey calves have been asked to meet at the office of County Agent Stapp on next Friday morning, August 22, at eight o'clock for the purpose of doing some special work.

Mr. Stapp and the boys will spend the day visiting the boys who have pure bred heifers. They will also visit the owners of pure bred bulls and other places of interest. Farmers who are interested in making the tour with the boys are requested to join the party at Mr. Stapp's office at eight o'clock.

JUNIOR G. A.'s MET LAST TUES- DAY AT BAPTIST CHURCH HERE

The Junior G. A.'s met Tuesday afternoon at the Clanton Baptist church. Jewell Taylor was in charge of the program. Those present were: Counselor, Ruth Sessions; members, Marzelle Taylor, Jewell Taylor, Mary Edith Jones, Ruth Gowan, Mildred Maldox, Elizabeth Lawrence, Lucile Scroggins, Mary Brandon.

Mrs. Sam Box of Birmingham is the guest of her mother, Mrs. W. A. Reynolds, this week.

OPP. SCHOOLS COME TO CLOSE NEXT FRIDAY

Students and Teachers Are to Gather Here For Big Closing Rally

This week marks the last week of the Opportunity Schools for this year in Chilton County according to an announcement made this week by Prof. H. A. Harris, organizer of the schools in the county. The schools have been in progress for six weeks and much interest has been shown during their session, and judging from comments much good has been derived from them by those persons, mostly adults, who were not fortunate enough to secure an education while young. These schools are doing a great work in Chilton County in assisting in the work of eliminating illiteracy, both among the white people and the negroes.

Tomorrow, which will be the last day of the schools, a big rally is planned for all the pupils and teachers of the Opportunity Schools, in Clanton. A parade will be staged through the main business section of town by the pupils and friends.

Following is the report of the white and negro schools. This is the fifth and last report of this year:

"THE MELODY PALS" WILL SING OVER RADIO STATION WBRC

Announcement was made this week that "The Melody Pals" will appear on the program of Station WBRC, in Birmingham on next Friday night, August 22, from seven-thirty to eight o'clock.

The entire program of "The Melody Pals" will be dedicated to the bride of Gene Lowery, of Thorsby, who is one of "The Melody Pals." Mr. Lowery was married on last Saturday to Miss Susie Mae Townsend, of Marion, Ala.

MR. AND MRS. REUBEN LOWE PARENTS OF NEW BABY GIRL

Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Lowe, of South Clanton have announced the birth of a fine baby girl, born on August 15th. The new arrival has been named Evelyn June, and the proud parents are receiving congratulations from their many friends.

Little Unemploy- ment In Alabama

Alabama has less unemployment than any of the 12 state tabulated by the U. S. Census recently. Greene County has but 2 persons out of 19,765 looking for a job. Alabama boasts of eight counties in which the unemployed are much less than ten in a thousand persons.

Alabama boasts of 8 counties in which the unemployed for each thousand and persons can be shown on the fingers of one hand. There are 51 counties in which the per thousand unemployed can be counted on the fingers of both hands. There are but 8 counties in Alabama in which more than one person in a hundred is unemployed. In Jefferson County, two persons of every 100 were looking for work.

Alabama's State average is four-fifths of one per cent out of work and looking for a job. This means that on the average 8 persons in every thousand are out of work and looking for a job.

TEXACO-ETHYL

"There's nothing like it"!

"I've tried them all, Jim, all the premium gasolines . . . and there's nothing like Texaco-Ethyl. I got one thing from this one, and another from that. But with Texaco-Ethyl I got everything—in addition to no knocking.

"I didn't really know what quick-starting was until I put Texaco-Ethyl into the tank. There's one lively gas! And when it comes to pick-up and power on the hills . . . why it just runs away with the car. I understand it's better because it's a "dry" Ethyl gas. And it certainly is better . . . in every way. The Texaco-Ethyl pump is my stop sign now."

And so it goes. One man tells another. Motorist after motorist tries Texaco-Ethyl—and sticks to it. Try a tankful today. Drive up where you see the Texaco Red Star with the Green T. Then you'll be a booster, too!

Pleasant Grove News

We have just closed the revival at this place, which was quite a success. Hope we will keep the spirit of the services all the year round, and make our Sunday School and C. E. Society better every Sunday. If we will put all our trust in the Lord we will have a better church and Sunday school. Here we are asking a special request of the C. E. members, we want all members to be present Sunday night, August 24th, at seven o'clock, and especially do we request Rev. J. H. Limbrick to be with us. We want to elect group leaders for Group No. 1 and No. 2. Let's all come and make this meeting one of the best that we have ever had.

—President of the C. E. Society.

Alabama Crops Saved By Rains

Although Alabama farmers early in the season have suffered in places from a general lack of rainfall, recent rains have saved the State, according to reports received by Seth P. Storrs, Commissioner of Agriculture, at Montgomery. There had been a seasonal deficiency of between a third and a half of the annual rainfall up to July. Crops went into a dry soil not well stocked with moisture in the subsoil; in fact, according to the State Soil Survey, the soil was the driest in several years at planting time.

In spite of this lack of rainfall, July brought a scattered rainfall which was plenty in favored localities, while streaks still suffered from drouth. August came in with plenty of rain. Pastures look greener than usual. Corn will probably be as big a crop as in 1928. Early corn in some cases was practically ruined by dry weather. Late corn on the whole looks well, according to reports from F. W. Gist, state and federal statistician. The late hay crop looks vastly improved. Pastures are generally greening up and the outlook for late hay and livestock is greatly improved.

Regarding cotton, certain counties report a good crop but are complaining of the prevalent low prices and price prospects. The prospect for this year's crop in Alabama, according to Mr. Gist, is 1,200,000 bales which is a fair average crop for Alabama.

The State average of rain of 3.59 inches for July saved the crop, and the abundant rains in August have brought out all other seasonable crops.

WHEN ONE IS OLD

We are repeatedly told that youth and age are not measured by years alone. Some are old fogies at 30; others have the spirit of youth at 80. How is this?

An article in a recent issue of an educational journal expresses the idea of youth and age better than we could express it, so we quote it in part:

Youth is not a time of life; it is a state of mind. It is a temper of the will, a quality of the imagination, a vigor of the emotions. Youth means a predominance of courage over timidity, of the appetite of adventure over the love of ease. This often exists in a man of fifty more than in a boy of twenty. Nobody grows old merely by living a number of years. People grow old by deserting their ideals.

John D. Rockefeller, for example, plays golf with zest at the age of 91. Thomas A. Edison is inventing and planning at the age of 83. John R. Voorhis is active as president of the board of elections of New York City at the age of 101.

These and hundreds of others are extremely old in years, but young in spirit. Thus setting a good example for the rest of us.

Mrs. Clara Burris of Evanston, Ill., was so bored by a motion picture that she broke her jaw from yawning.

While George Dobson of Elizabeth, N. J., was taking a nap in his automobile, parked under a shady tree, thieves removed all four tires and made off with them.

Middle Life Suffering

"Three years ago, I was in 'bad health,' says Mrs. J. B. Bean, of Kirbyville, Texas. 'I was going through a critical time, and I suffered a lot. My back hurt almost all the time, and my legs and ankles ached. My head hurt me until sometimes I would be almost past going. As I had used Cardui before, and knew how much I had improved after taking it, I got a bottle and started taking it. I continued to use it for several months. After awhile I regained my health, and I feel that I could never have gotten through that awful time without Cardui.'"

THE CHILTON COUNTY NEWS

J. B. ATKINSON, PUBLISHER

Published every Thursday at Clanton, Alabama in the interest of Clanton and the entire Chilton County

BILLY SMITH Editor

Entered in the postoffice of Clanton, Alabama, as second class matter under the Act of Congress of March, 1897.

Good Fall and Winter Business Needs Only to be Invited Here

Summer is rapidly passing in this part of the South. Soon autumn with its crisp air, its ripened crops and its call for business activity will be with us. In Clanton cooler nights give notice of a definite break in warm weather. Soon people will begin to think of Fall and Winter needs, heavier clothing, the coal bins in the cellar, the new closed car for Winter use and numerous things that are needed in cool weather, but which are not considered when Summer's heat is upon us.

Autumn's approach suggests lively business in Clanton's stores. In preparation for it merchants are buying new stocks of advanced styles in women's, men's and children's clothing, of household goods of various kinds, of materials the wives and mothers will need for their Fall sewing. Soon the stores of Clanton will be filled with attractive and seasonable goods, and as usual they will be visited by buyers from a wide territory.

Many communities that should send their farm products here and should buy much of their goods here, do not know what a fine market Clanton is. They should be told.

Even the home-town trade can be increased with aggressive and persistent advertising. People who sometimes go out of Clanton to buy what Clanton stores should sell them, can be induced to give the home stores the preference, if they learn through convincing advertisements in the News that Clanton's stores not only have as varied stocks as those of larger cities, but that Clanton prices mean a saving in dollars and cents, and in satisfaction to them.

It is time now to make good business in Clanton better this Fall by increasing the number of buyers and expanding the city's trade territory.

The Opportunity Schools Come To A Close

Something that should be brought to the minds of the people of Clanton and the entire Chilton County is the work that is being done by the Opportunity Schools which have been taught here each year for the past several years. These schools make it possible for those people of our county to receive a small education—an education they failed to receive while young. Many of the who have attended these schools in this county have learned to write their name and to read, where before the schools were organized and put in session they were unable to do so.

These schools are doing a great work in Chilton County and this work deserves recognition from every citizen of the county. Much credit is due those persons, both men and women, who so willingly have given their work so that those who wished to learn could do so without cost, for these schools were taught without one cent of expense to the students. Everything was furnished them free, and the way opened to them to learn to read and write. May the citizens of Clanton and Chilton County not overlook the good done by these schools and those persons who have made them possible through their efforts.

A Victim Of Hard Luck

We have just read again a real and absolutely true hard luck story. It concerned a young man who was handicapped to begin with by being awkward, homely and almost uncouth. He was ambitious, however, and ran for the Illinois legislature, but was badly beaten.

Then he went into business with a worthless partner; failed and spent 17 years in paying off his debts. In the meantime he was engaged to a beautiful young woman, who died.

Nothing daunted, he ran for Congress and was defeated. An effort to obtain a government appointment ended in failure. Aiming still higher he ran for the United States Senate, but again his ill-luck persisted and he lost. He also failed in his attempt to obtain the nomination for Vice-President of the United States. At one time in his life he contemplated suicide, but soon recovered his iron nerve and pressed on.

By this time the reader who knows his history may have guessed the name of this apparently hopeless victim of Fate, who finally won success, and whose name is enshrined in the hearts of his countrymen. It was Abraham Lincoln.

Will Rogers On Miniature Golf

Will Rogers says what most everybody else is thinking and says it better than they could say it and with fewer words. Here's what he has to say about miniature golf:

"Now, Mr. Hoover being a business man, I bet he takes that Senate and House of Representative space in the Capitol Building and turns it into miniature golf courses.

"Would you believe it there is 3,500 of 'em in the City of Los Angeles. Then people ask what's the matter with this country. Nothing only there is millions got a 'putter' in their hand when they ought to have a shovel.

"Half of America is bent over. In two more generations our children will turn off at right angles and with their arms hanging down we will be right back where we started. Darwin was right."

"ROUND TOWN"

---by Doug

Opinions expressed in this column by this writer have no connection with the general policies of this paper, being wholly those of the writer, in the manner they are written.

This thing Dooker Pooker and myself have started here is beginning to become interesting, judging from the letters in this week, and if the men don't come in and speak some for themselves, the Dook and myself will take it all in hand. I am carrying a few letters that came in this week.

Reports coming in from some of our outposts show that the prospects for better conditions for the men are very bright and if this continues it will not be necessary for desperate steps to be taken to put the members of the opposite sex back into their places. There were not so many of the feminine critters who participated in the election the other day and that shows that they are beginning to leave things for the men to attend to, which is exactly what they should do.

When the earth was created, God put man here to run things, and then he put a woman here. Then what did she do? She caused the downfall of the Man who was here first, by tempting him and then what happened? Why, that caused all the trouble which is now going on in the world. Tracing it back, a woman caused the whole darn thing. Man would have gotten along all right if she had not used her tactics in causing his downfall. But it is like Dooker Pooker says, a man ought to have at least one of the critters provided he can manage her. On the other hand, if he can't, one way to get that fixed is to put her in a barrel nail her up and label the barrel to Shanghai, China. But then there are those poor Chinamen who would have her on their hands. It's a serious proposition, men, and something must be done.

There are some young women who have gone off to college and come home thinking they know it all, and with this idea go out and fool some men into thinking they are smart, when the truth of the business is, all they have learned is how to use their qualities that they arrived with in the world, to trick the poor fellow with and make him think they brought Heaven home from college with them, when really all they brought was—well, something else. And then when a nice moonlight night arrives—a date—an automobile—four arms—two necks—four lips, and the poor man forgets his mind, his job and in fact the whole world. And the girl don't forget anything, but just amuses herself with his antics from the effects of the combined work of the articles of the anatomy named above. Now, you men folks, ain't it the truth the women are making fools out of you and amusing themselves with you as if you were something to play with, like a little nigger baby?

Then there are those fellows who let a woman fool him into marrying her. Men, awake to the fact that when you enslave another like that, you also enslave yourself, unless you get one of the critters that you can handle. In case you should accidentally get one that you cannot manage, just casually advise her you think it would be a fine idea to join our Klub, particulars of which will be sent on request with a self addressed, stamped envelope. It is known as the K. K. K. but has no connection with the other kluxers who wear robes, because we don't wear any. In this klub the critter you have will be tried and given the first degree with the famous Dooker Pooker Pucker, a new kind of art of joining tu-lips, bringing about the desired results. When once a member she will always remain one and you won't have any more trouble with her. She will be just as tame as a kitten whose heart has ceased to function.

Already I have nominated a few members for this klub and will make an announcement of them in a week or so. I am to select some assistants provided the work becomes too much for me and the Dook, who does not reside in Clanton, but will come on a moments notice provided I need his help with the critters here. If anyone, whether they wear pants or dresses, wishes any particulars on the Klub which is gaining in popularity over the country, just drop me a line in care of this newspaper and full details will be sent you. If you think you will not be interested, you are entirely mistaken, because this Klub deals with those things that go to make life happy and rosy—dealing with them in a big way, and you are missing something if you don't get in on it while memberships are free. Eventually memberships in this Klub will be at a premium.

Next week, I find it will be necessary for me to single out some young ladies who are trying to run things and need bringing down a notch. I hope they will come into our Klub where they will be safe from attack.

FROM OUR READERS

Dear Mr. Pooker:

About 6 months ago, my wife and I was fightin' like cats and dogs all the time, but one day we heard about your marvelous pucker and I persuaded her to take instructions from you. Since then, she hasn't throwed no vases at me but once. Blessings on thee!

BILL THE BURGLAR.

Dooker Pooker:

I haven't used my shot gun in over 16 years but if you come down here with that dad-gum pucker of yours and contaminate my daughters with it, I'm going to use it,—and on you.

A POPPER.

O Thou Great Pooker:

For many months I have been suffering from indisposition and none of the doctors could do anything for me. But one day my old lady slipped away and consulted you and since that time I have been a new man. All power to you.

A GRATEFUL READER.

Mister Pooker:

I wish I had you for mine for just about 15 minutes. I certainly would make you change your tune. I have saw lots of conceited men, but you take the blue ribbon. I'm goin' to make it a point to meet you when you come here, and believe me I'm goin' to tell you a plenty. Uncle Sam would get me if I wrote you just how I feel about you.

MISS SIS SIPPY.

Darling Dook:

For years I was only a wall flower and had gave up hope of ever landing a man. But one day I became one of your customers and since then have been the belle of the hawl. I am now engaged to five men and theys two men which wants to divorce their wife for me. I can never thank you for what you has did for me.

Children Vote For Better Breakfasts

While breakfasts for grownups should be substantial, well-balanced meals, children in the home present a real problem for planning a tempting morning meal. Theoretically, the first meal of the day is the most important of all, because it follows the period of longest fasting.

Children will eat a good breakfast if the same type of meal is not presented day after day. It is possible to stimulate the lagging appetite of the child by out of bed. For the mother, the preparation of a palatable breakfast means practically no more work, but merely calls for a little forethought and ordering in advance.

The avoidance of one practice will go a long way toward pepping up the breakfast menu: Do not serve the same kind of food on consecutive days. Poached eggs, on toast are delicious, if served occasionally but lose their appetite appeal if presented six or seven days a week.

The general breakfast menu for the school child usually contains fruit, cereal, a protein dish and a milk beverage. Fruit is one item which should never be omitted from the early morning bill-of-fare. Fresh fruit served a la natural is excellent. Practically all of the fruits help to produce the slightly alkaline condition of the body which is desirable. Such raw fruits as oranges, apples, bananas, pears, grapefruit and fresh pineapple are especially good. Cooked fruits with a small amount of sugar added are next in line. Baked apples, stewed figs or prunes, cooked peaches, pears or apricots offer a wide variety. Many children enjoy dried fruits, dates, raisins, figs, prunes and apricots served with the cereal. The advantage in such a combination is that it makes one chew the starchy food better, thus allowing more complete digestion.

Cooked cereals give the growing child a concentrated form of energy as well as the whole grain of the wheat which is full of vitamins and roughage. If the ready-to-eat cereals are served, they should be heated in the oven so that they will be crisp and require vigorous mastication. Few of the uncooked cereals contain the whole grain of the wheat.

"As for the protein foods, milk is, of course of supreme importance as a tissue builder," says the National Dairy Council. A quart of milk daily should be the privilege of every child. If a cup is drunk at each meal and the remainder used in cooking or eaten in the form of cheese or ice cream, it is easy to consume this amount. For breakfast, a part of the milk may be eaten with the cereal. A delicious as well as wholesome dish results if the cereal is cooked in milk instead of water.

Ada Theal, aged 18, of Nottingham, Eng., was sentenced to go to bed every night at 10 o'clock for three years for stealing to buy a dance dress.

For biting the arm of a prison guard while she was serving time, Mrs. Louise Retter of London, was given a 4-month term of hard labor.

George Whisker of Middlesborough, Eng., had his name legally changed to George W. Newton, because of his friends' jokes.

A CARD OF THANKS FROM
JOHN A. DICKINSON

I wish to extend to all of those who voted for me as State Senator in the recent Primary my greatest appreciation and thanks.

During the campaign, I never requested a voter in the District to vote for me. The vote I received was a voluntary vote.

I am rejoicing in defeat over the fact that a majority of the people in my county voted for me, and that in the town of Prattville where my opponent and I reside, I received one hundred and sixty-four votes more than my opponent received, and that in my opponent's voting precinct, I received eighty-nine more votes, than he received. I had rather be defeated with the compliment from my home people, than to have received the nomination from the voters in the other two counties.

I rejoice further in the fact that in support of me mostly, if not entirely, from those loyal Democrats, who remained loyal to the Democratic Ticket in 1928. I think I have every reason one could wish to rejoice over.

JOHN A. DICKINSON.

A TWO-LANGUAGE SCHOOL

We have always been somewhat skeptical about the value of teaching foreign languages in the average public or private school. It has seemed to us that the smattering of foreign tongues thus acquired was not worth the time spent on them.

Our attention has been called to a somewhat different type of school, that seems to have overcome this objection. This is the Maret School in Washington, D. C., which is said to employ a real two-language system of education—in English and French.

This system is based upon the principle of teaching both languages simultaneously. After an introductory French course, the students are placed in a French medium school, where they receive instruction in all subjects through the medium of the French language. Reading and writing in both languages are emphasized. This method of instruction is said to have been successful in the case of many students.

It is true that this method is and will be a costly one, but it is equally true that it is a method of acquiring not merely a superficial knowledge of French, but a real mastery of that beautiful and expressive language.

2,000,000 Chevrolet Sixes now on the road

Since January, 1929, Chevrolet has produced and sold over 2,000,000 six-cylinder automobiles—nearly five times as many as any other manufacturer has ever built in an equal length of time.

These 2,000,000 buyers have chosen Chevrolet because it offers many desirable qualities not obtainable in any other car so low in price—

—the smoothness, silence and flexibility of a modern six-cylinder engine—the comfort and roadability of a modern, full-length chassis—and the style, safety and distinction of bodies by Fisher.

Yet, despite these fine car advantages, the Chevrolet Six is unusually economical. Its gas, oil, tire and upkeep economy is unsurpassed. And

NEWS FROM THE NATIONAL DEMOCRATIC COMMITTEE

Highlights of a Republican Primary In "Banner Republican State"

Washington, Aug. 21.—Revelations by the Senatorial Campaign Funds. Investigating Committee, of which Senator Nye, (Rep. N. D.) is Chairman, give a striking picture of how a Republican primary is conducted in Pennsylvania, the "banner Republican state." The following are extracts from the testimony taken by the Committee:

Royal C. Stephens of Philadelphia, testified that $50,000 had been offered to Senator Schall (Rep. Minn.) for use in his campaign if he would cease his attacks upon Senator Grundy—the money to come from the Pennsylvania Manufacturers' Association.

Walter A. Bonitz, brick manufacturer of Pittsburgh, testified that he had contributed $96,750 to the campaign of Secretary of Labor Davis, for U. S. Senator and F. S. Brown for Governor.

C. C. McGovern, County Commissioner of Allegheny County, testified, "It has been the custom in the past for one faction to steal from 12,000 to 30,000 votes after the ballot boxes have been taken to the county court house."

He added, "I think that in the matter of election frauds we are the peer of in county in the state, including Philadelphia."

F. S. Wood, a manufacturer of Westchester, testified that he had affidavits to prove a conspiracy between a State Senator and the principal of the Westchester State Teachers' College to have non-resident and under age students vote in violation of law, and said they were paid $2.00 each to vote.

Ralph H. Franks, a Pittsburgh attorney, testified that ballot boxes from a ward commonly known as "The Strip," were taken to a police station instead of to the county commissioners office, but that they would "have been safer standing in the middle of the street."

On August 25, it is announced, Senator Nye's Committee will again take up the expenditures made by and in behalf of Ruth Hanna McCormick, Republican nominee for Senator in Illinois.

These were the highlights; there were other sordid details.

Argentina's "Illusions" Created by Hoover Now at Vanishing Point

Washington, Aug. 21.—Argentina's "illusions" growing out of the good will tour of President-elect Hoover have reached the vanishing point since the passage of the tariff bill, according to Andrew A. Estrade, chief of the Argentine delegation to the Pan-American Reciprocal Trade Conference at Sacramento, and an editorial writer of La Nacion, Buenos Aires.

Mr. Estrade cited from a speech made by President-elect Hoover at Buenos Aires in December, 1928, to the effect that "little by little the strong competition by this great southern country toward the United States is disappearing for the reason that the United States is requiring each year a greater part of its surplus production, until it will require it all."

"Even then Mr. Hoover began prophesying as to the date when future events would take place, and continued, 'Within a short time we shall be strong buyers of Argentine products; with regard to meat, probably within three years and with regard to cereals before ten years.'"

Two illustrations of the "growing unfriendliness" in Argentina toward this country were cited by Mr. Estrade. "The first significant fact," he said, "is that none of the representatives of the rural interests, such as wool, linseed and hide men, will be represented at the conference. They feel that it would be useless to go to this expense for something that would bring no results in view of the present tariff attitude of the United States. I understand that in a future conference in England these interests will be strongly represented."

NEWS FROM FORT McCLELLAN

A peace time army—3,000 officers and men of the Alabama National Guard—moves across the State Sunday from their homes to Fort McClellan, at Anniston, where they will coordinate their training activities for two weeks under supervision of Regular Army Officers.

By troop train, motor truck and airplane, they will move, the 3,000 men representing several branches of the machine guns, tank corps, engineers, service, including aviation, infantry, cavalrymen and others.

Every section of the State will be represented by National Guard units, with several going from Birmingham. Scenes reminiscent of World War days will be reenacted at railway stations as troop trains loaded with khaki clad men get under way and motor lorries rumble along the highways. The men and their equipment must be at Fort McClellan for an assembly and roll call Sunday afternoon.

Brigadier General J. C. Persons, commanding the 62nd Infantry Brigade, will be commanding officer at the camp for which an intensive training program has been drafted.

Reports from Anniston state that every possible thing has been done to make the guardsmen's visit a pleasant one, with a number of social events and dances arranged for officers and men. It was also announced there that all misdemeanor cases that might arise against any guardsman would be left to military authorities for trial and disposition.

Among units moving into camp Sunday will be companies "I," "K," "L," and "M" of Birmingham, the 31st Division Aviation, Roberts Field, Headquarters Company 167th, Infantry,

The second illustration was that Argentina was only invited to the Sacramento conference by Senator Shortridge (Senator Pess' tariff alter ego) at the last minute, and the acceptance instead of being sent to the Senator was sent to the Chairman of the organization committee.

EDITORS RENEW PROTEST

In a resolution adopted at the recent national convention held in Milwaukee, the National Editorial Association again went on record in opposition to the government's long-standing practice of supplying printed envelopes in competition with private printers. The resolution said, in part:

"Government encroachment in the field of business, as represented by the sale of printed envelopes, we again deplore and once more unreservedly condemn. We pledge ourselves to renewed persistent and continuing effort to correct this, until it shall at last have come to an end."

After suffering from this unfair competition by the Post Office Department for half a century, it is not surprising that the idea of government operation of business enterprises finds little favor among the small town publishers and printers of the country.

Chevrolet Reduces Prices On Sports

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 14.—Price reductions of $40 on all sport models in the Chevrolet Six passenger car line were announced here today by H. J. Klingler, vice president and general sales manager of the Chevrolet Motor Company.

The models affected are the Sport Roadster, which is now priced at $515; the Sport Coupe, reduced to $615; the Club Sedan, now $625, and the Special Sedan, $685. All models formerly were priced $40 higher.

This latest move of the company brings the price range of the Chevrolet Six to less than the range of the four cylinder Chevrolet at the time of the changeover at the close of 1928. At that time the four was priced from $495 to $715, while the nine different passenger models in the six cylinder line today range from $495 to only $685, following this latest reduction.

The move of the company comes directly after the announcement that wire wheels may now be had as optional equipment without extra cost on any Chevrolet Six passenger car.

Arrested for beating his wife, James Kellar of Chicago refused bail, saying he was ashamed to have his neighbors see him.

George R. Porter of St. Paul, Minn., was arrested for stealing the suit of clothes in which he got married.

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Burns of Seattle, Wash., delayed their honeymoon trip while police hunted for the thief who stole the bridegroom's wooden leg.

Heflin Friends To Organize In Montgomery

Montgomery county supporters of Senator J. Thomas Heflin and Judge Hugh A. Locke, candidate for senator and governor, respectively, in the general election next November, gathered in mass meeting at the courthouse Tuesday morning and formed an organization here for a third party. Arthur B. Chilton, Montgomery attorney, was elected presiding officer and chairman. Arthur Ansley, Jr., was chosen secretary. Every section of the county was represented, leaders reported.

"White Control, Down with the Rule of the 27," was adopted as the tentative name of the organization. A resolution was passed authorizing the chairman to appoint an executive committee of five with authority to appoint a delegate and an alternate from every box in the county to the state-wide convention to be held in this city on September 1, when the Heflin-Locke party will be organized.

The mass meeting, extended to "all democrats who believe in white supremacy," was held simultaneously with the state democratic primary. Similar meetings, it is understood, were held in all other counties of Alabama today. Officials of the third party movement expect 1,000 or more to attend the state convention. At that time they will nominate Heflin for senator, Locke for governor, and Dempsey Powell of Greenville, for lieutenant governor.

Hints For Homemakers

By Jane Rogers

THE next time you start out on a shopping tour put a few pieces of candy in your handbag. Sugar is one of the world's greatest energy foods, and it's simply marvelous how a couple of pieces of candy in the midst of a long afternoon in the shops will drive away that exhausted feeling, giving you plenty of energy to carry on.

A Turkish towel placed in the bottom of the dishpan or sink will greatly lessen the chances of breaking fragile glass or china while it is being washed. The glass and china should not be placed in the dishpan until it has been filled with as much water, of the desired temperature, as you need.

Vanilla Ice Cream Is America's Favorite

Many delectable ice cream flavors have been developed by ice cream manufacturers, but vanilla ice cream consistently remains the best liked variety. Little did the Maya Indians who discovered the aromatic qualities of the vanilla bean realize that this flavor would become such a favorite to the white man.

When Cortez and his Spanish expedition reached Mexico in 1519, they found the vanilla bean—the fruit of a tropical orchid vine—highly prized by the Maya Indians for its delicate flavor. Samples of it sent back to the Old World met with approval. This marks the beginning of the use of vanilla by the outside world.

In the early days, the Indians ground the vanilla beans with the foods which they desired to flavor. Scientific development has improved this crude practice. In the manufacture of ice cream today the vanilla nectar or extract is blended with can sugar. This blending imparts an intriguing flavor to vanilla ice cream. More than half of all the ice cream made in many large plants is vanilla flavor, showing that modern Americans have much the same tastes as their Indian cousins.

Dear Cotton Farmer:

Through the Alabama Farm Bureau Cotton Association as a member of the American Cotton Cooperative Association farmers of Alabama sell their own cotton throughout the world. They are now receiving an advance of 9 cents per pound.

Spinners in Europe and Asia, as well as in America, have learned that Co-op cotton is reliable cotton—graded accurately, weighed correctly and sold honestly.

Cotton in strong hands help to stabilize price. Over 300,000 farmers in twelve other state associations are joined with us in the American Cotton Cooperative Association—one of the largest cotton selling organizations in the world.

When you sign the Marketing Agreement, you add your mite to the might of the united south-wide pools of the interest of orderly selling and market stabilization.

And yet, when you join the Association you may keep the right to name the day when your cotton is to be fixed, and you obtain the price prevailing then.

The grower's relation with the Alabama Farm Bureau Cotton Association will be the same as heretofore—you will deliver your cotton in the same manner—your drafts will be paid in the same way—all your dealings will be with the State Association. However, each bale pooled with your Association will be sold through a central sales agency, which will give unity of strength and power to the job.

Your Association is in position to serve its members this year better than ever before.

COOPERATE WITH YOUR NEIGHBOR—POOL YOUR COTTON.

H. H. Bliss, Publisher of The Janesville (Wis.) Gazette, Says:

That keen business men are aware to the need for readjustment of prices and a keener selection of goods to meet the swift movement of the times.

There is need for a new level on the part of the merchant in his buying, as well as a change in the markings of the goods.

What might seem to be a difficult situation, just at the moment, can be turned to profit by a recognition of the prior condition and the need for stretching the dollar to a greater extent than for a good many years. There are numerous instances of large successes at this time among those who have a keen insight and who can read a tight present condition. This is the time for heroic action, a revamping of the store, a plan that will be nearer to the sales service of the chain store or the department concerns.

This is the time to go on a cash basis so that when the key is turned in the door at night, either the goods or the equivalent in money is in hand.

The losses will show the thoughtful business man the way to a reduction in the price of goods for cash.

This is the time for pyrotechnic ideas—and the free use of well written newspaper space.

It is interesting and hopeful to note the improvement in the newspaper advertising copy of the merchants during the last six months. Most of it tells a real story and is convincing. It gives the reasons why so that the reader decides at the moment to buy.

Several policemen in Evanston, Ill., were called to the home of Walter E. Bushman to help persuade his 230-lb. wife to get off the top of his trunk so he could pack it and leave her.

Moderns Drink Milk For A "Perfect 32"

Although many women strive to attain the standard proportions of beauty symbolized by the tailor's models as a "perfect 36," it is equally important to develop and maintain a "perfect 32," the 32 representing a set of sound teeth. A beautiful figure needs to be set off with strong healthy teeth to be most charming.

"Diet is recognized as the most potent factor in the 'cultivation' of the perfect 32," says Miss Ethel Gibson of the National Dairy Council. A quart of milk, two vegetables besides potatoes, one of them fresh, two fruits, one fresh included in each day's diet will help to maintain healthy teeth.

The diabetic method of Dr. May Mellanby for retaining a set of 32 perfect teeth is quoted in a recent Chicago Tribune. Her method consists in giving enough foods rich in vitamin D, such as butter, cheese, eggs and irradiated foods. After many years of experimenting Dr. Mellanby concludes that:

1. The character of the teeth and jaws is greatly influenced by diet
2. The development of perfect teeth can be insured by an adequate diet rich in vitamin D.
3. If the diet is poor in vitamin D the body reserve of this substance is exhausted before the teeth begin to suffer. Therefore, a poor diet does not cause tooth decay unless it is continued some time. On the other hand, when a child with poor teeth is fed a proper diet the teeth begin to improve promptly.
4. Prolonged cooking of foods rich in vitamin D causes some destruction of the vitamin. If cooking is badly abused it may all be destroyed eventually.

"Vegetable Plate" Becomes Promoted

Vegetable dinners and vegetable plates are rapidly becoming an American institution, so popular have they become in this vitamin conscious age. Ingenuity, however, is needed to make a collection of vegetables appealing to the appetite. When vegetables are to be the main course of a luncheon or dinner, there are several principles to bear in mind.

First, plan a contrast in color. There are a variety of hues to choose from in the vegetable kingdom. The delicate green of peas, the orange and yellow of carrots, the red of tomatoes, the creamy white of cauliflower, the golden brown of French fried potatoes, and so on. The second rule is to select vegetables of contrasting flavor—such as peas, a bland vegetable, onions, strongly flavored, and tomatoes acid. The third suggestion is to vary the mode of cooking; bake one vegetable, boil another, fry or scallop another.

Three or four vegetables are all that are necessary for an attractive plate. To make the plate more substantial, add potatoes, hashed, au gratin or French fried; or rice, noodles, macaroni; or serve a creamed vegetable in patty shells. For garnish use parsley, watercress, chopped eggs, grated cheese, croutons or toast points.

The following combinations are suggested by Miss Grace Pollock of the National Dairy Council.

Cauliflower with mock Hollandaise sauce, broiled tomatoes, buttered peas, Chopped and buttered spinach, carrot balls, baked onion stuffed with buttered and seasoned crumbs.

Green corn, glazed sweet potato, buttered string beans.

Baked stuffed peppers (with rice), grilled egg plant, buttered beets, coleslaw with Russian dressing.

Sunburn And Freckles Can Be Prevented With Care

SUMMER is dreaded by many women, for they know it does unpleasant things to their faces. Many skins are quite lovely until summer comes, when they suddenly become very temperamental, and look shiny and spotty soon after powdering. Some women even complain that their faces feel hot and irritated after the least exposure to the sun.

The change a hot summer works in your skin often is so gradual that you may not notice the damage until it is done. Neglected skins suffer most, so it is wise to accept the fact that hot weather may spoil the texture and color of your skin, and then try to prevent this.

In the inquiries that come to me at this season, I often find that women do not know how to care for and protect their skins during warm weather. "After all," many of your letters say, "I can scarcely step outside my door without getting freckles. Now, what am I to do about that? I cannot stay inside all summer!"

No—You certainly should not stay indoors too much, for fresh air and sunshine are excellent skin-tonics. Instead, you can learn to take a few precautionary measures, and then, safely enjoy being outside as much as you wish.

Foundation cream has very good protective qualities. Spread plenty of it all over your face and neck, wipe off the surplus cream with cleansing tissues, and then pat on your face powder. Or, if you prefer a liquid foundation, apply a generous coating of powder lotion. Wipe off the surplus lotion with a bit of cotton, and then put on your powder.

Naturally, these simple preparations will not protect your skin from burning if you insist on staying out in the sun for hours at a time. But if you are sensible, and expose your skin no longer than necessary, you will not need to be in despair about sunburn or deep freckles. Many women never have freckles until their skins are painfully sunburned. And it is difficult to get rid of these deeply-laid freckles, for they have formed under severe conditions, and almost seem to be there to stay.

Of course it is best to start the summer with a good, clear complexion. Then if the sun or wind burns and smart your skin, this can be corrected by a good soothing cream or lotion. If your skin is not in good condition, but is irritated, and shows blackheads, enlarged pores or annoying little lines—then start in immediately with the right corrective care. A preparatory course of home treatments will keep your perspiration and oil glands working normally, and will help to protect your skin from undue burning or irritation.

Aid Is Asked For Alabama Drouth Sufferers

Montgomery, Ala., Aug. 20.—Aid has been asked for farmers living in drouth stricken counties of Alabama.

Seth P. Storrs, commissioner of agriculture, and Edward A. O'Neal, president of the Alabama Farm Bureau Federation, Friday sent Arthur M. Hyde, Secretary of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., a telegram in which they urged him to use his influence to get aid extended to the southeast as "many counties in large part of Alabama and adjoining states have no feed for next year." They suggested that "quickest relief would come from heavy planting of winter cover crops such as wheat, oats, rye, and winter legumes which could be planted immediately and would be ready for early fall and winter legume seeds. The telegram in full reads:

August 15, 1930.
"Hon. Arthur M. Hyde,
"Secretary of Agriculture.
"Washington, D. C.

Reference fifty percent freight reduction granted by interstate commerce commission on feed into drouth stricken areas we appeal to you to use your influence to get same concessions extended to southeast and to cover winter legume seed as well. Many counties in large parts of Alabama and adjoining states have no feed for next year. This includes several counties with a fine dairy program who are finding it necessary to dispose of their cattle. We feel quickest relief would come from heavy planting of winter cover crops such as wheat, oats, rye, and winter legumes which later we buy in Oregon and Michigan and have imported thru New York. With current rains these could be planted immediately and be ready for early fall and winter pasturing and give us the earliest feed we can produce."

Signed Edward A. O'Neal, president, Alabama Farm Bureau Fed., Seth P. Storrs, Commissioner of Agriculture, Headquarters Troop, 23rd, Cavalry Division, or the Birmingham Sabres, and two medical detachments, of Birmingham.

Ramer Salesman Slain

Ramer, Ala., Aug. 18.—Four negroes are held in Montgomery County, jail and officers are seeking another in connection with the fatal shooting of Samuel Orme, 49, Ramer salesman, found Sunday, several miles from here slumped over the steering wheel of his car with a bullet in his brain.

According to arresting Deputies Tucker and Ellington, Orme was shot by one of the negroes following an altercation as he was carrying the negroes from Ramer to Gallie Church. Jesse Toles, negro, who officers said confessed the shooting, Willie Coffey, Tom Urquhart and Alfred Davis are in county jail and officers are seeking Horace Jones, Montgomery negro, said to have been owner of the pistol used by the killer.

Orme was first seen by Henry Stevens, taxi driver. Four of the negroes were sitting nearby. Stevens rushed to Ramer and notified officers who hurried to the scene and arrested the negroes. Only one of them, Toles, tried to escape.

Orme, salesman for a Philadelphia drug concern, was taken to Ramer, but died shortly thereafter.

Fowl Philosophy

(Calamity Howlers, Please Memorize)

"Hard work means nothing to a hen. She just keeps on digging worms and laying eggs, regardless of what the business prognosticators say about the outlook for this or any other year.

If the ground is hard, she scratches harder.

If it's dry, she digs deeper.

If it's wet, she digs where it's dry.

If she strikes a rock, she works around it.

If she gets a few more hours of daylight she gives us a few more eggs.

But always she digs up worms and turns them into hard-shelled broilers as well as tender, profitable broilers.

Did you ever see a pessimistic hen?

Did you ever hear of one starving to death waiting for worms to dig themselves to the surface?

Did you ever hear one cackle because work was hard?

Not on your life. They save their breath for digging and their cackles for eggs."

A DOWN HILL BUSINESS

The First National Bank, of Oneonta, Alabama, recently ran the following display advertisement in its local paper, the Southern Democrat: "As long as farmers live out of tin cans and paper sacks and feed their mules out of tow-sacks, farming will be a downhill business."

Farmers, bankers and business men are in best shape in those communities where farms are made to produce first of all, food and feed for home use. They may not any of them be getting rich, but nobody is going broke. They may not have much money to spend, but they don't owe more than they can pay, and they are in position to benefit to the fullest extent from the more prosperous times which are now so generally predicted.

The farm program adopted by farmers and bankers of Colquitt county, Georgia, requires that each one-horse farm of 30 acres contain two or three milk cows, two brood sows and 50 pure bred hens, in addition to careful diversification of crops. Figures recently released by the Chamber of Commerce show that the 1929 value of the crops in the county was $7,640,700, as compared with the 1927 figure of $4,413,118, soon after the program was adopted.

On his 400-acre farm, H. P. Figgitt, of Dyer county, Tenn., raises everything necessary for the upkeep of his family, tenants and livestock. His hogs bring him $1200 a year after providing all the pork needed on his farm. Sales of surplus corn and hay bring him in an average of $1000 a year. He specializes on sheep and his 258 Hampshire constitute the largest registered flock in Tennessee. An annual income of $2000 is realized from the sale of registered rams and wool.

A regular contributor to the Elba (Ala.) Clipper has had a standing offer in Coffee county of a $1000 reward to anyone who will show him a cow-hog-hen farmer who has made a failure. The reward has never been claimed. He might extend his offer to the adjoining county of Covington with no greater risk of having the reward claimed. Cooperative sales of poultry and hogs in Covington county from November 1, 1929, to April 30, 1930, amounted to $70,597.90.

His poultry flock, dairy herd, and hogs pay J. A. Nicholson of Almalence county, N. C., a good profit for practically every thing he grows on his 150-acre farm. Mr. Nicholson's flock averages about 2,000 white leghorn hens that lay about 800 eggs a day throughout the year. He sells a few baby chicks but depends largely on his sale of "eating" eggs for his income. His poultry is handled as a farm flock only, practical and not fancy, but it brings him a good income and there is an unmistakable air of contentment and well-being about his farm.

Fighters "Strong" On Dairy Products

That dairy products are a good fighting ration is shown by the consumption figures of Uncle Sam's two service branches—the army and the navy. The army men eat almost twice as much butter as the average American citizen. Slightly over 17 pounds is the per capita consumption in the United States, while in the army 32.6 is eaten by each soldier in a year. These figures were obtained by Dairy Products Merchandising from federal statisticians.

Cheese is also a soldier's delight, for his per capita ration exceeds the civilian's by almost three pounds. Lacking only a tenth of a pound the amount of cheese consumed by the American soldier equals the yearly consumption of the Scandinavian people. American Cheddar cheese made from whole milk is the all around favorite variety.

In spite of a fairly satisfactory growth in the use of dairy products, nutrition scientists agree that the per capita consumption should be much higher than it is. At the present time 22 per cent of the family food dollar is spent for dairy products, according to the National Dairy Council. In a model diet suggested by Mrs. Mary Swartz Rose of Columbia University, 35 per cent of the consumer's dollar is spent for dairy products. In this family dieting for one day for a family of four she uses 4 quarts of milk and five and one-half ounces of butter.

New Worlds To Conquer

Mountain climbers from America and Europe, gathered in the Maligne Lake Section of Jasper National Park, Alberta, at the annual camp of the Alpine Club of Canada this summer, will essay a number of attempts to scale mountains which have never been climbed. The American Alpine Club will be officially represented by H. W. Hainsworth of New York and Max Strumia of Philadelphia. It is estimated that in the Maligne Lake area which is in the heart of the Canadian Rocky Mountains there are more than one hundred peaks which have never been climbed, many of them rising to more than 11,000 feet. Maligne Lake, on which the main camp of the Alpine Club will be pitched, is the largest glacial fed lake in North America. The photographs show two views of the lake with a few of the peaks in the vicinity and the inset map gives an idea of the country surrounding it.

Miss Susye Mae Townsend
Gresham Lowery Married

A marriage that is of interest over a wide section of the state and especially in this part, was that of Miss Susye Mae Townsend, of Marion, Alabama, to Mr. Gresham Lowery of Thorsby, which took place at the home of the bride in Marion last Saturday evening, August 16th at seven o'clock.

The Rev. Mr. W. P. Lowery of Thorsby, father of the groom, performed the ring ceremony. The large living room of the home was beautifully and tastefully decorated for the occasion. An improvised altar, banked with ferns and palms, interspersed with smilax and Snow-on-the-Mountain, furnished the background. Tall burning tapers sent a soft glow over the scene making it more impressive.

The bride was given away in marriage by her father, Mr. J. C. Townsend. Mendelssohn's Wedding March was softly played by Miss Rosalind Howell as the bride and groom entered the room. Miss Eleanor Phillips sang "At Dawning," and "To A Wild Rose" was played softly during the ceremony. The bride had as her maid of honor, Miss Coy Gallant of Marion. Mr. Howard Garrick, of Thorsby acted as best man to the groom.

The bride was beautifully gowned in blue georgette with egg shell accessories, and carried a bouquet of Tube Roses and gladiolas, and wearing a hat of blue chemise velvet. The maid of honor was tastefully dressed in Nile green chiffon with a corsage of pink gladiola, and wearing a hat of black-hair-braid.

The bride and groom left immediately following the ceremony for Thorsby, where they will spend a few days with Mr. and Mrs. Howard Garrick.

Mrs. Lowery is the charming and talented daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Townsend, of Marion and a popular member of the young set of Selma, Marion and Uniontown. She was also a student at Judson College.

Mr. Lowery is the son of Rev. and Mrs. W. P. Lowery of Thorsby, and has won for himself a wide reputation as a singer and radio announcer, having been announcer over Station KTSL at Shreveport, La., and now appears frequently on the program of Station WBRC as one of the "Melody Pals". He was at one time a member of the Howard College Glee Club and has studied as a singer at a seminary in Fort Worth, Texas.

Out-of-town guests at this wedding were Mr. and Mrs. F. M. McCauley, Mr. C. M. McCauley and Mrs. Gleason Walters of Selma, Mrs. G. F. Walters, Mrs. J. C. Watters, Miss Annie Ford and Miss Beulah Mae Watters of Felix, Ala., and Mrs. George Lancaster of Cincinnati, Ohio.

Alabama's PROGRESS

(1913-1930)

THESE seventeen years in Alabama history—from 1913 through 1929 have been an epoch of industrial development equalled in the annals of few states.

—During these seventeen years, the value of Alabama's manufactured products had increased approximately 237%—from $178,797,633 to $462,372,126.

—During these seventeen years, Alabama plant payrolls have increased over 240%—from $33,896,871 to $115,488,617.

—During these seventeen years, the number of Alabama's wage earners has increased about 67%—from 76,717 to 131,807.

In Alabama's astonishing industrial development Alabama Power Company is happy to believe that it has had some share—

—By furnishing to Alabama industries and homes an ample and dependable supply of low cost power.

—By nationally advertising Alabama resources and advantages to the outside world.

—By the work of its New Industries Division in presenting Alabama's opportunities to new enterprises.

Alabama's future development and that of Alabama Power Company follow parallel paths of progress. Hand in hand, both will go forward!

MISS VONIE MORTON AND MR. J. B. MARTIN ARE MARRIED

Miss Vonie Morton of Newton became the bride of Mr. J. B. Martin, of Enterprise on Tuesday of last week at an impressive home ceremony. Miss Morton will be remembered by many of her friends in Clanton and Thorsby as she taught school in Thorsby for a number of years, several years ago. Mr. Martin is a prominent merchant and planter of Enterprise, Alabama.

REV. M. LOCKHART AND FAMILY HAVE MOVED TO THORSBY, ALA.

The Rev. M. Lockhart has moved his family to Thorsby, Ala., where he will enter the Thorsby Institute as a Sophomore this year. Rev. Lockhart will be in a position to serve the churches in the county as pastor or supply pastor, according to information received by a representative of the News from Rev. J. W. Jones of Thorsby.

Rev. Lockhart has already been called by the Maplesville church as pastor for another year.

After a five-hour search, Joe Bridlee, an old field worker in Maud, Oklahoma, was found sitting on a log singing "Coming Through the Rye," after traveling three miles while walking in his sleep.

Rev. S. H. Seibel, a Congregational minister of London, resigned after being defeated in his campaign against card-playing by members of his church.

NEWS FROM FORT McCLELLAN

A peace time army—3,000 officers and men of the Alabama National Guard—moves across the State Sunday from their homes to Fort McClellan, at Anniston, where they will coordinate their training activities for two weeks under supervision of Regular Army Officers.

By troop train, motor truck and airplane, they will move, the 3,000 men representing several branches of the machine guns, tank corps, engineers, service, including aviation, infantry, cavalrymen and others.

Every section of the State will be represented by National Guard units, with several going from Birmingham. Scenes reminiscent of World War days will be reenacted at railway stations as troop trains loaded with khaki clad men get under way and motor lorries rumble along the highways. The men and their equipment must be at Fort McClellan for an assembly and roll call Sunday afternoon.

Brigadier General J. C. Persons, commanding the 62nd, Infantry Brigade, will be commanding officer at the camp for which an intensive training program has been drafted.

Reports from Anniston state that every possible thing has been done to make the guardsmen's visit a pleasant one, with a number of social events and dances arranged for officers and men. It was also announced there that all misdemeanor cases that might arise against any guardsman would be left to military authorities for trial and disposition.

MISS BETTY BALDWIN HONORED IN UNION SPRINGS, ALA.

Dr. and Mrs. N. A. Staples, who recently moved from Clanton to Union Springs, had as their guests last week Miss Betty Baldwin, of Mount Creek, Ala.

Among the many delightful affairs prepared for the entertainment of the guest, the Staples were hosts at a luncheon at the Union Springs Armory. Miss Baldwin was furnished by the "Louisiana Travelers" with a "Louisiana Travelers" and a farewell dinner dance at Cedar Springs, near Clayton were other outstanding social events honoring Miss Baldwin.

For beating his mother-in-law with his wooden leg, Stephen Flood of Balfast was sent to prison for a month.

In her divorce suit, Mrs. Eleanor Rohrer of Chicago testified that all she wanted from her husband was to be "pie-crust promises"—easily broken.

News Named Among Outstanding Weeklies

Selection Of 12 Outstanding Weekly Papers Made At Press Meeting

SELECTION IS MADE BY ABLE NEWSPAPER MEN

At the annual three-day gathering of editors of Alabama which was held in Auburn last week end the selection of the twelve most outstanding weekly newspapers of Alabama was made, and the Chilton County News was called third from the top of the list.

The announcement was made at the annual banquet of the Alabama Press Association which was held in Smith Hall last Friday night. The selection of the All Alabama Twelve was made by a committee composed of able newspaper men of Alabama and some time was consumed in making the selection.

Some of the things taken under consideration by the committee in making the selection were the appearance of the front page, the interest and appearance of the editorial page, including the nature of editorials carried, the manner in which local news is covered and handled, general reader interest, advertising make-up and appearance, general make-up and presswork.

Following is the list of the All Alabama Twelve as it was announced at the banquet Friday night by Mr. F. W. Gist, Auburn statistician:

Florence Herald, Florence; Sylacauga News, Sylacauga; Chilton County News, Clanton; Mountain Eagle, Jasper; Roanoke Leader, Roanoke; Southern Democrat, Oneco; Alexander City Outlook, Alexander City; Brewton Standard, Brewton; Cullman Tribune, Cullman; Marion Times-Standard, Marion; Southern Star, Ozark, and The Greenville Advocate, Greenville.

Pupils are urged to bring their report cards or certificates of promotion. J. D. GRIFFIN, Principal.

SHERIFF AND FORCES HAVE A BUSY TIME LAST FEW DAYS

Sheriff J. D. Collins and his deputies have been having a pretty busy time lately having a pretty busy time with the arrests and calls they have had.

They were called to Stanton last Friday afternoon to look after Marion Chandler, who was intoxicated, it was stated. He was found with a quantity of liquor, brought to jail in Clanton and made bond on the following Saturday, the reports stated.

Last Monday morning the sheriff received a warrant for the arrest of Marion Chandler, of Stanton, the information stated, and when they found Chandler he was with George Huett, both of whom were brought to Clanton and at the time of this writing are still in jail here.

Monday about noon the sheriff received a warrant from Sylacauga for J. P. Traywick, who was wanted in Sylacauga. Traywick was found at the home of Sam Murphy. He was placed in jail here, according to the sheriff and officers from Sylacauga came over and carried him back with them.

Jim Jannings, negro, of southern part of the county was arrested on liquor charges, the information stated, and was brought to Clanton, placed in jail, later making bond.

HUBBARD GLASS KILLED WHEN SHOT MONDAY

Will Helton, 71, Surrenders
To Chief Of Police Here
Following Shooting

Hubbard Glass, age 60, well known farmer of Oak Grove, just north of Jemison, was shot and instantly killed last Monday afternoon at the home of Will Helton, on the Birmingham highway, about three o'clock.

Helton, whose age is given at 71, was brought to Clanton late Monday afternoon late, by his son-in-law, Truman Lockhart, former Montgomery policeman, where he surrendered to Chief of Police John Bookholdt. Helton was placed in the county jail here, and Chief Bookholdt stated that Helton told him he did the shooting, and that "it just had to be done." Helton is reported as saying that Glass came to his house and in an argument over the payment of rent, Glass grabbed him by the collar and reached in his pocket. Helton is also reported as saying that he believed Glass was going to pull out a gun, and that he drew his own gun and fired. Helton is said to rent land from Glass.

Coroner J. M. Martin stated that the bullet entered the body of Glass on the left side near the heart and that death was almost instantaneous, however, Glass staggered to the side of the road where he fell. Sheriff J. D. Collins stated that a .41 calibre pistol was used in the shooting. Glass is survived by his widow and nine children.

At the time of this writing, Helton is still held in jail here pending further investigation of the case, and his bond has not yet been set.

County Agent Stapp left this morning for Auburn where he will spend two days attending a conference of county agents. He expects to be back Saturday.

All-Day Singing At Pleasant Grove Sun.

There will be an all-day singing at the Pleasant Grove church on next Sunday, August 31, according to an announcement made last Monday. Pleasant Grove is located five miles west of Clanton on a good road.

All singers and lovers of music are cordially invited. Bring your dinner and prepare to stay all day. The United Singing Society is especially invited to attend. Let all who can come to this singing, and make it one of the best yet.

DEMOCRATIC GATHERING IS HELD TUESDAY

Jerome Fuller Leads Democracy
To Battle; W.C. Davis
Sounds Keynote

Montgomery, Alabama, August 27—Jerome T. Fuller, of Centreville, one of the leaders in Judge B. M. Miller's campaign for the gubernatorial nomination, was chosen yesterday by an embattled Democracy to direct the fight between now and November 4.

Mr. Fuller's selection as campaign manager through the adoption of a resolution, came towards the end of a meeting of the State Democratic Executive Committee in the Jefferson Davis Hotel that will go down in party history as a model of militancy and harmony.

Fired by a common cause and clear-cut issues, the Democracy of Alabama, through its leaders assembled here yesterday, pledged itself to fight harmoniously behind the standard bearers selected in the primary and reiterated its faith in the principle that to vote in the primary is to pledge one's honor to support the party's nominees.

From the convening of the executive committee meeting until its adjournment, a matter of three hours, there was not a suggestion of discord. There was manifest, on the other hand, a notable tendency on the part of the committee to act in unison and to present to the enemies of the Fall election an unbroken front. The resolution (continued to back page)

CITIZENS TAKE LAW INTO OWN HANDS; GET PRISONER

While a singing was in progress at Eastview, near here, last Sunday, John Williams, acted as if he wished to take control of everything and everybody there, according to information.

Several of the citizens at the singing overpowered Williams and brought him to Clanton and turned him over to the sheriff, who made this statement to a representative of this newspaper, "If we had more citizens like those in this county, things would probably take a different turn, and I think well of the manner in which they handled that case."

REV. T. J. DEASON TO PREACH AT THE FRIENDSHIP CHURCH

The Rev. T. J. Deason will preach at the Friendship church two miles north of Clanton on the Fifth Sunday night, which is next Sunday night, August 31, at seven-thirty o'clock. He will have as his subject, "Answering the Three Questions in the Third Verse of the 24th Chapter of Matthew."

Night Schools For Farmers Being Organized In Chilton County; Several Are In Session

C. E. Stapp, county agent, reports that splendid work is being done in the night schools that have been organized over the county during the past few days.

The schools are being organized and taught by the vocational teachers. Prof. J. P. Montgomery, of Jemison, has organized one at Minooka, on crops and soil building, and some very pleasing reports are coming from that school, it was stated. Prof. Montgomery is also organizing a night school at Mineral Springs community for instruction on

J. Wiley Littlejohn Goes To Maplesville Store

Mr. J. Wiley Littlejohn is to have charge of the Ideal Dry Goods Co. store in Maplesville, according to an announcement given the News this week. The Ideal Dry Goods Co., is owned by Messrs. Jesse Baker and O. D. DeLoach of Clanton, who also own and operate the Clanton Cash Store.

It was stated that Mr. Littlejohn will assume his duties as manager of the Maplesville store on September 1st. He is a man who is well and favorably known over the county, and was at one time in business in Clanton for himself several years ago. His knowledge of the dry goods business will be a credit to the Maplesville store and the owners of the store will have made no mistake in selecting Mr. Littlejohn to take charge of their store there.

The people of Maplesville and surrounding communities are invited to visit the Ideal Dry Goods Store and meet Mr. Littlejohn, and they are assured of a courteous welcome when visiting the store.

OVER 300 IN BIG PARADE OF OPP. SCHOOLS

Big Closing Rally Held Here
For Students and Teachers
Last Friday

Marking the closing of another successful term of Opportunity Schools in Chilton County, a big parade was staged in the business district of Clanton, by the students and teachers numbering over three hundred, last Friday morning.

The students and teachers of the Opportunity Schools from all over the county gathered at the Baptist church here Friday morning, where they formed the parade. The streets were blocked from traffic and turned over to the students for their parade and rally.

Following the parade they assembled in the auditorium of the courthouse where various programs were given by different schools, followed by short talks by B. Lawrence, superintendent of education, Percy M. Pitts, Judge Reynolds, and members of the county school board. The students were given an opportunity to express their opinions of the schools and a large number arose to testify in behalf of the schools, many of whom stated they were now able to read and write, where before the schools were taught they could do neither. All schools except the County Line were represented at this rally. The courthouse was crowded until there was only standing room left, and the whole day was a complete success, bringing with it much inspiration.

At the close of the meeting the students were served lunch by Mrs. Marion Smith, Mrs. Gertrude Calloway, Mrs. Gene Wyatt, and Mrs. Zeb Mims. The refreshments were furnished by the various friends of the schools.

The negro Opportunity Schools also staged a rally last Friday with L. C. Johnson, principal of the County Training School in charge. They met at the school in Clanton from where they paraded to the business district of the town, going back to the school where they were addressed by B. Lawrence, and members of the county school board. It was estimated there were (continued to back page)

MR. AND MRS. E. G. CALDWELL RETURN FROM FLORIDA TRIP

LEGIONAIRES WILL SPONSOR BASE BALL GAME

Local Post Will Also Enjoy
Barbecue; Ex-Service Men Invited

At a special meeting of the Chilton County Post of the American Legion held last Friday night at the courthouse here, plans were made to have a base ball game here next Thursday afternoon at the high school diamond. It was stated that the Clanton ball team will play against a team which has not yet been announced but it was assured that the game will be interesting from start to finish.

Among other things taken up at the special meeting, was to select a regular meeting night for the local post. It was decided to meet on the first and third Monday nights in each month until further notice.

A chicken barbecue is scheduled to take place at the old Reynolds's Swimming Pool on the Birmingham highway on Thursday afternoon, September 18. Each member of the local post is requested to bring two dressed fliers to Broadhead's Market not later than Thursday morning, September 11, so the person in charge of the barbecuing will receive them in time. Legionnaire Eugene Gore was appointed to look after the barbecuing, with E. W. Klinger, assisting. Each legionnaire may bring his wife, family and a friend.

Every ex-soldier in the county is invited to attend all the gatherings of the legion as named above.

The committee on entertainment which was named at the meeting Friday night includes J. H. Plier, J. W. Cox and A. L. Robinson. These legionnaires are sure to have something in store for the coming entertainments, according to V. C. McKee, Adjutant of Chilton County Post of the American Legion.

Drouth Aid Asked For Chilton County

Four Alabama leaders, Clyde Hendrix of Decatur, Dr. Bradford Knapp of Auburn, Edward A. O'Neal of Florence, and J. O. Thompson of Roba, are this week in Washington asking aid for drouth sufferers of this county along with those of all other counties of Alabama.

In a state-wide meeting of leaders in Montgomery last Saturday the Washington delegation was instructed to urge:

1. That the entire state of Alabama be included in the drouth relief program, as all counties have been more or less hard hit by dry weather.

2. That reduced freight rates now in effect on cattle and livestock be made to include seeds for winter legumes and cover crops in Alabama.

Dewey Williams, Alton and Eunice Murrah, Ottis Miller and Leila Belle Smith.

District Composed 22 Counties; Membership Campaign Planned In Near Future

CHILTON BUREAU WAS ORGANIZED IN 1928

Another reason why the people of Chilton County should be proud of their county is the fact that the Chilton County Farm Bureau is the strongest and most outstanding farm bureau in this district, which is composed of twenty-two counties.

The Chilton County Farm Bureau was organized in January, 1928, according to the records and since that time has built up a membership of approximately 325 members in the county who are all paid up and in good standing. Farmers from various parts of the county are coming in every week and becoming full fledged members of the local farm bureau, realizing the value of the organization in the county.

Since its organization, the Chilton County Farm Bureau has put on three active membership campaigns and expects to put on another in the very near future, it was stated, and it is expected that the next drive will bring its membership up to 500, judging from the success of other campaigns.

The officers of the Chilton County Farm Bureau are as follows: W. L. Popwell, president; T. F. Patterson, 1st vice president; Perry Gore, 2nd vice president; W. L. Parrish, secretary-treasurer. Directors are J. N. Dennis, W. L. Popwell, T. F. Patterson, H. G. Boyd, Perry Gore, H. R. Oden, W. L. Parrish, L. G. Posey, Ellis Mims, E. R. Piper, Judson Strock, J. L. Smith, and R. M. Foshee.

In 1929 the farm bureau rented the Popwell Building on Main street for its office quarters and have there on their payroll an assistant secretary, who is also paid by the bureau for stenographic work for the county agent, who was given office space in the farm bureau office, the information stated. Those counties making up this district of the Farm Bureau are Chilton, Randolph, Elmore, Shelby, Lee, Macon, Clay, Chambers, Tallapoosa, Covington, Coosa, Houston, Barbour, Talladega, Coffee, Dale, Pike, Bullock, Henry, Geneva, Russell and Crenshaw.

ICE CREAM SUPPER AT PLEASANT GROVE CHURCH

The News is in receipt of an announcement stating that there will be an ice cream supper at Pleasant Grove church, near Jemison, on Saturday night, August 30.

There will also be music and a number of interesting games. Everyone is invited to attend.

EDGAR-HAND WEDDING SOL- EMNIZED SUNDAY, AUG. 24TH

A marriage of interest throughout this county was that of Miss Gladys Elaine Hand to Mr. Orman R. Edgar, of Powderly.

The wedding was solemnized at the home of the bride's parents, near here, last Sunday, August 24. Dr. S. J. Ezell, pastor of the Clanton Baptist church performed the ceremony.

An improvised altar of Spring flowers and ferns, furnished the background for this impressive ring ceremony. The bride was given in marriage by her father, E. D. Hand. She was dressed in blueorgette, with hat and accessories to match, carrying a bouquet of American Beauty Roses. The wedding march was played by Miss Bertie Grant, who also sang, "I Love You Truly," softly during the ceremony.

Immediately after the ceremony, the bride and groom left for Montgomery, and later went to Birmingham, for a short wedding trip, after which they will be at their home in Powderly.

Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Lakeman have announced the arrival of a fine baby girl at their home at Lay Dale, on last Tuesday night. Both the mother and baby are doing nicely according to latest reports.

CHANGE MADE IN OWNERSHIP OF THE DIXIE CAFE HERE

A change in the ownership of The Dixie Cafe, popular eating place here, was announced last week, when Rudolph Moatts purchased the interest of L. D. Easterling.

The present management is now composed of Leonard Easterling and Rudolph Moatts. Mr. L. D. Easterling will, however, remain at the cafe for some time yet until the new management can take hold completely, it was stated.

Mr. Moatts is widely known over the county, having been connected with the market business here for a number of years.

Mrs. Adaline Morning Edde of Memphis, 90 years old, threw away her old pipe and smokes four cigarettes a day.

Frankly admitting that he liked jail life, Thomas Vercrees, a farmer living near Fremont, O., refused to pay a fine and was sent to jail for a month.

A Daily Cleansing Helps To Keep The Skin
Beautiful

WHILE most women cannot go to a beauty salon very often, none of us are too busy to set aside a few minutes each day for beauty care at home. There is nothing difficult or complicated about home beauty treatments, and for every mark that age or worry leaves on the face, there is a simple, but effective treatment you can give yourself with your own two hands. You will be surprised how quickly the skin responds to just a few minutes of regular daily care.

A clean skin, of course, is the only basis for any beauty treatment. Given this, and a pair of willing hands, only three toilet accessories are necessary to provide a refreshingly clear complexion. These are: a cleansing cream, plenty of tissues to remove the cream, and a skin tonic to tone and freshen the face.

For a simple yet effective cleansing spread a generous amount of cleansing cream up over the face and neck with your cushioned finger tips. Then, with cleansing tissues wrapped around both your hands, gently wipe away the cream.

To remove the last bit of cream and gently close the pores again, saturate a bit of cotton with skin tonic and wipe up over your face. This will gently guard against open pores, and will leave your skin feeling cool and refreshed—ready for whatever special treatment it may need.

Knapp Points Way To Better Agriculture

Auburn, Ala., Aug. 27.—Writing in a recent issue of The Cotton Trade Journal of New Orleans, Dr. Bradford Knapp, president of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute, Auburn, pointed out that better financing is the key to better agriculture, especially to the production of new cash crops and more livestock.

After many years of intensive study and observation, Dr. Knapp said: "I have come to the very deliberate conclusion that under our modern conditions generally a country does not develop much faster than the breadth of mind and the vision of its sources of credit, of its financial institution. The knowledge of the banker and the merchant and their vision of the agriculture of the section has a very important influence upon the breadth of the program and the range of the development of the agriculture of any section."

"The attitude of mind of the financing interest has a very distinct bearing upon the introduction of new industries and particularly with the matter of changes of practice in agriculture and the scope of our farming business. As a rule the banker and the merchant finance what they have seen and what they know and very naturally do not finance anything unless they regard it as a safe investment."

"If the financing interest of a section understand and know how to finance an agriculture with more than one source of income, that kind of agriculture will be developed. If the credit sources believe that it is not important to finance an agriculture except on the basis of an income from cotton, then cotton will remain in the main, it not the exclusive, source of income of the farmer so financed. It matters not how much agricultural forces may convince the farmer regarding the value of a better balanced system, if the credit sources are not also convinced, there will be little progress."

YOUR LIFE'S WORK

Have You Decided On Your Life's Work? Are You Prepared For It?

The Alabama School of Trades at Gadsden is willing and ready to help you prepare for the work that you are interested in.

The following courses are offered for the year of 1930-31:

1. General work.
2. Bricklaying.
3. Printing.
4. Practical Electricity.
5. Sheet Metal Work.
7. Auto Mechanics.
8. Drafting.

The aim and purpose of the Alabama School of Trades is to train men and boys in the theory and practice of the various mechanical trades and to prepare them to take their places in industries as trained workers rather than technical engineers. This school is supported by state funds.

The qualifications for admission are: The person must be 16 years of age or over (regardless of previous education) and must be able to present a recommendation from a reliable citizen as to character and dependability. The cost of board, room and laundry is $20.00 per month.

Opportunity will be afforded in the work of the school for a limited number of students to earn part or all of their living expenses. Students of previous trade experience will be afforded opportunity for cooperating with the industries of the community where they can earn the wages to which their work entitles them.

If you are interested and desire further information, write Mr. W. E. Patterson, Director Alabama School of Trades, Gadsden, Alabama. Phone No. 1506.

This is an opportunity that the boys of the county who are planning to follow some trade in life should take advantage of, for the school has a definite duty to perform in training the boys for their life's work.

PLANT WINTER LEGUMES FOR BETTER SOIL, BIGGER YIELDS

It is easy to see that most of our farms are not improving with age, but are getting poorer and less productive each year. As the land gets poorer it naturally follows that yields are less per acre and profits are less per farmer.

The Big Problem of farmers at this time is to improve the soil and decrease the cost of producing crops. To make a profit from growing corn it must be grown at a cost of 50 to 60 cents per bushel. Corn should be the basis for all live stock feeds. Profitable cotton must now be produced at a cost not exceeding 7 to 9 cents per pound. A bale per acre is the only chance to make a profit from cotton at prevailing prices.

The best way to decrease the cost of producing a crop is to increase the yield per acre. This can best and most cheaply be done by planting Austrian Winter Peas and Vetch this fall, letting them grow during the winter, turn them under next spring and plant corn and cotton.

Austrian Winter Peas And Vetch Will

1. Build up your soil by adding nitrogen and organic matter.
 2. Increase your corn yield 20 bushels per acre.
 3. Increase your yield of cotton 350 pounds of seed cotton per acre.
 4. Decrease your fertilizer bill next spring.
 5. Make you profits the second year.
 6. Make you Nitrogen while you are asleep, and while you are awake too.
- Austrian peas are now the best buy because they do not winter kill and because they grow faster than vetch and are ready to turn under earlier in the spring. They come in 100 pound bags and can be bought for about 9c per pound delivered at station, 100 pounds is enough to plant 3 acres. Drilling between the cotton and corn rows is perhaps the best method of planting, the middle buster, fertilizer knocker, "Gee Whiz" and disking are methods often used with satisfactory results.

Three Hot Weather Salads

By JOSEPH BOGGIA, Chef
The Plaza Hotel, New York City

THE salad is always welcome in hot weather, frequently serving as the piece de resistance of the meal. It is doubly welcome if it is prepared with the thoughtful care which every really good cook delights in devoting to a dish that can be made so appealing to the most jaded appetite.

In making the dressing, measure your ingredients accurately. Mix them thoroughly. Be sure that the completed mixture is cold and moist but with no excess liquid. Select crisp salad leaves, wash them in plenty of cold water, rinse them and dry them, allowing only a particle of moisture to remain in the crevices of the leaves. Be sure that the salad bowl and plates are thoroughly chilled.

Victorine Salad (individual) — Peel and slice off the top of a tomato. Scoop out the inside. Mix with one chopped olive, one-half teaspoon chopped onion, two teaspoons chopped celery, one teaspoon chopped green pepper, one-fourth teaspoon sugar, and two teaspoons mayonnaise. Return the mixture to the tomato. Set in lettuce leaves. Top with mayonnaise and sprinkle with minced parsley.

Salad Recourt—Pare and slice thin one medium-size cucumber. Cover with cold, salted water, and let stand in refrigerator for one hour. Thin a small cream cheese with four tablespoons cream, and add one-half teaspoon salt, one-eighth teaspoon pepper, one teaspoon powdered sugar, one-fourth teaspoon paprika and two tablespoons lemon juice. Drain and thoroughly dry the cucumber. Mix the slices in with the dressing. Spread over lettuce leaves which have been arranged on the salad plates. Slice thin six kumquats or a green pepper and scatter over the salad.

Harlequin Dressing—Serve with asparagus, tomato, or plain lettuce. Mix together one-half cup salad oil, five tablespoons vinegar, one-half teaspoon powdered sugar, one teaspoon salt, two tablespoons pimenton, chopped fine, two tablespoons green peppers, chopped fine, one-half tablespoon finely chopped onion, and one-half tablespoon finely chopped parsley. Chill thoroughly in glass jar. Shake well just before serving.

Letter From Sam M. Edwards To Voters

Thorsby, Ala., Rt. 1.
August 23, 1930.

To the People of Chilton County:

Tekel! The Republican party is weighed in the balance and found wanting. John H. Bankhead said in a recent speech that the Republican party stood for the rich to get richer and the poor to get poorer. Let us see how that fits Chilton County. Republicans in the past eight years have had a few local laws passed in Chilton County. The new road law fixing the poor man's wages on the road at 78c per day. The wagon tag tax hitting the poor man only. Everyone with a 50c fee on them, going to the rich man. This summer they debarred the farmer's team from hauling gravel. If there ever was a time when the farmers needed a job it has been this summer, with this Republican panic we are having. Some of the above laws were so unpopular they eased them out after having a few law suits at the county's expense, and if I remember correctly, my opponent, Brother Mims, was a commissioner at the time those laws were made. Yet and still they come right back to the man they legislate against and tell him it will never do to let the party fall. You notice they keep the party in front of them all the time. Then comes the alms-house. I am not in favor of a poor house. I favor some system of old age pensions as a substitute for the poor house. The human dumping ground. Oh! What a horror it is to those who must trudge toward the sunset in life crippled from their battle in life in a poor house. The very word "poor house" has become the threatening symbol of one of humanity's greatest degradations. To many a despairing heart it comes with a sound like the crack of doom. It is the word of hate for it includes the composite horror of poverty, disgrace, loneliness, humiliation, abandonment and degeneration. How long will it be until public sentiment will insist upon the abandonment of the humiliating alms house system? Oh! Some one cries out, economy. There is something greater involved in this question. That is humanity. I am afraid we too often cast this important matter aside without due consideration. The Good Book tells us that the strong must bear the infirmities of the weak. I would like to hear from some one else on this subject.

In closing I desire to thank those who gave me their vote in the recent primary, although I had no opponent I feel it was a vote of confidence placed in me and I promise you here and now that that confidence shall not be destroyed by me if elected in November. Assuring you I will appreciate your continued support until we have won the battle in November.

Sincerely yours,
SAM M. EDWARDS.

HYDE APPORTIONS HIGHWAY FUNDS AS EMPLOYMENT AID

Secretary of Agriculture Hyde authorized the apportionment of the Federal funds for highway improvement in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1932. This will make it possible for the states to anticipate the Federal funds, which will be paid to them next July and will enable them to expand and advance their highway programs at once and so provide emergency employment for a considerable number of men who might otherwise be destitute as the result of crop failures.

Congress has appropriated $125,000,000 for the fiscal year which will begin July 1, 1931. After deduction of the 2-1-2 per cent allowed for administrative expense, Secretary Hyde was able to allot $121,875,000 to the several states and Hawaii. Because drought conditions are confined to only part of the states, and a balance of previous allotments remains unobligated to the credit of several of the States, Secretary Hyde will use his discretion as to the approval of projects and will expedite the approval of projects complying with the following conditions:

1. That the State has obligated and has under construction all or practically all of the Federal aid funds previously allotted.
2. That State funds be required for each project in an amount sufficient to meet the Federal aid funds on the legally established basis. This would not exclude the voluntary contributions of additional county or local funds but would require the State itself to provide a minimum amount equal to the Federal pro rate required, basically fifty per cent Federal funds.
3. That the State Highway Department submit with each project statement a reasonable showing that the project if expedited would assist in providing employment in the drought areas or would directly contribute to the relief of unemployment in a substantial way. The authority for exercise of administrative discretion in the approval of projects is found in various sections of the Federal highway legislation.

Peculiar Situation Confronts Farmer; He Must Do Something

It will be some time before the "frost is on the pumpkin" in Alabama, but it will be but a short time until the cotton fields will be white with the lint that makes the agricultural wheels go round. "Picking time" is a busy time on Alabama farms and it is almost here. Along with it comes corn pulling, and when the corn cribs are well filled and the cotton in the seed has been hauled to the gin, there is rejoicing for a time in rural homes down here.

This Fall, however, rural joy will be tempered by the knowledge that the cotton is not going to bring in enough money to more than pay the expense of production and the corn, in many communities, has been so curtailed in quantity by drouth that the higher price it is bringing will not help materially in meeting family expenses.

The situation is one that seems to call for serious consideration by the farmer and his wife. If cotton is not going to be worth its production and corn is too scarce to be of very great benefit, the farmer must face a serious problem. It is true that there is no threat of famine. There will not be any actual want in rural communities in Alabama, but something must be done to prevent a worse situation next year.

In cooperation many farmers who are members of the Farm Bureau are being aided over by securing loans on their cotton from the Bureau. Cooperative selling of cotton and other farm products also is proving a valuable aid to the farmer, but even these things can help only in a temporary way. What is needed is permanent relief.

The question of diversification of crops comes to the front naturally when conditions are as they now are. Dependence in cotton and corn will not bring substantial benefit to the planters. In good years and when prices are fair, it is very well to have cotton and corn as the main dependence, but there are many years when cotton is too low in price and corn either too cheap or too scarce to be a profitable crop. Then it is that the farmer should think of diversifying.

Would it be a very great help if Alabama farmers could produce goods and thus have their own meat, instead of depending on western packing houses? Would it be a help for farmers to have a few good dairies, thus be able to have a supply of milk? Would it be a help if farmers could produce vegetables, thus have through the year a supply of such things as tomatoes, beans, etc., instead of depending on the market?

It would be a great help if farmers could produce goods that bring in more money than cotton and corn. It would not be impossible to diversify, and it is being done. It usually is found that the farmer who does the best, get ahead of the others, is the one who diversifies. The bank most of the time are the ones that come and diversify their crops.

—Aniston Star.

Turner Tells Southern Farmers to Take Up Cattle and Dairying

Now is the time for the Southern states to turn to livestock and dairying. This is the advice of Roland Turner, agricultural agent of the Southern Railway, is giving to Southern farmers. Mr. Turner knows the South, is a Calhoun man, familiar with farming conditions not only in Alabama, but over the South generally, and his advice always is timely, conservative and practical.

Mr. Turner sees an opportunity now for the farmers of the South to add a very valuable unit to their farming industry through developing the cattle business and the introduction of modern dairying on Southern farms. "In this section," (the South) Mr. Turner says, "especially in the lower South, the production of forage and grain has not been reduced as in other sections."

Continuing, Mr. Turner said: "It is well known that when herds of either beef or dairy stock are depleted because of reduced crop production and poor pastures, years are required to work the industry back to normal. Conditions in other sections should encourage southern farmers to expand their livestock and dairying operations by purchasing breeding animals and especially by conserving their young females. The same is true with respect to sheep and hogs."

"Rising prices seem in prospect a year hence and southern beef cattle, hog and sheep growers will probably find a favorable market for stock they will be able to offer as a result of steps taken now to increase production. Dairy products will probably also be in greater demand at higher prices."

"Herds upon southern farms should be maintained and, where possible, increased. Every young animal, especially females, should be grown out and added to the producing herd. For years farm experts have insisted that the South's position would be materially improved by greater attention to dairying and the production of beef cattle, sheep, hogs and poultry. While encouraging progress has been made, present conditions offer opportunity for the most favorable advance along these lines."

Here is advice by one who knows, that farmers of Alabama especially should heed. Never before, perhaps, has the time been so opportune for Alabama farmers to engage in the cattle and dairying business on a profitable basis.

"ROUND TOWN"

—by Doug

Opinions expressed in this column by this writer have no connection with the general policies of this paper, being wholly those of the writer, in the manner they are written.

"Life consists of molting our illusions. We form creeds only to throw them away tomorrow. The eagle molts a feather because he is growing a better one."

—Elbert Hubbard.

Sorry, dear readers, that this column will not be devoted to the discussion of the fair and warmer sex this week. Don't wonder and ask why, because I'll tell you. There are some things going on round town that I must deal on this week.

For while the condition of the negroes congregating on the sidewalk at the railroad on Second Avenue, was slightly improved through the efforts of our officers, but judging from conditions of that nature there last Saturday night, something else should be done about it now. I was an eye witness to a scene there which made my Southern blood boil. Two white women had a terrible time trying to get through the crowd of negroes who had the sidewalk almost blocked, and what were they doing—absolutely nothing except standing there talking, and I even noticed several of them watch the women coming toward them, and then they failed to move, just stood there allowing the white women to walk around them. That was enough to make any true Southern man get his fighting mettle up. If I was the only one who is noticing and talking about this, it would perhaps be different, but there are others with the same opinion as I have.

That young preacher, Dorsey Ellis, who occupies the Presbyterian pulpit here, gets my recommendation after a careful study of the young fellow. He delivered a good sermon at the Methodist church two Sundays ago, and did the same thing at the Baptist church last Sunday night. The people of Clanton should turn out in large crowds to hear Dorsey. He is a new comer here, and although some of the people of Clanton appear to be so wrapped up in themselves and what they think they are, they could at least put themselves out enough to extend to new comers to our town a good hand.

No wonder the people who come here, without having friends here beforehand, have the impression that the people of Clanton are of a most unfriendly type. No wonder a certain pastor who once served here, stated to me that it was very hard for preachers to come to Clanton and try to do something—the people here were not friendly and courteous to the new comers to the town. No wonder a certain lady was very upset the other day while talking to me. She asked me direct, "What is the matter with the people of Clanton?" To that question I found it difficult to reply, but before leaving her, I think she was slightly cheered up a bit. She has recently come here to make her home. No wonder a certain gentleman from Birmingham came to Clanton and was surprised to find a lack of courtesy here from Clantonians. To the people of Clanton I will say—this condition is entirely your fault, and no one but yourselves can remedy it. So from now on, let's try to be friendly to everyone who comes into our midst to make their home. And to new comers, I will say—just get in the fight and be hard boiled too, then you will become accustomed to the atmosphere here, until something can be done.

I've got a gripe on this week, and don't mind telling some folks what's wrong, so don't think I say this way always. I still remember a certain young lady here who once called me a "cynic."

Many thanks to those who were so kind and generous with their compliments and pleasing remarks about this column last week.

Now, folks, the Editor has informed me that the C. G. N. (Clanton's Greatest Newspaper) has been named as one of the twelve most outstanding weekly newspapers in Alabama, having been listed third from the top by a committee of men who know their ink-worms when it comes to newspapers. And now it is listed as one of the "All Alabama Twelve," and brought to Chilton County this honor, an honor never before brought to this county. I believe.

Now I got another kick coming—the people here are so blamed modest that they will not send any news to the local papers about them visiting off anywhere or about any visitors they have, and then have the nerve to get sore with the Editors because it wasn't in the paper. What I want to know is how the dickens do you expect the newspapers to know who your visitor is, or that you have been off, unless you tell them, or have someone else tell them? I'll admit newspapers are supposed to know and find out a lot, but you don't have to get mad cause they don't say you have been visiting off somewhere, and you don't use your telephone to tell them. Do you expect the reporters to come to see you and plead with you to tell them something like that? Well, if you do, you're all wet. Use your telephone, because I am sure the Editors are always tickled pink to get a bit of news that way—and no kidding.

Had a very important letter from my friend Dooker Pooker this week about the wimmin, and am sorry I am unable to publish it this week, but will pass it on next week, unless somebody raises a row with me this week end, then I will have to use some more of this column next week to tell them another thing or two. Life, in itself is a funny thing. A person can use it and make it what they wish. It can be a soft bed of roses, minus the smell, but the person who makes it that, never accomplishes anything, and on the other hand those who are endeavoring to accomplish something for themselves and their fellowmen, get all the cussings, criticisms and the bricks, and usually in the long run and final showdown, get the roses with the odor. So, if anyone wishes to get sore with me because I am trying to tell them something for their good, can just bear that in mind, and then get busy themselves and go to raising sand about something, but should always try to do something good along with it. Already we have too many persons here who are ready to criticize and raise sand about something, but don't try to better things, always leaving that for someone else to do. We don't need any more folks like that. What we need is more people to do things and do them right. Ain't I right?

Another Chance

How often when we come out of a stiff encounter with life and know that we are not winners, we pray for another chance. Youth goes forth in all its courage to meet life with unbounded zest and when the fight grows bitter and hard looks back sometimes and wishes that more preparation had been made.

Last Friday morning when the Opportunity School parade was passing by it was impressed upon our minds that these people were getting another chance to prepare for life. It has ever been the rule of life that the first days or years be set aside primarily for preparation to meet the long period of struggle ahead. Often times the young are headstrong and rush into the thick of things without due preparation. But ere long they realize their need of better tools to till the soil of life, and long for another chance. But as those gray hairs, and lined faces and toil worn hands passed by last Friday, they spoke eloquently of those dark days of reconstruction in our beloved Southland when young men and women were thrown into the battle for recovering our land from the devastating experience through which it had passed, not by choice but from necessity. No doubt then as now, youth was impetuous and headstrong, but there was little opportunity for preparation and those stout hearts forced their way back to better conditions that their children might have an opportunity to prepare for life. It is well and fitting that our county and state give them another chance at the things which education has in store for men and women.

But there is still another side to this situation. Boys and girls who are in the preparatory stage would do well to profit by the action of these noble men and women who have grasped their chance to develop even in their later years. They have tasted life and tried it without book learning, and the fact that they are eager to get another opportunity to go to school speaks volumes for the value of education. We would plead with the younger generation to use their advantages well, that when they come to face the stern reality of life they may have those things for which these men and women of our Opportunity schools have felt the need.

Ten-Day Period Of Local Rains Improves Alabama Crop Outlook

By P. O. DAVIS

Auburn, Ala., Aug. 24.—An improved condition and better outlook of Alabama crops is reported by the county demonstration agents of Alabama as a result of the rains over the last 10 days. Although there are dry areas remaining, most of the state was covered with fairly good seasons and corn and

When A CLEANSING MEDICINE Is Needed

"I HAVE taken Black-Draught all my life, whenever in need of a medicine for constipation," says Mrs. G. C. Burns, of Buna, Texas. "My mother and father used it in their home for years, and I was raised to think of it as the first thing if I had a headache or was constipated."

"At one time I had indigestion real bad. I was all out of sorts; my skin was sallow, and I had gas pains. After a course of Black-Draught, I got all right. I have given Black-Draught to my children, whenever they needed a medicine of the kind."

C. B. Cox Has Message For Voters Of County

Below we publish a letter received from Mr. C. B. Cox who was nominated in the Democratic Primary August 12 for the office of Tax Collector of Chilton County:

Editor Chilton County News, Clanton, Alabama.

Dear Sir:

Will you kindly say, for me, to the voters of Chilton County, that, owing to the fact that I am under an agreement with the State to do certain road paving, I will be unable to enter actively into the campaign for election to the office of Tax Collector until after the first day of October. At which time I will give my entire time and attention to the cause and will do every thing that lies within my power, that is fair, to win the election.

Say also, to the voters, to pay no attention to rumors contrary to the above. I thoroughly appreciate the nomination and realize the responsibility that goes with it, and after the first of October shall do all that lies within my power to discharge the duty that I owe to those who placed me in nomination.

Yours very truly,
C. B. COX.

THINK THIS OVER

Before the first month of the new fiscal year has passed it will be necessary for all departments of the Government to hear down on expenditures if the Treasury is to make ends meet and a tax increase is to be avoided, according to an article in the Baltimore Sun.

This is due to two facts: The last session of Congress heavily increased appropriations for 1931, as compared to 1930, and business having gone off in all directions, Federal income for the current year will be sadly diminished.

This condition should be a warning to public officials and private citizens alike that this is no time to load the government with a multiplicity of new laws, new boards, new commissions and new government functions which require large amounts of tax funds or bond issues.

We all talk about reducing taxes. We now have a chance to show how much we will aid in securing reduction by favoring policies which tend to conserve, rather than dissipate public funds and resources.

We cannot expect to load the government up with all manner of costly experiments and then have a small tax bill. Think this over. The answer will be reflected in your incoming tax statements.

THEORY AND PRACTICE

It is mighty fine to know a lot, but it is even better to be able to do things. Many persons who have at their command a considerable assortment of information are unable to put it to very much practical use.

This was neatly illustrated in a sort of "confession" article by a teacher, in a recent periodical. She said:

"I can solve a quadratic equation, but I cannot keep my bank account straight."

"I can name the Kings of England since the War of the Roses, but I do not know the qualifications of the candidates in the coming election."

"I know the economic theories of Malthus and Adam Smith, but I can not live within my income."

"I can explain the principle of hydraulics, but I can not fix a leak in the kitchen faucet."

"I have studied the psychology of James and Titchener, but I cannot control my own temper."

"I can conjugate Latin verbs, but I cannot write legibly."

While this picture may be somewhat overdrawn, it serves to illustrate the futility of much that passes for education, when its acquisition is not accompanied by training which leads to its useful employment in everyday life.

Do You Ever Stop to Think

EDSON R. WAITE

Gordon K. Bush, Publisher of the Athen (Ohio) Messenger, says:

"The problem of encouraging the people of any community to buy at home is really a problem of discouraging the members of that community from making excessive purchases away from home. People automatically and naturally buy where they are. When a too great section of the home purchasing power is being expended in nearby cities, it is the result of two things:

"First, that the local retailers do not, or cannot, furnish a sufficient variety for selection to please certain classes of the public, and that they make no unusual attempts to correct that weakness on their own part.

"Second, that the man objects but he makes no acceptable pleas to the woman of the home to exhaust every local possibility for satisfaction of her wants before seeking elsewhere.

"This resolves the need to one of individual family discussion, decision and action, and an obligation for betterment on the part of the local retailer.

"There is, of course, a limit to the extent to which either side of this problem may be influenced. Family propaganda depends entirely upon the extent to which each man in the community takes it upon himself to discourage buying away from home. It is unchangeable by public propaganda, because such deals with the result instead of the cause. On the other hand, a better collection of stock and better merchandising with better advertising would go a long way toward normal, quiet manipulation of the public mind in the direction desired.

"When a sufficient number of business organizations and individuals recognize that the best way to handle all problems of competition is to first set one's own house in order and then make sure that the public knows it is in order and always finds it so, the sooner we will cease to hear the ineffective clamor against the many new forms of competition."

That a whole lot of careless automobile drivers should remember that they are to use their heads and what is supposed to be in them.

They should keep in mind that public highways are not for their exclusive use. Other people have rights the same as they.

The horn of their car is put there for a purpose.

They should not sit up behind people and try to pass them without tooting their horn. They should use it whenever the occasion demands it.

Sombody is always likely to drive into their path from side streets or roads.

They should always be on the outlook for the unexpected. The unexpected is always the thing they should expect.

Serious attention should always be given to the driving of a car.

It doesn't pay to be sorry after it happens. They should see that it does not happen—then they won't be sorry.

A great majority of the accidents that mar the pleasure of motoring can be laid at the door of careless drivers who imagine they can keep their minds on other things and still be competent to operate the machine safely and sanely while so doing.

Because she stole her employer's trousers and wore them to a masquerade, Miss Emma Fay of St. Louis was sent to jail.

MISS ETHEL SMOOT OF WETUMPKA VISITS FRIENDS HERE

Miss Ethel Smoot, charming young daughter of Judge and Mrs. George Smoot, of Wetumpka, has been spending several days in Clanton as the guest of friends. Following is an account of entertainments given in honor of little Miss Smoot:

One of the most enjoyable of the many lovely parties given in honor of Miss Ethel Smoot of Wetumpka, who was the house guest of Miss Celia Gerald, was the swimming party given by Mary Courtney Jones to a large party of congenial young people of Thursday afternoon at the swimming pond.

After the swim a delicious melon feast was enjoyed by the following: Celia Gerald, Lawrence Gerald, Leroy Horn, Dan Smith, Mary Elizabeth Smith, John Exell, Hal Broadhead, Hick en Moore, Hilda Hart, Mildred Pipes, Ann Callen, Billy Callen, Flem Higgins, Jane Roberts, Helen Roberts, Paul Ray.

Mrs. Hugh Jones assisted her daughter, Mary Courtney Jones, in entertaining at a delightful porch party on Friday afternoon. Twelve of the junior bridge players, complimenting Miss Ethel Smoot of Wetumpka, and Miss Sara Hollis of Mitchell Dam.

The porch was lovely with ferns, hanging baskets, and garden flowers. The score cards harmonized. After a series of games, a delightful salad course was served to the following: Ethel Smoot, Sara Hollis, Helen Moore, Marguerite Martin, Elizabeth McSwain, Hilda Hart, Frances Davis, Eloise Rasmussen, Elizabeth Lawrence, Celia Gerald, Dixie Johnson, Mary Courtney Jones, and Ruth Gowan was a tea guest.

Norman Childs, Wesley Danforth, Alex Hayes, Sara Hollis, and others, also Mrs. Roberts, Mrs. Flem Higgins, Mrs. Callen, Mrs. Hugh Jones and Mrs. Horn, Miss Sara Hollis of Mitchell Dam, Miss Mildred Pipes of Bethlehem, Pa., and Master Paul Ray of Montgomery, Ala., also shared honors with Miss Smoot in this delightful courtesy.

Decline in American Foreign Trade Reaches $1,997,794,575 So far This Year

Washington, August 28.—American foreign trade continues to decline at the rate of over two billion dollars a year, according to the figures just made public by the Department of Commerce, for the six months ending June 30 last.

The falling off in exports for the last six months was $547,149,277 and the decline in imports was $550,645,298, a total decrease in American foreign trade of $1,097,794,575, as compared with the same period of 1929.

For the month of June there was a decrease in exports of $98,089,224 and of imports $103,315,471, as compared with June, 1929.

Our trade with Canada, which country continues to be our best customer, shows for June dropped from $80,483,894 to $59,715,152—a loss of $30,768,742, while our imports from Canada declined from $44,315,288 to $36,503,217, a drop of $7,812,071, as compared with June, 1929.

For South America, usually regarded as one of the best markets for trade expansion, exports for June declined $22,050,316 and imports dropped $15,195,987, compared with the corresponding month last year, with the heaviest declines in purchases from this country by Argentina and Brazil. Australia and Italy also show relatively heavy declines in purchases from America.

The one country that makes a favorable showing on American trade is Soviet Russia, to which country exports from America increased a million and a quarter dollars for June, while for the six months period they increased $42,357,354, with imports only slightly changed.

While some of the decline in American foreign trade is attributed to decline in commodity values, following the collapse of the inflated Coolidge-Mellon-Hoover stock market, it is also attributed in part to the growing tariff barriers in foreign countries and the resentment against the Grundy tariff.

In response to President Hoover's belated plea to cut expenditures after the appropriations requested by him have been made, Naval officials are reported to be considering a plan to save on fuel, and to restrict target practice. Why not restrict the target practice of Senator Fess, Leader Watson and the Cabinet broadcasters? They are not hitting anything.

Former Head of Agricultural Economics Criticizes Administration Policies

Washington, Aug. 28.—Dr. H. C. Taylor, former head of the Federal Bureau of Agricultural Economics, speaking at the Institute of Public Affairs held at the University of Virginia, recalled an almost forgotten statute—the Sherman Anti-Trust Act—as applicable to a solution of some present day problems.

The Sherman Anti-Trust Act, it is recalled, penalizes all activities in restraint of trade, and he asserts that certain activities of the Department of Commerce, of which that Department is rather boastful, are at variance with the Anti-Trust statute.

The agricultural situation, he said, results from the placid acceptance of the false philosophy that "if business prospers all will prosper." Thus, he said, the Department of Commerce has actually gone out of its way to promote trade organizations limiting price-slashing competition within trades as "bad business." The farmers, unorganized and probably unorganizable, have gone down in the face of organized industry which dictates the prices they shall pay while the prices they receive are regulated by the law of supply and demand.

"If those laws which relate to competition and price were administered in an effective manner," he continued, and certain special privilege legislation repealed, little more could be asked by American farmers.

"This new regime of limited competition has not only come into existence without Congressional provision or sanction, but unknown to the rank and file of the people."

"When the Chairman of the Farm Board indicated the desirability of a 25 per cent cut in wheat production in the United States as a means of making the tariff on wheat effective and thus advancing the price he was speaking in harmony with the policy which is generally promulgated by the administration, but which has no possible chance for success in agriculture under the present law."

Dr. Taylor proposed four measures for agricultural relief:

1. Restore competitive prices in the so-called competitive industries by making the Sherman Anti-Trust law effective.

2. Revivify the Federal Trade Commission.

3. Suspend that part of the work of the Department of Commerce which promotes the organization of manufacturing and trade groups for the more effective limitation of competition.

4. Fix reasonable prices in fields where monopolistic control is inevitable by making public utility commissions effective in establishing fair rates on a basis equally fair to stockholders and consuming public.

The Legg-Hyde Combination which is still barnstorming around the country in behalf of reduced acreage to eliminate the surplus of wheat is rapidly accumulating a surplus of brickbats.

Referred to Secretary Lamont—

There was a decrease in the number of railway employees in June of 9.9 per cent compared with June, 1929, according to the Interstate Commerce Commission, and about 8,000 men less than in April this year.

Certainly no man can lead the thought of the country who isn't both willing and able to lead the thought of his party.—Jouett Shouse.

CAPPER MEDALS TO TWO BEST GIRL CANNERS IN COUNTRY

Special awards by Senator Arthur Capper, of silver and bronze medals to the two 4-H club girls who enter Chilton County's best jars of home canned fruits, vegetables and meats in the National Canning Contest at Shenandoah, Iowa, is announced in a message to the News from Shenandoah, Iowa, where the contest is being held under the auspices of the Household Science Institute.

Senator Capper, long a friend of the 4-H clubs and a member of the National Committee on Boys' and Girls' Club Work, in making the awards said that he hoped these awards would serve to encourage home canning work among farm girls and that they would prove of value to 4-H club leaders and extension workers in furthering this work.

The Capper medals are in addition to the list of 470 prizes totaling $4,250 in cash, loving cups and ribbons which will be distributed to the winners in the contest. The grand sweepstakes award of the contest carries with it a cash prize of six hundred dollars.

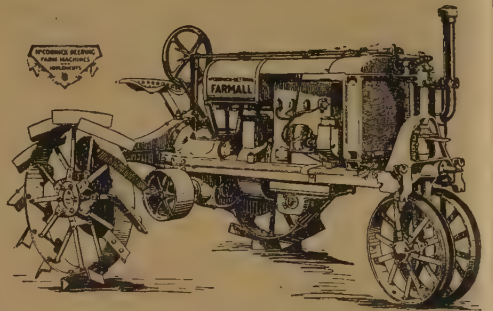

The contest is open to every woman and girl, here are no restrictions as to the nature of the food sent. Contestants may enter the fruit, vegetable or sent immediately upon canning. These meat division, any two of these divisions, or all three. Entries should be will be kept on exhibition at Shenandoah till the closing of the contest on October 1.

The list of contest judges includes five of America's outstanding home economics experts and nutrition authorities, headed by Dr. Louise Stanley, Chief of the Bureau of Home Economics, U. S. Department of Agriculture. That the judging may be thoroughly impartial and the display of jars absolutely uniform, contestants are required to send their entries in standard glass jars of the quart size. A sample Ball mason jar and carton, together with prize entry labels and full information for entering may be had without cost by writing the National Canning Contest, Shenandoah, Iowa.

Any "preferred method" of canning may be used although it has been found that the hot pack method together with the use of a pressure cooker for the sterilizing is best, especially for non-acid vegetables, states Grace Vial Gray, national known canning expert who is secretary of the contest. This method of canning is recommended by the U. S. Department of Agriculture because it saves time and fuel and assures sterility, while preserving the natural flavor, color, and texture.

Budgeting Calories - Jane Rogers

Preserving Time Gives Thrifty Housewife
Chance to Store Up Calorie Reserve for Winter Months

WITH fresh fruits abundant and inexpensive, and sugar selling at an almost pre-war price level, the thrifty housewife has an excellent opportunity to reduce future expenses by preserving generous quantities of jams and jellies.

Peaches, plums, apples and other fruits, and an almost inexhaustible variety of berries, can be purchased in quantity and turned into delicious bits to be stored away against the long winter days.

This, to the housewife who keeps one eye on the family budget, means a distinct saving, for these delicacies, so necessary to round out heavy, winter meals, come high when purchased from the store.

Their place in the winter diet is universally recognized. The tart jellies such as apple, plum and grape, are particularly tasty when served with the meat course, while the sweeter ones such as blackberry or strawberry can be used with hot biscuits or toast for breakfast, or French cran cheese as a simple but exceedingly popular dessert.

They have a high calorie value, too, which makes them an important part of the diet. The fruits are rich in vitamins and minerals needed for perfect health, and the sugar is a high energy food that will also supply needed internal warmth during the cold days of winter. There is another use for jellies and jams that must appeal to the thrifty housewife. After preserving enough to satisfy the family needs, fancy shaped glasses and jars can be purchased at a small cost, filled, and nicely labeled. The approach of the Christmas holidays always offers little problems in the form of small gifts to friends and acquaintances. Two, three or even a half dozen of these attractive, clear, sparkling jars, can then be taken from the shelf and turned into an economical gift that is certain to please the recipient.

LETTER OF THANKS FROM R. B. (BOB) VAIL

Just a word of thanks from an "also ran"! I appreciate tremendously the support accorded me in my unsuccessful campaign for the Democratic nomination for Secretary of State. I'm "licked" but not embittered, there are lots of things worse than losing a political race. I appreciate the friendships I was privileged to make, the many pleasant incidents of the campaign and the fine way in which the folks with whom I came in personal contact, treated me and my candidacy. Thanks, many thanks to them all.

The campaign was a pleasant one. I learned my state and my people in a way I could never have done otherwise and though defeated, I am the gainer; I'll be a better editor and a better citizen for having had the experience of campaigning in Alabama.

My successful opponent, Mr. Pete B. Jarman, Jr., is a fine young man, able and popular and will make a splendid official. He made a magnificent race, a handily and has my unqualified support in the general election.

Now let's all of us get busy and return the Democratic nominees winners in the November election. The great Democratic party is Alabama's party---the South's party---those other political floundering bunches have no place in Alabama's scheme of things. Alabama is democratic, we hope she always will be.

Again thanks to my friends,
R. B. (Bob) Vail,
Bay Minette, Ala.

BIG MEN NOT WANTED

It may sound cynical, but it is a fact that the really capable men of the country are becoming extremely shy of politics and political jobs. Whenever a man who has made a success in life is proposed as a candidate for either election or appointment, he is immediately pounced upon by the demagogues and hounded without mercy.

The situation was sized up some time ago by Will Rogers, who with his characteristic keen insight said of presidential appointments: "Big men won't take them, for they won't take a chance on a Senate insult. If he has ever earned more than a Senator, he is in league with big business. If he ever drove a Standard Oil truck or was a bookkeeper in a Morgan bank he is in league with monopolies. If he is rich he is in league with the devil. But if he has never done anything and has been a financial failure at that, he will pass the Senate as a brother."

While these are the words of a humorist, they are literally true. The United States Senate has degenerated into a body of mediocre men, who delight in attacking their more able fellow citizens who happen to be proposed for high appointive office. The Congress has supplanted democracy, in the United States Senate.

Although Caroline Jones of St. Louis testified that her husband had not spoken to her for four years, she was refused a separation order.

News In Brief

Out of every $56 lost from fires in the United States each year $15 is money from the farm.

Prospects for good fruit yields are bright in the Northeast and Far West. In southern and central states yields are expected to be very light.

The Alabama Polytechnic Institute, Auburn, is building a strong graduate school under the direction of Dr. Geo. Petrie, dean and also head professor of history. During the summer session just closed 244 graduate students were enrolled and 14 of them received the degree of master of science.

A comfortable mattress is essential to complete rest at night and Miss Lois Dowdle of the Southern Ruralist suggests a new and comfortable mattress campaign for better rest at night and to reduce the surplus of cotton. She said that six hours sleep on a good mattress equals eight hours on a poor mattress.

Even at present prices farmers can make money producing cream, says J. H. McLain of the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington. At a recent meeting at Auburn he urged Alabama farmers to make dairying part of their farming by combining cows with cotton and other crops, as well as other livestock.

The 1930 drought in the United States is the most severe in over 50 years. According to J. D. Pope, farm economist of the Alabama Experiment Station at Auburn. The drought extends from north Alabama to the Great Lakes and from West Alabama through Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas, and Oklahoma to parts of Texas.

Winter Feed Crops

Approved By Auburn

Auburn, Ala., Aug. 27---In view of the shortage in feed crops caused by the summer drought the Extension Service and Experiment Station of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute, Auburn, are offering suggestions concerning fall planting of crops for feed and pasture.

For farmers living south of Birmingham, Prof. D. G. Sturkie and J. C. Lowery recommend planting, between September 15 and October 15, a mixture of one bushel of oats (either Fulghum or red rust proof) and 20 pounds of either hairy vetch or Austrian peas. Farmers living north of Birmingham should plant one bushel of Alabama bluestem wheat instead of oats because of the danger of winter-killing of oats in that section.

As a fertilizer for either of these mixtures they recommend 600 pounds of basic slag when planting. One hundred to 200 pounds per acre of either nitrate of soda or nitrate of lime should be applied as a top-dressing the first week in March.

Either of these mixtures should make a good crop of hay. It should be mowed when the oats or wheat are in the milk stage.

If pastures are wanted during the fall and winter rye is recommended. It should be planted early in the fall. Oats, wheat, and winter legumes will produce pasture but they should not be grazed close if they are to make hay in the spring.

Now Is The Time

To Re-Queen Bees

During the months of August and September is the best time to requeen bees. The most important step in the management of bees is to keep every colony headed by a young, thrifty queen. Queens can be had at such a reasonable price now that every colony of bees in Alabama should be requeened during the next few weeks.

Alabama Queen Breeders: For your information I would like to suggest that good Italian queens can be had from any of the following breeders: J. M. Cutts & Son, Montgomery, Ala.; W. E. Harrell, Hayneville, Ala.; Jasper Knight, Hayneville, Ala.; Citronelle Apiary Co., Citronelle, Ala.; M. C. Berry, Montgomery, Ala. There are many other good breeders in the state and if you happen to live near one of them of course buy your queens from him.

Order only Select Untested Queens. Do not order more than three or four queens at one time. See the July issue of the Bee News Letter on how to requeen.

Very truly yours,
WINFORD A. RUFFIN,
Collaborator, Ex. Entomologist.

Eyes Tired? A Lotion
Will Soothe And Rest Them

SOMEONE once said "the eyes are the windows of the soul." But I should like to have you think of them as the windows of a woman's beauty---for they are just that. Eyes reveal a woman's personality more than any other part of the face. Tired eyes always make a woman look tired, though she may have rouged her cheeks carefully to a natural glow, and put on her most attractive frock. But if you get enough sleep, and keep your health up to par, your eyes usually will be bright and clear. If they still seem dull, however, here is a simple, easy remedy: Use a good eye lotion at least once a day without fail. This will take away any small bits of dust or grime that may have lodged in your eyes, and will leave them clear, brilliant and soothed. And you will find it makes a great improvement in your appearance if you use an eye lotion before going out to a party.

Always remember to apply a tiny bit of tissue cream or skin food to your eyelids before you powder and rouge your face. Wipe off most of this cream, but leave on enough of it to give your eyelids a soft, rather moist look.

The result is far from artificial---it is exactly the way your eyes should look in their natural state. And if you are tired, the cream will take away that hard, drawn look from around your eyes.

Perhaps you have noticed unattractive little wrinkles forming around your eyes. Unless they appear with quite advanced age, these lines may be smoothed away very safely and easily. First, of course, your skin must be thoroughly cleansed with a good cleansing cream. Then apply either skin food or a tissue cream generously all around your eyes. If your skin is normal or inclined to be oily, use tissue cream. But if your skin is very dry, I recommend skin food.

Next, dip your middle and index fingers into muscle oil. You can feel how rich and stimulating this oil is the moment your fingers touch it. Then with gentle, rhythmic movements move your finger tips around and around your eyes. Begin at the bridge of your nose, and laying your index and middle fingers on each side of your nose, move your fingers upward, across your eyebrows, down across your temples, and lightly back across your cheeks to your nose again.

Repeat this movement at least ten times, and make it rhythmic, not jerky. The little lines will be smoothed away gradually, and if you are faithful in this treatment, they will not come back.

OUTSTANDING CITIZEN CHILTON COUNTY DIES

J. W. Patterson Passes at His Home in Poplar Springs Community Monday

Funeral services for J. W. Patterson, age 62, prominent farmer, were held yesterday at the Poplar Springs church, near here. Mr. Patterson died last Monday morning at his home in the Poplar Springs community following a short illness. The Rev. Mr. W. P. Lowery, of Thorsby, conducted the services, interment following in the Poplar Springs cemetery with Martin of Clanton in charge.

The deceased has been a resident of Chilton County his entire life, and has lived in the Poplar Springs community for over thirty years, where he has made for himself and his family a host of friends, reaching over the entire county, with his fair dealings, and interest in church work. He was a member of the Poplar Springs church. He was married some fifty odd years ago to Miss Emma Holmes, who survives him.

Surviving are the widow, eight sons, Edgar, of Tallassee; Henry of Clanton; Cleveland of Bessemer; William of Safe Harbor, Pa.; Ulysses of Tallassee; Tommie of Amherst, Va.; Dewey of Clanton; and D. of Clanton. Four daughters, Mrs. Lilla Hardy of Goodwater, Mrs. Mon Wyatt, of Clanton, Mrs. Augusta Ray of Coopers, and Mrs. Beulah DuBose of Birmingham, and several grandchildren.

named by S. P. Storrs, commissioner of Agriculture and Industries, who was unable to go to Washington because of other engagements. Those in Washington will report by telegram as soon as the conference ends as to how the drouth aid will be provided. If the conference ends in time the delegation will report in person at the meeting of county farm agents in Auburn Thursday and Friday of this week.

In the meantime the Extension Service and Experiment Station officials and Farm Bureau workers are advising farmers that "Quickest relief will come from heavy planting of winter cover crops such as wheat, oats, rye, and winter legumes."

They say that farmers south of Birmingham should plant for hay a mixture of oats with hairy vetch or Austrian winter peas. North of Birmingham wheat (Alabama blue stem) should replace oats.

For fall and winter grazing they recommend planting rye. It should be planted immediately if it is to supply grazing during the fall. Oats, wheat, and winter legumes may be grazed but grazing is detrimental to the production of hay.

Farmers are advised to advise with their county agents as to how and when to plant their winter cover crops. No time should be lost.

WOOL WITHOUT SHEEP

Among the amazing developments in the adaptation of new fibers to textile manufacturing is that of "artificial wool," derived from the ramie plant, grown principally in China, Japan and India. Apparently successful efforts are being made to grow the plant in America, especially in Florida, California and Louisiana.

It is said that the cost of this artificial wool is only about one-third as much as that of sheep's wool. It is admitted that the finished artificial product is not quite equal to the natural product, being less soft and pliable, also being somewhat coarser and less resilient. Yet, for many purposes it affords a very practical and less expensive substitute.

At present it is believed that the new fiber may be most effectively used in combination with natural wool in the production of suitings, blankets, carpets and similar products. But no one can predict what some process yet to be developed may accomplish.

It is recalled that a few years ago a group of scientific experimenters sought to refute the adage, "You can't make a silk purse out of a sow's ear." They obtained fibers from a sow's ear and really made a purse closely resembling silk. Perhaps we may yet have perfectly good wool without sheep.

Snuff-taking is said to be increasing in Czechoslovakia, where it will doubtless prove a great aid to pronunciation.

Democratic Gathering Is Held Tuesday, 26th

naming Mr. Fuller campaign chairman also provided for the setting up of the campaign machinery. The real impetus of the campaign was born in the committee meeting when primary candidates, successful and unsuccessful, arose to swear allegiance to the party and to offer their services in the campaign.

A roar of applause went up when W. C. Davis, lieutenant governor, and close runner-up in the race for the gubernatorial nomination, took the floor to re-pledge his fealty. The whole gathering got to its feet when Mr. Davis said, "I wanted to be Governor of Alabama, but failing that, I ask no greater privilege than to be permitted to fight for the election of him who was nominated."

In these simple and intensely sincere words Mr. Davis sounded the keynote of yesterday's great Democratic revival.

Judge Miller, nominee for governor, got a prolonged ovation when he was called before the committee. His views and his militancy were summed up in his declaration, "Let me tell you, boys, we've got a fight on our hands, and I like a fight."

The resolution under which the campaign will be set in motion was unanimously adopted as follows:

Campaign Resolution
"Be It Resolved by the State Democratic Executive Committee that for the purpose of conducting the Democratic campaign, Hon. Jerome T. Fuller be named chairman of the State Campaign Committee; that Hon. Edmund W. Pettus as chairman of this committee be authorized after consultation and conference with Hon. B. M. Miller, Democratic nominee for Governor, Hon. John H. Bankhead, Democratic nominee for Senator, and Hon. Hugh Merrill, Democratic nominee for Lieutenant-Governor, the only nominees of the party who have opposition and with these nominees and party leaders to name and appoint a campaign executive committee consisting of seven members, two of whom shall be Hon. Jerome T. Fuller, chairman of the State Campaign Committee, and Hon. Edmund W. Pettus, chairman of this committee, who shall also be chairman of the campaign executive committee, and said committee when so constituted shall have entire charge of the campaign, with full authority from this committee to conduct the campaign in such manner as they may deem best with the end in view of securing in November a harmonious, complete and overwhelming Democratic victory."

Those who will serve with Jerome T. Fuller, general campaign chairman and Mr. Pettus, are Borden Burr, of Birmingham; John D. McQueen, of Tuscaloosa; Frank Dominick of Birmingham; John Miller of Camden, nephew of Judge B. M. Miller, the gubernatorial nominee and Mrs. W. H. Mitchell, of Florence. Mr. Pettus will be chairman of the campaign executive committee which will include the five named above.

The executive committee has postponed definite plans for the campaign until a meeting which probably will be held in Birmingham Saturday. Mr. Pettus said.

At a conference of Democratic leaders last week it was tentatively decided to establish a campaign headquarters in Birmingham with an office in Montgomery.

It is amazing to see how much information may be accumulated by one who diligently seeks it.

The shrewd politician usually hops on the band wagon as soon as he is fairly convinced of its identity.

LOCAL HIGH SCHOOL READY FOR OPENING

Building Has Been Repaired; To Open Session At Nine
A. M. Monday

The Chilton County High School will throw open its doors next Monday morning, September 8, at nine o'clock to begin its sixteenth anniversary to welcome again the sons and daughters of Clanton and Chilton County.

The high school inspector from the State Department of Education visited the high school last week and passed favorably on all the work that has been done during this year in the way of repairing and repainting the building, in preparation for the opening Monday. Something like $1500 worth of new opera chairs have been installed in the auditorium of the school recently, and approximately $800 has been invested in a new roof for the building. This was put on not long ago. Approximately $500 has been expended for the repainting of the wood work on the interior and exterior of the building, according to Prof. L. G. Warr, principal of the school.

In addition to these improvements, the walls have been calcimined and plastered. It is urged by the principal that all students entering the high school this year, see that their fee is paid at the beginning, as a small debt is still overhanging and they are relying on the fees to take care of this. No student is really recognized as a member of the high school student body until he or she has paid the matriculation fee of five dollars for the first semester and five dollars for the second semester. This amount is due on the first day of each semester.

In a statement to this newspaper, Prof. Warr had the following to say in regard to the opening of the local high school:

"Nothing succeeds like success. This we all know is made possible by all working together towards a common end. We therefore cordially invite every parent to be with us at our opening exercises, and show your interest by speaking a favorable word where it will clinch. This is your school. The teachers are your servants or agents. Your presence will always be appreciated at any and all times. A program suitable to the occasion will be carried out. We take this time to again thank every one for their splendid cooperation towards our school in the past, and feel you are standing ready to help us this year."

TOM PARRISH BECOMES CONNECTED WITH A & P

Monday saw a new employee at the local store of The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company, in the person of Thomas Parrish, who is quite widely known over this county.

Mr. Parrish assumes the duties of a clerk at the local grocery store and stated that he desired to have his friends call in to see him at this location. Mr. Parrish will be remembered as operator of Parrish's, a dry goods store which was at one time among the popular stores in Clanton. The personnel of the A & P Store here is now composed of G. C. Armstrong as manager, and Thomas M. Parrish and Joe VanDerveer. Read the ad of the local Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company store elsewhere in this issue.

Mr. and Mrs. Jimmie Taylor are contemplating leaving some time this week to motor to points in Florida, returning the latter part of the week.

High Schools Will Open Monday Morning Sept. 8

Everything is in readiness for the opening of the various high schools in Chilton County on Monday morning, September 8th, according to B. Lawrence, superintendent of education.

Following is a list of the schools that will open on next Monday morning. All other schools of the county will open on October 8th, it was stated:

Chilton County High School, Clanton Grammar School, Verbena Elementary and High School, Thorsby High School, Jemison High School, Isabella High School, Maplesville High School, Stanton High School, Mitchell Dam and Lay Dam Schools.

All students intending entering these schools are requested to bring their promotion card with them, this is very important, and it was also stated advisable that no books should be purchased until a list is secured from the teachers.

DR. J. B. HOBBS TO SPEAK AT ISABELLA SCHOOL OPENING

Dr. J. B. Hobbs will speak at the opening exercises of the Isabella High School next Monday morning, September 8, at nine o'clock, according to an announcement made by Prof. J. D. Griffin, principal of the school.

All parents of the children attending the Isabella School are requested to be on hand promptly at the hour named to hear this fine speaker who is a deep thinker and a forceful speaker.

McSWAIN-JONES ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCED LAST SUNDAY

The following announcement appeared in the Birmingham News, of last Sunday, August 31:

"Mr. and Mrs. T. C. McSwain of Clanton announce the engagement of their daughter, Mary Lavina, to Horace C. Jones, the wedding to be an event of October."

Miss McSwain is a popular member of the young social set of Clanton. Mr. Jones is the son of Rev. and Mrs. J. W. Jones, of Thorsby, Alabama, and holds a responsible position with the V. J. Elmore store of this place.

NEGRO SHOTS ANOTHER LAST TUESDAY MORN

John Pressley Surrenders After Shooting Bell Hardaman Near Mulberry

John Pressley, negro, came in to Clanton last Tuesday morning and surrendered to Sheriff Collins, stating he had shot and killed Bell Hardaman, another negro, according to information given the News.

The account given the News stated that Hardaman went to Pressley's home, on the farm of D. O. Manning, early Tuesday morning and an argument was raised concerning a riding saddle, after which Hardaman was shot by Pressley. Pressley was placed in jail and will be held until given a preliminary hearing Friday before Justice of the Peace H. M. Simpson, it was stated.

Sheriff Collins stated that Pressley used a .44 caliber Winchester rifle in the shooting.

TWO CARS COLLIDE IN SOUTH CLANTON LAST SUNDAY P. M.

Two automobiles collided last Sunday afternoon in South Clanton, injuring Mrs. Tom Waldrup of Hanover, near Rockford, and shaking up several other occupants.

According to information given the News, the car in which Mrs. Waldrup was riding, was also occupied by Mr. and Mrs. J. T. McEwen of Rockford, who had been visiting Mrs. P. M. Moore, who resides in South Clanton, and had just entered the highway when a car said to have been driven by a Mr. Blaskengame, who was accompanied by Miss Mollie Hannon of Marbury, struck the McEwen car. The accident was reported to have been unavoidable.

Mrs. Waldrup received a gash on her head which necessitated several stitches and also received other minor cuts and bruises. After receiving medical attention from a Clanton doctor, the party continued on to Rockford. Neither of the cars were badly damaged, it was stated.

THORSBY PUBLIC SCHOOL WILL OPEN MONDAY, 8TH

The Thorsby Public School will open Monday, September 8th, at nine o'clock in the morning, according to an announcement from Prof. W. T. Bean, principal of the school. Mr. Bean stated that there will be several local speakers on the program and the patrons are invited to attend. Mr. Bean went further to state, "There are many patrons who have never attended the opening of the school since I have been at Thorsby, and I would be glad that everyone and especially those who have never attended before would make an effort to be present this time."

SHIRTS PRICED TO CONFORM WITH OTHER CONDITIONS

If real broadcloth shirts at 95 cents each are worth considering by the men, then the shirts are bargains, is no doubt the opinion of Reddie Taylor, who is running an ad in this week's News stating that all $1.50 shirts at the Capital Dry Goods Company will be sold for 95 cents each during this week end, including Saturday.

Will Helton Will Be Given Preliminary Hearing Soon

Will Helton, of Jemison, who was alleged to have shot and killed Hubbard Glass near Jemison, on August 25th, will be given a preliminary hearing next Friday, September 5, before Justice of the Peace H. M. Simpson, according to information.

Helton is said to have shot Glass when the latter came to Helton's home and an argument over the payment of land rent ensued. Helton came to Clanton shortly after the shooting and surrendered to Chief of Police Bookholdt and was placed in jail.

NEGRO DRAWS HEAVY FINE IN MAYOR'S COURT MONDAY

Only one case came before the Mayor's Court here last Monday morning. George Murphy, negro, was fined $88.60, including costs on a charge of violating the prohibition law, according to information. Murphy was arrested last Saturday night by City Officers Stanton and Smith, and is alleged to have had in his possession a quantity of homebrew.

Failing to satisfy the court by paying the fine and costs, Murphy was sentenced to work out the fine on the city streets.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN C. PAGE BACK FROM EXTENDED TRIP

Mr. and Mrs. John C. Page and charming little daughter, Peggy, returned the latter part of last week from an extended trip which carried them to many interesting parts of Florida, Alabama and Tennessee. They made the trip in their car, and visited relatives in McMinnville, Tenn., just before returning to their home here.

W. L. Lenoir, of Jemison, Route 1, was in Clanton attending to business matters Saturday.

MOSE WALLACE, NEGRO CHARGED WITH MURDER, ACQUITTED

Mose Wallace, negro, who has been held here, charged with the shooting and killing of Leonard Shelton, was tried before Justice of the Peace H. M. Simpson Tuesday morning and acquitted.

Wallace shot Shelton at the former's home at Mitchell Dam on August 7th, according to information, which also stated that domestic trouble was the cause of the shooting.

A. B. RUSSELL TO PRESIDE OVER ADVENTIST CONFERENCE, B'HAM

Elder A. B. Russell left Clanton Tuesday afternoon for Birmingham, where he will preside over a conference of the Seventh Day Adventists.

Elder Russell will go from Birmingham to Nashville, Tenn., to attend another conference of the adventists. He is an outstanding figure in the work of the Adventist church in this section of the country and makes his home in Clanton.

JEFFERSONIANS ADOPT 13 PLANK PLATFORM MON.

Heflin, Locke, Powell Will Appear On Ticket In November

Montgomery, Ala., Sept. 2.—The state wide rally of Alabama electors representing the element opposed to the action of the executive committee in barring as candidates democrats who failed to support the national ticket in 1928, which opened at the city auditorium Monday morning, adjourned at nightfall after nominating for the United States senate, for governor and lieutenant governor, and adopting a 13-plank platform.

The independents or "Jeffersonian democrats" as they said they prefer to be designated, nominated United States Senator J. Thomas Heflin, of LaFayette, to succeed himself, and selected Hugh A. Locke, of Birmingham, and Dempsey M. Powell, Greenville, as candidates for governor and lieutenant governor respectively. In each instance the nominations were unanimous.

Only Three Races

Acting at the instance of Horace C. Wilkinson, who was elected chairman of the party's executive committee, it was agreed that nominees would be placed in the field in only the three (continued to editorial page)

MISS SCARBOROUGH BACK TO ASSUME DUTIES HERE

The deceased is survived by four children, his widow, Lena Polk Jones, and three brothers, C. Fenn Jones, prominent hardware merchant of Clanton, Dr. Julius Jones, of Rockford, and W. W. Jones of Wetumpka. The deceased was actively engaged in buying cotton and was widely known in the cotton circles over the state.

Mr. R. L. Ousley, prominent merchant of Pletcher, Alabama, was in Clanton Monday attending to business matters.

STATE FAIR TO BE HELD IN OCTOBER

Book Of Large Premiums Is Mailed Out Showing Some Of The Best Ever

Come on! Get Fair minded! All Alabama is anticipating the State Fair that will open at Montgomery October 20. And it's going to be the best ever, a real proof of progress, typifying the true strides in development made by our great state. This is the message that Simon Roswald, secretary manager is broadcasting throughout the state.

The 1930 premium book, brimful with interesting items on agriculture, livestock, poultry, boy and girls' club work, and features of particular appeal to women has been mailed to practically every county in Alabama. And such attractive premiums have never before been offered!

The agricultural exhibits, this year will be planned on an entirely new basis, that will be of real benefit to the farmer. Each exhibit will demonstrate scientific methods of progressive farming. The Extension Department at Auburn will cooperate in putting this idea over effectively.

The State Fair will finance accepted exhibits up to $100 planned by county and home demonstration agents or farm bureaus cooperating with county organizations or county wide committees and in addition will offer premiums ranging from $150 to $75. Agricultural High Schools may also exhibit.

Manager Roswald has set aside Saturday of State Fair week as "Farmers' Day." To the agents of the county bringing the largest number of Farm Bureau members to the State Fair on this day will be awarded a handsome silver trophy.

The entertainment program, this year boasts of a wide variety of breath taking and amusing attractions. There will be dog races by trained whippet dogs, Johnny J. Jones Exposition on the midway, and Strout's military husar band.

The country has been searched for the talent that will appear to make State Fair visitors forget the scamy side of life: "The Marvelous Honey Troupe," is made up of see-saw, teeter-board acrobats and sensational tight wire performers; "The Three Jansleys" feature the only 75 ft. high illuminated loop-the-loop act in the world; "The Flying Millers" accomplish a brilliant routine of aerial feats; "Shorty Flemm" the pint size comedian keeps his audience roaring with laughter; "The McDonald Trio" is composed of two girls and a man, who appear in a thrilling bicycle act—and many, many more.

Don't forget—Tuesday, October 21st is Children's Day at the State Fair of Alabama—and 10c admits any child.

Dr. and Mrs. J. R. Pow and daughters, Mary and Evelyn, of Woodard, Alabama, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. John M. VanDerveer and family last Sunday.

MOTHER OF MRS. HORSLEY WHITE SUCUMBS TO ILLNESS

Mr. and Mrs. Horsley White were called to LaGrange, Ga., the first part of this week on account of the death of the latter's mother, Mrs. W. S. Billbreay, age 59, who died last Monday morning at her home, following a lingering illness.

Funeral services for Mrs. Billbreay were held last Tuesday afternoon at the residence in LaGrange. The News joins the many friends of Mr. and Mrs. White in extending deepest sympathy.

Dr. And Mrs. Ezell Celebrate 8th Year At Clanton Church

Last Sunday, August 31, marked the closing of the eighth year of which Dr. S. J. Ezell has served as pastor of the Clanton First Baptist church.

On next Sunday Dr. Ezell will hold a special service at the church commemorating the beginning of his ninth year in Clanton as a resident and as pastor of the Baptist church.

During the eight years as pastor, Dr. Ezell stated that there have been 520 additions to the church and something like $70,000 has been raised for the church during that period. Dr. Ezell has made the statement that it is his desire to have as many people present at the services next Sunday morning as possible.

W. V. Williams, prominent farmer of Billingsley, Route 1, was among the visitors to Clanton Monday.

Urges Farmers To Pool Cotton Fast

New Orleans, La., Aug. 27, 1930.
To The Cotton Growers of Chilton County.
Gentlemen:

Let me urge that you pool your cotton as fast as ginned. The American Cotton Cooperative Association will give you full grade and staple and will advance you practically the market price of your cotton to enable you to hold for higher prices. This association is in position to store and insure your cotton at the lowest possible rate and to sell direct on all cotton markets of the world.

The American Cotton Cooperative Association is made up of members from all the cotton growing states and your cotton, whether one bale or a thousand, will be handled and sold to the very best advantage to you.

The Alabama Farm Bureau Cotton
Association, which is a member of the American Cotton Cooperative Association is the agency through which you pool your cotton in Alabama. I understand your county farm bureau or your local banks are in position to assist you and give you full information as to how to pool your cotton.

(signed) J. F. CREEKMORE,
General Manager, American Cotton
Cooperative Association.

Planting this fall either Fulghum or red rust proof oats or Alabama blue stem wheat with either hairy vetch or Austrian peas for the production of the hay crop next spring is recommended by the Alabama Experiment Station at Auburn. County agents are giving information as to how and when these mixtures should be planted.

A national survey and consideration of economics indicate that the cattle industry should improve during the next twelve months. "Market supplies of cattle in the next five or six months," says the U. S. Department of Agriculture, "probably will be about the same as a year ago, but supplies of fed cattle during the first half of 1931 are expected to be smaller than in 1930.
Demand for stockers and feeders this fall will not equal that of last year, and for that reason slaughter is likely to be somewhat greater."

GOT HIM AT LAST

After several years of unsuccessful efforts to get a local hardware merchant to advertise, the publisher of a Kansas weekly newspaper recently was surprised to receive an order for a full-page advertisement from the former non-advertiser.

Glancing at the copy the publisher saw that it advertised a "closing out sale." The hardware man was going out of business. His advertising competitors had taken his trade and there was nothing left for him to do but quit.
So the newspaper man had landed his prosperity at last.

The merchant recognized the power of advertising to help him to get out of business, but had never tried to use it as a means of staying in business.
There are a good many merchants like that.

Reductions Made
In Electric Rates
Of Rural Consumer

The Public Service Commission has approved a revised rural service classification for Alabama Power Company, effective September 1, by which it was estimated a saving of $27,000 would be effected for rural customers.

Development of rural service under the rate established in 1927, the Commission's order said, has resulted in construction of 406 rural lines up to January 1, 1930, serving directly 8,276 customers.

The new lines built within this period brought the total number of rural power circuits constructed and authorized to January 1, to 450, the mileage of line to 1,675 and the customers served to 9,140. In addition, 13,120 additional customers were being served on that date in 143 rural communities, making a total of 22,260 customers or over 100,000 people served from rural power lines.

The revised rate is more liberal in its application to domestic service and allows the use of an electric range up to eight kilowatts, water heating and miscellaneous appliances up to a total of one and one-half kilowatts without extra charge.

The new rate allows one-fifth of a kilowatt of outside lighting without extra charge. This, it was explained, makes it possible for rural customers to reduce their monthly electric bills in varying amounts up to $4.05.

Electricity will be available, under the new rate, for lighting, heating, cooking, refrigeration or power service or any combination of these, up to a demand of 50 kilowatts.

The new capacity charge for the first one and one-half kilowatts is as follows:

Over 15 and less than 20 customers per mile $1.50 a month; over 10 and not more than 15 customers per mile, $2 a month; over five and not more than 10 customers per mile, $2.50; five customers or less $3.50.

Where a town is served from a rural line, a special rating is made and customers served from each combination line will pay a service charge of $2 a month.

In addition to the capacity charge each month, the energy charge is as follows: Five cents per kilowatt hour for the next 950 kilowatt hours consumed per month; plus two cents per kilowatt hour for all over 1,000 kilowatt hours consumed per month.

News In Brief

Recently the Alabama Farm Bureau
Cotton Association, Montgomery, increased its advance on cotton delivered to the seasonal pool from 8 cents per pound to 9 cents per pound. The advance is made with the cooperation of the Federal Farm Board and is subject to change up or down as the market fluctuates.

Ice cream production continued to increase last year and reached a grand total of 365,448,000 gallons as compared with 348,046,000 gallons in 1928, according to estimates by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, United States Department of Agriculture.

During the last decade the source of supply for the American breakfast table has moved from the plains to the tropics. A large part of material for the modern morning table now comes from Cuba, Mexico and other south and Central American countries.

Bus Runs Amuck, Rams Tree, 40 Injured

AN UNSCHEDULED STOP! Missing on two cylinders but hitting perfectly on a lamp post and a fire hydrant this East Orange, N. J. bus gave its forty-five passengers an exciting down-hill flight until stopped by a tree. Forty persons were injured by slashes and severe lacerations from flying glass before a rear emergency door was opened. Newer buses of the Public Service Company, it is said, are equipped with safety glass to avoid such unpleasant results. According to the driver, J. A.
Mercer, the brakes failed as he approached Grove St., an important cross-town thoroughfare in Newark, and he cut into Roosevelt St. to avoid traffic.

The Vicious Circle Of Alabama Farmers

That Alabama farmers who do not produce enough feed for their livestock are traveling in a vicious circle is revealed by the cartoon above. As he makes cotton his mule eats feed from distant states and his cotton money must go there to pay for his feed. And making cotton in Alabama on feed produced in Iowa and shipped to the State leaves most farmers broke at the end of the year. It would be much better if the neck of the mule actually extended from Alabama to Iowa for it would save the cost of shipping, and also a lot of profits for middlemen en route. The way to do it is to plant seed of either Austrian peas or hairy vetch in the fall. These crops enrich the land so that it will make feed. It can be done at a low cost—much below what it would cost to buy after it is shipped from far away. And either of these winter legumes will do another thing. Each enriches land, making it unnecessary to buy nitrogen, the most expensive fertilizer element which farmers buy. In addition, either one adds much humus to the soil which they need, but which can not be bought in sacks. Therefore, the way to get out of the vicious circle—and also save a lot of money on fertilizers is to plant either hairy vetch or Austrian winter pea seed, late in September or early in October. County Agent Stapp is urging farmers to do this and giving instruction as to how to do it. The Alabama farmer who wishes to do so can get out of the vicious circle.

WORLD'S BEST LOSER
For undiluted sportsmanship we must give the palm to Sir Thomas Lipton, the gallant Irishman who will again contend for the America's Cup, the most coveted yachting prize in the world. It is now 79 years since the famous cup was first won by an American boat, appropriately named the America, on August 22, 1851, and in the intervening years it has been successfully defended 13 times. Beginning in 1899, Sir Thomas Lipton has made four attempts to lift the cup without success, and the forthcoming races starting September 13 will mark his fifth. That he has accepted successive defeats with equanimity and is willing to risk another leads Will Rogers to dub him "the best loser on earth." After his first defeat in 1899, Sir Thomas came back in 1901 and 1903 to meet the same fate. He challenged for 1914, but the war upset his plans. He was again a contender in 1920, losing once more. Each time his yacht has been named the Shamrock, his newest challenger being the Shamrock V. While patriotic Americans will hope side of the water, there will be no to see the famed cup remain on this great sorrow if the pluck and determination of Sir Thomas shall finally be rewarded by victory.

Dr. Knapp Suggests Drouth Relief Plan

Auburn, Ala., Sept. 3.—As the first step in drouth relief—and also better farming—Dr. Bradford Knapp, president of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute, says that fall gardens should be planted to furnish food for the family and that winter legumes and small grains should be planted for grazing animals during the fall and winter and hay next spring.

A plan of drouth relief that begins at home and operates by farmers with the cooperation of farmers, county agents, bankers, and business men was recommended by Dr. Knapp after attending conferences in Washington.

He said that local organizations of farmers, bankers, and business men should be formed to promote the work of making food and feed, marketing cotton, and producing more crops for market. He pointed out that Alabama farmers should try to make oats for sale next spring before oats from other sections are ready for market. With a short corn crop he called attention to the fact that farmers of this state can make early corn and sell it before corn from other sections arrives at the market.

Pooling of all cotton with the Alabama Farm Bureau Cotton Association and drawing the advance of nine cents per pound offered by the Federal Farm Board was earnestly endorsed. This will relieve the demand upon local banks and enable them to finance other things.

The plan proposed by Dr. Knapp has permanent as well as temporary advantages, it was explained.

Now Is The Time To Build

When Roy A. Young announced his retirement from the governorship of the Federal Reserve Board, to become governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston, and succeeding the late W. P. G. Harding of Alabama, he declared that the credit structure of the country is now in an easy and exceptionally strong condition, which assurance should inspire increasing confidence on the part of those who have been hesitating about going ahead with any contemplated improvements.

When the time comes when money is low and labor and materials are abundant and reasonably priced, an ideal condition is presented for the prosecution of structural undertakings and the fact that for the moment business is not what it really should be, offers poor excuse for not going ahead in all instances where improvements are required under normal conditions. Nothing in history is more clearly established than that periods of depression, however severe, come to an end finally and that there usually follows an era when industrial establishments are taxed to their capacity.

Such a time of abounding prosperity is certain to appear in this country in due course and those organizations that take advantage of present conditions to make preparations for this new era are those that will reap the largest profit and gain the most desirable markets. When the rush of goods come fortunes will smile on those mostly who have foreseen its coming and made the preparation that wisdom suggests.

The time of such preparation is now at hand and the conditions for making such preparations are ideal. No doubt there are improvements being contemplated by citizens of Clanton and Chilton County who are, despite existing conditions, financially able to carry out their plans for improvements. Present conditions in the business world should not hinder them in carrying out such plans, but should do right the reverse, due to the fact that labor and materials are low. By carrying out such plans of improvement, those who are financially able will render a great aid to the present unemployment condition of the town and county. Now is the time to build.

This Appears A Good Time To Raise Cattle In State

It is becoming more and more evident that the time for Alabama farmers to engage in the livestock business as a side farming industry, is right now. Every farmer in the State could profit by having some cattle fattened for sale next year, and the prices of livestock now are low, enabling buying to be done advantageously.

Next year the prices of cattle will be materially higher than at present. This is the prediction of the United States Department of Agriculture. This prediction is based by the department on the promise that for the next five or six months the supply of cattle will be about the same as for the past year, but that in 1930 the supply will be much smaller and the price higher.

Alabama has this year the best range land in the country, most of it untouched by drouth and in many parts of the State the quantity of grazing land available is sufficient to keep thousands of head of cattle where there now are scarcely any. In the Far West, Northwest and Central West, the cattle raising industry has been hard hit by drouth. Not only are grazing lands practically destroyed, but the farmers and cattle raisers face the necessity of having to feed their herds through the winter with nothing on hand with which to feed them.

In Alabama cattle can find winter grazing practically all through the winter and there are no blizzards to decimate them, as in the Northwest and West. It is said a number of Northwestern cattlemen are planning to send their cattle to Southern ranges for the coming winter, and Alabama may get some of them. The bringing of outside cattle need not interfere with Alabama farmers increasing the size of their own herds or establishing herds where they now have none.

Not only is the time opportune, say well informed livestock men, for Alabama and the South to engage extensively in the cattle raising business, but dairy herds should be improved and enlarged now, as there is abundant feed for them and a constantly growing market for dairy products.

In regard to the promised increase in the price of cattle in 1931, a report issued through the Bureau of Agricultural Economics of the United States Department of Agriculture says demand for stockers and feeders this Fall will not equal that of last year, and for that reason slaughter is likely to be somewhat greater.

The report adds that prospects favor a "material advance in cattle prices in the next 12 months." Also the report said the indications are that there will be a continuation of low imports of both live cattle and calves and of fresh and frozen beef and veal. Consumer demand for beef probably will improve somewhat in the next six months. With the advent of cooler weather, especially if there is an improvement in industrial activities.

A Man's Prayer

Teach me that sixty minutes make an hour, sixteen ounces one pound, and one hundred cents one dollar.

Help me so to live that I can lie down at night with a clear conscience, without a gun under my pillow, and unhaunted by the faces of those to whom I have brought pain.

Deafen me to the jingle of tainted money.

Blind me to the faults of the other fellow, but reveal to me mine own.

Keep me young enough to laugh with little children and sympathetic enough to be considerate of old age.

And, when comes the day of darkened shades and the smell of flowers, the tread of soft foot-steps and the crunching of wheels in the yard, make the ceremony short and the epitaph simple: Here lies a man.—Author unknown.

"ROUND TOWN"

—by Doug

Opinions expressed in this column by this writer have no connection with the general policies of this paper, being wholly those of the writer, in the manner they are written.

"The Big Man at the last is the man who takes an idea and makes of it a genuine success—the man who brings the ship into port."

William H. Loren Smith, the well balanced clerk at Upchurch's on-the-corner, brought a prize back with him from the fishing rodeo last week, for doing something about the biggest fish. H. S. Shaw did some real fishing too, down at the rodeo. His charming daughter, Mildred, accompanied him to Mobile and also enjoyed several days there.

Got another kick on this week. In my opinion, something ought to be done about the dogs running loose round town. Every now and then you hear something about a mad dog being around. There are so many dogs running loose a fellow wouldn't know a mad dog until he bit him, that is, until the dog bit him, I mean. If a man really thought anything of his dog, he would keep him up somewhere. Only last Saturday a car hit a dog down town, and killed him. The city had to carry the dead dog away. Well, if they get any kick out of that, it's o. k. by me, but really it doesn't look so good for a town, when a lot of dogs are running round the streets, whether the dogs be some of the finest breeds or not. A day or so ago, several of the animals became angry at each other, and started a row, and it happened that several ladies were near them. That was very embarrassing for the ladies of course. Take the town of Wetumpka—you very seldom see any dogs on the street there, because the town has a law against that. Well, soon, maybe, we will know who is going to be next Mayor and councilmen, and maybe, who knows, they may pass a law prohibiting dogs running at large in the town. It would be safer for everyone.

There seems to be some trouble in the camp with the local volunteer fire fighters, and I would like to say one thing to them. If a group of young men, and elderly men can not work together in a worthy cause as you have, then I think it is time for you to just withdraw and have nothing to say about it, but on the other hand, some of the older members of the department ought to have enough diplomacy about them to keep down any misunderstandings and keep up the feeling of good fellowship among the younger members. But there are not any members of the local fire department who are not old enough to know that arguments won't work in a thing like that. If it was a matter of money or a job, that is different, but you members of the VOLUNTEER fire department are doing a great work for the town and it is appreciated by the people here. At least it is appreciated by the serious-minded and broad-minded citizens of the town, and if you will allow criticism from the other make a difference with you, then you are merely placing yourself in their class. Boys, get organized and work among yourselves, and tell the criticsers to go to the devil.

And now for my discussion this week of the members of the fair and warmer sex, namely, the women. Being the Certified Chilton County Critter Sizer, I am not out of my place doing this. One of the longest felt needs today for the men is an organization to protect them from the women. Ever since Eve led Adam out of the Garden of Eden into this world of bill collectors, tax gatherers and traffic cops, man's power of resistance to woman has been growing weaker. It is being realized that the rugged pathway of man is already piled high with downfalls and failures due to this very point—the women. Every time man attempts to establish a society or fraternity, before it gets started, a woman's department, auxiliary or aid, makes its appearance. It is one of woman's favorite deceptions to call her organization an auxiliary or aid. The men are kept busy following the dictations of the woman's organization. Now, this is something else that needs attention, and immediate attention, or less the women are going to bring about the ruination of the country by interfering with the organizations of the men, when they are trying to better things. The women don't organize something until us men get the idea first then they come along and want to work with us. Now, ain't that just like a woman? Imitating us men folks. Even wearing breeches now days, which causes uneasiness in every household where a man attempts to stay, for fear he will wake up some morning and find his pants missing, later to find some woman in them. But you women will have something else to consider when the men start wearing shorts, and so if you are just determined to imitate us men, you'd better get ready for a lot of exposure cause we are organizing to fix you.

Met a sweet young thing not so long ago, and thought the world of her, in fact, I almost forgot that women were "taboo" in my line of vision. She soon changed my mind and caused me to remember that fact, by asking me for a cigarette. The women must be born imitators, which causes me to think about how monkeys try to imitate humans, and about Darwin's theory. Nuff sed.

Thoughts While Thinking

I have often wondered what people think about while walking round town, so I have taken under consideration some of my thoughts while walking round town. Here's some of them in the course of a day—or night: C. Fenn appears rather happy this morning. Wonder what's eating on Mr. So and So. Wonder how soon Marion Gore comes to work. I'll bet folks get tired of speaking to those two men so much every day. I'd hate to have to pay for the gas for that car. Gosh, that's a good looking specimen of humanity. Wonder how much he gets per month. Why in the dickens doesn't he take some of that money and give to some poor people—she thinks of herself too much and her social standing—'tis a pity she can't see herself the way other people see her. Oh, well. Gee, those folks stay up late at night. What did he mean by that remark, I wonder. He sure is a big talker anyway. Wonder who that is talking to Otto Jones. They ought to straighten that awning, it doesn't look good. Paint and powder sure makes a big difference in that woman. Oh, well, I suppose they are all like that. I'd like to date that kid just once. I'll bet they are talking about the school teachers who are coming soon. Wonder how they are getting along since being married. That kid can sure spank a piano. Wonder if what I heard about her is true—if it is I have sure been missing something. What have you got the gripes about today. I'll bet they don't make enough to pay expenses. They ought to put on a big sale, anyway. Yes, and I'd like to tell you a thing or two, myself. How in the dickens does he get by with that stuff, without being caught at it. And so on. Rather rambling thoughts, I'll admit, but I'm supposed to be rather a rambling thinker, you know.

Jeffersonians Adopt 13

Plank Platform

racers. Decision as to candidates entering other races was left to the nominations and resolutions committees, of which Arthur B. Chilton, of Montgomery, was elected chairman.

The independent platform declared first of all for progress in the affairs of the state, following with a declaration for restriction of political power to the people. It declared against raising the bars against candidates who refused to support Smith and expressed opposition to the action of the state executive committee on last August 26 in empowering that body to vacate the action of county executive committees, even in local affairs. It also scored the executive committee for its decision to delegate authority to itself in passing on individual candidates.

Demand New Committee

This section further declared for the immediate passage of a law that will require the election of a new executive committee in 1931 in which "every white democrat in Alabama" would be eligible to participate. That plank further asserted the right of every white democrat to a secret ballot and its inclusion in the count. Paid agents of the "power trust" also came in for condemnation.

Dealing with education, the platform advocated continuation of the present system of taxation in support of the state's educational system and every "reasonable enlargement of our educational program, free text books, starting with the lowest grades and extending to the higher grades as rapidly as the state revenues will permit."

Declaring for good roads, the platform declared for matching the federal government's $6,200,000 now available to Alabama and for matching the $10,000,000 which will be available within the next four years. The platform did not suggest or outline means for obtaining these funds.

As to agriculture, the independents declared their advocacy of co-ordination and use of every agency that will assist "the problem of the farmer in solving his problem of maintaining the fertility of the soil and reducing the cost of production."

Legislation Reapportionment

On reapportionment of representation in the state legislature, the platform pointed out the duty devolving on the next legislature to make a full reapportionment on the basis of the recent federal census. The plan declared for every county to have at least one representative and no county more than one senator.

The plank dealing with reapportionment brought the black belt counties in for criticism, pointing out that numerous counties in that area have full representation in the house and a senator of their own, while other counties with more qualified voters shared senators with neighboring counties and were held to a minimum in house representation. Wilcox county, a black belt county and home of Judge Miller, the democratic gubernatorial nominee, was cited in the way of unequal and excess representation.

The law enforcement plank declared for retention of the state law enforcement department as against Judge Miller's declaration for abolition as an economy measure. Fair and impartial enforcement of all laws was declared "society's safeguard."

The independents further declared for sustaining and supporting the present state health program and the co-ordination of state agencies in the promotion of new business and industries.

With reference to state banks, the platform advocated revision of the banking laws to place officers of banks under adequate bonds and closer supervision over their affairs.

Concerning labor, the platform favored creation of a state department of labor, legislation that will adequately compensate injured workmen and restricting work days for women to eight hours.

The twelfth plank declared against increased taxation and advocated the state operating within its income. It supported the view that land owners and small industries are bearing an unjust taxation burden.

The platform concluded with recognition of the state's obligation to Confederate veterans and their dependents and advocated such increases in pensions as the state revenue permits.

Ratification of the platform, election of Mrs. Arthur B. Chilton, of Montgomery, as chairman of the women's division, and hearing the nomination addresses of the candidates occupied the afternoon session which extended until night shadows were creeping over the rafters of the city auditorium where the delegates were assembled.

Earlier in the day the convention elected Jesse B. Wadsworth, Gadsden banker, as permanent chairman in succession to Arthur B. Chilton, who served as temporary chairman. He in turn announced the appointment of chairman and personnel of the convention's two committees, on nominations and resolutions and the executive committee.

Hefflin Speaks

Senator Hefflin, addressing the more than 3,000 persons assembled for the afternoon session said his respects to 27 democratic executive committee members who voted the exclusive resolution, the "Pope of Rome and Catholic Hierarchy" and the opposition press which he said is headed by the Montgomery Advertiser.

Appearing in frock coat, cream colored vest and striped trousers, his traditional habiliments, Senator Hefflin spoke with a hoarseness that denoted a strenuous campaign. He opened with the assertion that he had fought for and voted with the democratic party long before he had heard of those who declared him ineligible to appear on the democratic ballot of the August 12 primary because of his refusal to support Smith.

Referring to a recent editorial in the Philadelphia Enquirer and reproduced in the Montgomery Advertiser, questioning where he would sit in view of his non-allegiance with the regular democratic or republican factions, Senator Hefflin asserted that after November 4 he would be found on the democratic side of the senate and holding the same democratic committee assignments. They couldn't muster a democratic majority that would oust me from my place with the democrats or from my committee assignments," Hefflin declared.

Referring to the resolution barring bolters, Senator Hefflin described their action as the "worst political crime since reconstruction days and carpet bag rule."

"I had nothing to do with the recent republican convention at Birmingham," Senator Hefflin said with reference to the recent meeting, "and I have not had their assistance, but we do want their vote and support to defeat the Raskob-Tamm influence in the general election."

Senator Hefflin predicted the "hirelings" of the "Tammany and Roman Catholic interests" are to be imported into the state to campaign against him.

Hugh A. Locke, the gubernatorial nominee, devoted a large portion of his speech to attacks on the Montgomery Advertiser and the assertion that his opponent, Judge Miller, has declared for "a fight in every county and precinct thereof and he will get it." Mr. Locke declared his first act upon his election will be to "imprison ballot box burglars."

He further declared that he would clean Alabama's political house and that he would not abolish the law enforcement department. He added that he would keep the state constabulary busy "running down the ballot box burglars." He charged that Miller's declared intention of abolishing the department was but "a sop to gain the support of the liquor traffic."

Powell, in accepting the nomination for lieutenant governor, declared that he was determined "to see right prevail." He said it would be his program to outline and offer a definite scheme to protect business and labor. He charged certain elements of the state's press with attempts to nullify party declarations at the Houston convention. He included among allegations of fraud in the recent primary that boxes all over the state had been stuffed approximately 40,000 votes.

Snappy Stuff

Henry Wilford of St. Paul paid a fine of $25 because he turned in a false alarm of fire to win a $5 bet.

When Constable Frank Verbeck of Tueron, Kan., found a shiny padlock on the door of the town jail, he broke thru the door and found a still which contained 50 gallons of moonshine.

After taking two drinks of bootleg whiskey, James Darham of Chicago, thought he was a fish and was arrested for trying to swim in the street.

"I guess I am too much of a sport to get married," says J. J. Leary, a bachelor, who has retired after 32 years in the marriage license bureau in Boston.

Chief Lyman L. Parkas of Union County, N. J., ordered all policemen on the county park squad to keep their weights less than 145 pounds or face charges of neglect of duty.

While shaving a customer, Gustav Farnson, a barber of Montclair, N. J., quit his job when notified that an uncle had willed him $50,000.

When ordered by a court to pay $1250 to a woman Mrs. Wakeman had slandered, Benjamin Wakeman said, "My wife talks too much."

Hanver Gelizz of St. Louis was arrested for selling his wife to a neighbor for $26.

Rev. R. C. Clayton of Chicago suggested in an address the following epitaph for a married man: "Another good listener gone."

When sued by his landlady, R. C. Bayne of Boston admitted he owed for 53 weeks board but pleaded for more time to pay.

Miss Harriet Bernard of Cleveland arrested for intoxication, produced a roll of bills and said to the policeman: "All right, old dear, what's the fine?"

RADICAL CHANGES TRANSFORM BANKING

National Commission Sees Changing Opinion on Branch Banking Issue—Studies Group and Chain Banks.

NEW YORK.—Modification of the attitude of bankers on the long disputed branch banking question is forecast in a review and report covering rapid changes going on in banking issued here by the Economic Policy Commission of the American Bankers Association. The report, however, after referring to recent proposals that national banks be given branch banking powers within the business territory surrounding their location, declares that "we do not believe that so-called 'trade-area' branch banking is likely to gain the support of any large percentage of the banking fraternity."

The commission says that the "most important development that has affected American banking in recent years involves the rapid growth of multiple banking organizations in the form of group, chain and branch banking systems," and adds that "we present this report as an unprejudiced economic study and have no theories or policies to urge at this time." The statement says that the commission's information indicates there are now 269 group or chain bank systems, which control 1922 banks and $15,285,000,000 in aggregate resources, and that there are only six states and the District of Columbia where it does not find any group organizations.

The Commission's Investigation

"We have been in touch with the managers of many important bank groups," the report says. "Aside from the obvious economies of centralized operation and control a number of these organization heads very frankly tell us that they do not feel that the system has been in operation and tested long enough to justify them in making positive or sweeping statements as to its advantages or disadvantages compared to unit banking."

The Banking and Currency Committee of the House, which is conducting an investigation into banking developments, has called a number of operating heads of some of the great group systems. These men declared that they found, under certain conditions, definite operating and economic advantage in both group and branch banking over independent unit banking. Some thought group banking was only a transitional stage, that branch banking was preferable and if it were permitted on an extensive enough scale they would change their groups over to branch systems. Others held that group banking was preferable.

"Some held that the ideal plan was a combination of the two with group bank units for localities strong enough to support complete banking institutions and with branch offices extending further into the smaller places requiring banking services but not large enough to support complete banks. Several of these who advocated multiple banking declared that nevertheless they believed there would always be room for vigorous independent unit bank competitors."

Government Officials Express Views

"The Comptroller of the Currency recommended that national banks be given branch banking powers within 'trade-areas.' The Governor of the Federal Reserve Board appeared to be in general agreement with the Comptroller. He said there were 24,645 banks and 3,847 branches, a total of 28,492 banking offices; that in this total, 6,533 offices were either branches or bank members of groups, or both, leaving 21,959 banking institutions that might be definitely termed independent unit banks, having no branches and in no way connected with group affiliations. He said all the banks had total loans and investments of $58,500,000,000, of which the group and branch systems held $30,000,000,000, or more than half."

"He opposed nation-wide branch banking at present but said that ultimately if bankers became trained and experienced in the larger technique of 'trade-area' banking he thought it would be that they evolve nation-wide branch banking under control of relatively few banks, but he did not believe this would mean monopoly or lack of competition. He favored branch over group banking which, however, he said represented an economic development along 'trade-area' lines and would spread unless something else were substituted and thought 'trade-area' branch banking would serve this purpose."

"It is the intention of the Commission to develop its own studies in these questions, watch carefully every move that is made and every bit of information that may develop in this connection and keep itself prepared to give an unbiased and accurate statement of the facts of the case whenever that is desired," the report concludes.

Federal Reserve Pays Government

In the fifteen years since its establishment in 1914, aggregate net earnings of the Federal Reserve System's twelve regional banks have amounted to $515,216,000, of which $30,872,000 has been paid to the member banks as dividends, representing 6 per cent annually on their contributions of capital to the reserve banks, while $277,434,000 has been added to the surplus of the reserve banks and $147,110,000 has been paid over to the Federal government as a franchise tax.

BLACK FLAG POWDER
MADE BY THE MAKERS OF BLACK FLAG LIQUID

ARE YOU THIRSTY?

WE almost all of us are thirsty most of the time during this torrid weather, here are some classified recipes of drinks, starting with the beverages calculated to meet every taste and assuage every type of thirst.

Lime Punch: Dissolve one cup sugar in one quart of tea in a white hot. When cold add syrup from one No. 2 can of lemons and the syrup from one No. 2 can of grapes (leaving the fruits for salads, cocktails, etc.) Just before serving add three pint bottles of charged water. This makes twelve large glasses or about 24 punch cups.

Pineapple and Fresh Lime Juice: Shake together unsweetened pineapple juice from a No. 2 can and one-eighth cup of fresh lime juice. Chill overnight in the refrigerator and serve as a delicious breakfast fruit juice.

Cranberry Cordial: Make a cup of one cup sugar and two cups water. Add two cups tea, one cup lemon juice, the contents of a No. 2 can of cranberry jelly and a No. 2 can of unsweetened pineapple juice, and six cups of cider, and serve very cold. It makes four quarts.

Tomato Beverages

Tomato and Cucumber Cordial: Cut one medium cucumber thin and the peeling left on. Simmer sliced cucumber, three cups of tomato juice, two cups water, one clove, garlic, one teaspoon salt, one tablespoon sugar and a few grains pepper together for thirty minutes. Strain and cool the juice. Serve cold in glass cocktail cups. Serves eight.

Tomato and Celery Cordial: Simmer together for thirty minutes three cups strained tomato juice, two cups water, one cup celery (outer stalks and leaves), one bay leaf, one teaspoon horseradish, one pepper-corn, one teaspoon salt and one slice onion. Strain and cool. Serve in cocktail glasses. Serves eight.

Tomatoade: Heat two cups strained tomato juice and one-fourth cup sugar to boiling to dissolve the sugar. Add one-fourth cup lemon juice and one-half teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, and chill. Serve very cold in cocktail glasses. Serves six.

Milk Beverages

Chocolate Cinnamon Malted Milk: Shake together in a shaker or large glass jar six tablespoons malted milk, four tablespoons chocolate syrup, one teaspoon cinnamon, one-half cup water, two and one-half cups milk and an ample supply of cracked ice. This will fill four tall glasses.

Pineapple Milk Shake: Shake together in a glass jar or shaker one-half cup chocolate syrup, one cup evaporated milk or fresh cream, one cup canned pineapple syrup, one cup water and sufficient cracked ice. This makes four large glasses.

Maple Ginger Cream: Shake together one-third cup of maple syrup, one and one-fourth cups of County Agent's Dept.

By C. E. STAPP, County Agent

Instead of marking time until spring and then begin buying high priced hay to produce low priced cotton, Mr. C. E. Stapp, county agent, suggests that Chilton county farmers "invest a much smaller amount of money now in seed oats and winter peas, which will give a fine crop by April 15th to May 15th."

In a letter to each farmer of the county Mr. Stapp writes:

"I wish very frankly to make you a suggestion that should be a wise step in meeting an inevitable shortage of feed during the 1931 crop season."

"Mr. Gist, Federal Statistician for Alabama, reports conditions as of August the 1st, shows a hay shortage in the state of 150,000 tons under 1929, which itself was a short supply. This is further complicated by the fact of a Nation-Wide shortage approaching a calamity."

"Instead of marking time until next Spring and then begin buying high priced hay to produce low priced cotton, allow me to suggest that we follow the recommendations of the Experiment Station at Auburn and invest a much smaller amount of money now in seed oats and winter peas, which will give a fine hay crop by April the 15th to May 15th. Note the following:

"1. On the sandy land at Auburn, spring of 1930 this combination produced 4200 lbs. good hay.

"2. As a four year average 1927-30, this combination-produced 3215 pounds produced an additional average of 2810 pounds.

"3. Winter peas when mixed with oats increase the value of the hay $10 per ton according to statement made today by Professor F. W. Burns, Livestock Specialist.

"4. Money invested in peas and oats will yield more than 900 per cent gross return upon investment. This statement comes from the fact that $4.45 of peas, oats, basic slag and inoculation averaged over a four year period 3215 pounds of hay. Valued at $25 per ton this is worth $40.19.

"In order to carry on next year, we know farmers will have to buy hay and corn; why is it not the wise thing to plant this combination of peas or vetch and oats or wheat. It is the quickest and cheapest relief."

What To Plant For Hay and For Grazing

To meet the impending hay shortage resulting from the unusual drought sow between September 15 and October 15 a mixture of one bushel of fulghum or Red Rust Proof oats or Alabama Blue Stem wheat and 20 pounds of hairy vetch or Austrian Winter Peas. Early sowing is very important so that these crops may become firmly established before freezing weather. The vetch and Austrian winter peas must be inoculated if being sown on land not having previously grown these crops successfully.

The mixture of oats and vetch or Austrian Winter Peas is safe during most winter months south of Birmingham if sown early. North of Birmingham where oats are often killed by freezes it is suggested that Alabama Blue Stem Wheat be substituted for the oats.

Apply 600 pounds of basic slag when planting and top dress with 100 to 200 pounds of nitrate of soda or nitrate of lime about the first week in March.

Mow when the oats or wheat are in the milk stage.

Every farmer should plant a few acres of one of the above mixtures so that he will have a nice supply of new hay in May or early June when hay is usually very scarce and very high.

The above mixtures will stand some grazing. But they should not be grazed too early in the fall. Austrian peas if grazed off when small may never grow out. The principal grazing from the above mixtures or other grains will be secured in late winter and early spring. If cutting for hay stock must not be allowed to graze the crop late in the spring. They must be taken off early enough to permit the crop to make a good growth.

For grazing only it is safest to sow rye. This crop is hardy and will stand much abuse. The average farmer will likely find it best to sow a few acres of rye for grazing only thus allowing the grain and winter legume mixture to grow for hay. If very necessary to secure grazing this fall it may pay to top dress the fall crop with nitrate of soda as soon as it is up.

Miss Catherine Charron of Troy, N. Y., has offered herself in marriage to any young man who will provide a home for her father and mother.

IN MEMORY OF JOHN PATTERSON BURIED WEDNESDAY

John W. Patterson died at his home near Clanton last Monday, after an illness of more than a week. Mr. Patterson was 72 years of age. He gained the friendship of everyone he knew.

The remains were laid to rest at the Poplar Springs cemetery, August 20th. Mr. Mell Martin was in charge. The pallbearers were his six grandsons, John William Hardy, Stanley Hardy, Morris Patterson, Wilbur Patterson, Eugene Ray and Milton Patterson.

The funeral was conducted by W. P. Lowery. It greatly grieved us to hear of the passing of our dear brother.

He was so wonderful in all his loving ways and thoughts that his good works here will continue to grow and be a living monument to his virtues and beauty. His work on earth has been finished well, and that he was called in to that better world by the Great Almighty Power which giveth and taketh away.

He is survived by his widow and twelve children, Edgar Patterson, Tallassee, Henry Patterson, Clanton, Cleveland of Bessemer, William of Pennsylvania, Ulysses of Pennsylvania, Tom Patterson of Virginia, Dewey Patterson, Pennsylvania, Dee Patterson, Clanton, Mrs. Lilla Hardy, Goodwater, Mrs. Monroe Wyatt, Clanton, Mrs. Jim DuRose of Birmingham, Mrs. G. C. Ray of Cooper, and thirty-two grandchildren, and four great-grandchildren.

May the one who comforts and sustains all be with them through the vale of tear. John, we are sure, still watches over you and loves you as tenderly. So do not grieve, but bravely go on as he would have you do, until the happy day when you shall meet again.

—Mrs. Judge Culver, Birmingham.

MR. AND MRS. CHARLIE BRADFORD, CINCINNATI, VISIT HERE

Mr. and Mrs. Charlie N. Bradford, Jr., (Sunset Polk) of Cincinnati, Ohio, have been spending several days in Clanton as guests of the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Major Lamar Jeffers Selected As Delegate To FIDAC Congress

Anniston Man One Of Two Who Were Chosen From the South

MAJOR LAMAR JEFFERS

Major Lamar Jeffers, member of Congress from the Fourth District of Alabama has been notified of his election as a delegate to the Eleventh Annual Congress of FIDAC, which will meet this year in Washington and New York. Major Jeffers is a delegate from the American Legion. Only one other delegate from the South, to represent the Legion, was elected, and he lives in the State of Virginia. The FIDAC Congress will begin its session on September 15.

Representatives of nearly ten million former service men of this country and nine nations, allied with the United States in the World War, will attend the congress. The ten nations in which these millions of veterans live are Belgium, the British Empire, Czechoslovakia, France, Italy, Yugoslavia, Poland, Portugal, Roumania and the United States. The name FIDAC is the abbreviation of Federation Interalliee Des Anciens Combattants. The American Legion in the United States is the only veterans organization in this country affiliated with FIDAC and every member of the Legion is automatically a member of the FIDAC. It is upon the invitation of the Legion that FIDAC will meet in the Western Hemisphere this fall.

Organized for Peace

Organized shortly after the World War in the interest of peace, FIDAC has become a powerful influence in bringing about a better understanding among the nations. Its fundamental object is to maintain and develop that spirit of comradeship which manifested itself upon the battlefields of France, and to use this comradeship in the promotion of world peace. FIDAC supports the government of its constituent countries, stands guard against the menace of communism and the terror of bolshevism, and does everything in its power to uphold constitutional authority to see that justice is meted out to the war disabled, the widows and orphans and to maintain the friendly relations existing between the allied countries, always placing patriotism and loyalty to country at the base of its international relations.

Under the FIDAC constitution each member nation is limited to 10 delegates at the annual convocation. This year the Alabama department of the Legion and the Anniston post will be directly represented in the international meeting by Major Jeffers.

The nomination of Major Jeffers was submitted to the national body through the Alabama department by Past Commander George M. Grant, the 10 American delegates then being selected by the National Executive Committee of the Legion from among all those nominated from the 48 states.

Jeffers Ranks High

Major Jeffers has been a member of the Legion since the early days of its organization. He has been a member of the Committee in the House of Representatives on World War Veterans Legislation since the creation of that Committee and has always taken an active part in its work. His World War service overseas was with the 82nd Division, as Captain of Co. "G" 326th Infantry, commanding that company in the St. Mihiel drive and in the Meuse-Argonne offensive until October 11, 1918, when he was severely wounded by machine gun bullets in an attack on St. Julien, France. Captain Jeffers was later promoted to the rank of Major of Infantry. He received the Distinguished Service Cross for gallantry in action, the official citation being as follows:

"On the night of Oct. 10-11, Captain Jeffers reconnoitered a badly damaged bridge and early in the morning of the 11th he supervised its repair, being continually under intense machine gun fire. He later led the leading company of the battalion over this bridge and across the open and level terrain, where all his officers and almost two-thirds of his men became casualties and he himself was seriously wounded. He continued to lead his Company forward, however, until he fell, shot thru the jaw with a machine gun bullet."

The American delegation, on board the New York City welcome steamer, the "Macom," will meet the foreign delegates, on board the S. S. Lancastria in New York harbor on September 15. Preliminary receptions and meetings will be held in New York on the sixteenth and seventeenth, and the principal business sessions will be held in Washington from the eighteenth to the twenty-first.

Following the close of the convention the delegates will be taken on a tour aboard a special train visiting, among other places of interest, Annapolis, West Point, Niagara Falls, Culver Military Academy and the National Headquarters of the American Legion at Indianapolis, Ind.

Leading military and diplomatic figures of the United States and Europe will be included in the list of delegates and guests at this FIDAC Conference, and some of the best and most prominent newspaper men of all nations will watch closely the deliberations of FIDAC, an indication of the recognized importance of the organization in world affairs.

Hints For Homemakers

By Jane Rogers

INDISPENSABLE furnishings in a well-regulated kitchen are accurate scales and measuring utensils; a pair of shears to be used only in the preparation of foods; and, since the success of so many dishes depends upon correct timing, a reliable clock such as one of the new electric kind that plug into the wall and can't go a second off without showing a warning signal.

The use of a small amount of sugar, much as we use salt and pepper, mitigates the harsh taste of many foods without sweetening them. Used in the preparation of meat sauces and gravies, it accentuates the various flavors, binds them into a harmonious whole, and improves the color.

BUREAU MAKES ADVANCE $5 PER BALE ON COTTON

Allen Northington, general manager of the Alabama Farm Bureau Cotton Association, Saturday authorized the banks of this county to increase by $5 per bale the advance to members of the Cotton Cooperative pooling their cotton. This brings the advance to "9 cents per pound on cotton placed in the Annual pool, and 8 cents on cotton placed in the special pool."

Mr. Northington's letter to the banks read:

"With the cooperation of the American Cotton Cooperative Association and the Federal Farm Board we are able to raise our advance to the members. Effective this date, and until further notice this will be your authority, to advance to our members on their drafts on us with original warehouse receipts or order notify bill of lading attached, 9c per pound on cotton placed in our Annual Pool, and 8c per pound on cotton placed in the Special Pool.

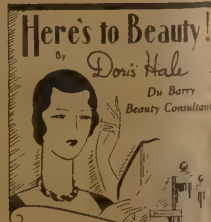

"We hope this advance will enable you to get a big lot of cotton pooled, as this is very close to what cotton can be sold for at this time. It will be our policy to keep our advance very close to the market value all during the season.

"We feel that the banks should adopt the policy this season of taking advantage of this advance through the cooperatives, and stop the cotton from being forced on the market at the present ruinous prices. This advance will let the farmers pay you practically as much on their accounts as they could by selling, and at the same time have a good chance of a nice equity later on.

"If we adopt the policy of keeping the present crop and force the reduction of acreage to the world's needs we can turn the low price cotton to a real benefit, as this will be a very material help in getting cotton back to a fair price."

WOMEN of all ages and tones of skin realize that they must take at least a few minutes daily to care for their skins. The clever young business woman has learned that a good skin is absolutely necessary in an office or a store. The capable homemaker realizes that although she does take care of a big house and several children, the world will not excuse her for lapses in personal beauty care. Even school girls understand that their skins need something more than just an occasional dusting of powder now and then. All have you noticed at any large gathering of women, how the representative ones invariably show the happy results of a thorough regimen of skin care? Fortunately, we have been able to put aside any thought that face creams and lotions are luxury. Thanks to science and business skill, every woman today can afford to use the finest preparation on her skin without even the time or feeling of guilt about the cost. And the trained experience of beauty experts now is available to save purchase of any but the exact preparations required for each particular case. Every day, I know, this answers a great many letters from women who want to know how to treat their skin. I am a beauty consultant, and I am always glad to help. Watwood-Owen Wedding

A wedding of much interest to a host of relatives and friends of Central Alabama and throughout the entire state was that of Miss Ara Jane Owen of the New Cedron community to Mr. Vernon Watwood of Auburn on Friday evening, August 29th, 1930.

The marriage was solemnized at the home of the bride in a very quiet way last Friday evening at eight o'clock. The ceremony was impressively performed by the Rev. W. S. Cox, a life long friend of the family, in the presence of a few intimate friends and relatives.

Mrs. Watwood is the daughter of Mr. J. R. Owen and the granddaughter of the late W. J. Bone, in whose home she was reared. She is one of the most attractive young ladies of Central Alabama, and a graduate of State Teachers College at Florence, and has an A. B. degree from Howard College.

Mr. Watwood is a professor at Auburn in which institution he teaches in the Engineering School.

Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Watwood left for Mobile and other points of interest. They will soon return to Auburn where they will make their future home.

They are attended by the good wishes of their many friends.

A few days after William Nelson of Brockton, Mass., misplaced his glass eye he found a group of small boys using it in a marble game.

Angry because his wife spent the afternoon playing cards, James C. Hodge of Chicago burned all her clothing.

Chas. Beavers of Cincinnati was sent to jail to "loosen his tongue" for refusing to answer questions put to him in court.

Fall Crops To Plant As Told By Auburn

Auburn, Ala., Sept. 3.—The college of agriculture of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute, Auburn, offers the following suggestions for field and garden plantings during September and October.

Oats alone for grazing and in combination with either hairy vetch or Austrian winter peas for hay next spring. Due to more severe winters oats are not considered safe in north Alabama. Best varieties are Fulghum and red rust proof group.

Wheat in North Alabama where winters are too severe for oats. Alabama blue stem or other beardless varieties should be planted.

Rye anywhere in the state for grazing. But rye is not as good as oats and wheat. Animals do not like it.

For grazing all these crops should be planted in September.

Hairy vetch and Austrian winter peas should be planted alone for soil building and in combination with either oats or wheat for hay next spring.

Turnips, rape, kale, and other greens should be planted in gardens. Plant early in September.

By planting enough of these crops any farmer can make plenty of food for his table and feed for his animals. The recommendation from Auburn is that farmers get details from their county farm and home demonstration agents.

LABOR DAY

Although Labor Day as we know it in America was first celebrated less than a half century ago, the parade which usually accompanies its observance might well be considered as a revival of medieval processions of the craft-guilds in England and on the continent of Europe.

While there is some difference of opinion among labor historians themselves as to the exact origin of Labor Day, it appears that its first observance was a parade by the Central Labor Union of New York in 1882.

The idea spread, and in 1897 Colorado passed the first law making the day a legal holiday. In 1894 Congress made Labor Day a holiday in the District of Columbia and in all Federal departments, since which time nearly all states have given the day official recognition.

Celebrated on the first Monday in September, Labor Day has long been widely observed, especially in cities where trade unions flourish, with parades, speeches, games and general picnics in which all classes take part.

It is the nation's annual tribute to its vast army of workers—a fitting recognition of the dignity of honest toil.

Graded and drained	2,852
Sand clay and topsoil	619
Gravel and chert	1,508
Bituminous surfacing	242
Cement concrete	113
Bridges over 20-ft. span, linear feet	91,056
The following figures are the mileage for which contracts were awarded from January 17, 1927 to June 1, 1930:
Graded and drained	2,453
Sand clay and topsoil	344
Gravel and chert	1,008
Bituminous surfacing	136
Cement concrete	380
Bridges over 20-ft. span, linear feet	102,960
15 State toll bridges (miles)	22.5

The total in both cases would be less than the total of the figures given, due to the fact that a certain amount of mileage listed as graded and drained or graveled, for example, was later improved with a higher type of surfacing and again listed under that type. In addition to the mileage contracted for from January 17, 1927, to June 1st, 1930, contracts for approximately 160 miles additional of various types will be awarded in September.

It is generally conceded that Alabama has made a fine showing in road building, both under the present administration and in preceding regimes, since the first $25,000,000 was voted. A lot of work remains to be done, however, before the State can boast of a completed system of high-class highways. A large part of this remaining work is paving, which is naturally the most expensive phase. How to match the money available from Uncle Sam and thereby turn loose $12,400,000 toward completing the job is a problem which must be solved in the near future. This need is emphasized by the fact that the regular annual Federal aid appropriations must be matched within two years from the date they become available, otherwise it will be forfeited by the State and reapportioned among the other states, as provided by law.

When the State Highway system is ultimately completed, highway authorities say that the State should have 2,000 to 2,500 miles of 1 1/2 type pavement, and another 2,000 miles of surface treatment. Critics who have compared the progress of this State in roadbuilding unfavorably with that of North Carolina have been reminded of the fact that North Carolina has spent

Three Cold Facts

Of vital interest to every citizen

1. The University of North Carolina recently made an investigation of retail food prices in Durham, N. C., a typical American city. It found that chain store grocery prices of advertised goods were 13.79 cents in the dollar lower than prices in other stores.
2. The University of Kentucky announced a few days later that it had made a retail price study of all sorts of food in Lexington, Ky., another typical city. It found food prices in chain store groceries were 14.03 cents in the dollar lower than prices in other stores.
3. The average American family spends for food between $600 and $800 a year, according to estimates of the best known authorities. This means that the average family buying its food at chain stores saves from $84 to $112 a year.

Customers of A&P knew these facts before these impartial investigations were made. It is in the public interest that everyone should know them.

Leaguers Enjoy Banquet

The Senior League of the Clanton Methodist Church gave a Rainbow banquet under the direction of Mrs. L. E. Diefenderfer last Wednesday night at eight o'clock. The basement of the church was beautifully decorated in the colors of the rainbow. On one side of the room a large rainbow was made of crepe paper. At eight o'clock thirty-eight Leaguers and friends were seated to a delicious meal. Mrs. Percy M. Pitts played the selection, "Chasing The Rainbows." Songs and yells were enjoyed all through the meal. Stanley Nivens was toastmaster. He called on the following to give toasts, on the different colors of the rainbow: Miss Ruth Prince, spoke on the color, "Red." Helen Diefenderfer on the color, "Orange." James Tiffin on the color "Yellow." Ernestine Childs on the color "Green." Jane Roberts on the color "Violet." Each color represented something different. These toasts were very much enjoyed.

Rev. Childs and Rev. Ellis were called on to say a few words. After these talks the crowd sang many songs. About ten o'clock the League Benediction was repeated, after which those enjoying this social affair departed for their homes.

Rudy Vallee's Big Secret's Out; He Picks Girls With Curves

Broadway's Vagabond Lover Admits Penchant For Pulchritude Plus Energy.

By Mabel Love

THE big secret is out. For months Broadway has been trying to find out what Rudy Vallee, whose crooning voice has made millions of feminine hearts beat faster, thought of American girls.

Here's the answer. Rudy likes them with curves, plenty of graceful, feminine curves that come from eating sugar and spice and everything nice, which is what an old nursery rhyme prescribes for beautiful little girls.

And because he was asked to pick one, Rudy blushing admitted a secret admiration for Lenore Ulric whom he thinks is all that any girl should be in the matter of appearance.

"I can see little beauty in an underweight man or woman," he said. "A girl should be able to boast a few curves and for that reason I am very much opposed to reducing fads, which cause the poor girl to deprive herself of much needed foods in order to become, not as she thinks, more attractive, but emaciated and unnatural. No girl is attractive unless she has some flesh on her bones, with a few pounds to spare."

Shuns Diet Fads Asked if he followed any reducing fads, Rudy said: "I certainly do not. I eat everything on the menu. I consider it absolutely necessary that all the needed elements be provided in the diet if one is to maintain one's health standard. We must have so much of energy building material such as sweets, so much tissue building food and vitamin containing food to withstand the strain to which we are subjected. "This goes especially for young girls who, with their mistaken idea of feminine pulchritude, omit proper foods from their diets and as a result fall victims to all sorts of ailments. Then their natural, unspoiled beauty is marred and gone forever." Rudy hails from Westport, Maine, where his father owns the town pharmacy. He entered the University of Maine using money he had earned while playing in small town orchestras and later saxophone his way through Yale and thence to Broadway. Six months later they had to call out police reserves to quiet five thousand women who crowded the doors of a theatre where Rudy was making a personal appearance.

Summer Vegetable Dishes

By JOSEPH BOGGIA, Chef
The Plaza Hotel, New York City

NOW, in the glorious season when fresh vegetables are abundant and inexpensive, it clearly behooves the conscientious housewife to make the most of her opportunities. Not only because they are among the most delicious of nature's many gifts, but because they contain so many of the elements vital to health, fresh vegetables should form an important part of every family's diet.

Serve them in the standard ways, of course, but after a while even the tastiest vegetable is likely to lose some of its appeal unless variation is introduced into the method of preparation. Watch for new recipes, and with this watchfulness combine a wise use of the three fundamental vegetable seasonings—pepper, salt and sugar.

The last, without being noticeable in the finished dish, restores the garden sweet, as the vegetable begins to lose as soon as it is picked. The woman who understands the use of these seasoners possesses the most important secret of vegetable cookery.

Carrots and Peas with Mint—Boil together for five minutes two cups cooked, diced carrots, one cup cooked peas, and one small bunch of mint. Drain and add salt, pepper and one heaping tablespoon butter. Sprinkle lightly with sugar and set in the oven until the sugar melts. Just before serving garnish with mint leaves.

Corn Louisienne—Simmer for five minutes in one and a half cups whole milk, two cups of corn freshly cut from the cob. Add salt to taste, one-fourth teaspoon paprika, one teaspoon sugar, and two tablespoons butter. Lift a shallow dish with thin slices of hot, buttered toast. Pour in the mixture. Lay strips of crisply cooked bacon over the top and garnish with sprigs of parsley.

Peas and Onions—Cook separately, until tender, one and a half cups shelled peas and one-half cup little onions. Heat four tablespoons thick cream in a saucepan. Add the peas and onions. Shake lightly until well covered with the cream and very hot. Add one-fourth teaspoon sugar. Mix thoroughly and serve.

MERCHANTS AND BANKERS HOLD CROP MEETING

Will Urge Farmers To Plant More Feed For Stock And Cover Crops

A meeting was called last Thursday night for some of the outstanding merchants and the bankers of the county to discuss the crop conditions of the county and the possibility of overcoming some of the present feed shortage conditions existing in this county.

The meeting was opened by C. E. Stapp, county farm agent, who read some suggestive letters to the farmers pointing out the value of raising vetch and Austrian peas as cover crops and food for stock for the winter months. This was followed by a general discussion by those present, including many of the leading supply merchants of the county.

Letters had been mailed out from the county agent's office seeking information concerning the shortage of stock feed in the county. Mr. Stapp stated that the reports coming in from various communities showed that approximately fifty-percent of the farmers would have enough feed for their stock to carry them through the winter months. This revelation brought up a discussion of the planting of vetch and peas as an aid to the farmers to overcome the apparent shortage of stock feed, and the fact was pointed out that the time for the planting of these crops is now.

The supply merchants stated that they would do all they could to improve the farmers of the county the value of planting these crops as soon as possible, and the price on the vetch and pea seed was given out by Mr. Stapp, showing their inexpensiveness, and the fact that commercial fertilizers would be of great improvement.

Among those present at this meeting were Jasper Robinson, a successful farmer of near Verbeia and W. L. Popwell, another successful farmer of this place. Both of these outstanding men gave testimony of the many fine points and the value of the planting of the crops suggested by the county agent, telling of their experiences with each.

Following the decision on the part of the bankers present and merchants present at this meeting to mail out letters to the farmers over the county urging the planting of the feed and cover crops for the winter, and each stating they would aid the farmers in any way possible to overcome the present shortage of feed for stock.

Those present at this meeting Thursday night were J. N. Dennis, W. C. Robinson, Glenn Boyd, president of the Peoples Savings Bank; John C. Page of the First National Bank; W. E. Guldedge of the Verbeia Bank; Irby DeRamus of Verbeia; C. E. Stapp, Jasper Robinson, Louie Smith, W. L. Popwell, W. L. Parish, J. P. Montgomery, and J. R. Mullins.

FOOTBALL INTEREST GOOD AT BEGINNING OF CHILTON HIGH

Chilton County High gridders reported for football about 30 strong Monday. The spirit and enthusiasm ran high with the outlook of strong aggregation under the direction of Coach T. H. Walker. The gridders are looking forward to an enjoyable and successful year.

Facing the problem of replacement of strong experienced players the outlook would seem dark, but filling the gaps will be under way soon and the problem of who is best suited will be around the corner in the near future.

The town of Clanton is beginning to respond with an interest so necessary to clean and wholesome pastime, and it is hoped every one will fall in line and boost their team and school as never before.

NO CHARGE FOR 3-ACT PLAY AT MT. PISGACH SATURDAY

The News has been requested to announce this week that there will be a three-act play at Mt. Pisgach church on next Saturday night, September 13th. No charge will be made for admission it was stated.

In addition to the play there will also be a pretty girl contest and a cake guessing contest. Everyone is invited to attend.

GRAMMAR SCHOOL HERE BEGINS WORK

Enrollment On Opening Day 250; Ruling Given Out On School Ages

The Clanton Grammar School opened last Monday morning with an enrollment of two hundred and fifty pupils, and indications show that perhaps this amount will be increased during the month.

Monday was given over to the various exercises of each grade which were held in their respective rooms, and the classification and registration of pupils. Regular work was begun Tuesday morning and L. J. Quinn, principal of the school foresees a very successful term.

In addition to the regular line of studies at the grammar school, classes in public school music and Art appreciation have been added this year. These classes will probably be taught by Miss Emma Sue Morris, who was also a member of the faculty last year.

It was also pointed out that all children intending entering the school who are six years old or above, must enroll on or before October 1st, during the first two weeks, as none will be allowed to enroll after that date, it was stated. With the exception of the principal, Prof. L. T. Quinn of Haleyville, Miss Bess Thomas, Mrs. Curry Thomas and Miss Jewel Vessels, the faculty will remain the same as last year.

Miss Margaret Clark was in Clanton Tuesday. Miss Clark is from Montgomery, and is making a study of the Welfare Work done by Welfare Workers of the various counties of the state. While here, Miss Clark was the guest of Mrs. C. E. Stapp, County Welfare Worker.

Mrs. D. A. Wingard and son, Chester, are visiting friends and relatives in Columbia this week.

Oscar Cleckler Killed In A Truck Accident

Oscar Cleckler, age 15, was killed Wednesday afternoon, September 3, when a truck on which he was riding overturned on the Birmingham-Montgomery highway about fourteen miles north of Montgomery.

According to the story received by the News, Cleckler was riding to Montgomery with Thomas Simms, of Clanton who was carrying a load of cottonseed from here to Montgomery, when something happened to one of the wheels of the truck and the driver lost control, causing the heavily-laden truck to overturn, crushing the Cleckler lad underneath. Simms was not injured, it was stated.

The deceased is a son of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Cleckler of this place. He was carried to St. Margaret's Hospital in Montgomery following the accident, where he died shortly afterwards.

Funeral services were held Thursday at Union Grove church near here with Dr. S. J. Ezell, pastor of the Clanton Baptist church, officiating. Interment followed in the Union Grove cemetery with Martin of Clanton in charge. He is survived by his parents, one brother and one sister.

Mrs. J. F. Sheppard of Clanton, Alabama is spending the week with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Williams, near Billingsley.

Mrs. Sheppard underwent a slight operation Sunday at the Central Alabama Hospital, and is now doing nicely.

Party From Clanton Show Nice Catches At Deep Sea Rodeo, At Dauphin Island

John Pressley, Negro Acquitted On Murder

John Pressley, negro, who is alleged to have shot and killed Bell Hardaman, another negro on September 2, at the D. O. Manning farm, west of here was given a preliminary hearing Friday before Justice of the Peace H. M. Simpson and was acquitted, according to information.

Pressley is said to have shot Hardaman, following an argument about a riding saddle, and came to Clanton where he surrendered shortly after the shooting, which took place about sunrise.

Election Managers And Clerks Named

Official announcement of the managers, clerks and the returning officer for the municipal election of the Town of Clanton which is to be held next Monday, September 15, has been made. Managers will be, W. D. Spigener, G. O. Foshee and R. J. Jones. J. C. Jones and T. H. Neighbors will serve as clerks and G. D. Retherford returning officer.

LOCAL NE-HI PLANT GIVEN GRADE A RATING BY STATE

According to an announcement received by the News this week from the Alabama State Board of Health, Montgomery, the Ne-Hi Bottling Company's plant at Clanton has been thoroughly inspected by the State Department and was given a Grade A rating.

On the delivery trucks of the local Ne-Hi plant will be seen large metal placards showing a Grade A rating of beverages bottled in the plant which is owned and operated by Horsley White. These metal placards were stamped at Kilby Prison, and the Grade A Placards have a crimson background with white letters; the Grade B placards have a blue background with white letters; the Grade C placards have orange letters on a green background and the Grade D placards have black letters on a yellow background, the information from the state department stated.

KINDERGARTEN WILL OPEN ON MONDAY MORNING, SEPT. 15TH

An announcement was given the News yesterday stating that a kindergarten will begin next Monday morning at the home of Mrs. L. D. Easterling, just across the street from the Clanton Baptist church, and will be taught by Mrs. Mary Nelle Simms.

All parents who intend entering their child in kindergarten work this year are asked to see Mrs. Simms. Those already enrolled in Mrs. Simms' school are requested to bring a chair, and remember that the kindergarten will begin Monday morning, September 15th.

REVIVAL AT ALPINE CLOSED WAS SUCCESSFUL, REPORTS

The revival meeting that was held at the Alpine church recently was one of the most successful held there in many years, according to reports reaching the News. Ten additions were made to the membership of the church, three by letter and seven by baptism.

The Rev. Mr. G. C. Eubanks, of Birmingham did the preaching and delivered most interesting and inspiring sermons.

William H. L. Smith and Clarence Smith, and H. S. Shaw of Clanton were among those who were fortunate enough to attend the Second Annual Deep Sea Fishing Rodeo, at Fort Gaines, Dauphin Island, August 25, 26, and 27, and Mr. Smith brought back one of the main prizes. This was a handsome salt water trolling rod, which was awarded for catching the largest cavalla during the three days contest. Mr. Smith's catch weighed 31 1-2 pounds which is about five pounds more than the largest cavalla taken last year. The importance of this feat is the more noticeable when it is realized that there were over three hundred fishermen competing and among these (continued to back page)

Will Helton Released Under Bond Of $750

At the preliminary hearing last Friday before Justice of the Peace H. M. Simpson, the bond of Will Helton of Jemison was set at $750. Helton was charged with the murder of Hubbard Glass on August 25, near Jemison, Alabama, it was stated. He made bond and was released Friday.

TEACHERS OF COUNTY HAVE INTERESTING MEETING SAT.

The teachers of the schools in the county which opened Monday morning, attended a very interesting meeting Saturday morning at the high school, with Miss Madge Scarborough, Elementary Supervisor, in charge.

A discussion of the policies of the county system of education was taken up and the discussion was led by Mrs. C. E. Stapp and B. Lawrence, Superintendent of Education. There were approximately seventy teachers attending this meeting, receiving instructions as to the opening of school last Monday morning.

DR. S. J. EZELL HANDS IN RESIGNATION AS PASTOR HERE

Having recently completed eight years of service as pastor of the First Baptist church of Clanton, Dr. Samuel J. Ezell handed in his resignation as pastor of the church at the regular Sunday morning services last Sunday.

This act followed a splendid sermon by the pastor, and the question was put to a vote before a large and intensely interested congregation, which was much larger than usual on Sunday mornings, unanimously voted to reject the resignation of Dr. Ezell and voiced their desire to have him continue to serve as pastor of the Baptist church here, which was accepted by the pastor.

Dr. Ezell, when tendering his resignation stated that due to the agreement he had when first coming here, and having served eight years as local pastor, he wished to give the members of the church an opportunity to express their desire, stating also that he was more than pleased with his present location, and merely wished to give his people this opportunity.

Mr. J. D. Conaway of the Isabella community was in Clanton on business yesterday.

Miss Mabel King of Billingsley was a visitor in Clanton Monday.

Mrs. S. J. Kieker has as her guest at her home here, Mrs. Claude McClure, of Jacksonville, Fla.

BROADUS CONNATSER ARRIVED IN CLANTON LAST SUNDAY

Sunday brought another of Clanton's popular vacationists in the person of Broadus Connatser. Broadus arrived from Terre Haute, Indiana where he has been playing ball during the season just closed there. He will remain in Clanton for some time, making his home with Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Fox.

CHESTER WINGARD TO ENTER GEORGIA - TECH MONDAY

Chester Wingard, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Wingard, will leave Monday, for Atlanta, Ga., where he will enter the Georgia-Tech school for the coming session. Chester is a graduate of the Chilton County High School, and was rated high in his classes here.

COUNTY AGENT'S WORK ENDORSED BY CITIZENS

Results Of Work Pointed Out And Unanimous Support Is Also Pledged

At a recent meeting of some of the outstanding business men of Chilton County, which included many of those connected with the various banks over the county, and supply merchants, the subject of the meeting to be held at the courthouse Saturday for the discussion of the work of the County Farm Agent of the county was brought up and discussed.

The meeting next Saturday at two o'clock in the afternoon has been called by the Judge of Probate and Commissioners Court of the county. The notice reads in part as follows: "The Commissioners Court will meet at the courthouse September 13th, at 2:00 o'clock P. M. for the purpose of discussing Mr. Stapp, the Farm Demonstrator's work. Mr. Stapp will make a full report of his work at this meeting."

Those attending the meeting last Thursday night heartily endorsed the work being done by the county agent, and many praised the manner in which Mr. Stapp had conducted his work among the farmers of the county during the past three years. The outstanding results brought about for the improvement of the farms and farming conditions were brought out at this meeting of bankers and merchants of the county, and the entire group voiced their disapproval of any thought to eliminate the office of the County Demonstration Agent in this county, stating that it would be a very backward step for the county to make.

At the close of the meeting, each one present, numbering fourteen outstanding business men of the county, pledged their support to the office of the county agent under its present holder, and methods of carrying on its work.

Grand Jury To Convene Here Monday, Sept. 15

Judge George F. Smoot has ordered the convening of a Grand Jury, for Chilton County, to begin Monday, September 15th, 1930, and also the settling of pleading in civil cases. There will also be a non-jury term of the Circuit Court here on September 29th, 1930, for the trial of criminal non-jury cases. The regular jury term of the Circuit Court will convene on Monday, November 3rd, 1930, and continue in session for two weeks. The first week of the jury term will be devoted to the trial of criminal cases and the civil cases will be heard during the second week.

The Grand Jury will be aided and directed in its deliberations next week by Hon. Winston Huddleston, of Wetumpka, Alabama, solicitor for the 19th Judicial Circuit of Alabama, which is composed of the counties of Autauga, Elmore and Chilton.

Every citizen, who can, should hear Judge Smoot charge the Grand Jury next Monday morning, because in so doing a better insight is obtained of the working and methods of our government and the duties of good citizenship are explained. No one can listen attentively to Judge Smoot's charges to the Grand Juries, and then say that he has not been benefitted and inspired to be a better citizen.

Mesdames B. K. Smith, F. E. Morgan and L. P. Bradford of Birmingham were the guests of Mrs. J. B. Atkinson Friday.

CHILTON HIGH SCHOOL OPENED LAST MONDAY

Speakers Point Out Wonderful Opportunity For Boys And Girls Here

The Chilton County High School opened its doors last Monday morning to a very enthusiastic, and large number of students. The school opened with a program in the large auditorium at nine o'clock.

Rev. Ernest Childs, pastor of the local Methodist Church, and Rev. S. J. Ezell, pastor of the local Baptist church conducted the devotional. This was followed by very interesting, inspiring and encouraging talks by Dr. Ezell, Judge L. H. Reynolds, Hon. J. B. Atkinson, Mrs. L. E. Dieffenferer and Mrs. Grady Broadhead.

As president of the high school Parent-Teachers Association, Mrs. Dieffenferer urged the support of all patrons of the school in making the organization have a successful year working with the school.

Others who spoke, each emphasized the value of the fine opportunity placed before the girls and boys at this time, and said words of praise for the local high school. Following the talks, the members of the faculty were introduced by Prof. L. C. Warr, principal of the school, who also stated that in addition to the improvements already on the school building, the school and the Parent-Teachers Association hoped to improve the stage in the auditorium. Judge Reynolds assured the school that the county would do its part in aiding the school, and P.-T. A. to realize this improvement.

Immediately following the program in the auditorium, registration and classification of the students went underway. Many patrons of the school were present, in fact more than have attended the opening exercises of any previous year since 1928, and apparently a greater interest was manifested, which tended to cause the faculty to feel much encouraged over the splendid opening of the school for this term.

Prof. Warr laid great stress upon the fact that work wins at the Chilton County High School and urged that teachers, pupils and patrons pull together for the interest of the boys and girls and good citizenship.

ISABELLA HIGH SCHOOL HAS A FINE OPENING LAST MONDAY

The Isabella High School, west of Clanton, opened with a fine start last Monday morning, according to a statement from Prof. J. D. Griffin, principal of the school.

The devotional was led by M. W. Mims, who also made a very inspiring talk to the teachers and students assembled on "Citizenship." This was followed by Dr. J. B. Hobdy, from Montgomery and the director of Vocational Education in the State, whose address to the student body on Education was both interesting, instructive and inspiring. Dr. Hobdy placed emphasis on the vocational side of education during his talk.

Prof. Griffin stated that enrollment of the Isabella High School would be larger than that of last year and that from all indications so far, they would have a very successful year there this time, due largely to the fine cooperation of the residents of the progressive community of Isabella, and the spirit of the students for bigger and better things in their home community.

Only two new teachers will be seen at the Isabella School and they will be Miss Betty Baldwin of Mountain Creek and Miss Celia Cumbee, of Stroud, Ala.

HOUSTON WILLIS, AGE 37, DIED LAST SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 6

Houston Willis, age 37, died last Saturday, September 6th, at his home in the Collins Chapel community. Funeral services were held on the following day at Union Grove, with the Rev. R. S. Chandler officiating, and Martin of Clanton in charge.

The deceased is survived by his widow, Rosa Willis, and two daughters.

CEDAR GROVE SINGING SAID TO HAVE BEEN ONE OF BEST

The singing convention at Cedar Grove last Saturday and Sunday was reported to have been a decided success in every way. The directors, as the Lawley and Jackson brothers, the Ingram family, the Shirley sisters and others too numerous to name.

The attendance was large, and both days the convention was in session and gave marked attention throughout the convention.

Save All The Grass And Forage Possible

Farmers of Coosa County should "Save all grass and forage" advises S. M. Day, county agent.

While the cotton crop of the South apparently will be slightly less than that of 1929 there is little promise of much improvement in prices, while on the other hand the drouth has so shortened the corn, hay and other feed crops of the nation that prices are already mounting and are very likely to go much higher said Mr. Day when quoting from a special editorial from the Progressive Farmer.

"It behooves the Southern farmer to avoid as much as possible spending low priced cotton money for high priced hay and grain," he continued. How can he do it? For one thing he can cut and save for hay every patch of crab grass, swamp grass, Johnson grass or other grass on the farm. Maybe the dry weather made it impossible to plant the stubble fields and there is a grass crop there worth saving. Sweet potato vines if properly cured have been found to make fair hay.

"Plans can be made now to get in rye and oats at the first opportunity which will provide some grazing by late fall and through the winter and then make an early feed crop next spring. Right now is the time to place orders for seed."

"Any who think it not worth while to save every bit of roughage possible should remember that a bale of 10-cent cotton doesn't go very far when it must be spent for $30, $40 and $45 a ton hay or equally as high corn and other concentrates."

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank our many friends for their kindness and courtesy shown us in the death of our son and brother, Oscar Cleckler, and we wish to especially thank Mr. and Mrs. Goodgame, Mr. and Mrs. Gore, Mrs. Sims and family, also Dr. Ezell, of the First Baptist church, and Mr. M. Martin, for their kindness and courtesy shown us. May God's richest blessings rest upon each and every one for their kindness.

Signed—Mrs. Lula Cleckler, Mrs. W. P. Logan, Mrs. Ora Martin.

Clad only in a nightshirt, Richard Capron of Kansas City, walked 13 miles in his sleep.

Billingsley News

A large number of patrons and visitors attended the joint opening of the High and Elementary School, Monday at the Elementary school building. An appropriate program was rendered Prof. H. A. Askins making the address. Special music was given by Miss Mabel King. Matters of business were mentioned by R. D. Wilkins, chairman of the Board of Trustees. The faculty was presented by Prof. R. E. Upton, who is superintendent of both schools.

They were as follows: Prof. Simmons of Mississippi, who will have charge of Physical Education and of mathematics. Miss Louise Comer of Selma, English; Miss Collier of Prattville, sociology; Miss Hila Green of Jacksonville, principal of Elementary division; Miss Annie Turk of Autaugaaville, 6th grade; Miss Ethel Ruth Gaines, Haynes, 3rd and 4th grades; Miss Sara Jones, Haynes, 2nd grade; Miss Mabel King of Billingsley, primary department.

Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Turner of Heflin are visiting relatives here.

Mr. W. C. Patrick of Montgomery spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. T. L. Patrick.

Miss Lula Raspberry of Clanton has returned home from a visit with her sister, Mrs. J. N. Carter.

Mr. and Mrs. Bob Williams and little son of Montgomery were the guests of Prof. H. A. Askins and Mrs. Matt Askins Sunday.

Mrs. Harmon Davis of Clanton is spending some time with her mother, Mrs. Askins.

Mrs. A. J. Marlar is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Willis Lawrence, at Eoline.

Mr. T. L. Patrick and daughter, Miss Maude Lee, motored to Montgomery Monday and spent the day shopping.

Rev. W. J. Ruddick, Rev. Mr. Hill and Mr. Davis of Stanton were visitors here Sunday afternoon.

When H. R. Kennion of Wilmette, Ill., was arrested for motoring at 42 miles an hour, he pleaded that he was hurrying to apply for a job.

Chevrolet Official Appears Optimistic

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 10.—Definite signs of immediate improvement in the low priced automotive field were noted by J. C. Chick, Assistant General Sales Manager of the Chevrolet Motor Company, during a recent field survey that brought him into contact with every major marketing area east of the Mississippi.

Sales are picking up. Stocks are in satisfactory shape. And the relation of new to used car stocks is in decidedly better proportion than in 1929.

"Perhaps the most noteworthy sign, however, is the confident attitude voiced by business leaders I spoke with during the trip," Mr. Chick said. "Merchants, bankers, professional men everywhere seem to feel sure of an improved fall and winter, and such opinions are a reflection of the attitude of that part of the public which those men deal with. If, as has been said repeatedly, the recession this year was mainly psychological, then we may expect an early return of new record months, for the public is looking to the future with confidence, where a few months ago it looked with a certain amount of hesitancy."

"The best proof of this changed attitude is provided by the sales chart. In the Carolines and extreme Southeast, which I visited just before the middle of the month, our sales for the first days of August were above the same period in July.

"Throughout my territory, sales today as against the same period last year are comparatively better than they have been at any time in 1930."

"Our recent announcement of a wider variety of colors, the $40 reduction on all sport models, and wire wheels furnished without additional cost are factors which will tend to aid sales in the late summer and fall. But the major factor is that changed public attitude—the replacing of hesitancy by confidence."

NEWSPAPER ADS ONLY

One of the most significant and practical tributes ever paid to newspaper advertising is seen in the recent decision of Fox theaters in about 150 American cities to use newspaper advertising exclusively in future.

Heretofore Fox managers have been permitted to exercise their discretion in handling advertising appropriations—using newspapers, direct mail, billboards, radio and other mediums as they saw fit. Now an order has gone out from headquarters that only newspapers are to be employed in the dissemination of Fox advertising.

It is significant that the great Roxy theater in New York, the outstanding success in the history of entertainment, has never used any medium of advertising except newspapers. Roxy's success is said to have largely influenced the Fox interests in making the decision to adopt a similar policy.

Chilton Farmer Tells Of Cotton Pooling

W. L. Popwell, president of the Chilton County Farm Bureau, today enumerated ten reasons why farmers of this county will profit by pooling their cotton with the Alabama Farm Bureau Cotton Association and hold for higher prices.

Mr. Popwell emphasized the fact that marketing their cotton cooperatively is the only means through which farmers may obtain the assistance offered by the Federal Farm Board and the American Cotton Cooperative Association in the marketing of cotton. He outlined ten other reasons it will pay to pool. They follow:

1. We draw a very liberal advance when the cotton is pooled.
2. We will get full advantage of any advance in price.
3. No margin is required on Annual pool cotton, option 1, if the price goes below advance.

4. Cotton is graded and stapled by government licensed classifiers.
5. We receive full advantage of grade and staple.
6. Our cotton is protected from loss by fire from time it is ginned if pooled within ten days.
7. We prevent weather damage.
8. Our cotton will be concentrated to insure the lowest possible cost of storage and insurance.
9. Our cotton will be in strong hands in our own association and will not be sold on an unwilling market, which should help to stabilize the price.
10. Our cotton will be sold to the best advantage by a central sales agency representing 300,000 cotton growers in all the cotton growing states.

E. F. Creekmore, general manager of the American Cotton Cooperative Association says, "We are not in the business to speculate, but we are in business to merchandise a percentage of the American Cotton crop for the farmers and to do so at a cost comparable to that of any other concern."

IN MEMORIAM

In sad but loving remembrance of my dear husband, Dr. Grady Clarence Roper, who departed this life one year ago, September 17th, 1929.

A devoted, noble and wonderful husband; one who was better God never made. One whose entire life was a living testimony of the purity of his faith and the strength of his religion. No one ever came to him in vain for help, his heart was so big it always had room for one more. No man was more generous, just or charitable. His wise high minded counsel has many times determined the policy of community action in Boothton, Ala., where for seven long years he worked untiringly day and night bringing a cheerful presence into the sick room, giving as much of himself as the contents of his medicine case.

His kindly nature, winning personality and real sincerity impressed the most hardened, and the effects of his strong moral character cannot be overestimated.

The blow of Dr. Roper's untimely death was hard, the shock severe. Only those who have lost one this way can tell the pain of such a blow.

Days of sadness will ever be mine. Secret tears do often flow. A voice I loved is still.

My home has been broken up. A place is vacant that can never be filled until we meet In God's celestial home. Devoted Wife, Mrs. Grady Clarence Roper.

ALABAMA COLLEGE OPENED LAST MONDAY

Montevallo, Ala., Sept. 9.—According to an announcement by President O. C. Carmichael, students from every county in Alabama will participate in the four-day program at Alabama College which began with the reception of freshmen students Monday, and was followed by a series of activities designed to give them a bird's eye view of college life before settling down to classes Friday.

High spots in the program included informal greetings and welcome extended by faculty and student committees to new students as they arrived at railway stations and by auto Monday and Tuesday; classification routine; special instruction in the use of the library and other campus facilities; introduction to representatives of the churches of Montevallo; general tests; physical examinations; and special instruction by officers of student organizations with regard to general campus deportment.

At a special program in Palmer Hall Tuesday, "The Great Adventure of College Life," with its attendant opportunities and responsibilities, was pointed out by President Carmichael. Dean T. H. Napier also presented greetings and inspirational thought.

Final registration for the session numbered approximately 850 at noon Saturday. President Carmichael stated, after refund of more than 100 application fees on account of unavoidable withdrawals.

A large number of applications had to be returned unconsidered, it was stated, on account of inadequate dormitory space.

Arrangements have been made to care for a part of the overflow, however, by the utilization of the infirmary building temporarily, until further normal withdrawals aid in adjustment to capacity.

Chilton County is represented by the following students: Misses Nellie Sumner and Mary Low Tiffin, of Clanton; Misses Nolan Meroney, Flora Mac Robinson, and Virginia Scott, of Verbena; and Miss Dody Wells, of Jennison, a total of 6.

The County Agent In Chilton County

Again, there comes before the people of Chilton County, an opportunity to express their opinion of the work of the County Agent in a manner which will bear weight before those who have authority to maintain this office in the county. The meeting, which has been called for Saturday, August 13, is for the people of the county to say whether or not they endorse the work of the County Agent in this county. At this meeting the County Agent is to give a report of the work carried on by his office during the past year, a like report, it is understood was also given before the Commissioners of this county recently.

The people of Chilton County, in an election held June 14, 1927, sanctioned the County Agent by a vote almost two to one, and no doubt during the past three years the County Farm Agent has carrying on work causing many of those who voted against the office to change their minds, and now heartily endorse the work being done by the office.

Before going to this public meeting which has been called for next Saturday, it would probably be advisable for those who do not endorse the work of the County Farm Agent to fully look into the work already done and the many things accomplished for the good of the farmers of the county through the work of the farm agent, so that they will then understand that the County Farm Agent has done for the farmers of Chilton County more than was really anticipated when the office was put into reality three years ago.

The present office holder of the County Farm Agent was complimented and highly endorsed for his magnificent, untiring and unselfish work toward assisting the farmers of the county, at a recent meeting of some of the most outstanding business men of Chilton County. It has always been the policy of this newspaper to endorse those things that have a tendency to improve living conditions and assist the farmers of the county to become more competent farmers, and most assuredly the bringing to Chilton County a county farm agent was one step wisely made in the right direction for progress of the county. That this latter statement is true, is evidenced by the fine cooperation shown the present county agent by the serious-thinking and broadminded citizens of the town and county, and if there is any idea in anyone's mind to take this office from this county, and this idea is carried out, it would most certainly be a backward step, a step that, in later years, would be deeply regretted by those who will make Chilton County their home, and in the face of this fact, the question may rightly be asked, "What citizens of Chilton County could harbor the thought that the work done by the County Agent here, is not for progress when every citizen should have the interest of the county at heart?"

When Are We Well Off?

When there is overproduction of commodities prices fall and business is slow. When there is under-production prices are high. But if there is no production high prices mean nothing at all. When the grazing grasses and the corn crop of large areas are totally destroyed by drouth, and livestock are sacrificed as an act of mercy to the stock, then it is that we realize how futile high prices are when there is nothing to sell. Farmers living in the drouth-stricken areas all will now agree that it were better to burn harvested corn for fuel in a year of over-production than to burn up corn with sunshine before it is mature.

If the American agriculturist could but grow only the amounts of wheat, corn, cotton and livestock that the world will pay a profit for, and if the American agriculturist were not at all times the helpless victim of a capricious nature's whims, he would become wealthy, independent and happy. But it is no easy matter to balance production to demand, and it is next to impossible to ward off the remorseless blows of an angry nature.

Newspaper Problems

There are many people who feel that they could run a newspaper better than they are being run by publishers and editors.

Newspaper people are always glad to get suggestions, and very frequently are influenced by them and are able to carry out the ideas thus offered. But many comments and criticisms made upon the newspapers fail to take account of certain difficulties and problems that have to be met in conducting any kind of a publication.

It is the ambition of every responsible newspaper man to deal with absolute fairness and justice with all elements of the public. But as the old saying goes, it would oft "take a Philadelphia lawyer" to tell what is the absolutely right thing.

Newspaper work is done hurriedly, and important decisions must often be made quickly. A man's cleanness of insight is put to a severe test under these conditions, in his attempt to run a broadminded newspaper. Perhaps the public will see some of these matters a little more clearly, and comprehend better the service that well-conducted newspapers give, after giving some thought to their problems.

"ROUND TOWN"

—by Doug

Opinions expressed in this column by this writer have no connection with the general policies of this paper, being wholly those of the writer, in the manner they are written.

"It is a great man who, when he finds he has come out at the little end of the horn, simply appropriates the horn and blows it forever more."

—Selected.

This week I am at a loss as to what to fill this column with. There are so many subjects that I might dwell on. One in particular, our school teachers of Clanton. But why? Aren't they all fairly attractive specimens of humanity, and some a real treat to Clantonians? It is my earnest desire to become acquainted with those who have not been so fortunate to make my acquaintance in former school terms. One in particular has attracted my almost undivided attention. Maybe, again sometime soon I will select the Who's Who among the teachers here this year.

Another subject I might deal on this week is those few persons who somewhat found fault with my opinions of last week, so I was told. But the favorable comments I am hearing will more than offset those comments not so favorable. By making a study of the originating place of the unfavorable comments concerning my opinions and writings, I have only to consider the source and laugh at them.

You have often heard of the social life of the younger generation. Well, we have it here in Clanton, in the best of style, if it has any style set. But go to it, I'm with you, provided any of you young Don Juans don't interfere with my parties. But let's go on with the fun—it's all in the game, and I'm with you, you can lay to that.

The congested condition of the negroes on the sidewalk near the railroad was not so bad last Saturday night. That was much better. I don't think any mistake will be made by breaking up that negro congregation there every Saturday night, unless the operators of the various business houses, down there would object. I don't think they will, because surely, it doesn't help their business any.

I Often Wonder

Why some people in Clanton try to do something to agitate others. Why some people are so narrow-minded—especially those who wish to be otherwise. Why some people will allow gossip and rumors to turn their head. If they realize that doing so, they are merely showing how little they are. Why some people try to hold themselves up so high, even the people of the town are noticing it. Why some parents have allowed their children, elderly daughters, become so wrapped up in themselves that they are beginning to be talked about. If these parents don't think they ought to let their children go out now and then and learn a thing or two about life—before it is too late and things go wrong. What caused a certain change in one of the school teachers. Why a certain young lady has become so haughty lately. Why the meeting was called for next Saturday concerning the work of the county agent. If what I heard was the reason is true. If those men really know what they are doing. If they thing they will profit by it. If they know they will probably lose lots of friends due to that idea of theirs. Where a certain attractive young lady teacher is staying. When the weather is going to get cooler. Why some folks want to get angry at others because I express some of my opinions. Where that book I lost is. What has become of the "sweet sixteen" girl. What makes life so funny. What the operators of the miniature golf links will do when winter comes. If they will really furnish their customers with various heating methods, inside and out. Why a certain man said what he did about Dr. Ezell's handing in his resignation. Why some supposed learned men are always against something. When some Clanton people will learn that money doesn't grow on trees. Why some parents don't look after their children more. How many of the new teachers are really human. What I will wonder next.

If things continue to develop, I think I will have a little, or maybe a big surprise for the folks who read this column in a few weeks. That is, it may not be really a surprise, but what I have in mind may be interesting to some.

Here's a letter from the famous Dooker Pooker, the International authority on the Subject of Wimmen:

Dear Doug:

Theys lotsa prissy little old wimmin in Clanton which thinks they is so smart and which spends all day in the kitchen fixin' grub for their man and then after they get it all cooked, they will turn wrong around and burn it up while they is out gossipin' with their neighbor over the back fence or something. Then when popper comes home, all tired out, and puts on his slippers, mommer comes rushin in and hollers: "Goodness gracious mercy me,—our supper is burned up." And then popper has to put on his brogans again and go out to the delicatessen and buy their supper.

When popper gets back, mommer gives baby a frankfurter to keep it quiet while she is negotiating with the can opener, that instrument which contributes so largely to the necessity for courts of domestic relations; and later gives baby some bologna or other embalmed food. Pretty soon, baby's little belly begins to hurt and it starts hollerin' for dear life; and then mommer gives her a dose of paregoric and the next morning she has to give it,—oh well, use your imagination.

Now, Doug, I believe something oughter be did about this but with you on the ground, I ain't going to be so presumptuous as to advise because you have showed that you is equal to occasions. So I wish you would take the matter under advisement and let me know what you prescribe, not forgetting that, should you need help, all you gotter do is to holler for

DOOKER POOKER.

Alabama Cotton Estimate Jumps

The prospects of cotton production in Alabama improved rather markedly during August, and on Sept. 1, the total crop was forecast at 1,357,000 bales of 500 pounds gross weight. The acreage abandonment was established at 1-2 per cent, which is about the average loss from original plantings. This left 3,606,000 acres growing on Sept. 1, with the promised yield 180 pounds, or more.

The crop estimate for Alabama released August 8, indicated a yield of 1,201,000 bales. The present forecast shows an increase of 146,000 bales, indicating a decided improvement in the conditions. The total crop for Alabama last year was 1,342,000 bales.

Alabama has slightly fewer acres this year than last, but the yield is substantially better in prospect. The rains during August made the crop look considerably better to the crop reporter, and apparently did not cause any serious boll weevil activity. Fruit found on the stalk was rather better than last year, though stands were not quite so good. With weevil infestations much less than a year ago, prospective production advanced as indicated.

South central and southeast counties appear to have the best crop in several years and their production will go largely above last year. The blackbelt is not so good and counties north of the blackbelt are not promising as big yields as in near recent years. The Tennessee Valley probably has the poorest crop of any section and its production will not come up to last year, unless a very late fall adds something to the crop already made.

There has been ginned to Sept. 1, in Alabama, 147,000 bales the largest August ginning in the past three years.

The United States crop is forecast at 14,340,000 bales, comparing with 14,919,000 last year and 14,478,000 in 1928. This forecast was also a slight improvement over the August 1 forecast. United States ginnings to Sept. 1 this year were 1,878,000, somewhat lower than this date last year.

Miss Lucille Sherwood, of Brundidge, Miss Avis Grantham of Troy, and Miss Emma Sue Morris arrived in Clanton last week to assume their duties as members of the faculty of the Clanton Grammar school.

IN MEMORY OF CLIFTON CRANE

On Monday about 1 o'clock the death angel visited the home of Mrs. J. C. Crane and took away from them their beloved husband and father. To his happy home on the Great Beyond.

He suffered only a short while from an automobile accident, which happened on Sunday, August 31. He died at the Central Alabama Hospital. All was done that human hands could do for him, but God knew best and took his soul home to sweet rest, where there will be no more sorrow and pain.

Wep not, dear mother and father, for the son that has gone on before; for God has prepared him a home on that bright and shining shore. God giveth and He taketh away and He knoweth what is best:

From our homes and hands He taketh our loved ones home to rest.

Some day in the future we know not where and we know not when, God will summons us to leave this world of sin. If we have obeyed Him, He will claim us for His own; we shall rejoice with our loved ones, around that happy throne.

You don't know what a father's love really means until you have seen him laid away. It is just a vision, so it seems,

But my dear friend, he has gone to stay.

Not until then will you appreciate that dear old precious soul, but then it will be too late.

For he will be safe within the fold.

We miss him, oh, we miss him, but God has called him away, but we all are praying to meet him in a better land some day.

His chair is vacant, his voice is still, a heart is broken that can never be filled. To know him was to love him. But he has gone forever to a better land where there is no suffering nor sorrow. He is now with the angel band, in that beautiful land of tomorrow. He has gone to the land of the blest, to dwell with the angels forevermore. He is safe in the haven of rest. With God on that beautiful shore.

Weep not, dear friends, and loved ones of the lost one, for he is standing at the Golden Gate with an outstretched hand, bidding us come and live with him in the Promised Land.

His body was laid to rest in Antioch cemetery with Rev. L. H. Limbrick officiating, and Martin in charge. He left us, he left us, yes forevermore. But we hope to meet our loved one on that bright and happy shore.

—Written by one who loved him dearly, Mr. and Mrs. Hudson Crane.

A HERO OF 1900

Just 30 years ago Calvin P. Titus, an Army bugler, was hailed as the outstanding American hero of the Boxer rebellion in China. He was the first to scale the wall of Peking when the city was taken by allied troops of several nations.

For his bravery on that occasion he was given an appointment to West Point, where President Roosevelt later pinned the Congressional medal of honor on his breast.

Since then little concerning him has appeared in the press until a few days ago, when he was retired as a lieutenant-colonel at Fort Benning, Ga., and returned to private life.

Like many another, Titus got his big chance through an unforeseen opportunity, which he promptly embraced. It is doubtful that he had a thought of self when he braved the Boxer hordes in a manner "above and beyond the call of duty."

While his exploit was in itself of no great importance so far as the success of the expedition was concerned, it showed his mettle as a soldier, and paved the way for his subsequent honorable career as an Army officer.

It is to the credit of his superiors that they recognized his fine gallantry and saw that it was suitably rewarded.

Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Dennis and Miss Susie Griffin motored to Mont gomery Sunday afternoon.

Jack and Bill Eiland, sons of Dr. John Eiland of Verbena, had their tonsils and adenoids removed at Dr. Arthur Johnson's Infirmary last week.

Marvin Reynolds, son of Mr. and Mrs. Claud Reynolds, had his tonsils and adenoids removed at Dr. Johnson's Infirmary last week.

Miss Louise Pack of Sparta arrived in Clanton to assume her duties as a member of the local Grammar school faculty.

NEW BUSINESS TRENDS

If it is true that politics makes strange bedfellows, it is equally true that something similar may be said of business, in the light of recent happenings.

Manufacturers of various commodities are adding lines apparently unrelated to their original products, some of the new combinations being almost incongruous at first glance. For illustration:

A big automobile manufacturing concern has added refrigerators and radio sets, a yeast company takes on coffee as a companion product, an old sewing machine firm brings out a vacuum cleaner, while two piano manufacturers are also building motorboats.

Perhaps these firms, as well as others,

SCHOOL DAYS AND EYESIGHT

The twenty-five million children in the United States are back at their school desks. At least one fourth of this number have eyes so completely out of focus that their progress in school is interfered with, and as a result they are being robbed of their opportunity for preparation for life.

The importance of the eyes, in acquiring an education, cannot be over emphasized. A child with defective vision is handicapped with his studies and many failures can be traced directly to this cause. These defects not only retard the child in his school work, but will handicap him later in life. If neglected, they tend to grow worse, rather than better, and will do him permanent harm. On the other hand, eye defects may, in most instances, be quickly and definitely corrected, if detected in time.

A child has no means whatever of knowing whether or not his eyes are right, and until he reaches the age of understanding and judgment, he must depend entirely upon his parents to take care of this important matter for him. They should see to it that their child's eyes are examined by a competent Optometrist or Oculist before he starts to school, and then again once each school year thereafter. Every child is entitled to a fair start in life, and this cannot be had with defective vision.

BY J. W. LANGLEY, Sect.-Treas. Ala. State Board of Examiners in Optometry.

Miss Madelyn Heflin, of Moulton, Alabama, was a recent guest of her brother, Grady Heflin, and Mrs. Heflin.

ers making similar departures from their original lines, each have a special explanation for the new activities mentioned, each logical enough from the standpoint of the company concerned.

The general idea is believed to be that by making two or more products a manufacturer is better enabled to cope with seasonal slumps and in many cases to keep working forces on a more uniform schedule of employment.

Whatever the explanation, the new trend is interesting, and seems likely to spread to many other lines of manufacturing and marketing.

Prices paid producers for fruits and vegetables, cotton and cotton seed, and all meat animals excepting hogs continued to decline during the month ending August 15 bringing the index of the general level of farm prices down three points. At 108 per cent of the pre-war level on August 15, the index was 35 points lower than a year ago, and at the lowest August level since 1915.

Soon we will have to tear down some of our corner skyscrapers to make room for the midge golf courses.

BROWN GIVES NOTES ON HOME GARDENING

Auburn, Ala., Sept. 10.—That a few rows of strawberries should be set in every home garden is a point emphasized by Julian Brown, extension horticulturist of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute, in his September letter to Alabama gardeners.

"The plants may be set the last of September or during the month of October, depending on the section of the State—and the rainfall, he said. "A lack of moisture, associated with high temperatures, makes it unsafe to set them before that time, so be prepared and set the plants when the fall rains start. Plants set during the early fall may be expected to produce a fair crop next spring. The Missionary, Klondyke, and Aroma varieties are most popular."

Mr. Brown also suggested that winter legumes should be planted for soil improvement in home gardens where space permits. Hairy vetch and Austrian peas are the legumes to use, he said, and they should be planted in that section of the garden not needed for winter or early spring planting.

The Auburn expert also reminded gardeners that they should watch closely for insects. "The turnip webworm is quite common during the late fall," he points out, and may be controlled by dusting the plants with arsenate of lead or calcium arsenate which should be diluted by mixing each pound with three pounds of hydrated lime. This same mixture will control other worms which may be feeding on cabbage, collards, lettuce, and other such plants.

"Remember plant lice can not be poisoned, but may be controlled by spraying with nicotine sulphate (Black Leaf 40) at the rate of two teaspoonfuls to one gallon of water, or by dusting with nicotine dust. Where these are not available, you may control them very effectively by spraying with strong, soapy water."

ALABAMA PECAN GROWERS FORM COOPERATIVES

Pecan growers and farm officials representing thirty-two central Alabama pecan producing counties met in Montgomery Friday and organized "The Central Alabama Pecan Growers' Cooperative Association," a local association of the National Pecan Marketing Association through which the Federal Farm Board is extending its aid to pecan growers.

C. Kirkpatrick, Selma, was named president and A. C. Rogers, Speigner, vice-president. Edward A. O'Neal, president of the Alabama Farm Bureau Federation, was named as a public director. Eight other directors coming from sections which have 50,000 pecan trees were named as follows:

J. F. Flowers, Brundidge; J. A. Kernodle, Camp Hill; Wiley Alford, Columbia; Harry Houghton, Montgomery; I. T. Lampley, Eufaula; Judge J. R. Martin, Union Springs; C. Kirkpatrick, Selma; and A. C. Rogers, Speigner.

J. Lloyd Abbot, and S. H. Gibbons, of the National Pecan Marketing Association were in charge of the meeting. Headquarters for the local association was left to the board of directors, however, it was the consensus of opinion that either Montgomery or Selma will be selected as headquarters.

The association here yesterday makes the second local association that has been organized in Alabama within the past two days. Pecan growers of Southwest Alabama met at Mobile yesterday and organized the "Gulf Coast Pecan Growers' Cooperative Association." It is planned that these two associations will accommodate the pecan growers of Alabama.

Cold Dishes For Hot Days

By JOSEPH BOGGIA, Chef
The Plaza Hotel, New York City

WHEN the dog days are upon us, and our appetites must be tempted with a special appeal if they are to respond with their wonted vigor, nothing is more appropriate than a cold main dish for either the noon or evening meal.

Carefully prepared, with a proper use of seasonings, and thoroughly chilled before serving, jellied dishes well deserve the more prominent place they are rapidly being given on the summer menu. Meat seafoods or vegetables may constitute the chief ingredient, or we may decide upon a combination of the last with either of the other two.

Tongue in Aspic—Wash and scrub a beef tongue in salted water and boil until tender. Remove skin and place the tongue in a saucepan. Add two onions, one stalk of celery, four cloves, and salt and pepper. Cover with liquor in which tongue was boiled. Add one blade of mace, one bunch of thyme, one bunch of parsley and one teaspoon sugar. Simmer for two hours. Remove tongue. For each pint of the liquor add one tablespoon of gelatin that has been soaked in cold water. Stir for two minutes over very low flame. Strain and pour over tongue. Chill thoroughly, garnish with watercress, and serve.

Fish in Jelly—Bring to a boil in a saucepan the following mixture: one cup thick tomato puree, one cup water, one-fourth cup vinegar, one-half teaspoon salt, one-fourth teaspoon pepper, one tablespoon sugar, one-half teaspoon mace, and one bay leaf. Simmer for ten minutes. Add one and a half table-spoons gelatin soaked for five minutes in one-fourth cup cold water. Remove immediately from fire. Let gelatin dissolve. Then strain mixture and cool. Have ready one cup cooked peas, one-half cup chopped celery, and one green pepper seeded and chopped fine. Cover bottom of cold, wet ring mold with a layer of peas. Then one of the celery and green pepper. Cover with the thickened gelatin mixture, and continue in this order until all ingredients are used. Chill two hours before serving. When ready to serve turn out of mold in bed of lettuce. In center pile two cups cold cooked or canned fish, well broken up and mixed with three-fourths cup salad dressing. Sprinkle with finely chopped parsley.

Time To Plant Winter Legumes

Auburn, Ala., Sept. 10.—Alabama farmers have purchased a large amount of winter legume seed. This is revealed in the reports of county agents which indicate that a larger acreage of hairy vetch and Austrian winter peas will be planted in Alabama this year than ever before. The interest of farmers in these legumes show that they are concerned about their soil which is considered the basis of profitable agriculture.

It is almost time to plant. Dean M. J. Funchess, director of the Experiment Station, and J. C. Lowery, extension agronomist, say that vetch and Austrian winter peas should be planted the last half of September or the first half of October. They recommend the drilling of not less than 20 pounds of hairy vetch seed and not less than 30 pounds of Austrian winter pea seed per acre.

"For best results winter peas should have a liberal application of phosphate at planting time," they continued. "Apply superphosphate at the rate of 400 pounds per acre or the equivalent in basic slag. Basic slag has the advantage that it can be mixed with the seed and inoculating dirt and put through a fertilizer distributor without injury to the inoculation. Superphosphate should not be used in this manner because of the injury to inoculation."

Though other methods of planting seed are used they pointed out that experimental work and field experience show that drilling is the safest and the surest method and is also a rapid way.

"Two methods of inoculation may be used," they continued, "namely, the commercial culture and inoculated soil. Main dependence should be placed on the soil inoculation. Both the commercial culture and inoculated soil should be used to insure inoculation."

News In Brief

Montgomery County has the honor of being the first county in Alabama to eradicate bovine tuberculosis to the extent that it has become a modified accredited area. This means that not more than 0.5 per cent of the cattle in the county are affected with tuberculosis. Announcement of this was made by Federal authorities on September 1. They stated that only two reactors were found in the testing of 41,207 cattle.

Discussing the question of American farm efficiency, Dean F. D. Mumford of the Missouri College of Agriculture said that the American farmer in 1925 cultivated 33 acres per man compared to 16 1-2 by the farmer in Scotland, 19 1-2 in England, eight in France, six in Germany, and four in Italy.

A survey on the wholesale marketing of live poultry in New York City showed that more poultry is sold on Wednesday than on any other day of the week. The day of greatest slaughter is Thursday in winter and Friday in summer.

Alabamians Attend Leadership School

Auburn, Ala., Sept. 10.—Jessie Mae Carroll and Roy Lee Lovvorn, senior students at the Alabama Polytechnic Institute, will represent Alabama at the International 4-H Leadership Training School, Springfield, Mass., Sept. 7 to 20. Announcement of this is made by T. A. Sams and Bess Fleming, specialists in 4-H club work, who say the representatives were selected because of high achievement and qualities of leadership. Th trip is awarded each year to one girl and one boy in Alabama.

Miss Carroll, who lives at Clayton, is a senior student in home economics. Before coming here she made a fine record in 4-H club work. In 1924 she was declared the best all-around club girl in Barbour County and won a trip to the State Short Course at Auburn.

Mr. Lovvorn lives near Wedowee and is a candidate for the bachelor's degree in agriculture at Auburn. Before entering college he made an excellent record in 4-H club work, having been president of his club, and at Auburn is rated as one of the outstanding students and campus leaders, having been elected to a large number of honor societies during his junior year.

The training school at Springfield is financed by Horace A. Moses, philanthropist, who became interested in the training of leaders in 4-H club work by happy through meetings held annually in Springfield by club members and leaders of the eastern states. The school started with 10 eastern states and each year the invitation list has been increased so that in 1930 there will be two delegates from each of 38 states and six provinces of Canada.

AN OLD-TIMER'S DIARY

An article in The Country Home presents an interesting sidelight on the views and habits of an old-time Delaware legislator, Hon. E. Sutton, who is credited with being the father of that state's excellent school system.

Sutton was a member of the state assembly more than 100 years ago, in 1823 to be exact, and like many of his day and since, he kept a diary in which his acts and impressions were recorded. Some excerpts follow:

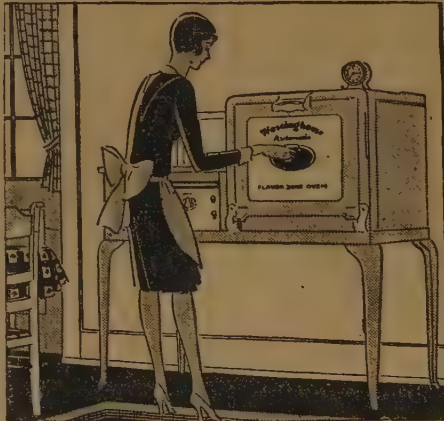

"Jan. 17, 1823: Attended state general assembly. Favor school bill. Paid three levies for oats for horse. Got some fine grain today. Took some home in my saddle bags. I believe in education."

On Jan. 25, 1823, he made this entry: "Roads worse than yesterday. General assembly killing time. Sammy Varden gave me a Qt. of prime brandy today. Planning to pass school bill tomorrow."

The school bill was passed, and the rough and ready legislator who mixed liquor and learning was corresponding training of leaders in 4-H club work by happy.

WHY WE ARE WHERE WE ARE

For a good many generations orators have declared alarm over the farm mortgage situation which, in the long run, has continued upward year after year until most farms in this county are plastered with mortgages. Why this is true in every county and state we do not know but we are acquainted with two of the main farm debt makers in Chilton County. They are FEED and FERTILIZER.

Study the records of farms, ask bankers and merchants, or get the official records from either Montgomery or Washington and you will find this to be true.

Why we let these expenditures mount higher and higher while our county agents and our College of Agriculture at Auburn continue to remind us that such is unwise, unsound, and unnecessary is difficult to understand. Habit and carelessness seem to be the main reasons.

Our county agent and our College of Agriculture at Auburn insist that we are making a serious mistake.

They tell us that we can and should produce all the feed we need and that we can and should produce all our nitrogen which is the most expensive fertilizer element we buy. In addition we can produce humus which is not realizable to buy.

"And it is neither difficult nor expensive to produce feed for our animals and nitrogen and humus to fertilize our soils. Here is how:

Plant seed of winter legumes (either hairy vetch or Austrian winter peas) in the fall. The plants will grow during fall, winter and spring. They will be ready to plow under in time to plant corn or another feed crop. The nitrogen and humus added by the winter legume will enrich the soil so that it will make big yields of the feed crop that follows.

In this way two birds are killed with one stone. They are, first, nitrogen and humus for fertilizer and, second, feed for animals.

If every farmer would grow winter legumes on every acre there would be very little need to buy nitrogen fertilizer. Of course phosphate and potash would have to be bought, but they are less expensive.

Fall of the year is here. September is the time to plant seed of winter legumes. We believe that every farmer should plant these seed on as many acres as possible. County Agent C. E. Stapp will be glad to give you information about getting seed, fertilizer, and inoculation; and also how and when to plant.

Until we do this we are certain to remain as we are and where we are except to sink deeper into debt.

But we must pull out. We can and we must. We have been stuck entirely too long. The road out is before us. If we can assist you to travel it, please call on us.

CARD OF THANKS

Editor Chilton County News:

Will you please give us space to thank the doctors and nurses of the Central Alabama Hospital for all their efforts to save our dear husband and father. They spent much time with us making the last sad hours much easier to bear. We also want to thank everyone for every kind deed, and word spoken to us in this sad hour.

We want to thank Mr. Mell Martin for his kindness and we want especially to thank Rev. Limbrick for the message of comfort he spoke at the funeral.

We thank each one for the beautiful floral offerings. Our prayer is that God will reward each one for all kindness shown us.

MORE GRAZING IS AIM OF FARMERS

If Alabama farmers wish good grazing for the livestock during fall and winter they can make it by planting seeds of small grains in September, according to M. J. Funchess, director of the experiment station of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute, Auburn.

"For most of the state," said Professor Funchess, "we recommend oats. Plant either Fulghum or red rust proof varieties at the rate of two to three bushels per acre in middles between row of cotton, corn, and other crops. Planting after a summer legume is especially good."

"Seed should be planted in September for grazing. Use a small grain drill or any other planter that will get the seed into the ground. Three weeks after planting top-dress with an application of 200 pounds of either nitrate of soda or nitrate of lime."

"In north Alabama where oats may winter kill it may be better to plant wheat for grazing. Plant the same as oats and one bushel per acre. Alabama blue stem and other beardless varieties are good. Apply nitrogen fertilizer the same as for oats."

Prof. Funchess said that rye is more resistant than oats to cold, but that it is not as good for grazing. However, it may be used. It is far better than nothing. Plant one to 1½ bushels per acre the same as oats and wheat. Fertilize the same.

September planting for grazing is emphasized. "Do not delay," said Prof. Funchess. "Plant them in September so that they will get up and make a good growth before cold weather."

CREAM BRINGS CASH

Bay Minette, Ala., Sept. 10.—More than 300 farmers of Baldwin County are selling cream as a side line to general farming, it is reported by County Agent E. E. Hale. He says that dairymen who take good care of their cows and grow more of their feed find dairying a source of ready cash that it is hard to do without.

PUBLIC PROTECTION AT GRADE CROSSINGS

One of the uses of the railroad locomotive whistle is to warn people at grade crossings of approaching trains. Such whistling is for safety and in compliance with state laws, but, as added protection, in many places other signal devices supplement the locomotive's warning.

Despite all such precautions, however, the unnecessary toll of automobile accidents at grade crossings continues, and recent statistics show as one feature that about 40 per cent of grade crossing collisions on the L. & N. system are caused, not by locomotives striking automobiles, but by automobiles actually crashing into the sides of the L. & N. trains.

Recently, in a further effort to warn the motorist against his own carelessness, the L. & N. revised its crossing signal whistle, with the following results for the first four months of its adoption in 1930, as compared with those months in 1929 under the old method of whistling:

	1930	1929	Decrease
Accidents at grade crossings	100	189	47%
Killed at grade crossings	2	22	91%
Injured at grade crossings	43	107	60%

THE RECORD SPEAKS FOR ITSELF—20 LIVES SAVED IN FOUR MONTHS AND 64 INJURIES PREVENTED.

The record shows that the exercise of plain, common sense—simply the observance of the universal rule to "Stop, Look and Listen"—will save human life and untold property damage.

More "Green" Crops Should Be Planted

Turnips, spinach, Chinese cabbage, rape, kale, collards, and mustard planted in September will furnish "greens" and other fresh products for the table during the fall, winter and spring. In view of the damage done to gardens, truck crops and other food crops by drought, planting of more than usual of these crops is being recommended by county agents and also by Dr. C. L. Isbell, head of the department of horticulture of the Alabama Polytechnic institute, Auburn.

If turnips are planted for greens during fall and winter Dr. Isbell recommends a Japanese type. For both greens and turnips during the fall and winter he recommends the purple top globe; for winter and early spring he recommends the seven-top.

In north Alabama turnip seed should be planted in late August or early September. In South Alabama plant from September 10 to 20, he said.

Siberian kale is good and will stand Alabama winters while other kales may or may not stand them. Rape is good for the table as well as for livestock, he said. Collards and spinach are well known greens. Chinese cabbage makes a big growth and is good for the table as well as chickens.

Onions, carrots, and other vegetables should be planted in season and are recommended by the county agents and home demonstration agents, Dr. Isbell said.

Each requires fertile land to make a big growth. They respond to fertilizer. Prepare land thoroughly, he added.

CLARKE POOLS COTTON

Whatley, Ala., Sept. 10.—O. C. Helms Clarke County agricultural agent, recently reported that 215 bales or 66 per cent of the cotton ginned at Whatley, was shipped to the Alabama Farm Bureau Cotton Association for sale. Keep Your Neck Lovely
With Exercise And Daily Care

THE beauty of your neck depends largely upon two things: its shape, and your skin texture. And of course your neck should be well set upon your shoulders, to lend grace to your head.

Women often forget that the neck needs exercise the same as the rest of the body. Correct exercises not only will improve the shape of your neck, but also will help your skin texture somewhat through increasing the circulation of blood under your skin. To develop a well-set neck on firm, but not over-developed shoulders, the best exercise is one which moves the entire arms. Try this: Stand erect and extend your arms as far as possible to each side. Slowly raise them as high as you can reach, and then lower them to your sides. Repeat slowly a few times. This is a simple stretching exercise, but it will invigorate tired shoulders. You can feel a gentle pull, too, at the base of your neck.

And here is another good neck exercise: Clasp your hands behind your neck and pull them forward gently while you force your head back. Slowly repeat several times.

When you cleanse your face, do you always give your neck a thorough cleansing, too? If not, you are very likely to have a dirty neck. And, of course, your skin will not keep its smooth texture long if it is exposed to cold, heat and dirt without daily attention.

At least once daily, spread cleansing cream up over your neck and face. Next, wrap soft cleansing tissues around your hands, and gently wipe off the cream, which will carry with it all the dirt and excess oil from your skin. Follow this by patting on a good skin tonic. And then, if your skin is inclined to be oily, wash your face and neck with a mild soap and warm water.

For keeping your neck contours young, and coaxing the skin into a natural, fresh appearance, try the following treatment after your daily cleansing:

If your skin is oily or normal, use tissue cream; but if your skin is dry, give it the rich lubrication it needs so badly—skin food. Smooth a generous amount of either one of these creams on your neck, working it up from your chest to your chin. Circle your neck with your hands, pressing and smoothing gently upward along your throat column. When the cream has been worked in, oil your palms and fingers with muscle oil, and repeat the upward smoothing. If you give your neck this gentle, pleasant treatment daily (as easily as you brush your hair or attend to your nails) you soon will have your skin back to normal.

In voting against Sunday golf, Councilor Weber of Southend, Eng., declared "a man who learns golf is beyond redemption."

GROUP ENTERTAINED AT MAPLEVILLE THURSDAY

On Thursday evening, September 4, Mrs. Monroe Ramsey, Mrs. Clint Coburn, Mrs. Nelson Perry, Mrs. Aubrey Shanks and Mrs. Charles Kanipe entertained in compliment to Mrs. T. A. Wright, her daughter, Miss Tommie Kate Wright, and small son, T. A., Jr., all of Linden, Alabama. Mrs. Wright is remembered by her old friends here, before her marriage as the beautiful Miss Queenie Ramsey. She, her son and daughter, have been visiting here through the week, and there is an old adage that often times, "Man proposes and God disposes." The party was to have been a moonlight affair, at Walker Springs. Mrs. Kanipe's famous ancestral cook vessels were to have been used to fry chicken and home cured ham. But just as all were on the eve of starting thunder and lightning began to play such an active part, thus changing the plans of the would-be picnickers, and all accepted the hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kanipe and had an indoor party instead. Despite the change of plans, all had a very pleasant evening, with readings, games and music, besides the sumptuous feast held in the dining room.

Those who attended were Mrs. T. A. Wright, Tommie Kate Wright, and T. A. Wright, Jr., Mrs. Monroe Ramsey, Sr., Mrs. George Foshee, Mrs. Aubrey Shanks, Miss Minnie Foshee, Miss Flossie Shanks, Mrs. N. A. Saporas, Miss Cleo Broadhead, Mrs. Clint Coburn, Mrs. Melvin Perry, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kanipe, Miss Catherine DeRamus, Messrs. Ervin Perry, Kermit Coburn and Herschel Shanks.

All parted with a vote of thanks to the kind host and hostesses and again wished for many happy returns of the evening.

DR. PEPPER SALES GROWTH IS TRACED TO "TELLING PUBLIC"

Dallas, Texas, Sept. 9.—Talk of business depression and reduced sales volume finds no echo in the report of the Dr. Pepper Company, Inc., which has just made public a statement of its sales record for the first seven months of 1930, showing net gains in sales volume for every month from January through August, 1930, ranging from 51 to 200 per cent over the corresponding months of 1929, with an average for the seven months of 72.9 per cent.

"The Dr. Pepper Company has produced this increase in its sales volume by aggressive merchandising and advertising," said J. B. O'Hara. "We believe that this is the answer to talk of business depression. It is obvious that the buying public has not ceased to purchase the things it wants. On this theory, we made large increases in our advertising appropriation for 1930, despite the economic situation which prevailed after the November stock market upset. Our sales results to date have fully justified our faith in the theory."

LEREOY HOLT NAMED STATE PRESIDENT, KIWANIS CLUBS

Huntsville, Ala., Sept. 9.—Election of Leroy Holt, Birmingham, as governor of Alabama Kiwanians at noon Tuesday featured the program of the second day of the state convention of Kiwanis Clubs here. Holt was unopposed in the election. The annual governor's banquet was held Monday night.

The high spot Monday was the address of Horace W. McDavid, Decatur, Ill., immediate past president, Kiwanis International, as representative of the international organization.

One of the most important things facing society today is retention of our humanitarianism in this mechanical age, Mr. McDavid told Kiwanians. "Mankind's greatest weakness is that it has eyes to see needs of society and ears to hear the cry of humanity and fails to do anything about it," he declared.

He emphasized Kiwanis' aims to develop morally, spiritually and physically the underprivileged child, to give him a fair chance to live, to apply the golden rule in business standards. Kiwanis' agricultural program, he asserted, aims to bring an understanding and appreciation of economical problems between the farmer and the city man.

Party From Clanton Attend Deep Sea Fishing Rodeo

were some of the Nation's most expert fishermen. Mr. Smith is receiving many congratulations on his accomplishment.

The rodeo was a success in every sense of the word, and was so proclaimed by everyone who attended. The weather was well nigh perfect, and the fish bit fast and fought furiously. In all, fourteen tarpon, silver king of the fishes, were tamed, as well as innumerable other game fish, including ling, bonita, cavalla, black fish, red fish, king mackerel, Spanish mackerel, and speckled trout. No fisherman who persevered failed to catch something of which he could boast to the folks back home.

The contest began at 5:30 Monday morning, August 25 and closed at 3 P. M. Wednesday, August 27. Promptly at the opening hour, the huge fleet of eighty some odd vessels, set out. Three hours and fifteen minutes later the first tarpon was brought to gaff by Dr. H. B. Dawson of Mobile, who thereby won a handsome sport model wrist watch, the prize offered for the first tarpon.

Thirteen more tarpon were landed during the contest, while a large number struck and stayed on the line long enough to give the fisherman the never-to-be-forgotten thrill of hooking this greatest of all game fishes. One of the tarpon was caught by Judge Charles R. Bricken of Montgomery, who is no initiate in the fishing fraternity, and who received numerous congratulations on his good work.

First prize in the contest went to W. B. Patterson, Jr., of Mobile, for the largest tarpon caught with live bait. It weighed 104 1/2 pounds, and struck at the same time that a 97 1/2 pound tarpon took the line of W. K. Moss, Mr. Patterson's fishing companion. As no one else was in the boat, each fisherman played his prize until a gaff could reach them from a nearby boat.

Second prize, offered for the largest tarpon taken on artificial lure, went to A. C. (Blossom) Sherman, also of Mobile, whose catch weighed 109 pounds, the largest fish of the rodeo.

Miss Anna Bell McCovey of Mobile brought in a seventy-one pound tarpon and won the prize for the largest fish caught by a lady. It was the thirteenth tarpon of the rodeo and was said to have jumped thirteen times.

Fishes of all sorts, sizes and descriptions, reached the Judges Committee each day. All were weighed, iced down and transported to Mobile, from which point they were sent to all points in the State. Isaac Ginsberg, scientist of the United States Bureau of Fisheries, was on hand to identify doubtful specimens and to take pictures to make reports on the fishes of Alabama Coastal waters. Mr. Ginsberg is writing a book on this subject.

In addition to fishing, participants enjoyed many other pleasures, including surf bathing along one of the South's finest beaches, the showing of five reels of motion pictures, depicting wild life scenes in Alabama and a get-together meeting which was featured by a "Liar's Contest." This last was won by Pat Byrne, Sheriff of Mobile County. In a stunt, Mrs. I. T. Quinn, wife of the State Commissioner of Game and Fisheries, presented what appeared to be a two-headed fish and was awarded as a prize a boat and outboard motor. She declined to accept it, however.

The rodeo made real angling history and Commissioner I. T. Quinn, who originated the fishing rodeo idea, is receiving enthusiastic and complimentary letters from every section of the United States. Probably no fishing event has ever called forth so many participants and spectators, or created such a spectacle. The State has gained unmeasured favorable publicity and this year's event is but one of a long line of increasingly successful contests which will be held each year in Alabama's coastal waters. Already many persons of this section have expressed a determination to spend their next year's vacation at our own State Deep Sea Fishing Rodeo, at Fort Gaines, Alabama.

RUSSELL PLANTS LEGUMES

Seale, Ala., Sept. 10.—Farmers in Russell County will plant a large acreage of winter legumes this fall. L. G. Pearson, county agent, who has been advising them to use hairy vetch or Austrian winter peas for soil improvement, reports that they have already purchased more than 40,000 pounds of seed through the county farm bureau and that he expects them to plant more than 75,000 pounds.

License Increase Caused By Census

Ice cream manufacturers and junk dealers are among dozens of sources of revenue from which the state expects increased revenues for the coming fiscal year, according to information from Montgomery yesterday. The attention of probate judges has been called by John S. Mooring, of the tax commission to the state's revenue laws which base the amount of license taxes on many items on the population of the cities, which, in some instances will double the amount paid by dealers to operate for the fiscal year, 1930-31.

Among the tax paying businesses listed by the Tax Commission are the following:

- Automobile accessory dealers: Places less than 7,000 population $25.
- Automobile repair garages: Places less than 7,000 population $10.
- Automobile storage garages: Places less than 7,000 $10.

STETSONS

ARE NOT HOT HOUSE HATS

SOME hats which blossom forth so gaily in the shop windows, wither and droop pitifully after a few weeks of actual wear. But not Stetsons! They are made of sturdier stuff! The finest materials and skilled workmanship build a Stetson to wear—and wear it does! When you buy a Stetson you need not fear a scorching sun or a soaking shower. Given a little care, your Stetson will bear up bravely under many a month of vigorous service. You can now buy a Stetson for $8.

GRAND JURY IN SESSION HERE FIRST OF WEEK

W. A. Guldage Of Verbena Chosen Foreman; Smoot Makes Forceful Charge

The Grand Jury for Chilton County was empaneled Monday and organized by Judge George F. Smoot, of Wetumpka. The Grand Jury has been aided and directed in its deliberations by Hon. Winston Huddleston, of Wetumpka, Solicitor for the 19th Judicial Circuit of Alabama.

Will A. Guldage, merchant, of Verbena was chosen as foreman of the grand jury. W. B. Foshee served as bailiff. Following are those composing the Grand Jury for Chilton County for this term:

BANK OF VERBENA COMMENDED BY STATE DEPARTMENT

In a letter received recently by Mr. W. A. Guldage, present president and cashier of the Bank of Verbena, Alabama, D. F. Green, State Superintendent of Banks commended the manner in which the present officials of the bank have brought it back to its feet, following the discovery of a shortage on the books, while Horace W. Davis was cashier.

The letter stated that the Superintendent wished to thank the cashier and directors for their hearty co-operation in working out the affairs of the bank following the discovery of the shortage. The letter went on to state, "The bank now appears to be on firm foundation and I feel under lasting obligations to you all for the splendid co-operation you gave. You saved your community from a disaster and so your whole community is indebted to you all for the splendid work of saving the institution from liquidation. In addition when a bank closes, though a small institution, it effects to some extent the entire State and Country at large and so you have done a patriotic duty which should not go unnoticed by this Department or by the citizens of your community."

Throughout the letter from the State Superintendent of Banks, the willingness to cooperate with the State Department to save the bank, and the sacrifices made on the part of the officials of the institution, was highly praised.

CITIZENS VOICE APPROVAL FOR COUNTY AGENT

Meeting Saturday Brings Out Large Number Lauding Work Of Agent

The meeting which was held at the courthouse last Saturday, and called by the Commissioners Court of the county, for the purpose of hearing the opinion of the people of the county in regard to the office of the County Farm Demonstration Agent of Chilton County was attended by a very large crowd.

Judge L. H. Reynolds called the meeting to order and stated briefly why the meeting had been called and just what the purpose was. He left the impression that due to some complaint from some of the feed dealers of the county concerning the County Farm Agent, the Commissioners Court had decided to call a public meeting and learn what the will of the people was toward this office.

C. E. Stapp, present county farm agent, made the opening talk, in which he gave a very interesting report of the work being done by himself and the office throughout the county. When Mr. Stapp finished his most inspiring talk, the large audience of people cheered him for sometime.

Following the talk by Mr. Stapp, Judge Reynolds stated that anyone who wished to say anything in favor or against the office of the county agent would have an opportunity to do so. At this, farmers from various parts of the county, numbering many rose and each voiced their hearty endorsement of the work being done by the agent. At times more than one person would rise to testify to the benefit to the farmer of the county agent's work. Included in those who took advantage of this opportunity to speak in behalf were some of the business men of Clanton.

Some one suggested that the question of who was not in favor of the county agent for the county to signify same by rising. At this, no one rose, then the question was reversed to those in favor of the office to rise. At this, practically the entire audience rose.

L. N. Duncan, Director of extension work in agriculture from Auburn, was present, and made a very inspiring and forceful talk, in behalf of the work of the County Farm Agent, Emmett Sizemore, farm agent of this district, also spoke in behalf of the work. The meeting lasted for approximately two hours.

Farmers Pooled 8,500 Bales The Past Week

During the last week the Alabama Farm Bureau Cotton Association has received 8,500 bales of cotton on which it has advanced farmers pooling it $45.00 per bale or a total of $382,500.00. This makes a total of approximately 17,000 bales farmers have pooled within the past month, according to Allen Northington, general manager, who said yesterday afternoon that the association has advanced about $765,000 on the cotton despite the fact that it would have brought very little more than this amount if sold on the spot market.

The deliveries to the association this year is more than twice the deliveries to the same date last year. Through September 13 last year the association had received 7,000 bales as compared with 17,000 on the same date this year. During the past week the deliveries have averaged over 1,000 bales per day despite the fact that rainy weather delayed picking and ginning in much of the state during the latter part of the week. On Thursday 1921 bales were received by the association. This is the largest daily delivery of the season up to this date.

"Farmers pooling their cotton are doing so with the hopes that the price will advance and they can sell their cotton for more later," Mr. Northington said. He assures farmers that the cotton association will do everything in its power to assist farmers in getting better prices.

CENTURY OF RAILROADS

The year 1930 marks the 100th anniversary of the first regularly operated steam railroad in the United States, the Baltimore and Ohio, which in 1830 was only 13 miles long. Other construction under way brought the total for the country to 23 miles in that year.

By 1840 the mileage had increased to 2,818 and extensions were made with increasing rapidity during the succeeding years. When the railroad was 50 years old, in 1880, the United States had 93,671 miles.

The ten years between 1880 and 1890 was the greatest period of railroad building. American roads built during that decade totalled 41,983 miles. The greatest railroad mileage was reached in 1916, when 254,251 miles were in operation.

Since 1916 owing to the abandonment of a number of unprofitable short lines, the mileage has been actually reduced, being now about 249,300 miles. At the present, new construction is almost entirely limited to adding a second, third or even fourth track to existing lines.

One of the most striking developments in railroading has been the increase in the size of the locomotives. From a weight of less than five tons 100 years ago, they have been built larger and larger until today many passenger locomotives weigh 150 tons or more, while those used in freight transportation range as high as 220 tons or more. A few of special type exceed 400 tons.

With the growing competition of the automobile, truck and airplane, it is impossible to predict what the next century of railroading may bring forth. It is safe to predict, however, that for heavy freight transportation the railroad will hold first place for many years to come.

CHOOSING A TRADE

Selecting a trade or occupation today is a rather more serious matter than in years gone by, owing to the rapid changes in methods of manufacture and in the products demanded by the public. In hardly any line of manufacture does one know how soon some new method or process may render all his present skill useless as a means of gaining a livelihood. Highly skilled hand craftsmen in many lines are continually being replaced by machinery, while products which were formerly in great demand are rapidly becoming obsolete, such as the buggy and other horse-drawn vehicles.

Speaking from the manufacturer's standpoint, E. W. McCullough of the United States Chamber of Commerce recently said: "I could enumerate a hundred lines of business this evolution has wiped out, and lines without number have changed in materials, construction and form."

These changes have affected the individual workmen, as well as their employers, and never were changes made so rapidly as at present. Those who enter the mechanical trades today must be prepared to adapt themselves to new conditions as they arise.

FUEL OIL FOR POWER

Will the home owner eventually drive his automobile and his airplane with the same oil fuel he now uses to heat his home? Developments in the oil burning motor are coming fast. An airplane equipped with a Diesel motor using fuel oil recently flew from Detroit to New York with six passengers at a fuel cost of only $4.45, approximately $20 less than the average cost for such a flight with high test gasoline. An oil burning engine in a motor bus is said to have reduced the cost of operation from ten cents to two cents a mile.

These developments have focused attention on the possibilities of a compression-ignition oil burning motor for passenger automobiles and engineers are at work on it with every prospect of success.

As the demand for fuel oil increases, its production and sale assume a greater importance. Coal dealers are adding it to their stocks. The filling station may be the next to fall in line. In that case it is not difficult to imagine the housewife telephoning such an order as this to the corner filling station: "A hundred and ten gallons of fuel oil, please—a hundred for the furnace and ten for the car."

County Agent's Dept.
By C. E. STAPP, County Agent

Year after year Alabama farmers increase their corn and cotton production by growing winter legumes, hairy vetch and Austrian winter peas. By increasing their production they also increase their income. County Agent Stapp has gathered evidence of this fact from various points over Alabama. He assures farmers that just as great profit can be expected by planting legumes in this county.

$1808 Invested Returned $11,103.09
Eutaw, Ala., $1808. were invested in winter legumes in Green County in 1928 and a net profit of $11,103.09 realized in 1929 from this investment, according to H. C. Appleton, County Agent. J. C. Poole of Greene County sowed 75 acres of land in vetch and Austrian Winter Peas after well fertilized cotton. It cost him $245 to sow the winter legumes.

When the legumes were large enough to furnish grazing he brought 25 head of poor cattle, grazed them two weeks and sold them at a profit of $150. Many more cattle could have been grazed on the field easily.

The legumes were turned and the land planted in cotton. An average of 900 pounds of seed cotton per acre was made. This is 525 pounds more than the county average.

Mr. Poole made $2334.37 on his cotton and $150 on the cattle making a total of $2484.37 on 75 acres.

14 Bales On 14 Acres
Opelika, Ala., R. G. Sugg, County Agent of Lee County reports that Mr. Isham Dorsey in 1928 turned under Austrian Winter Peas on March 20, and three weeks later planted cotton. On 14 acres he picked 14 bales, averaging 500 pounds each.

Vetch Worked Miracles On Calhoun Farm

Aniston, Ala., In the fall of 1925, F. C. Dulaney, Calhoun County, did not believe vetch would work on his poor farm. But the county agent, S. R. Doughty, prevailed with him to sow 5 acres. Corn, in 1926 following the vetch, made 32 1-2 bushels per acre while corn not following winter legumes made only 10 1-2 bushels per acre.

In the fall of 1926 he sowed 12 acres; in 1927, 21 acres, and in 1928, 25 acres.

The corn yield of the farm has been brought from 10 bushels per acre to 35 bushels and the cotton yield from one-third bale per acre to four-fifths bale.

In 1928 he made 19 1-2 bales on 15 acres, with an average of only 25 pounds of nitrate of soda applied at planting time.

Mr. Dulaney turned 25 acres of vetch and Austrian winter peas in the spring of 1929, but owing to hoppers and dry weather he averaged only 6 bales per acre. Nevertheless he sowed 30 acres of winter legumes in the fall of 1929 and every farmer in his community sowed from 5 to 40 acres each. Mr. Dulaney in commenting on the value of vetch on his farm said: "Vetch has actually worked miracles on my old poor red soil. All I had ever gotten was barely a living. Vetch enabled me to build a home, install lights and water, and give my children a chance."

Legumes Add $100,000 to County Income

Linden, Ala., In five years winter legumes have added more than $100,000 to the income of Marengo County farmers by increasing their yields, according to R. D. Winch, county agent.

Corn following vetch in Marengo County in 1927 averaged 34 bushels per acre, while where fertilized with 200 pounds of nitrate of soda averaged 27 bushels, and corn receiving no fertilizer made only 14 bushels per acre.

NO SUBSTITUTE FOR LOCAL REPUTATION

We used to hear about the approaching disappearance of the independent retailer. The time was close at hand, so we were told, when he must become a hired man working for the chain stores. But these prophets failed to realize that the independent retailer may have something for which no organization, however large and well managed, can ever substitute, and that is the personal confidence of his customers based upon long acquaintance.

Farsighted manufacturers seeking nation-wide distribution have begun to realize that local reputation is a precious asset. Instead of trying to replace the local merchant, some of them are studying how to help him.

One of the largest confectionery manufacturers in the world, the Frank G. Shattuck Company, which controls the Schrafft products, has recently attracted widespread attention through a Selected Retailer Plan, the operation of which is being watched with keen interest by manufacturers and distributors alike. Under this plan the Shattuck Company selects, with the cooperation of its jobbers, one or more of the most wide-awake dealers in a community and teaches them how to display, to advertise and to sell confectionery as nearly as possible after the methods successfully developed in the Schrafft's stores in New York and Boston.

"We believe," says Mr. Shattuck, "that more can be accomplished by co-operating with the local merchant than by substituting for him. There is no substitute for the responsibility which independence develops, for the intimate knowledge of local conditions which the local man is apt to have, and for the confidence and contacts which the local man is apt to have, and for the confidence and contacts which the self-respecting and respected merchant can gain in his own community. There are thousands of merchants in the United States whose quality ideals, we believe, are as great as our own, whose stores are properly located, and whose experience enables them to take advantage of a plan to reproduce as far as possible in their own places of business the factors and conditions that have made Schrafft's stores successful wherever they were established."

The lesson is perfectly plain: There is a place for both the chain store and the independent. Each has advantages and both will prosper in proportion as they adopt each other's good points while making the most of their own.

winter legumes demonstrations in Henry County shows that farmers in 1927 realized a net profit of $19.10 per acre, from the use of these crops," reports C. S. Keller. At the same time Mr. Keller reports a big increase of winter legumes planted in the county.

In 1927, some 10,000 lbs. were planted. In 1928 this was increased to over 32,000 lbs., while in 1929 86,000 lbs. of Austrian winter peas were planted.

Marion, Ala., After causing his cows to increase their production by one-third between January 6, 1929, and early spring, A. S. Eiland turned under 10 acres of Austrian winter peas and produced 5,767 pounds of lint cotton on this land. He fertilized the cotton with 300 pounds of superphosphate and 50 pounds of muriate of potash.

Corn Yield Increased 18,900 Bushels
Russellville, Ala., J. D. Wood, county agent, says that reports from 150 farmers of Franklin County covering 900 acres show an average increase of 21 bushels of corn per acre. This is a total increase of 18,900 bushels of corn for the county from the use of winter legumes and means that the cover crop has been worth at least $18,900.00 to the county.

yield after vetch was more than four times that not following vetch. C. H. Hunt of New Hope has increased his vetch planting from five acres to forty acres, reports J. B. Mitchell, county agent, Madison County.

County Agent Mitchell, also reports that O. C. Hammond of Deposit had five acres in vetch and Austrian winter peas in 1928, and made ten tons of feed following this. In 1929 he doubled his vetch average. "Such results as these caused the farmers of the county to plant 11,000 pounds of winter legumes in 1929 compared with 5,500 in 1928," Mr. Mitchell said.

ALABAMA FARMERS BUY PEAS
FROM OREGON FARMERS

Alabama farmers are this year purchasing their Austrian winter peas for planting this fall direct from farmers of Oregon, announced Edward A. O'Neal, president of the Alabama Farm Bureau Federation, yesterday.

Farmers of the state made their contacts with the farmers of Oregon, who are growing the winter peas, through their farm organization, the Alabama Farm Bureau Federation. The project was started four years ago when H. A. Schoth, agronomist of the State College, Corvallis, Oregon, and of the United States Department of Agriculture, visited Alabama and got President O'Neal and Professor L. N. Duncan, director of extension service, Auburn, interested in farmers of Alabama contracting with the Oregon farmers to grow their Austrian winter peas. Before that time most of the peas had been coming from foreign countries.

This year when the peas were being shipped to Alabama C. L. Hollingsworth, county agent of Clarke County, Alabama, went to Oregon and assisted with shipping the peas. Upon his return he assured farmers of the state that they are getting the best winter peas on the market when they buy thru their farm organization.

"Buying the peas direct from the producers is an example of how the farm bureau is attempting to aid farmers in buying all their materials, which go into production, direct from the producers and in this way help the farmers solve their financial problems," said Mr. O'Neal.

It is hoped that the coming of cooler weather may alleviate the Stein Song epidemic.

A contemporary refers to Mr. Coolidge's daily newspaper article as Cal's Calories.

ALL ABOARD FOR BETTER TIMES

A statement from William Green, President of the American Federation of Labor, says that there has been no increase in unemployment during the past few weeks, and he believes that this fact probably "foreshadows the Fall increase in industrial activity." Roger Babson, who predicted the paralysis of the stock market last fall, has just issued his first bull statement in which he advises careful buying of sound stocks (whatever those articles may be). Frequent official statements from high sources have been coming along gradually from Washington, and many of the country's leading manufacturers and financial chiefs have prophesied good times ahead. The fact that Green and Babson have joined their voices to the "cheerful chorus" furnishes encouragement to the multitudes who have been patiently waiting, as a character in Dickens' novel said, "for something to turn up."

The country could probably stand it if none of the Senatorial candidates got elected.

AN ESKIMO IN GOTHAM

Abie Broomfield is the Anglicized name of a 45-year-old Eskimo dog driver, who has been enjoying his first visit to civilization as illustrated by New York and its environs. And he is getting many an eye!

Starting at the Woolworth building, Abie pronounced it a "big, big shack; bigger than Cape Mugford." Most of the sights he witnessed were observed in silence, but he was evidently thinking a lot, as he had never been in a settlement of more than 50 people before.

Being much like other sons of Adam, Abie was greatly interested in the New York girls. Asked how he liked them, he turned on a flow of Eskimo oratory lasting a full half minute, which was interpreted to mean, "very fine." But he thought they were too thin, and suggested that they didn't get enough to eat. Asked how he would like to have one of them for a wife, he said: "You bet. Take her one year first and give her plenty fried pork. I fatten her up so she's dam fat, and good wife for best dog driver this side of North Pole."

A Community Dollar Day For Clanton

Now that business is apparently beginning to pick up the merchants of Clanton should not allow this opportunity to pass to get a large portion of the business that is being handed out by the farmers and other purchasers in the county. It would seem folly to just go along and taking what business came the way of any particular store in Clanton, and now is a most opportune time to do something to help in causing the people to feel better about conditions and live up the trade in Clanton.

To this end a Community Dollar Day would without a doubt have a great tendency to live up the trade here. At this particular time of year, and especially this particular year, the housewife, who has been acclaimed the world's most extensive buyer, is looking for the best value for her money, and wherever she thinks she will find that value, there she no doubt will spend her money.

For a Community Dollar Day to be a success, depends largely on the co-operation given by the individual business houses of a town. Other places have been putting on these trade bringing days and each time they have met with success, due in a large part to the fine co-operation displayed by the entire town to this end. A Community Dollar Day would not only help to bring trade to our town, but would no doubt, let the purchasers know that Clanton wants their trade and as evidence of this, the merchants are offering them something to come to Clanton for, and not only this, but a dollar day for the town would do great work in holding trade, as well as probably bringing new trade to the town, that heretofore has been going elsewhere.

To ask a merchant to give his co-operation in putting over a community-wide dollar day, offering as many bargains as possible for one dollar, would be merely asking him to do himself a favor, because it will be the merchants as well as those purchasers, who will profit by a successful dollar day. The Kiwanis Club of Clanton would no doubt be the proper organization to sponsor this dollar day for Clanton, due to the fact that that club is composed chiefly of the merchants of Clanton, whose interest is in Clanton and its progress, and now would be the ideal time to stage a Community Dollar Day in Clanton, and every merchant and business man should lend their hearty co-operation to make it a success in every way.

Selling To Farmers

Business men of the country spend 850 million dollars a year for advertising to reach city dwellers, but only 30 million in reaching the farmers, according to Samuel R. McKelvie of the Federal Farm Board.

He added that this disproportion in advertising efforts was all the more striking when it is considered that the farmers of the country have a normal purchasing power of ten billion dollars annually.

He might have gone further by stating that no class of prospective customers are more responsive to honest advertising than farmers and farmer's wives. Generally they take fewer newspapers and other periodicals than city dwellers and consequently read those they do take more thoroughly.

Merchants would do well to give more consideration to newspapers which reach the rural population.

Buyers Again Heard From

The increase in loaded car movements for the past week forms one of the most encouraging developments of recent times.

This increase over the previous week, was 43,955 cars, indicating that demand which has been severely curtailed, again is being felt.

There can be little doubt that stocks of merchandise and other commodities have been reduced practically to the minimum throughout the entire country and with the resumption of buying upon the part of the public will come increased demands upon manufacturing enterprises with increased employment in these plants.

Why the buying public has refrained so long from buying needful things is one of the mysteries of the existing situation. Needs have not diminished; money has been available in many quarters, but the disposition to go out and purchase what was needful has been restrained to an amazing extent.

That this dangerous policy of refusing to buy needful things has gone too far must have become patent to a great many consumers and it is gratifying and significant to find that they have at least added 43,955 car loads to their purchases. Having begun a good work, it is to be hoped that they will continue it upon the ascending scale, remembering that they are denying prosperity to themselves when they deny it to the country in which they live.

The fall season is at hand. Vast numbers of things are needed in every household and now is the time to buy, and by buying now the purchaser speeds the wheels of industry and aids in restoring normal conditions.

"ROUND TOWN"

---by Doug

Opinions expressed in this column by this writer have no connection with the general policies of this paper, being wholly those of the writer, in the manner they are written.

Well, folks, the city election is over. We are going to still have a Mayor and five councilmen, in spite of it all. Humans are funny things, but I suppose it takes them to make things work sometimes. One human can stir up such a fuss about nothing that it is even funnier than if it really happened as the Human would have it happen. So, why have it happen. Have what happen? Well, just most anything that would cause a lot of whispers round town, such as went on during the several days before last Monday. Whispers such as those remind me of those Luck Chain Letters, just kept passing on to people until almost everyone knew it by heart, and then finally there was no one to whisper it to, because they all knew about it.

Heard the other day that I was most certainly a model Clantonian, because I tried to attend to everybody's business except my own. Now ain't that funny. It was to me. Why, I even got wind of a certain young lady who was going round talking about a certain young man, telling things not very complimentary, just to try to impress some folks that she knew a lot. But come to think of it, I don't think she is so well versed, and needs a "Campus Course" that so many youngthings get when they go off to college and meet some dashing, swift young men—the latter being the instructors in said course, at it were.

Well, again. Things go round and round, and as I have often said, and repeated, you can't do wrong and get away with it. Now I will add something to that. Just watch your words and your step. Heard of an occurrence last week that caused a fellow to be kind of sorry he did something, which was sort of wrong, and didn't look just right. But such things do happen, especially in politics, so I read in the papers, but still they say you can't believe everything you see in the papers. Maybe you can't. But most newspapers print the truth, and it's the truth that hurts sometimes.

I have been disappointed so far, in the fact that things socially haven't picked up since our school marm has arrived. I haven't had the pleasure or Miss-fortune of meeting them all yet. Maybe when I do things will begin to live up. Understand that dancing is taboo for school teachers here this year. Gee, that's going to be tough on some folks. But, what's the diff, most likely the young men here would much rather sit out all the dances anyway, but I'd advise them to go slow on that, lest that should become taboo, or at least too much of it might.

Reedie Taylor has gone and done it now. He's gone and put on a great sale at the Capitol Dry Goods Store here, and I mean it is a sale. If you got any cash stored away, better bring it out and take advantage of this money-saving sale. Now this is not advertisement for the Capitol Dry Goods, but I know a real sale when I see one, and I know that Reedie is honest when he says things in his store have been reduced in price. There's no catch in this sale, and there is lots of goods in that store too.

Last Saturday was a good day for the merchants in Clanton, judging from comments coming from various ones. Well, there's one thing I got to say, you merchants better get busy and do it right now, too, cause the farmers and their wives are looking for the best value for their money, and if you got it, they will come to your store. But there is something else—you got to tell them that you got bargains in your store, so the newspapers sell space for this purpose, and you ought to start telling the folks about your bargains while the money is beginning to come in. Soon there won't be so much, and then where will you be? I'm asking you.

I think maybe a Community Dollar Day for Clanton would cause things to pick up some nowadays. But everytime I get an idea like that in my head, there is another question that arises, "Will the merchants here co-operate?" Now, that makes me angry. Other places have these Community Dollar Days, so why can't Clanton? Well, here goes, I hate to say it—the merchants and business men here are too afraid the other fellow will gain something more than somebody else will. They think too much about themselves, individually, rather than about the welfare of the town, and don't stop to think that if Clanton doesn't prosper, they don't either. I really hated to say that, but lots of people will agree with me, I think. Things are going to drag here, if the merchants and business men don't start something to live things up, and a Community Dollar Day will, no doubt do that thing. Just think it over, it's merely a suggestion, and a darn good one at that, if you pardon my saying so.

Here's another suggestion, coming from experience. I sent a fellow, rather prominent too, away from Clanton the other day, thinking that Clanton is one of the finest most welcome little towns he had ever been in, and he's been in lots of them too. I wonder how many men here would make it a point to do that whenever they are given a chance?

Today, I have a very friendly feeling for one of our citizens, a feeling different from what I have always had. I appreciate the kind reference made Sunday at church by the pastor, to this column, and to some thoughts, because those thoughts of mine were truly shot at Clanton, and too, Dr. Ezell has my favorite comment on the sermon of last Sunday night, especially when he said we were "just rocking along" and doing nothing about the many sins being committed in our town. But it is a sure thing that those who are "just rocking along" and thinking they are getting by with their sins, are altogether mistaken, because it just can't be done. But that has been illustrated quite often, and those whose conscience is not quite clear, should heed these illustrations, and remember, "A word to the wise is sufficient."

There seems to be something wrong with some of the homes in Clanton, maybe. I think a very good idea would be for the husband and wife to get together on some things, ignoring the mothers-in-law, if they tried to interfere, and see if they couldn't change things a little so as to cause a little more harmony at home, then maybe there would not be so much gossip going around about "affairs" between people.

NEWS FROM THE NATIONAL DEMOCRATIC COMMITTEE

Numbers of Idle Persons from Seven to Nine Millions Census Director Indicates

Washington, September 17.—From 7,000,000 to 9,000,000 persons may be idle on any given day, according to figures given by Dr. W. M. Stewart, Director of the Census, in a radio address on unemployment, although he said, the actual figures have not been completed. Dr. Stewart is quoted as saying:

"It is probable that about 49,000,000 people told the census enumerators last April that they had some gainful occupation. . . . It is probably true that under present normal (sic) industrial and business conditions there are not more than forty or forty-two million people in this country who on a given day are at work full time in a gainful occupation. In the forty-nine million were included some not actually engaged in their occupation at the time the census was taken; also the part-time workers, the sick and those on vacation."

The unemployment figures originally given out were confined exclusively to those "who were able and willing to work and were looking for a job." At the Census Bureau these are listed as Class A, and the number given as 2,508,151. So far, no figures have been made public for Class B, which includes "Persons having jobs but on lay-off without pay, excluding those sick or voluntarily idle," although they are also included in the 49,000,000 "who told the census enumerators last April that they had some gainful occupation."

Drouth Relief

Washington, Sept. 17.—To what extent the Federal government has aided drouth relief is a subject of comment by the Baltimore Sun, the Lynchburg News and Richmond Times Dispatch.

Referring to the proposed use of the Red Cross $5,000,000 for relief of farmers in absolute destitution, the Sun says: "The Red Cross is not a part of the national government. Its funds are provided by the people in voluntary contributions. . . . And, save courtesy, the national government has nothing to do with the expenditure of these funds."

Concerning the relief to be given through the federal aid road fund, the Sun declares: "That is not a gift from the national government. It is not even an extra appropriation. It is simply the regular federal appropriation for roads to be spent in cooperation with the state governments."

On the reduction of railroad rates on animal feeds, the Sun comments:

"That is not a favor from the President. The railroads will folt the cost." To all of which the Lynchburg News agrees and adds on its own behalf:

"Finally there is the matter of credit to drouth stricken farmers. That is perhaps the most effective aid that can be given. What the farmers need is to be placed in a position to help themselves. In the end that is going to come down to a matter of a helpful attitude on the part of local bankers."

"Thus it can be seen that behind all the balldoo most of the suggestions of how the drouth stricken areas can be aided do not involve any real measure of Federal aid. . . . In large part, the suggestion is, that the states which have been hard hit help themselves."

The Richmond Times Dispatch declares that the first constructive suggestion for drouth relief advanced by the state relief bodies is the suggestion of former Governor Byrd, Chairman for Virginia, to Secretary Hyde that 75,000,000 bushels of wheat now held by the Federal Farm Board be utilized as feed for live stock at reasonable prices and on liberal credit terms. Concerning this, the Lynchburg News says: "Not one of the things talked about prior to the Byrd scheme involved any expenditure of Federal funds not already contemplated."

Tilson Bucking A Brick Wall

Washington, Sept. 17.—Representative Tilson of Connecticut, Republican leader of the House, recently addressed the Republican workers at New Haven concerning campaign issues. An analysis of Mr. Tilson's address by the New York Times reveals the kind of logic he employed:

Mr. Tilson said: "The existing industrial depression will have little or no

In her divorce suit, Mrs. Charles Thomas of Detroit said to the Judge, "I want my husband restrained from taking a bath in my bathroom because I know he does it just to bother me."

During the extremely hot weather in Baltimore, Walter P. Montague moved his office to a city bathing beach where his employees went about their work in swimming suits and in comfort.

effect on the coming election."

The Times says: "Apparently, he (Mr. Tilson) believes that the voters will be thinking of higher things than work or bread and butter."

"This new Connecticut phase of philosophy seems to assume that good times redound to the praise and benefit of the Republican Party, while bad times can not hurt its chances."

"The voters who in 1928 were urged to support the Party which gave them prosperity are now expected to support the Party which lost it."

"If prosperity, having done its perfect political work in 1928, is supposed to retire to public life until 1932, it would be only fair to infer that many Republicans will retire to private life along with it."

"Party leaders at Washington, even some close to the administration, are admitting prospective losses to the extent of 40 seats in the House."

"As his (Mr. Tilson's) case stands today it seems to expose him to such a remark as Richard Brinsley Sheridan made about a prominent public man of his day: 'I have known many men to knock their heads against the wall; but I never before heard of a man collecting bricks and building a wall for the express purpose of knocking out his brains against it.'"

"Whine Of The Administration Lifeguards"

Washington, Sept. 17.—From the editorial columns of the Louisville Times the following frank and pungent paragraphs are taken:

"The pitiful outcry of Mr. Hoover's advocates, that criticism of the President is malignant and destructive, will not impress the reasonable observer."

"Their white utterly lacks courage and disposition to face the music which customarily is the accompaniment of political events."

"Nothing worse could happen to the President than for an electorate which admires 'thaws and sinews and many courage to reach the conviction that the whiners constitute the Administration Lifeguards: that the White House sanctions a performance in the President's behalf which has all the lack of dignity which characterizes the whimpering cry of a schoolboy who is too timid to fight: 'Quit peckin' on me.'"

American Wheat Growers Market Sacrificed For Grudery Schedules

Washington, Aug. 28.—The following letter from a prominent banker, who is familiar with agricultural conditions, was published in the Amarillo (Texas) News-Globe:

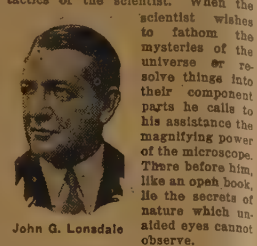

"Perhaps the most significant point brought to our attention during the discussion of the Farm Problem here yesterday by the party of Mr. Legge and Mr. Hyde was the chart used by Mr. Olson to show the increase in the tariff levied against the importation of wheat by the countries of Europe. The chart disclosed that a very light duty was charged prior to 1930, but that at the present time the import duty charged for the admission of American wheat is almost prohibitive. This action has of course been taken by those countries as a reprisal against us for the tariff bill we have recently enacted, and which it is estimated will increase the cost of living of the American people about one billion dollars. The schedules were raised in our recent tariff revision on approximately one thousand articles, chief among which, of course, are those produced by the industrial section of our population. As a consideration for the additional price paid for these commodities, we have, according to Mr. Olson's chart, sacrificed a large part of the market of the American wheat grower for his product."

"The whole situation appears to warrant the conclusion that the American people will be called upon to pay $500,000,000 to do what both Mr. Hyde and Mr. Legge admit can not be done to send men of their reputation as emissaries to the wheat growers of the country to advise them, in substance, that in order to make our tariff on industrial commodities effective we have sacrificed our European wheat market and that the American wheat grower will be obliged to pay for it by a flat reduction of ten per cent in his wheat acreage."

TAKING THE GUESS OUT OF BUSINESS

By JOHN G. LONSDALE
President American Bankers Association

BANKERS and business men err in not adopting more universally the tactics of the scientist. When the

John G. Lonsdale

The uncanny power of the microscope's all-seeing eye has revealed countless secrets for the material and intellectual progress of humanity. It has enabled us to study the processes of growing cells in plant and animal life, trace the causes of disease and successfully combat it; the life of mankind; it has added the engineer in his search for stronger and more serviceable materials, giving us taller, lighter and more sanitary structures, and better highways; it has disclosed the defects in steel rails and brought us an era of safer railway travel; it has added to the food supply of the nation; in fact, it has affected favorably nearly every activity of the human race, whether it apply to production, distribution or consumption, in time of peace or in time of war.

In the business and banking world, economic research and analysis serve as the microscope through which we are enabled to see basic factors more clearly and thus determine the causes of success and failure. Only recently have we begun to realize the full value of research and analysis and apply them in such a way as to eliminate the guesswork that was characteristic of industry a few years ago. "Eliminate the guess and reach success," might well be a motto for all of us.

Banking Conducting Continual Research

The American Bankers Association is daily submitting every phase and every department of banking to searching scrutiny and study, says John G. Lonsdale, president of this the world's greatest financial association. The findings of these investigations are made available to the 20,000 members of the organization for their guidance.

"It is a fine tribute to the spirit of cooperation among bankers that it is able to carry on this work," he says. "Bankers from one end of the country to the other are constantly giving freely and unselfishly of their skill and experience so that the association may produce the truly great results that are being accomplished."

Statistical information on national and state banks, savings institutions, trust companies and trust departments, clearing house groups and general banking is prepared after exhaustive inquiry and distributed for the use of all bankers. The organization's investigations have resulted in the passage of beneficial legislation, revision of banking practices and innumerable changes for a stronger and more efficient banking structure. It has set up an educational system through its affiliated American Institute of Banking, where 45,000 ambitious young bank men and women are now availing themselves of the opportunity to advance in the banking field.

"It has been well said that the American Bankers Association, exclusive of the Federal Reserve System, has been the greatest single nationwide source of stability and improved conditions for banking in the United States," Mr. Lonsdale says.

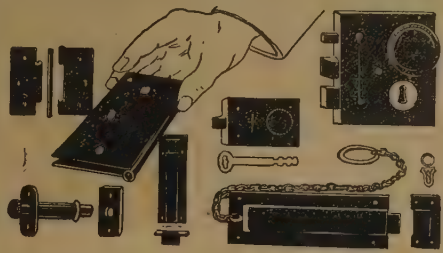

Banking Grows More Complicated

DENVER, Colo.—The increase in the technicalities of the banking business in the past dozen years was shown by a speaker before the American Institute of Banking which held its annual convention here recently when he pointed out that in 1918, when the institute last met in this city, it gave only three courses, while today it gives 10, with more subjects in preparation. At the earlier date, he said, the curriculum of the institute consisted of elementary banking, commercial and banking law, and money and banking, whereas today it consists of banking fundamentals, commercial law, negotiable instruments, standard economics, standard banking, credits, investments, trust functions, analyzing financial statements, and public speaking, while the two new subjects of bank operation and organization, and bank management are to be added.

The New Pace of Business Change

Business evolution used to move slowly—it measured off its gradual changes almost invisibly, like the hour hand on the clock. But today its tempo is that of the second hand. The movement of evolution that is quickening business with rapid changes is alarmingly visible and makes it difficult to keep up with them.—R. S. Hecht.

Choose designs for children's clothes with ironing in mind, whether you make the clothes yourself or buy them readymade. Fussy ruffles and queer-shaped parts take up the time of the laundress, and never look as well after washing and ironing as trim, smooth garments that are well-cut and made of interesting materials.

Probably fewer sandwiches would be discarded from children's lunch boxes if the bread were always of the best quality. Children will eat more bread if different kinds are served. Sometimes so simple a change as baking the bread in a new form—a twist or roll instead of a loaf, or cutting the sandwiches into fancy shapes with a cookie cutter, will increase interest in it. The change of flavor given by added raisins, dried currants, dates, or nut meats is another inducement to like the lunch bread.

The "hot pack" is not a new method of canning. It is the method of filling the jars to get good results. By the hot pack is meant cooking the fruit or vegetable to be canned for a short time, and then packing it boiling hot into jars or cans, which are then processed the required length of time. The hot pack shortens the time needed for the food in the center of the can to reach the required temperature for sterilization, insures a better product, and does away with the step that used to be known as "exhausting."

German Sea Eagle Finds Himself New Person Here

Count Lucknor, German naval captain who scoured the seven oceans during the world war and sunk $25,000,000 worth of allied ship tonnage, has found a complete new biography of himself in America, he told a correspondent for The American Magazine upon his arrival.

"I had to come to America to learn my real story," smiled the Count. From the people he meets he has gathered facts about his sea raid that he did not know before, filling in blank spots in his own story.

"For example," said Lucknor, "May or Rolph of San Francisco told me that I had sunk a couple of his ships and well-nigh ruined him. Then he invited me to become an honorary citizen of San Francisco, and you can bet I was pleased."

The ship in which Count Lucknor conducted his spectacular raids was an American-owned, British built clipper captured by a U-boat. Her captain was Johnny Scott, six feet four and seventy years old. He died just before Lucknor arrived here. The Count had found in Skipper Scott's cabin no papers... only an American flag. He carried the flag with him on all his raids and brought it with him to this country just too late.

Clanton Grammar School News Notes

Much interest is being shown in the music and art classes. Miss Morris is well trained for teaching the music while Miss Grantham is equally well trained for teaching the art.

Each teacher now has a class in physical education and the children are enjoying it as well as getting the greatly needed training in exercises. Each class is well planned and carefully directed.

Only about 40 per cent of the incidental fees have been paid and it is very necessary that all parents pay these fees without further delay.

Any child who expects to enter the first grade must enroll this week, because they are not allowed to enroll after the first two weeks of school. If a child is six years of age on or before October 1st, he must enroll now or not at all. There will be no mid-term enrollment in January.

Some of the teachers have received lovely flowers for their rooms and wish to take this means of expressing their appreciation.

WADESONIAN HAS ANOTHER GOOD PROGRAM NEXT WEEK

The management of the Wadesonian Theatre has announced another good program for next week. On Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of next week, Winnie Lightner stars in "Hold Everything," and all-talking musical comedy. On Thursday, Friday and Saturday of next week will be shown "Prince of Diamonds" as the feature, with Aesop's Fables and serial.

Tonight, tomorrow night, and Saturday will be shown, "North of The Forty-Nine" an all-talking western picture.

CAR TRIES RUNAWAY TUESDAY NIGHT AT WHITE'S GARAGE

While the operators of the White's Garage were at home Tuesday night about ten o'clock, the Chrysler roadster belonging to Jack Hayes eased off the parking place where it was kept in the garage and backing up, crashed through the front door of the garage and stopped just on the outside.

Just what caused the car to give such a sudden dash for liberty, and how it managed to avoid striking other parts in the garage before crashing through the door, appears to be a mystery to the garage operators. The car was only slightly damaged, while the garage door received the biggest damage, as the result of the midnight caper.

DOES your skin seem oily soon after it has been cleansed? Do you have trouble keeping your nose from becoming shiny? Does your skin disclose greasy patches when you use a necessary foundation cream or lotion under your powder?

A good complexion is the birth-right of every woman. Regular, thorough cleansing of the skin is necessary, of course; but with a background of good health, plus a few minutes daily use of the right beauty care, there is no reason why you should suffer from any skin fault.

It has been my experience as adviser to thousands of women that a simple, effective treatment can be found for virtually every complexion fault. In most cases just some little thing that has been overlooked has been responsible for bringing about the most astonishing changes. The first step in achieving a lovely complexion is to have a competent adviser analyze your skin problems and find just the proper treatment for your individual needs.

If you are troubled with blackheads—if your skin feels drawn after it has been washed with soap and water—if your lips dry out and chap easily—all these are indications that you are neglecting your skin or are following the wrong type of treatment. Won't you simply write me and state the trouble you are having? I know I can help you find the right road to the beauty that every woman

Forestral Prizes
For High Schools

Prizes for the best essays written by pupils of Alabama High Schools, or of schools of similar grade, will be offered by the State Commission of Forestry, pursuant to action taken at its semiannual meeting held September 2. The work of the Commission of Forestry is carried on in close cooperation with the educational and agricultural authorities, and it is felt that the proposed essay contest will be of exceptional value in coordinating many important features of the state's economic and cultural development.

The prizes will be of worth while character and designed to be of substantial benefit to the winners. The first prize has been tentatively fixed as a year's scholarship at one of the collegiate institutions of the state, the amount of the scholarship being sufficient to cover all costs and expenses necessary to a full school year's work. A trip to California and return has been suggested for second prize. For the third prize a round trip to Washington, D. C., is being considered. It is possible that there may be a fourth and a fifth prize, but this has not yet been fully determined.

The funds for the prizes will be derived mainly from contributions by private timber growers, the greater portion having already been offered the Commission, and partly from the Federal Government. It thus will not be necessary to use any of the State funds for this purpose.

High school principals will be communicated with by the Commission of Forestry and given full details as to the contest and the awarding of the prizes. It is expected that the latter will be awarded during the winter or spring so that the first prize will be available for the academic year 1931-2 and the other prizes for the summer season of 1931.

City Gets Farmers' Money, Says Jardine

"If a farmer becomes prosperous, what happens to the money he makes?" This question is answered by former Secretary of Agriculture W. M. Jardine, in the current issue of The Country Home.

The city gets it in the end, he says. "On the face of things it appears that everything else would take care of itself if the farmer is given more money and allowed to spend it as he wants," Jardine continues. "But experience proves that this is not necessarily true. Many families, relatively prosperous, move to town to get the benefits of the city's standard of life. The prosperous farmer either sells his farm or places a tenant in charge. In the latter case, the farm must support two families. The new man has his fortune to make out of the soil. The owner spends his income on things that deplete his farm community not only of its surplus but his intelligent direction."

"Even though the owner retains direction, his farm income is spent in town. It is his outright. His wealth goes into stocks and bonds, which earn the rates. If he stays on the farm, his surplus wealth goes into securities that upland the cities. The perennial loss of surplus wealth from the country is one of the outstanding causes of a barren country life. It is slow to accumulate, but surplus wealth can do a great deal if it is widely utilized. It should be the means of making the farm home a desirable place to live," Jardine declares.

Mrs. Atkinson Hostess To As-You-Like-It Club.

Mrs. J. B. Atkinson delightfully entertained the As-You-Like-It Club at her home last Thursday afternoon. The living and dining rooms were tastefully decorated in early fall flowers. The afternoon was pleasantly spent in playing Bed Domino, after which the hostess served a tempting ice course in rainbow colors to the following: Mesdames E. A. Childs, W. W. Fox, L. C. Warr, Barney Roberts, V. J. Gragg, G. C. Walker, Joe Higgins, M. P. Smith, A. S. Prince, G. Burdette, and Mrs. Roy Roper. Mrs. L. C. Warr will be hostess for the next meeting.

"Gangster Dies Natural Death"—Headline. We are still wondering whether it was "on the spot" or in bed. Einstein says "space is the most important thing in the universe. Must have been looking for a place to park. It's unfortunate for some that their love letters are not quite hot enough to cause spontaneous combustion."

A Paris woman refused to marry a man who has a twin brother, on the ground that she wanted a more exclusive model.

In her will Miss Alice Matilda Smith of Boston left her hot water bottle to her nephew.

Because she had occupied a house for 50 years, a Milwaukee court refused to evict Mrs. Sarah Tavenor although she had been unable to pay her rent for two years.

Put Profit In Homes,
Jardine Urges Farmers

"Split your year's profit in half and put it right back into the farm," W. M. Jardine, former Secretary of Agriculture, urges farmers in an article in The Country Home.

"Put it all back there," Jardine continues, "if you can, by so doing, create a better atmosphere, a place for children to grow up in beauty and freshness, among things of culture and where men and women work with pride. Does the city man who buys and furnishes an expensive house expect it to pay interest? Do we expect our libraries and places of art to pay interest? Can we figure compound interest on happiness, culture, civilization?"

Farm homes, predicts Jardine, soon will have all the appliances that city dwellers have. Manufacturers, he says, are now bending their efforts toward adapting the newest inventions to even remote country places and by installing them, farmers will lose their envy of city life.

Rogers Calls Sir Thomas
Best Loved Man in World

For sheer personality, Sir Thomas Lipton, gallant Irishman who has repeatedly raced America for the yachting championship, is the best loved personality in the world, Will Rogers declares in The American Magazine.

Lindbergh, the Prince of Wales or President Hoover, says Rogers, are unable to awaken the enthusiasm that is felt over the "best loser on earth," when he appears in America. "I have introduced him many, many times, and he has always gotten a bigger hand—not a hand, but an ovation—than any other celebrity that I have seen appearing in public."

"Everybody brightens up and smiles when they see Sir Thomas," continues Will, "is home in any country, makes his speeches and tells jokes to all nationalities. He is bringing a boat over to race us again this year. Now where could you find so many people pulling for the 'Foreigner'? But there will be more Americans pulling for the Old Rascal to grab that vase than pulled for Lindy to outwit the reporters at his wedding."

EXTRACTS FROM THE COMPULSORY ATTENDANCE LAW —ARTICLE XVI.

Age: Every child between the ages of seven and sixteen years shall be required to attend school for the entire length the school is in session. (Sec. 301.)

Parent's Obligations: a. The parent or guardian who fails to have child enroll or attend school regularly during the school term, or fails to compel child to properly conduct himself as a pupil, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction shall be fined not more than $100.00 and may also be sentenced to 90 days hard labor. (Sec. 305.)

b. The parent or guardian shall, as soon as practical, explain the cause of any absence of the child which was without permission of the teacher, and a failure to furnish such explanation shall be evidence of such child being a truant. (Sec. 308.)

c. When no valid reason for non-enrollment or non-attendance is given, the attendance officer shall give notice for attendance within three days. If child is not enrolled or not attending school within three days, criminal prosecution shall be brought against parent, guardian, or other person having control of the child. (Sec. 309.)

Child's Exemptions: a. A child whose physical or mental condition is such as to prevent or render inadvisable attendance at school or application to study, provided the county superintendent of education has issued a certificate of exemption. Before issuing such certificate of exemption, the county superintendent of education shall require a certificate from the child's practicing physician. (Sec. 304.)

b. A child 14 years of age or over who has completed the 8th Grade. (Sec. 304.)

b. A child who has to walk over 2 1/2 miles to school or to the nearest public transportation. (Sec. 304.)

d. If child holds a Child Labor Law permit to work. (Sec. 304.)

Parent's Exemptions: a. If principal teacher in charge gives child permission to be absent. (Sec. 306.)

b. If parent or guardian is unable to buy books or clothes for child, and that such parent or guardian reported, prior to the opening of the school, such dependent condition to the Juvenile Court and offered to turn such dependent child over to the State Child Welfare Department. (Sec. 306.)

c. That parent or guardian has made a bona fide effort to control such child and is unable to do so and files a written statement on court files to that effect. (Sec. 306.)

d. That there exists a good cause or valid excuse for such absence. (Sec. 306.)

e. That parent has made a bona fide diligent effort to secure regular attendance and that absence was without his knowledge, connivance or consent. (Sec. 306.)

f. If child becomes a habitual truant, or because of irregular attendance or misconduct has become a menace to the best interests of the school, the parent or guardian should file a written statement in court saying that he is unable to control said child. The Court then decides upon the case. (Sec. 307.)

To The Teachers: 1. The principal teacher of each public school shall keep an attendance register showing the enrollment of the school and every absence of each enrolled child from school for a half day or more during each day of the school year. (Sec. 301.)

2. At the end of the fifth day from the opening of school, the principal teacher shall report the names and addresses of all children between the ages of 7 and 16 years who have enrolled in such schools, thereafter, through the compulsory attendance period, the principal teacher of each school shall report at least weekly the names and addresses of all children between the ages of 7 and 16 who enrolled in said school, or who having enrolled were absent without being excused, or whose absence was not satisfactorily explained by the parent or guardian of said child. (Sec. 295.)

IN DEFENSE OF CHILDREN

By Jeanne Grey

All through these summer months we have been reading admonitions by food experts and home economists on what and what not to eat. For the most part, this advice is intended for grown-ups, while the question of the children's diet has been figuratively waved away with the oft-repeated suggestion that they drink "plenty of milk and eat spinach."

Most children abhor spinach and a great many of them stubbornly refuse to drink milk. In fact, many a mother has to administer punishment to a child who fairly shivers when she thrusts a glass of milk upon it, and the benefits of milk when forced upon a sobbing, chastised child are certainly questionable.

The sensible mother, when in dilemma, consults a pediatric physician. She finds he frequently recommends that she try hot cereal beverages which have been flavored with plenty of milk and sweetened to taste. For a hot weather drink he suggests milk shakes which have been made with sugar, milk and a cereal beverage in the proper proportions.

Among the poorer class it has been found that a great number of children are, unfortunately, tea and coffee addicts. These children have arms and legs like mere stems; they are usually a bundle of excitement; they don't like milk and they do like bread and coffee.

Anything which tends to overstimulate the nervous system should be discouraged, whether it is in the nature of food or play. Children who are aroused to anger, who are impetuous and impatient have either been brought up among persons who show these same reactions, or perhaps they were fed tea and coffee when they should have been drinking milk or a cereal beverage made with milk.

Children are normally sufficiently active and energetic without the extra stimulation produced by tea and coffee. Besides, coffee and tea have no food value and the educated mother today realizes that their use minimizes the use of nutritious beverages.

A few States have started campaigns against the practice of giving tea and coffee to children, pediatric physicians claiming that milk and hot liquids are most desirable, and further recommending that children drink water between meals when they are thirsty, for it keeps their kidneys active and helps them throw off body impurities thru the pores in perspiration.

Midget Clyde Hendershot of Beck's Grove, Ind., smiled and said that he was 28 years old when an officer told him that children weren't permitted to operate automobiles.

Plant tulips bulbs as early as they can be secured. Best results follow from planting made before the end of September, but up to December they may be put in with promise of satisfaction.

Drinking vessels in the poultry house should be kept on a platform about 12 to 18 inches from the floor. This arrangement keeps the containers and the water more sanitary. Make the platform of slats, and large enough so that the birds can stand on it comfortably while drinking.

Alligators are not discriminating in their choice of food as most reptiles, and they swallow strange things, says the U. S. Biological Survey. Biologists have examined some alligator stomachs that resemble a "small boy's pocket." Turtles, birds, small animals, pebbles, dead wood, bulrush roots, and empty shotgun shells have been found in the stomachs of these reptiles.

You can make a good home made damp-proofing paint by dissolving paraffin in gasoline or kerosene warmed to 80 degrees. Use a 10 to 20 per cent solution (3-4 to 1-2 pounds of paraffin per gallon) and apply several coats.

The lighter solution is better for compact natural stone and the heavier for brick or concrete. Be careful to do work of this kind only where there is good ventilation, natural or electric light, and no fire.

The Nation's Highways Skyways and Railways are TEXACO TRAILS

There is no other single oil company which is contributing more to the progress of transportation and industry of our great nation than The Texas Company.

More railroad car miles a year are lubricated by Texaco than by any other company. Everywhere, automobiles, buses and ocean liners look to Texaco for dependable fuel and lubrication. Daily, swift planes swoop down to airports all over the country for Texaco Aviation Gasoline and Airplane Oil—products as specialized for the air as Texaco Gasoline and Motor Oil are specialized for your car.

There is no type of machinery made, from the sewing machine in the home to the great turbine generating power for the electrical needs of an entire city, which is not being lubricated effectively with Texaco.

In each of our 48 States, in 46 foreign countries The Texaco Red Star with the Green T stands as a symbol of leadership in the petroleum field. And this leadership has naturally attracted the finest types of men as Texaco dealers. Men who are glad to serve the motorists of the country, knowing that quality products give lasting satisfaction.

NO MORE DIPHTHERIA

(Dr. Christmas Seal)

"None of my children shall ever have diphtheria!"

You can make that resolution if you like, and what's more, you can make it good. Dr. Christmas Seal suggests that you first have the Schick test applied to see if the child is already immune. If not, ask the doctor to give him toxin-antitoxin vaccine. It is divided into three doses and there is an interval of one week between each dose. After three doses have been given and have had a few weeks to take effect, your child has nine chances in ten of being immune to diphtheria. To make sure, have the Schick test applied again and see if the child's reaction is now negative. Children under six months are reasonably immune to diphtheria, but this advice applies to any child from six months up.

STATE CAPITOL NEWS

Need of cooperative action on the part of pecan growers to develop markets for their product and handle its sale in the most business like manner was stressed recently by Lloyd Abbot of Spring Hill, vice president of the National Pecan Marketing Association, and a member of the Alabama State Board of Agriculture. Mr. Abbot is a prominent grower of pecans and satsuma oranges in the Gulf Coast country. The present situation confronting pecan growers of the South is anything but reassuring, according to those well-informed on the situation, with the prospect of an overdevelopment of the industry unless new markets are found. On a recent visit to Montgomery Mr. Abbot hailed as an encouraging sign the willingness of growers of pecans to get together for mutual benefit and protection. There is plenty of power and push manifested behind the present drive for membership in the Alabama Pecan Growers Association, recently formed in Montgomery to handle cooperatively the pecans grown in central Alabama, and members are enrolling in increasing numbers.

With regard to the production of pecans Mr. Abbot said:

"With the rapid increase in the number of trees, the prospect of an overdevelopment of the industry must be faced in the near future. Ten cents per pound for pecans is as ruinous as five cents for cotton. Unless cooperative means can induce a greater use of pecans the industry can not but face disaster.

"Already when the country produces 40 million pounds of pecans, which is but 5 ounces, or a double handful per person, there is a glut in the market and the price sinks below the cost of growing them. What shall we do when the present trees begin to produce fully and ripen, say 80 million pounds or more of pecans?"

"There is but one remedy to this question. A more extended market must be found. The peanut is eaten 12 months in the year. There is no reason why the pecan might not also be sold throughout the year. The peanut is already established in the taste and customs of the American people, the pecan is limited to about 2 months in the fall and holiday season.

"The great task of the United pecan growers of the South is to put on a great movement to educate the public to like pecans and to eat them 12 months in the year. Just at present, the nation cannot consume on the average of a good handful of pecans annually."

Mr. Abbot, who is sponsoring a drive for the purpose of inducing Alabama growers of pecans to join the great cooperative movement, said that the workers were meeting with unexpected success in organization. He said that pecan growers as a class were well aware of the danger of overproduction and that they had all experienced losses due to large crops in recent years.

"The work of organization is not hard. We have very little difficulty in securing members. Growers realize fully the danger ahead and are anxious to steer clear of the rocks in time to avoid shipwreck. One big grower who has received as high as forty cents per pound for his crop and again has had to be content with fifteen cents per pound, said to me: 'I certainly want to join your cooperative organization. Unless we stick together and develop a market, there won't be any market inside three years. Over in Georgia folks dug up their peach orchards because they could not find a market. I don't want to dig up my orchard, which

MEN MAY PLAY GOLF ALL DAY

The Government made the discovery first, but retail stores have not been slow to profit by recent information, unearthed by a national survey. It seems that women today make up between 85 per cent and 90 per cent of the purchasing power in the United States.

Moreover, the ladies, it should be known, not only constitute this tremendous purchasing force, but research brings to light their tremendous influence on the purchases made directly by men.

Thus certain motor cars are purchased directly by the masculine head of the family not because as he may believe he has all by himself made up his mind, but because one or more feminine heads have investigated the motor market, sat behind this and that steering wheel, talked to this and that mechanic.

Likewise the average man doesn't investigate the textile market and decide he wants cast-iron shirts or pin tucked pajamas. But his wife or mother who gains sound, semi-technical information at her clubs, at department stores, lectures and from fashion publications, guides him tactfully toward such new developments as dureded cotton or a new kind of automobile upholstery.

It has thus come to pass that a prominent middle Western women's specialty shop has actually opened a men's furnishings department—not particularly with the thought of intriguing the gentlemen thence but because it will save the ladies the trouble of going elsewhere to make complete family purchases. The department consists of suspenders, socks, shirts, ties and the

New Dishes to Relieve The Monotony of Meals

By JOSEPHINE B. GIBSON
Director, Home Economics Dept.,
H. J. Heinz Company.

SOMETIMES we hesitate to try a new dish because we are afraid it will not appeal to the rest of the family, and we go on cooking the old standby until our meals fall into a rut. This is foolish, because there are many hundreds of excellent recipes for dishes so good that very few people could help liking them. And by using a wide variety of recipes we not only relieve the monotony of our meals for those who must eat them, but also help keep up our own interest in cooking the regular three meals a day.

These recipes are all so good that you will want to use one of them every day until you have tried the entire list, I am sure:

Stuffed Ham Roll—1 slice ham about ½ inch thick, 1 cup bread crumbs, a few grains of pepper, ½ teaspoon Mustard. Prepare Cream of Tomato Soup, 1 tablespoon chopped onion, and 1 teaspoon Worcestershire Sauce. Soak ham in water if salty. Make a dressing of crumbs, with enough liquid to moisten. Cover slices of ham with dressing, roll up like a jelly roll, and tie firmly. Put in roasting pan or casserole, cover with Cream of Tomato Soup, and surround with 1 cup par-boiled carrots. Cook until carrots and meat are tender.

Round steak, cut thick, ½ cup fat, a few slices of onion, salt and pepper, ½ green pepper chopped fine, 2 cups boiling water, or 1½ cups water and ½ cup Tomato Ketchup. Mix the salt and pepper with the flour and pound into the meat. Brown the meat in a skillet, then add the onion, green pepper, boiling water and tomato. Cover closely and simmer slowly until done. This may be cooked in a casserole in the oven, or in a skillet on the stove.

Baked Cottage Ham—1 cottage ham, 1 dozen whole cloves, ¼ cup granulated sugar, 1 tablespoon Pure Vinegar, 1 teaspoon Prepared Mustard, bread crumbs and a few tablespoons water. Soak ham over night in water. Pour this water off, and cover the ham with cold water. Bring to boiling point slowly, and simmer until ham is tender. Allow to cool in the liquid in which it has boiled. Then remove excess fat and any tough skin, and stick cloves in one side. Make a syrup of sugar, mustard, vinegar, and a small amount of water and pour over the ham. Cover one side with bread crumbs and bake until delicately brown, basting occasionally with the syrup.

Beefsteak Pie—Steak or roast beef cut into 1 inch cubes, 1 onion, ¼ cup Tomato Ketchup, 1 teaspoon Beefsteak Sauce, a small amount of flour and water, salt and pepper, and 4 medium size potatoes. Cover cubes of steak with boiling water, add onion, Tomato Ketchup, and Beefsteak Sauce. Cook slowly for thirty minutes. Remove onion, thicken gravy with a small amount of flour and water, and add salt and pepper to taste. Add potatoes, which have been cut into ½ inch slices and par-boiled in boiling salted water for eight minutes. Put into a buttered baking dish, cool slightly, and cover with baking powder biscuit dough or pie crust. Bake in a hot oven for twenty minutes and serve with Tomato Ketchup.

Fish Fillets with Tomato and Olive Sauce—8 individual fish fillets, 1½ cup crushed Rice Flakes, 4 tablespoons butter or Pure Spanish Olive Oil, and 1 beaten egg. Dip fillets in beaten egg, then in crushed Rice Flakes. Sauté in fat until tender and a golden brown. Serve with:

Tomato Sauce—2 tablespoons butter, 1 small onion, 2 tablespoons flour, 1 small can Cream of Tomato Soup, 1 small bottle Spanish Olives (chopped), and ¼ teaspoon salt. Melt butter, and add finely chopped onion. Cook until onions are tender, then add flour, and stir until smooth. Add Tomato Soup, chopped Olives, and salt, stirring until well blended and hot.

Land for Sale

Clanton, Ala., Route 2.

I have about 55 acres of land for sale. This land lies well and is good productive land, with a clay foundation, and is well terraced. A good 2-horse crop of open land, a good 4-room dwelling house with porches and halls thru, and a good new barn 28 by 30 ft. A good wagon and car shed, and chicken yard and house. A good pasture leading out from the barn, water most of the time. Good lard posts and 3 new strands of wire around pasture. A good well of water in the yard that never goes dry. About 12 acres of woodland on place. Good roads and a good mail route at the door. A junior high school one mile and a half, and church one mile and a half. Lies one quarter of a mile of the State Highway. This land is 5 miles from Clanton down the State highway, east of the place known as the Cordi old mill place. It is a desirable place to live and a good community. See W. F. GILLILAND, Clanton Route 7, who owns the place and is at present living thereon.

Working Together

For high quality and low prices

Between its customers and A&P there is a partnership which works to the advantage of both sides. The customers represent demand on the largest scale. A&P represents supply on an equally large scale.

Customers know they can get at A&P stores whatever they want, the best at lowest prices. A&P, knowing its customers' wants from their daily orders, is never in doubt. It stocks no goods that stay on its shelves unsold. Thereby it avoids losses that would have to be made good in prices.

And because A&P is thus the definitely instructed buying agent of millions of people, it is able to use their united buying power wherever their best interest dictates.

Each customer gets the benefit of every saving, of every wise selection of goods. A&P, relying on many small profits,* gains from increasing numbers of customers. They are attracted by the best service at the lowest cost. If there is a surer way of keeping the cost of food down and the quality of food up, no one has told about it.

* 2 1/2 cents on the dollar's worth of goods sold.

SPEAKING OF GOOD FARMERS

In 1925 Mr. Willie Hamilton bought a farm west of Clanton. Mr. Hamilton told County Agent Stapp that when he bought this place in 1925, one-half bale of cotton and twenty bushels of corn with reasonably heavy application of fertilizer was a good yield.

Mr. Hamilton started planting vetch and Austrian winter peas on the land he expected to plant in corn the following year. By rotating his crops of corn and cotton he has grown vetch or peas on about all of that part of his farm that he cultivates himself.

Mr. Hamilton advises us that in the last three years he has made on an average of ten bales of cotton on twelve acres, and that his average yield of corn has been above forty-five bushels. This average yield of corn has been made by following vetch, and no fertilizer has been applied to the corn. Mr. Hamilton plants from ten to twelve acres to vetch each year. Part of his vetch got so rank this year until he found it necessary to cut it for hay. He informed us that he saved seven tons of pretty vetch hay from approximately seven acres. In feed value this is about $25.00 per acre made this year by the time most farmers planted. On the land this vetch was grown on, Mr. Hamilton has better corn than most farmers of the county. Incidentally, Mr. Hamilton says he sold $122.00 worth of pigs from one sow this year.

IN MEMORY OF OUR CLASSMATE, CATO ROEBUCK

We shall meet, but we shall miss him. You will find a vacant chair.

In our Senior Class this year. For God has called our darling Classmate to be with Him up there. No one knows just how we miss him. No one knows how much he meant to us.

Those pranks, that hearty laugh, those sweet smiles.

I know we'll never forget them. Though years may come and year may go.

And these old Seniors are scattered far and near.

Some will already be with Cato up there. While others may still be lingering here.

He's gone, but it seems true only in our dreams.

For the brightness he left here on earth still gleams.

He sleeps and waits for you, dear classmates.

So, let's not disappoint him. Think of your dear friends and relatives who silently wait.

A CLASSMATE. Isabella High School.

SMALL HOMES IN DEMAND

Modern household equipment is enabling many families to live in much smaller space than was thought possible a few years ago, according to government and other experts who have lately studied current trends in housing and home-making.

While individual homes have always been the rule in the smaller cities and towns, until recently the tendency in the larger cities has been toward apartment living. But now the privacy and convenience of the small home presents an appeal which is creating an increased demand for the one-family residence.

This is due, it is said, to the fact that household efficiency heretofore possible only in the highly organized apartment is now available to the detached small dwelling, through the development of modern electrical equipment.

Of more than 100 household duties required to be performed by women, about 60 may now be done by machinery. As a home economics expert recently said:

"Electrical refrigerators eliminate the cumbersome ice-box; modern ranges do away with the coal stutle; in a porcelain tub washer clothes are spun dry for the line without a wringer; vacuum cleaners avoid the dust and labor incident to wielding a broom. Spinner washers, ironing machines and dozens of other appliances help to make a compact and efficient little 'factory' of the home."

Best of all, these conveniences conserve the housewife's health and strength, preserve her youthful beauty, and make the whole family more comfortable and happy.

GRAND JURY IN SESSION HERE FIRST OF WEEK

W. A. Guldge Of Verbena Chosen Foreman; Smoot Makes Forceful Charge

The Grand Jury for Chilton County was empaneled Monday and organized by Judge George F. Smoot, of Wetumpka. The Grand Jury has been aided and directed in its deliberations by Hon. Winston Huddleston, of Wetumpka, Solicitor for the 19th Judicial Circuit of Alabama.

Will A. Guldge, merchant, of Verbena was chosen as foreman of the grand jury. W. B. Foshee served as bailiff. Following are those composing the Grand Jury for Chilton County for this term:

BANK OF VERBENA COMMENDED BY STATE DEPARTMENT

In a letter received recently by Mr. W. A. Guldge, present president and cashier of the Bank of Verbena, Alabama, D. F. Green, State Superintendent of Banks commended the manner in which the present officials of the bank have brought it back to its feet, following the discovery of a shortage on the books, while Horace W. Davis was cashier.

The letter stated that the Superintendent wished to thank the cashier and directors for their hearty co-operation in working out the affairs of the bank following the discovery of the shortage. The letter went on to state, "The bank now appears to be on firm foundation and I feel under lasting obligations to you all for the splendid co-operation you gave. You saved your community from a disaster and so your whole community is indebted to you all for the splendid work of saving the institution from liquidation. In addition when a bank closes, though a small institution, it effects to some extent the entire State and County at large and so you have done a patriotic duty which should not go unappreciated by this Department or by the citizens of your community."

Throughout the letter from the State Superintendent of Banks, the willingness to cooperate with the State Department to save the bank, and the sacrifices made on the part of the officials of the institution, was highly praised.

DEMOCRATS TO START ACTION IN CAMPAIGN

Meeting Called For Saturday Afternoon At Court- house Here

The Democratic Executive Committee of Chilton County has called a meeting to be held on next Saturday afternoon, September 20, at the courthouse here beginning at two-thirty o'clock, according to information from Hon. P. D. Wilson, secretary of the committee.

It was stated that this meeting is for the purpose of selecting a campaign committee in behalf of the Democratic party in Chilton County. This meeting is to be open to all Democrats of the county and they are being urged to come, and especially it is urged that all members of the Executive Committee be present.

It is desired that this meeting, Saturday afternoon will be attended by a very large number of Democrats from over the county, and that it will go a long way in causing new life to be injected into the Democratic ranks of the county. Plans will also probably be made to start a very active campaign throughout the county.

MRS. MACEY JONES SERIOUSLY ILL IN MONTGOMERY HOSPITAL

Mrs. Macey Jones has been confined to the Hill Infirmary in Montgomery for the past several days, and latest reports stated that she is resting as well as could be expected.

A blood transfusion was found necessary last week and approximately forty persons from Clanton went to Montgomery and volunteered to offer blood for the transfusion. The tests were begun last Friday and on Monday of this week Thomas Simms was selected for the operation. At the time of this writing, reports from the hospital stated that transfusion appeared to have been a complete success and that Mrs. Jones is resting some better.

A. C. WILLIAMSON KILLED IN AUTO ACCIDENT IN MICHIGAN

News was received in Clanton this week of the death of A. C. Williamson, age 38, who was killed in an accident in Newago, Mich., where he was engaged in work on the construction of a power dam.

Williamson was at one time a resident of this place, and is a World War veteran. While he has been working in Michigan, his wife and small son, Jerry, have been making their home in Clanton, and have spent some time with Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Teel, here.

The body of Williamson was shipped from Newago Tuesday. Funeral arrangements were to be announced on Wednesday. Williamson is survived by his widow, Minnie Retherford Williamson, one son, Jerry, his mother, Mrs. John Williamson of near here, and several sisters and brothers. He was visiting in Clanton something like three weeks ago while on his vacation.

CITIZENS VOICE APPROVAL FOR COUNTY AGENT

Meeting Saturday Brings Out Large Number Lauding Work Of Agent

The meeting which was held at the courthouse last Saturday, and called by the Commissioners Court of the county, for the purpose of hearing the opinion of the people of the county in regard to the office of the County Farm Demonstration Agent of Chilton County was attended by a very large crowd.

Judge L. H. Reynolds called the meeting to order and stated briefly why the meeting had been called and just what the purpose was. He left the impression that due to some complaint from some of the feed dealers of the county concerning the County Farm Agent, the Commissioners Court had decided to call a public meeting and learn what the will of the people was toward this office.

C. E. Stapp, present county farm agent, made the opening talk, in which he gave a very interesting report of the work being done by himself and the office throughout the county. When Mr. Stapp finished his most inspiring talk, the large audience of people cheered him for sometime.

Following the talk by Mr. Stapp, Judge Reynolds stated that anyone who wished to say anything in favor or against the office of the county agent would have an opportunity to do so. At this, farmers from various parts of the county, numbering many rose and each voiced their hearty endorsement of the work being done by the agent. At times more than one person would rise to testify to the benefit to the farmer of the county agent's work. Included in those who took advantage of this opportunity to speak in behalf were some of the business men of Clanton.

Some one suggested that the question of who was not in favor of the county agent for the county to signify same by rising. At this, no one rose, then the question was reversed to those in favor of the office to rise. At this, practically the entire audience rose.

L. N. Duncan, Director of extension work in agriculture from Auburn, was present, and made a very inspiring and forceful talk, in behalf of the work of the County Farm Agent. Emmett Sizemore, farm agent of this district, also spoke in behalf of the work. The meeting lasted for approximately two hours.

The Nation's Highways Skyways and Railways are TEXACO TRAILS

There is no other single oil company which is contributing more to the progress of transportation and industry of our great nation than The Texas Company.

More railroad car miles a year are lubricated by Texaco than by any other company. Everywhere, automobiles, buses and ocean liners look to Texaco for dependable fuel and lubrication. Daily, swift planes swoop down to airports all over the country for Texaco Aviation Gasoline and Airplane Oil—products as specialized for the air as Texaco Gasoline and Motor Oil are specialized for your car.

There is no type of machinery made, from the sewing machine in the home to the great turbine generating power for the electrical needs of an entire city, which is not being lubricated effectively with Texaco.

In each of our 48 States, in 46 foreign countries The Texaco Red Star with the Green T stands as a symbol of leadership in the petroleum field. And this leadership has naturally attracted the finest types of men as Texaco dealers. Men who are glad to serve the motorists of the country, knowing that quality products give lasting satisfaction.

THE TEXAS COMPANY

Refiners of a complete line of Texaco Petroleum Products including Gasoline, Motor Oil, Industrial Lubricants, Railroad, Marine and Farm Lubricants, Road Asphalts and Asphalt Roofing.

A Community Dollar Day For Clanton

Now that business is apparently beginning to pick up the merchants of Clanton should not allow this opportunity to pass to get a large portion of the business that is being handed out by the farmers and other purchasers in the county. It would seem folly to just go along and taking what business came the way of any particular store in Clanton, and now is a most opportune time to do something to help in causing the people to feel better about conditions and live up the trade in Clanton.

To this end a Community Dollar Day would without a doubt have a great tendency to live up the trade here. At this particular time of year, and especially this particular year, the housewife, who has been acclimated the world's most extensive buyer, is looking for the best value for her money, and wherever she thinks she will find that value, there she no doubt will spend her money.

For a Community Dollar Day to be a success, depends largely on the co-operation given by the individual business houses of a town. Other places have been putting on these trade bringing days and each time they have met with success, due in a large part to the fine co-operation displayed by the entire town to this end. A Community Dollar Day would not only help to bring trade to our town, but would no doubt, let the purchasers know that Clanton wants their trade and as evidence of this, the merchants are offering them something to come to Clanton for, and not only this, but a dollar day for the town would do great work in holding trade, as well as probably bringing new trade to the town, that heretofore has been going elsewhere.

To ask a merchant to give his co-operation in putting over a community-wide dollar day, offering as many bargains as possible for one dollar, would be merely asking him to do himself a favor, because it will be the merchants as well as those purchasers, who will profit by a successful dollar day. The Kiwanis Club of Clanton would no doubt be the proper organization to sponsor this dollar day for Clanton, due to the fact that that club is composed chiefly of the merchants of Clanton, whose interest is in Clanton and its progress, and now would be the ideal time to stage a Community Dollar Day in Clanton, and every merchant and business man should lend their hearty co-operation to make it a success in every way.

Selling To Farmers

Business men of the country spend 850 million dollars a year for advertising to reach city dwellers, but only 30 million in reaching the farmers, according to Samuel R. McKelvie of the Federal Farm Board.

He added that this disproportion in advertising efforts was all the more striking when it is considered that the farmers of the country have a normal purchasing power of ten billion dollars annually.

He might have gone further by stating that no class of prospective customers are more responsive to honest advertising than farmers and farmer's wives. Generally they take fewer newspapers and other periodicals than city dwellers and consequently read those they do take more thoroughly.

Merchants would do well to give more consideration to newspapers which reach the rural population.

Buyers Again Heard From

The increase in loaded car movements for the past week forms one of the most encouraging developments of recent times.

This increase over the previous week, was 43,955 cars, indicating that demand which has been severely curtailed, again is being felt.

There can be little doubt that stocks of merchandise and other commodities have been reduced practically to the minimum throughout the entire country and with the resumption of buying upon the part of the public will cause increased demands upon manufacturing enterprises with increased employment in these plants.

Why the buying public has refrained so long from buying needful things is one of the mysteries of the existing situation. Needs have not diminished; money has been available in many quarters, but the disposition to go out and purchase what was needful has been restrained to an amazing extent.

That this dangerous policy of refusing to buy needful things has gone too far must have become patent to a great many consumers and it is gratifying and significant to find that they have at least added 43,955 car loads to their purchases. Having begun a good work, it is to be hoped that they will continue it upon the ascending scale, remembering that they are denying prosperity to themselves when they deny it to the country in which they live.

The fall season is at hand. Vast numbers of things are needed in every household and now is the time to buy, and by buying now the purchaser speeds the wheels of industry and aids in restoring normal conditions.

"ROUND TOWN"

---by Doug

Opinions expressed in this column by this writer have no connection with the general policies of this paper, being wholly those of the writer, in the manner they are written.

Well, folks, the city election is over. We are going to still have a Mayor and five councilmen, in spite of it all. Humans are funny things, but I suppose it takes them to make things work sometimes. One human can stir up such a fuss about nothing that it is even funnier than if it really happened as the Human would have it happen. So, why have it happen. Have what happen? Well, just most anything that would cause a lot of whispers round town, such as went on during the several days before last Monday. Whispers such as those remind me of those Luck Chain Letters, just kept passing on to people until almost everyone knew it by heart, and then finally there was no one to whisper it to, because they all knew about it.

Heard the other day that I was most certainly a model Clantonian, because I tried to attend to everybody's business except my own. Now ain't that funny. It was to me. Why, I even got wind of a certain young lady who was going round talking about a certain young man, telling things not very complimentary, just to try to impress some folks that she knew a lot. But come to think of it, I don't think she is so well versed, and needs a "Campus Course" that so many youngthings get when they go off to college and meet some dashing, swift young men—the latter being the instructors in said course, at it were.

Well, again. Things go round and round, and as I have often said, and repeated, you can't do wrong and get away with it. Now I will add something to that. Just watch your words and your step. Heard of an occurrence last week that caused a fellow to be kind of sorry he did something, which was sort of wrong, and didn't look just right. But such things do happen, especially in politics, so I read in the papers, but still they say you can't believe everything you see in the papers. Maybe you can't. But most newspapers print the truth, and it's the truth that hurts sometimes.

I have been disappointed so far, in the fact that things, socially haven't picked up since our school marns have arrived. I haven't had the pleasure or Miss-fortune of meeting them all yet. Maybe when I do things will begin to live up. Understand that dancing is taboo for school teachers here this year. Gee, that's going to be tough on some folks. But what's the diff, most likely the young men here would much rather sit out all the dances anyway, but I'd advise them to go slow on that, lest that should become taboo, or at least too much of it might.

Reedie Taylor has gone and done it now. He's gone and put on a great sale at the Capitol Dry Goods Store here, and I mean it is a sale. If you got any cash stored away, better bring it out and take advantage of this money-saving sale. Now this is not advertisement for the Capitol Dry Goods, but I know a real sale when I see one, and I know that Reedie is honest when he says things in his store have been reduced in price. There's no catch in this sale, and there is lots of goods in that store too.

Last Saturday was a good day for the merchants in Clanton, judging from comments coming from various ones. Well, there's one thing I got to say, you merchants better get busy and do it right now, too, cause the farmers and their wives are looking for the best value for their money, and if you got it, they will come to your store. But there is something else—you got to tell them that you got bargains in your store, so the newspapers sell space for this purpose, and you ought to start telling the folks about your bargains while the money is beginning to come in. Soon there won't be so much, and then where will you be? I'm asking you.

I think maybe a Community Dollar Day for Clanton would cause things to pick up some nowadays. But everytime I get an idea like that in my head, there is another question that arises, "Will the merchants here co-operate?" Now, that makes me angry. Other places have these Community Dollar Days, so why can't Clanton? Well, here goes, I hate to say it—The merchants and business men here are too afraid the other fellow will gain something more than somebody else will. They think too much about themselves, individually, rather than about the welfare of the town, and don't stop to think that if Clanton doesn't prosper, they don't either. I really hated, to say that, but lots of people will agree with me, I think. Things are going to drag here, if the merchants and business men don't start something to live things up, and a Community Dollar Day will, no doubt do that thing. Just think it over, it's merely a suggestion, and a darn good one at that, if you pardon my saying so.

Here's another suggestion, coming from experience. I sent a fellow, rather prominent too, away from Clanton the other day, thinking that Clanton is one of the finest most welcome little towns he had ever been in, and he's been in lots of them too. I wonder how many men here would make it a point to do that whenever they are given a chance?

Today, I have a very friendly feeling for one of our citizens, a feeling different from what I have always had. I appreciate the kind reference made Sunday at church by the pastor, to this column, and to some thoughts, because those thoughts of mine were truly shot at Clanton, and too, Dr. Ezell has my favorable comment on the sermon of last Sunday night, especially when he said we were "just rocking along" and doing nothing about the many sins being committed in our town. But it is a sure thing that those who are "just rocking along" and thinking they are getting by with their sins, are altogether mistaken, because it just can't be done. But that has been illustrated quite often, and those whose conscience is not quite clear, should heed these illustrations, and remember, "A word to the wise is sufficient."

There seems to be something wrong with some of the homes in Clanton, maybe. I think a very good idea would be for the husband and wife to get together on some things, ignoring the mothers-in-law, if they tried to interfere, and see if they couldn't change things a little, so as to cause a little more harmony at home, then maybe there would not be so much gossip going around about the homes between people.

NEWS FROM THE NATIONAL DEMOCRATIC COMMITTEE

Numbers of Idle Persons from Seven to Nine Millions Census Director Indicates

Washington, September 17.—From 7,000,000 to 9,000,000 persons may be idle on any given day, according to figures given by Dr. W. M. Stewart, Director of the Census, in a radio address on unemployment, although he said, the actual figures have not been completed. Dr. Stewart is quoted as saying:

"It is probable that about 49,000,000 people told the census enumerators last April that they had some gainful occupation. . . It is probably true that under present normal (sic) industrial and business conditions there are not more than forty or forty-two million people in this country who on a given day are at work full time in a gainful occupation. In the forty-nine million were included some not actually engaged in their occupation at the time the census was taken; also the part-time workers, the sick and those on vacation."

The unemployment figures originally given out were confined exclusively to those "who were able and willing to work and were looking for a job." At the Census Bureau these are listed as Class A, and the number given as 2,508,151. So far, no figures have been made public for Class B, which includes "Persons having jobs but on lay-off without pay, excluding those sick or voluntarily idle," although they are also included in the 49,000,000 "who told the census enumerators last April that they had some gainful occupation."

Drouth Relief

Washington, Sept. 17.—To what extent the Federal government has aided drouth relief is a subject of comment by the Baltimore Sun, the Lynchburg News and Richmond Times Dispatch.

Referring to the proposed use of the Red Cross $5,000,000 for relief of farmers in absolute destitution, the Sun says: "The Red Cross is not a part of the national government. Its funds are provided by the people in voluntary contributions. . . . And, save courtesy, the national government has nothing to do with the expenditure of these funds."

Concerning the relief to be given through the federal aid road fund, the Sun declares:

"That is not a gift from the national government. It is not even an extra appropriation. It is simply the regular federal appropriation for roads to be spent in cooperation with the state governments."

On the reduction of railroad rates on animal feeds, the Sun comments:

"That is not a favor from the President. The railroads will folt the cost."

To all of which the Lynchburg News agrees and adds on its own behalf: "Finally there is the matter of credit to drouth stricken farmers. That is perhaps the most effective aid that can be given. What the farmers need is to be placed in a position to help themselves. In the end that is going to come down to a matter of a helpful attitude on the part of local bankers."

"Thus it can be seen that behind all the ballyhoo most of the suggestions of how the drouth stricken areas can be aided do not involve any real measure of Federal aid. . . . In large part, the suggestion is, that the states which have been hard hit help themselves."

The Richmond Times Dispatch declares that the first constructive suggestion for drouth relief advanced by the state relief bodies is the suggestion of former Governor Byrd, Chairman for Virginia, to Secretary Hyde that 75,000,000 bushels of wheat now held by the Federal Farm Board be utilized as feed for live stock at reasonable prices and on liberal credit terms. Concerning this, the Lynchburg News says: "Not one of the things talked about prior to the Byrd scheme involved any expenditure of Federal funds not already contemplated."

Tilson Bucking A Brick Wall

Washington, Sept. 17.—Representative Tilson of Connecticut, Republican leader of the House, recently addressed the Republican workers at New Haven concerning campaign issues. An analysis of Mr. Tilson's address by the New York Times reveals the kind of logic he employed:

Mr. Tilson said: "The existing industrial depression will have little or no effect on the coming election."

The Times says: "Apparently, he (Mr. Tilson) believes that the voters will be thinking of higher things than work or bread and butter."

"This new Connecticut phase of philosophy seems to assume that good times redound to the praise and benefit of the Republican Party, while bad times can not hurt its chances."

"The voters who in 1928 were urged to support the Party which gave them prosperity are now expected to support the Party which lost it."

"If prosperity, having done its perfect political work in 1928, is supposed to retire to public life until 1932, it would be only fair to infer that many Republicans will retire to private life along with it."

"Party leaders at Washington, even some close to the administration, are admitting prospective losses to the extent of 40 seats in the House."

"As his (Mr. Tilson's) case stands today it seems to expose him to such a remark as Richard Brinsley Sheridan made about a prominent public man of his day: 'I have known many men to knock their heads against the wall; but I never before heard of a man collecting bricks and building a wall for the express purpose of knocking out his brains against it.'"

"Whine Of The Administration Lifeguards"

Washington, Sept. 17.—From the editorial columns of the Louisville Times the following frank and pungent paragraphs are taken:

"The pitiful outcry of Mr. Hoover's advocates, that criticism of the President is malignant and destructive, will not impress the reasonable observer."

"Their whine utterly lacks courage and disposition to face the music which customarily is the accompaniment of political events."

"Nothing worse could happen to the President than for an electorate which admires thews and sinews and many courage to reach the conviction that the whiners constitute the Administration Lifeguards; that the White House sanctions a performance in the President's behalf which has all the lack of dignity which characterizes the whimpering cry of a schoolboy who is too timid to fight: 'Quit peekin' on me.'"

American Wheat Growers Market Sacrificed for Grocery Schedules

Washington, Aug. 28.—The following letter from a prominent banker, who is familiar with agricultural conditions, was published in the Amarillo (Texas) News-Globe:

"Perhaps the most significant point brought to our attention during the discussion of the Farm Problem here yesterday by the party of Mr. Legge and Mr. Hyde was the chart used by Mr. Olson to show the increase in the tariff levied against the importation of wheat by the countries of Europe. The chart disclosed that a very light duty was charged prior to 1930, but that at the present time the import duty charged for the admission of American wheat is almost prohibitive. This action has of course been taken by those countries as a reprisal against us for the tariff bill we have recently enacted, and which it is estimated will increase the cost of living of the American people about one billion dollars. The schedules were raised in our recent tariff revision on approximately one thousand articles, chief among which, of course, are those produced by the industrial section of our population. As a consideration for the additional price paid for these commodities, we have, according to Mr. Olson's chart, sacrificed a large part of the market of the American wheat grower for his product."

"The whole situation appears to warrant the conclusion that the American people will be called upon to pay $500,000,000 to do what both Mr. Hyde and Mr. Legge admit can not be done to send men of their reputation as emissaries to the wheat growers of the country to advise them, in substance, that in order to make our tariff on industrial commodities effective we have sacrificed our European wheat market and that the American wheat grower will be obliged to pay for it by a flat reduction of ten per cent in his wheat acreage."

TAKING THE GUESS OUT OF BUSINESS

By JOHN G. LONSDALE
President American Bankers Association

BANKERS and business men err in not adopting more universally the tactics of the scientist. When the scientist wishes to fathom the mysteries of the universe or resolve things into their component parts he calls to his assistance the magnifying power of the microscope. There before him, like an open book, lie the secrets of nature which unaided eyes cannot observe.

The uncanny power of the microscope's all-seeing eye has revealed countless secrets for the material and intellectual progress of humanity. It has enabled us to study the processes of growing cells in plant and animal life, trace the cause of disease and successfully combat the ill of mankind; it has aided the engineer in his search for stronger and more serviceable materials, giving us taller, lighter and more sanitary structures, and better highways; it has disclosed the defects in steel rails and brought us an era of safer railway travel; it has added to the food supply of the nation; in fact, it has affected favorably nearly every activity of the human race, whether it apply to production, distribution or consumption, in time of peace or in time of war.

In the business and banking world, economic research and analysis serve as the microscope through which we are enabled to see basic factors more clearly and thus determine the causes of success and failure. Only recently have we begun to realize the full value of research and analysis and apply them in such a way as to eliminate the guesswork that was characteristic of industry a few years ago. "Eliminate the guess and reach success," might well be a motto for all of us.

Banking Conducting Continual Research

The American Bankers Association is daily submitting every phase and every department of banking to searching scrutiny and study, says John G. Lonsdale, president of this the world's greatest financial association. The findings of these investigations are made available to the 20,000 members of the organization for their guidance.

"It is a fine tribute to the spirit of cooperation among bankers that it is able to carry on this work," he says. "Bankers from one end of the country to the other are constantly giving freely and unselfishly of their skill and experience so that the association may produce the truly great results that are being accomplished."

Statistical information on national and state banks, savings institutions, trust companies and trust departments, clearing house groups and general banking is prepared after exhaustive inquiry and distributed for the use of all bankers. The organization's investigations have resulted in the passage of beneficial legislation, revision of banking practices and innumerable changes for a stronger and more efficient banking structure. It has set up an educational system through its affiliated American Institute of Banking, where 45,000 ambitious young bank men and women are now availing themselves of the opportunity to advance in the banking field.

"It has been well said that the American Bankers Association, exclusive of the Federal Reserve System, has been the greatest single nationwide source of stability and improved conditions for banking in the United States," Mr. Lonsdale says.

Banking Grows More Complicated

DENVER, Colo.—The increase in the technicalities of the banking business in the past dozen years was shown by a speaker before the American Institute of Banking which held its annual convention here recently when he pointed out that in 1918, when the institute last met in this city, it gave only three courses, while today it gives 10, with more subjects in preparation. At the earlier date, he said, the curriculum of the institute consisted of elementary banking, commercial and banking law, and money and banking. Whereas today it consists of banking fundamentals, commercial law, negotiable instruments, standard economics, standard banking, credits, investments, trust functions, analyzing financial statements, and public speaking, while the two new subjects of bank operation and organization, and bank management are to be added.

The New Pace of Business Change Business evolution used to move slowly—it measured off its gradual changes almost invisibly, like the hour hand on the clock. But today its tempo is that of the second hand. The movement of evolution that is quickening business with rapid changes is alarmingly visible and makes it difficult to keep up with them.—A. S. Hecht.

In her divorce suit, Mrs. Charles Thomas of Detroit said to the Judge, "I want my husband restrained from taking a bath in my bathroom because I know he does it just to bother me."

During the extremely hot weather in Baltimore, Walter P. Montague moved his office to a city bathing beach where his employees went about their work in swimming suits and in comfort.

Samuel Friedman, a Chicago bill-poster, was locked up as a lunatic when he conceived the idea of putting advertising posters upside down in order to attract attention.

After inheriting $1,000,000 from an uncle, Samuel Cocks, a painter of Oceanside, L. I., said he would not give up his trade but would acquire a motor and chauffeur to drive him to and from work.

IN DEFENSE OF CHILDREN

By Jeanne Gray

All through these summer months we have been reading admonitions by food experts and home economists on what and what not to eat. For the most part, this advice is intended for grown-ups, while the question of the children's diet has been figuratively waved away with the oft-repeated suggestion that they drink "plenty of milk and eat spinach."

Most children abhor spinach and a great many of them stubbornly refuse to drink milk. In fact, many a mother has to administer punishment to a child who fairly shivers when she thrusts a glass of milk upon it, and the benefits of milk when forced upon a slobbering, chastised child are certainly questionable.

The sensible mother, when in dilemma, consults a pediatric physician. She finds he frequently recommends that she try hot cereal beverages which have been flavored with plenty of milk and sweetened to taste. For a hot weather drink he suggests milk shakes which have been made with sugar, milk and a cereal beverage in the proper proportions.

Among the poorer class it has been found that a great number of children are, unfortunately, tea and coffee addicts. These children have arms and legs like mere stems; they are usually a bundle of excitement; they don't like milk and they do like bread and coffee.

Anything which tends to overstimulate the nervous system should be discouraged, whether it is in the nature of food or play. Children who are aroused to anger, who are impetuous and impatient have either been brought up among persons who show these same reactions, or perhaps they were fed tea and coffee when they should have been drinking milk or a cereal beverage made with milk.

Children are normally sufficiently active and energetic without the extra stimulation produced by tea and coffee. Besides, coffee and tea have no food value and the educated mother today realizes that their use minimizes the use of nutritious beverages.

A few States have started campaigns against the practice of giving tea and coffee to children, pediatric physicians claiming that milk and hot liquids are most desirable, and further recommending that children drink water between meals when they are thirsty, for it keeps their kidneys active and helps them throw off body impurities thru the pores in perspiration.

Midget Clyde Hendershot of Beck's Grove, Ind., smiled and said that he was 28 years old when an officer told him that children weren't permitted to operate automobiles.

Plant tulips bulbs as early as they can be secured. Best results follow from planting made before the end of September, but up to December they may be put in with promise of satisfaction.

Drinking vessels in the poultry house should be kept on a platform about 12 to 18 inches from the floor. This arrangement keeps the containers and the water more sanitary. Make the platform of slats, and large enough so that the birds can stand on it comfortably while drinking.

Alligators are not discriminating in their choice of food as most reptiles, and they swallow strange things, says the U. S. Biological Survey. Biologists have examined some alligator stomachs that resemble a "small boy's pocket." Turtles, birds, small animals, pebbles, dead wood, bulrush roots, and empty shotgun shells have been found in the stomachs of these reptiles.

You can make a good home made damp-proofing paint by dissolving paraffin in gasoline or kerosene warmed to 80 degrees. Use a 10 to 20 per cent solution (3-4 to 1-2 pounds of paraffin per gallon) and apply several coats.

The lighter solution is better for compact natural stone and the heavier for brick or concrete. Be careful to do work of this kind only where there is good ventilation, natural or electric light, and no fire.

Farmers Pooled 8,500 Bales The Past Week

During the last week the Alabama Farm Bureau Cotton Association has received 8,500 bales of cotton on which it has advanced farmers pooling it $45.00 per bale or a total of $382,500.00. This makes a total of approximately 17,000 bales farmers have pooled within the past month, according to Allen Northington, general manager, who said yesterday afternoon that the association has advanced about $765,000 on the cotton despite the fact that it would have brought very little more than this amount if sold on the spot market.

The deliveries to the association this year is more than twice the deliveries to the same date last year. Through September 13 last year the association had received 9,000 bales as compared with 17,000 on the same date this year. During the past week the deliveries have averaged over 1,000 bales per day despite the fact that rainy weather delayed picking and ginning in much of the state during the latter part of the week. On Thursday 1921 bales were received by the association. This is the largest daily delivery of the season up to this date.

"Farmers pooling their cotton are doing so with the hopes that the price will advance and they can sell their cotton for more later," Mr. Northington said. He assures farmers that the cotton association will do everything in its power to assist farmers in getting better prices.

CENTURY OF RAILROADS

The year 1930 marks the 100th anniversary of the first regularly operated steam railroad in the United States, the Baltimore and Ohio, which in 1830 was only 13 miles long. Other construction under way brought the total for the country to 23 miles in that year.

By 1840 the mileage had increased to 2,818 and extensions were made with increasing rapidity during the succeeding years. When the railroad was 50 years old, in 1880, the United States had 93,671 miles.

The ten years between 1880 and 1890 was the greatest period of railroad building. American roads built during that decade totalled 41,983 miles. The greatest railroad mileage was reached in 1916, when 254,251 miles were in operation.

Since 1916 owing to the abandonment of a number of unprofitable short lines, the mileage has been actually reduced, being now about 249,300 miles. At the present, new construction is almost entirely limited to adding a second, third or even fourth track to existing lines.

One of the most striking developments in railroading has been the increase in the size of the locomotives. From a weight of less than five tons 100 years ago, they have been built larger and larger until today many passenger locomotives weigh 150 tons or more, while those used in freight transportation range as high as 220 tons or more. A few of special type exceed 400 tons.

With the growing competition of the automobile, truck and airplane, it is impossible to predict what the next century of railroading may bring forth. It is safe to predict, however, that for heavy freight transportation the railroad will hold first place for many years to come.

CHOOSING A TRADE

Selecting a trade or occupation today is a rather more serious matter than in years gone by, owing to the rapid changes in methods of manufacture and in the products demanded by the public. In hardly any line of manufacture does one know how soon some new method or process may render all his present skill useless as a means of gaining a livelihood. Highly skilled hand craftsmen in many lines are continually being replaced by machinery, while products which were formerly in great demand are rapidly becoming obsolete, such as the buggy and other horse-drawn vehicles.

Speaking from the manufacturer's standpoint, E. W. McCullough of the United States Chamber of Commerce recently said: "I could enumerate a hundred lines of business this evolution has wiped out, and lines without number have changed in materials, construction and form."

These changes have affected the individual workmen, as well as their employers, and never were changes made so rapidly as at present. Those who enter the mechanical trades today must be prepared to adapt themselves to new conditions as they arise.

FUEL OIL FOR POWER

Will the home owner eventually drive his automobile and his airplane with the same oil fuel he now uses to heat his home? Developments in the oil burning motor are coming fast. An airplane equipped with a Diesel motor using fuel oil recently flew from Detroit to New York with six passengers at a fuel cost of only $4.45, approximately $20 less than the average cost for such a flight with high test gasoline. An oil burning engine in a motor bus is said to have reduced the cost of operation from ten cents to two cents a mile.

These developments have focused attention on the possibilities of a compression-ignition oil burning motor for passenger automobiles and engineers are at work on it with every prospect of success.

As the demand for fuel oil increases, its production and sale assume a greater importance. Coal dealers are adding it to their stocks. The filling station may be the next to fall in line. In that case it is not difficult to imagine the housewife telephoning such an order as this to the corner filling station: "A hundred and ten gallons of fuel oil, please—a hundred for the furnace and ten for the car."

Fruit Soups Are Refreshing

By JOSEPH BOGGIA, Chef
The Plaza Hotel, New York City

Chef Boggia

IN the eyes of thousands who have been brought up in the sound old traditions of American cooking, a dinner without soup is no dinner at all. Summer and winter, whether the mercury hovers in the eighties or the twenties, they demand their soup and refuse to be satisfied without it. They are rapidly learning to demand a cold soup in summer and a hot soup in winter, but one and all demand their soup.

Jellied bouillons and consommés are, of course, the familiar types of cold soups, but there is no reason why we should be restricted to these. In Norway, Germany and many other countries of Europe, cold fruit soups are widely enjoyed for their delicacy of flavor and refreshing qualities. There seems to be no good reason why we in this country should not seize the opportunity to add variety to this part of our menu.

Iced Fruit Soup—Mix and let stand in the refrigerator overnight one cup orange juice, three-fourths cup grapefruit juice, five cloves and a two-inch strip of cinnamon. Bring to the boiling point one cup of the syrup drained from a can of raspberries. Add a teaspoon of cornstarch mixed with cold water. Cook three minutes and add one-fourth cup sugar and one-eighth teaspoon salt. Add fruit juices, strain and place in refrigerator until very cold. Serve with shaved ice.

Grape Soup—Add one-half cup sugar to a half-pint of water and simmer until clear. Add one pint of juice pressed from ripe grapes, and the juice of one-half lemon. Add a half tablespoon of softened tapioca and again simmer until clear. Keep in refrigerator until very cold and serve with shaved ice.

Raspberry Soup—Let stand for one hour, one quart of mashed raspberries thoroughly mixed with one-half pound of sugar. Press through sieve. Heat slowly, stirring all the time. When boiling point is reached add one tablespoon cornstarch dissolved in cold water. When clear and smooth, add one-fourth cup non-alcoholic sherry. Remove and keep in refrigerator until well chilled. Serve with shaved ice.

Two glass cups, one for wet and one for dry ingredients, are a great convenience in cake making.

Oysters are in season again. They are extremely valuable as a source of various minerals needed by the body. Like fresh fish, they supply iodine.

Here's a good September menu: corn soup, made from fresh corn cut from the cob; omelet with Spanish sauce, which contains tomatoes and peppers; rice; new yellow or white turnips; apple sauce from some of the windfalls, with cup cake.

Choose designs for children's clothes with ironing in mind, whether you make the clothes yourself or buy them ready-made. Fussy ruffles and queer-shaped parts take up the time of the laundress, and never look as well after washing and ironing as trim, smooth garments that are well-cut and made of interesting materials.

Probably fewer sandwiches would be discarded from children's lunch boxes if the bread were always of the best quality. Children will eat more bread if different kinds are served. Sometimes so simple a change as baking the bread in a new form—a twist or roll instead of a loaf, or cutting the sandwiches into fancy shapes with a cookie cutter, will increase interest in it. The change of flavor given by added raisins, dried currants, dates, or nut meats is another inducement to like the lunch bread.

The "hot pack" is not a new method of canning. It is the method of filling the jars to get good results. By the hot pack is meant cooking the fruit or vegetable to be canned for a short time, and then packing it boiling hot into jars or cans, which are then processed the required length of time. The hot pack shortens the time needed for the food in the center of the can to reach the required temperature for sterilization, insures a better product, and does away with the step that used to be known as "exhausting."

German Sea Eagle Finds Himself New Person Here

Count Lucknor, German naval captain who scoured the seven oceans during the world war and sunk $25,000,000 worth of allied ship tonnage, has found a complete new biography of himself in America, he told a correspondent for The American Magazine upon his arrival.

"I had to come to America to learn my real story," smiled the Count. From the people he meets he has gathered facts about his sea raid that he did not know before, filling in blank spots in his own story.

"For example," said Lucknor, "Major or Rolph of San Francisco told me that I had sunk a couple of his ships and well-nigh ruined him. Then he invited me to become an honorary citizen of San Francisco, and you can bet I was pleased."

The ship in which Count Lucknor conducted his spectacular raids was an American-owned, British built clipper captured by a U-boat. Her captain was Johnny Scott, six feet four and seventy years old. He died just before Lucknor arrived here. The Count had found in Skipper Scott's cabin no papers. . . only an American flag. He carried the flag with him on all his raids and brought it with him to this country just too late.

Mrs. Gertrude Calloway and Mrs. Julius Burnett were recent visitors to Atlanta, Ga., and were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Crow, while there.

Clanton Grammar School News Notes

Much interest is being shown in the music and art classes. Miss Morris is well trained for teaching the music while Miss Grantham is equally well trained for teaching the art.

Each teacher now has a class in physical education and the children are enjoying it as well as getting the greatly needed training in exercises. Each class is well planned and carefully directed.

Only about 40 per cent of the incidental fees have been paid and it is very necessary that all parents pay these fees without further delay.

Any child who expects to enter the first grade must enroll this week, because they are not allowed to enroll after the first two weeks of school. If a child is six years of age on or before October 1st, he must enroll now or not at all. There will be no mid-term enrollment in January.

Some of the teachers have received lovely flowers for their rooms and wish to take this means of expressing their appreciation.

CAR TRIES RUNAWAY TUESDAY NIGHT AT WHITE'S GARAGE

While the operators of the White's Garage were at home Tuesday night about ten o'clock, the Chrysler roadster belonging to Jack Hayes eased off the parking place where it was kept in the garage and backing up, crashed, through the front door of the garage and stopped just on the outside.

Just what caused the car to give such a sudden dash for liberty, and how it managed to avoid striking other parts in the garage before crashing through the door, appears to be a mystery to the garage operators. The car was only slightly damaged, while the garage door received the biggest damage, as the result of the midnight caper.

DOES your skin seem oily soon after it has been cleansed? Do you have trouble keeping your nose from becoming shiny? Does your skin disclose greasy patches when you use a necessary foundation cream or lotion under your powder?

A good complexion is the birth-right of every woman. Regular, thorough cleansing of the skin is necessary, of course; but with a background of good health, plus a few minutes daily use of the right beauty care, there is no reason why you should suffer from any skin fault.

It has been my experience as adviser to thousands of women that a simple, effective treatment can be found for virtually every complexion fault. In most cases just some little thing that has been overlooked has been responsible for bringing about the most astonishing changes. The first step in achieving a lovely complexion is to have a competent adviser analyze your skin problems and find just the proper treatment for your individual needs.

If you are troubled with blackheads—if your skin feels drawn after it has been washed with soap and water—if your lips dry out and chap easily—all these are indications that you are neglecting your skin or are following the wrong type of treatment. Won't you simply write me and state the trouble you are having? I know I can help you find the right road to the beauty that every woman craves.

"A friend of mine, seeing how bad I felt, advised me to take Cardui, which I did. By the time I had taken two bottles, I felt stronger and better than I had in a long time."

Forestral Prizes For High Schools

Prizes for the best essays written by pupils of Alabama High Schools, or of schools of similar grade, will be offered by the State Commission of Forestry, pursuant to action taken at its semiannual meeting held September 2. The work of the Commission of Forestry is carried on in close cooperation with the educational and agricultural authorities, and it is felt that the proposed essay contest will be of exceptional value in coordinating many important features of the state's economic and cultural development.

The prizes will be of worth while character and designed to be of substantial benefit to the winners. The first prize has been tentatively fixed as a year's scholarship at one of the collegiate institutions of the state, the amount of the scholarship being sufficient to cover all costs and expenses necessary to a full school year's work. A trip to California and return has been suggested for second prize. For the third prize a round trip to Washington, D. C., is being considered. It is possible that there may be a fourth and a fifth prize, but this has not yet been fully determined.

The funds for the prizes will be derived mainly from contributions by private timber growers, the greater portion having already been offered the Commission, and partly from the Federal Government. It thus will not be necessary to use any of the State funds for this purpose.

High school principals will be communicated with by the Commission of Forestry and given full details as to the contest and the awarding of the prizes. It is expected that the latter will be awarded during the winter or spring so that the first prize will be available for the academic year 1931-2 and the other prizes for the summer season of 1931.

City Gets Farmers' Money, Says Jardine

"If a farmer becomes prosperous, what happens to the money he makes?" This question is answered by former Secretary of Agriculture W. M. Jardine, in the current issue of The Country Home.

The city gets it in the end, he says. On the face of things it appears that everything else would take care of itself if the farmer is given more money and allowed to spend it as he wants. Jardine continues. "But experience proves that this is not necessarily true. Many families, relatively prosperous, move to town to get the benefits of the city's standard of life. The prosperous farmer either sells his farm or places a tenant in charge. In the latter case, the farm must support two families. The new man has his fortune to make out of the soil. The owner spends his income on things that deprive his farm community not only of his money but his intelligent direction.

"Even though the owner retains direction of his farm, his income is spent in town. If he sells it outright, his wealth goes into stocks and bonds, which enrich the cities. If he stays on the farm, his surplus wealth goes into securities that upbuild the cities. The perennial loss of surplus wealth from the country is one of the outstanding causes of a barren country life. It is slow to accumulate, but surplus wealth can do a great deal if it is wisely utilized. It should be the means of making the farm home a desirable place to live," Jardine declares.

Mrs. Atkinson Hostess To As-You-Like-It Club.

Mrs. J. B. Atkinson delightfully entertained the As-You-Like-It Club at her home last Thursday afternoon. The living and dining rooms were tastefully decorated in early fall flowers. The afternoon was pleasantly spent in playing Bed Domino, after which the hostess served a tempting ice course in rainbow colors to the following: Mesdames E. A. Childs, W. W. Fox, L. C. Warr, Barney Roberts, V. J. Gragg, G. C. Walker, Joe Higgins, M. P. Smith, A. S. Prince, G. Burdette, and Mrs. Roy Roper. Mrs. L. C. Warr will be hostess for the next meeting.

Put Profit In Homes, Jardine Urges Farmers

"Split your year's profit in half and put it right back into the farm," W. M. Jardine, former Secretary of Agriculture, urges farmers in an article in The Country Home.

"Put it all back there," Jardine continues, "if you can, by so doing, create a better atmosphere, a place for children to grow up in beauty and freshness, among things of culture and where men and women work with pride. Does the city man who buys and furnishes an expensive house expect it to pay interest? Do we expect our libraries and places of art to pay interest? Can we figure compound interest on happiness, culture, civilization?"

Farm homes, predicts Jardine, soon will have all the appliances that city dwellers have. Manufacturers, he says, are now bending their efforts toward adapting the newest inventions to even remote country places and by installing them, farmers will lose their envy of city life.

Rogers Calls Sir Thomas Best Loved Man in World

For sheer personality, Sir Thomas Lipton, gallant Irishman who has repeatedly raced America for the yachting championship, is the best loved personality in the world, Will Rogers declares in The American Magazine.

Lindbergh, the Prince of Wales or President Hoover, says Rogers, are unable to awaken the enthusiasm that is felt over the "best loser on earth," when he appears in America. "I have introduced him many, many times, and he has always gotten a bigger hand—not a hand, but an ovation—than any other celebrity that I have seen appearing in public."

"Everybody brightens up and smiles when they see Sir Thomas," continues Will, "is home in any country, makes his speeches and tells jokes to all nationalities. He is bringing a boat over to race us again this year. Now where could you find so many people pulling for the 'Foreigner'? But there will be more Americans pulling for the Old Rascal to grab that vase than pulled for Lindy to outwit the reporters at his wedding."

EXTRACTS FROM THE COMPULSORY ATTENDANCE LAW —ARTICLE XVI.

Age: Every child between the ages of seven and sixteen years shall be required to attend school for the entire length the school is in session. (Sec. 301.)

Parent's Obligations: a. The parent or guardian who fails to have child enroll or attend school regularly during the school term or fails to compel child to properly conduct himself as a pupil, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction shall be fined not more than $100.00 and may also be sentenced to 90 days hard labor. (Sec. 305.)

b. The parent or guardian shall, as soon as practical, explain the cause of any absence of the child which was without permission of the teacher, and a failure to furnish such explanation shall be evidence of such child being a truant. (Sec. 308.)

c. When no valid reason for non-enrollment or non-attendance is given, the attendance officer shall give notice for attendance within three days. If child is not enrolled or not attending school within three days, criminal prosecution shall be brought against parent, guardian, or other person having control of the child. (Sec. 309.)

Child's Exemptions: a. A child whose physical or mental condition is such as to prevent or render inadvisable attendance at school or application to study, provided the county superintendent of education has issued a certificate of exemption. Before issuing such certificate of exemption, the county superintendent of education shall require a certificate from the child's practicing physician. (Sec. 304.)

b. A child 14 years of age or over who has completed the 8th Grade. (Sec. 304.)

b. A child who has to walk over 2 1/2 miles to school or to the nearest public transportation. (Sec. 304.)

d. If child holds a Child Labor Law permit to work. (Sec. 304.)

Parent's Exemptions: a. If principal teacher in charge gives child permission to be absent. (Sec. 306.)

b. If parent or guardian is unable to buy books or clothes for child, and that such parent or guardian reported, prior to the opening of the school, such dependent condition to the Juvenile Court and offered to turn such dependent child over to the State Child Welfare Department. (Sec. 306.)

c. That parent or guardian has made a bona fide effort to control such child and is unable to do so and files a written statement on court files to that effect. (Sec. 306.)

d. That there exists a good cause or valid excuse for such absence. (Sec. 306.)

e. That parent has made a bona fide diligent effort to secure regular attendance and that absence was without his knowledge, connivance or consent. (Sec. 306.)

f. If child becomes a habitual truant, or because of irregular attendance or misconduct has become a menace to the best interests of the school, the parent or guardian should file a written statement in court saying that he is unable to control said child. The Court then decides upon the case. (Sec. 307.)

To The Teachers: 1. The principal teacher of each public school shall keep an attendance register showing the enrollment of the school and every absence of each enrolled child from school for a half day or more during each day of the school year. (Sec. 301.)

2. At the end of the fifth day from the opening of school, the principal teacher shall report the names and addresses of all children between the ages of 7 and 16 years who have enrolled in such schools, thereafter, through the compulsory attendance period, the principal teacher of each school

shall report at least weekly the names and addresses of all children between the ages of 7 and 16 who enrolled in said school, or who having enrolled were absent without being excused, or whose absence was not satisfactorily explained by the parent or guardian of said child. (Sec. 295.)

THORSBY, ALA.

County Agent's Dept.

By C. E. STAPP, County Agent

Year after year Alabama farmers increase their corn and cotton production by growing winter legumes, hairy vetch and Austrian winter peas. By increasing their production they also increase their income. County Agent Stapp has gathered evidence of this fact from various points over Alabama. He assures farmers that just as great profit can be expected by planting legumes in this county.

$1808 Invested Returned $11,103.09

Eutaw, Ala., $1808 were invested in winter legumes in Green County in 1928 and a net profit of $11,103.09 realized in 1929 from this investment, according to H. C. Appleton, County Agent. J. C. Poole of Greene County sowed 75 acres of land in vetch and Austrian winter peas after well fertilized cotton. It cost him $245 to sow the winter legumes.

When the legumes were large enough to furnish grazing he brought 25 head of poor cattle, grazed them two weeks and sold them at a profit of $150. Many more cattle could have been grazed on the field easily.

The legumes were turned and the land planted in cotton. An average of 900 pounds of seed cotton per acre was made. This is $25 pounds more than the county average.

Mr. Poole made $2334.37 on his cotton and $150 on the cattle making a total of $2484.37 on 75 acres.

14 Bales On 14 Acres

Opelika, Ala., R. G. Sugg, County Agent of Lee County reports that Mr. Isham Dorsey in 1928 turned under Austrian Winter Peas on March 20, and three weeks later planted cotton. On 14 acres he picked 14 bales, averaging 500 pounds each.

Vetch Worked Miracles On Calhoun Farm

Annisson, Ala., In the fall of 1925, F. C. Dulaney, Calhoun County, did not believe vetch would work on his poor farm. But the county agent, S. R. Doughty, prevailed with him to sow 5 acres. Corn, in 1926 following the vetch, made 32 1-2 bushels per acre while corn not following winter legumes made only 10 1-2 bushels per acre.

In the fall of 1926 he sowed 12 acres; in 1927, 21 acres, and in 1928, 25 acres.

The corn yield of the farm has been brought from 10 bushels per acre to 35 bushels and the cotton yield from one-third bale per acre to four-fifths bale. In 1928 he made 19 1-2 bales on 15 acres, with an average of only 25 pounds of nitrate of soda applied at planting time.

Mr. Dulaney turned 25 acres of vetch and Austrian winter peas in the spring of 1929, but owing to hoppers and dry weather he averaged only 6 bales per acre. Nevertheless he sowed 30 acres of winter legumes in the fall of 1929 and every farmer in his community sowed from 5 to 40 acres each.

Mr. Dulaney in commenting on the value of vetch on his farm said: "Vetch has actually worked miracles on my old poor red soil. All I had ever gotten was barely a living. Vetch enabled me to build a home, install lights and water, and give my children a chance."

Legumes Add $100,000 to County Income

Linden, Ala., In five years winter legumes have added more than $100,000 to the income of Marengo County farmers by increasing their yields, according to R. D. Winch, county agent.

Corn following vetch in Marengo County in 1927 averaged 34 bushels per acre, while where fertilized with 200 pounds of nitrate of soda averaged 27 bushels, and corn receiving no fertilizer made only 14 bushels per acre.

NO SUBSTITUTE FOR LOCAL REPUTATION

We used to hear about the approaching disappearance of the independent retailer. The time was close at hand, so we were told, when he must become a hired man working for the chain stores. But these prophets failed to realize that the independent retailer may have something for which no organization, however large and well managed, can ever substitute, and that is the personal confidence of his customers based upon long acquaintance.

Farsighted manufacturers seeking nation-wide distribution have begun to realize that local reputation is a precious asset. Instead of trying to replace the local merchant, some of them are studying how to help him.

One of the largest confectionery manufacturers in the world, the Frank G. Shattuck Company, which controls the Schrafft products, has recently attracted widespread attention through a Selected Retailer Plan, the operation of which is being watched with keen interest by manufacturers and distributors alike. Under this plan the Shattuck Company selects, with the co-operation of its jobbers, one or more of the most wide-awake dealers in a community and teaches them how to display, to advertise and to sell confectionery as nearly as possible after the methods successfully developed in the Schrafft's stores in New York and Boston.

"We believe," says Mr. Shattuck, "that more can be accomplished by co-operating with the local merchant than by substituting for him. There is no substitute for the responsibility which independence develops, for the intimate knowledge of local conditions which the local man is apt to have, and for the confidence and contacts which the local man is apt to have, and for the confidence and contacts which the self-respecting and respected merchant can gain in his own community. There are thousands of merchants in the United States whose quality ideals, we believe, are as great as our own, whose stores are properly located and whose experience enables them to take advantage of a plan to reproduce as far as possible in their own places of business the factors and conditions that have made Schrafft's stores successful wherever they were established."

The lesson is perfectly plain: There is a place for both the chain store and the independent. Each has advantages and both will prosper in proportion as they adopt each other's good points while making the most of their own.

winter legumes demonstrations in Henry County shows that farmers in 1927 realized a net profit of $19.10 per acre, from the use of these crops," reports C. S. Keller. At the same time Mr. Keller reports a big increase of winter legumes planted in the county.

In 1927, some 10,000 lbs. were planted. In 1928 this was increased to over 32,000 lbs., while in 1929 86,000 lbs. of Austrian winter peas were planted.

Marion, Ala., After causing his cows to increase their production by one-third between January 6, 1929, and early spring, A. S. Eiland turned under 10 acres of Austrian winter peas and produced 5,767 pounds of lint cotton on this land. He fertilized the cotton with 300 pounds of superphosphate and 50 pounds of muriate of potash.

Corn Yield Increased 18,900 Bushels

Russellville, Ala., J. D. Wood, county agent, says that reports from 150 farmers of Franklin County covering 900 acres show an average increase of 21 bushels of corn per acre. This is a total increase of 18,900 bushels of corn for the county from the use of winter legumes and means that the cover crop has been worth at least $18,900.00 to the county.

yield after vetch was more than four times that not following vetch. C. H. Hunt of New Hope has increased his vetch planting from five acres to forty acres, reports J. B. Mitchell, county agent, Madison County.

County Agent Mitchell, also reports that O. C. Hammond of Deposit had five acres in vetch and Austrian winter peas in 1928, and made ten tons of feed following this. In 1929 he doubled his vetch average. "Such results as these caused the farmers of the county to plant 11,000 pounds of winter legumes in 1929 compared with 5,500 in 1928," Mr. Mitchell said.

ALABAMA FARMERS BUY PEAS FROM OREGON FARMERS

Alabama farmers are this year purchasing their Austrian winter peas for planting this fall direct from farmers of Oregon, announced Edward A. O'Neal, president of the Alabama Farm Bureau Federation, yesterday.

Farmers of the state made their contacts with the farmers of Oregon, who are growing the winter peas, through their farm organization, the Alabama Farm Bureau Federation. The project was started four years ago when H. A. Schott, agronomist of the State College, Corvallis, Oregon, and of the United States Department of Agriculture, visited Alabama and got President O'Neal and Professor L. N. Dunbar, director of extension service, Auburn, interested in farmers of Alabama contracting with the Oregon farmers to grow their Austrian winter peas. Before that time most of the peas had been coming from foreign countries.

This year when the peas were being shipped to Alabama C. L. Hollingsworth, county agent of Clarke County, Alabama, went to Oregon and assisted with shipping the peas. Upon his return he assured farmers of the state that they are getting the best winter peas on the market when they buy thru their farm organization.

"Buying the peas direct from the producers is an example of how the farm bureau is attempting to aid farmers in buying all their materials, which go into production, direct from the producers and in this way help the farmers solve their financial problems," said Mr. O'Neal.

It is hoped that the coming of cooler weather may alleviate the Stein Song epidemic.

A contemporary refers to Mr. Coolidge's daily newspaper article as Cal's Calories.

ALL ABOARD FOR BETTER TIMES

A statement from William Green, President of the American Federation of Labor, says that there has been no increase in unemployment during the past few weeks, and he believes that this fact probably "foreshadows the Fall increase in industrial activity." Roger Babson, who predicted the paralysis of the stock market last fall, has just issued his first bull statement in which he advises careful buying of sound stocks (whatever those articles may be). Frequent official statements from high sources have been coming along gradually from Washington, and many of the country's leading manufacturers and financial chiefs have prophesied good times ahead. The fact that Green and Babson have joined their voices to the "cheerful chorus" furnishes encouragement to the multitudes who have been patiently waiting, as a character in Dickens' novel said, "for something to turn up."

The country could probably stand it if none of the Senatorial candidates got elected.

AN ESKIMO IN GOTHAM

Abie Broomfield is the Anglicized name of a 45-year-old Eskimo dog driver, who has been enjoying his first visit to civilization as illustrated by New York and its environs. And he is getting many an eyeful.

Staring at the Woolworth building, Abie pronounced it a "big, big shack, bigger than Cape Mugford." Most of the sights he witnessed were observed in silence, but he was evidently thinking a lot, as he had never been in a settlement of more than 50 people before.

Being much like other sons of Adam, Abie was greatly interested in the New York girls. Asked how he liked them, he turned on a flow of Eskimo oratory lasting a full half minute, which was interpreted to mean, "very fine." But he thought they were too thin, and suggested that they didn't get enough to eat. Asked how he would like to have one of them for a wife, he said: "You bet. Take her one year first and give her plenty fried pork. I fatten her up so she's dam fat, and good wife for best dog driver this side of North Pole."

Working Together

For high quality and low prices

Between its customers and A&P there is a partnership which works to the advantage of both sides. The customers represent demand on the largest scale. A&P represents supply on an equally large scale.

Customers know they can get at A&P stores whatever they want, the best at lowest prices. A&P, knowing its customers' wants from their daily orders, is never in doubt. It stocks no goods that stay on its shelves unsold. Thereby it avoids losses that would have to be made good in prices.

And because A&P is thus the definitely instructed buying agent of millions of people, it is able to use their united buying power wherever their best interest dictates.

Each customer gets the benefit of every saving, of every wise selection of goods. A&P, relying on many small profits,* gains from increasing numbers of customers. They are attracted by the best service at the lowest cost. If there is a surer way of keeping the cost of food down and the quality of food up, no one has told about it.

SPEAKING OF GOOD FARMERS

In 1925 Mr. Willie Hamilton bought a farm west of Clanton. Mr. Hamilton told County Agent Stapp that when he bought this place in 1925, one-half bale of cotton and twenty bushels of corn with reasonably heavy application of fertilizer was a good yield.

Mr. Hamilton started planting vetch and Austrian winter peas on the land he expected to plant in corn the following year. By rotating his crops of corn and cotton he has grown vetch or peas on about all of that part of his farm that he cultivates himself.

Mr. Hamilton advises us that in the last three years he has made on an average of ten bales of cotton on twelve acres, and that his average yield of corn has been about forty-five bushels. This average yield of corn has been made by following vetch, and no fertilizer has been applied to the corn. Mr. Hamilton plants from ten to twelve acres to vetch each year. Part of his vetch got so rank this year until he found it necessary to cut it for hay. He informed us that he saved seven tons of pretty vetch hay from approximately seven acres. In feed value this is about $25.00 per acre made this year by the time most farmers planted. On the land this vetch was grown on, Mr. Hamilton has better corn than most farmers of the county. Incidentally, Mr. Hamilton says he sold $122.00 worth of pigs from one sow this year.

IN MEMORY OF OUR CLASSMATE, CATO ROEBUCK

We shall meet, but we shall miss him. You will find a vacant chair.

In our Senior Class this year. For God has called our darling.

Classmate to be with Him up there. No one knows just how we miss him.

No one knows how much he meant to us.

Those pranks, that hearty laugh, those sweet smiles.

I know we'll never forget them. Though years may come and year may go.

And these old Seniors are scattered far and near.

Some will already be with Cato up there.

While others may still be lingering here.

He's gone, but it seems true only in our dreams.

GRAND JURY MAKES REPORT HERE SEPT. 8

Return 19 True Bills; Also Recommend Change in Almshouse

The Grand Jury for Chilton County for the July Term of Circuit Court, which was in session here the first part of last week with Will A. Guldridge, of Verbena as foreman issued its report last Thursday, September 18, to the Hon. George F. Smoot, of Wetumpka, who delivered a most forceful and comprehensive charge to the members of the Grand Jury, who were aided in their investigations by Hon. Winston Huddleston, Solicitor of the 19th Judicial Circuit of Alabama.

Thirty-six cases were considered by the Grand Jury and nineteen true bills returned, with eighty-nine witnesses examined. The report stated that on investigation of the county jail, it was found to be insecure and unsafe for prisoners. The report also stated that the almshouse of the county was not being conducted in a satisfactory way, and urged that the situation there be remedied at once.

Among the true bills returned by the Grand Jury was one against David Hall Arant, employee of the county, and son-in-law of County Commissioner A. P. Vinson. This bill renewed comments concerning the employing of relatives of those already connected with the county affairs in an official capacity, and will probably invoke quite a bit of criticism. The true bill returned against Arant, as is on record, is as follows:

"David Hall Arant, whose name is to the Grand Jury, otherwise unknown, did falsely pretend to the Commissioners Court of Chilton County, Alabama, that Clanton Motors, a partnership composed of D. L. Shackelford and Mrs. D. L. Shackelford, had done certain work in repairing a truck belonging to Chilton County, said work consisting of labor on the rear end of said truck and that the charges for said labor was $6.50 and by means of such false pretense obtained from Chilton County the sum of $6.50 against the peace and dignity of the State of Alabama."

William Helton, of near Jemison was indicted by the Grand Jury on a charge of manslaughter in the first degree, his bond having been fixed at $750.

Following is the report made by the Grand Jury to Hon. George F. Smoot, Judge of the Circuit Court of Chilton County:

State of Alabama, Chilton County. Circuit Court of said County and State. To Hon. Geo. F. Smoot, as Judge of the Circuit Court of Chilton County, Alabama:

We, the Grand Jury, empaneled for the July Term of the Circuit Court of said county immediately began our investigations of the cases for disposition on the Grand Jury Docket after we had received your Honor's comprehensive and instructive charge, and investigated the docketed cases and other cases we found to be of such nature as to require our attention as Grand Jurors.

During our investigation we have examined 89 witnesses, and have returned 19 true bills.

We have examined the books, records and papers of the county officials and find that they are all neatly kept and from the information we have the Grand Jury feels that all are being kept in accord with the law.

BAPTISTS HOLD REVIVAL MEET IN CLANTON

Visiting Pastor Faces Large Congregation Opening
Last Night

A large and attentive congregation faced the Rev. Mr. F. J. Fleming, of Ashland, at the Baptist church here last night when he opened the first of a series of sermons at the revival meeting which will be in progress at the First Baptist Church here for several days and nights.

Dr. S. J. Ezell, pastor of the church has been making impressive preparations in the way of songs and sermons at the regular services at the church for the revival meeting, and a most successful meeting is anticipated.

Services will be held each morning, beginning this morning, at ten o'clock, and each evening beginning at seven o'clock, it was announced by Dr. Ezell. The song services are scheduled to open at seven o'clock each evening, with P. S. Rowland as director.

Most interest and enthusiasm is being shown in this revival and a most cordial invitation is extended to everyone to attend the services, either in the mornings or evenings. The weather indicates that it will be somewhat cooler and the auditorium is expected to be filled to capacity with those eager to hear the masterful sermons delivered by Rev. Fleming.

JUDGE HUGH LOCKE SPOKE HERE AT THE COURTHOUSE

Judge Hugh A. Locke, Jeffersonian Candidate for Governor spoke to a well filled court house Wednesday night of last week. He laid much stress upon the action of the democratic executive committee, in barring him from participating in the primary as a candidate, pointing out that he could not conscientiously vote for Governor Alfred E. Smith, in 1928, who the Judge said bolted the Houston Platform, together with his chosen chairman Raskob, when he repudiated the Prohibition Plank and said that they would rid the country of the damnable affliction of the prohibition law. He also stated that Judge B. M. Miller, may not be wet, but that the program to abolish the state law enforcement department was one of the first moves to strike down the prohibition laws of the land and country by the liquor interests, and that Judge Miller, fit into the wet crowd's ideas, and was almost universally receiving the wet support in the state. He was introduced by Dr. V. J. Gragg, of Clanton and Major Smith, of Montgomery, Alabama.

STANTON MAN CARRIED TO INSANE ASYLUM TUESDAY

Clarence Cook, an elderly resident of near Stanton, Alabama, was carried to the insane asylum at Tuscaloosa last Tuesday, according to information Cook is reported to have been in a very insane condition, having been placed in the jail at Selma for keeping, and after causing so much trouble there, papers were said to have been granted for his removal to the asylum.

Soon Time For Auto Owners To Buy Tags

Automobile owners in the county will soon be making their way to the courthouse here to purchase their automobile tags for 1931, as October 1st is the day the purchases are to begin.

The tags have already been received at the office of the Judge of Probate here, and it was stated that November 14 will be the last day of grace, without an additional charge of $1.50 and fifteen per cent of the amount of the license attached to the license. There will be something like 2,700 or 3,000 tags purchased in this county by automobile owners, it was stated.

Power Company Decreases Assessed Tax Valuation

Announcement was made this week to the effect that the assessed tax valuation of the Alabama Power Company's property in Chilton County had been reduced by the State Tax Commission. The reduction as outlined will reach approximately one million dollars, it was stated.

This reduction in tax valuation is supposed to take effect this fall, and in so doing will lower the school and district tax fund here of something like $6,000 according to information.

Miss Mabel Howard Back From Chicago

Returning from a three-week vacation, which consisted of a motor trip to Chicago, Ill., and many other points of interest, in Wisconsin, Miss Mabel Howard is again back in her beauty shop here, having arrived in town last Monday morning.

Miss Howard was accompanied on the trip by her mother, Mrs. Fred Howard, her sister, Miss Lucile Howard, and Leonard Weldon, of Thorsby, and tells a very interesting story of her trip. The party covered something like three thousand miles in their car and stated they had no tire trouble at all, and with the exception of some trouble with the water pump on the car, the trip would have been without a car trouble. Miss Howard reported excellent roads, and stated that the crops in the states visited were not in such good condition.

While in Chicago, Miss Howard attended several beauty shop operators' conventions, where several prominent cosmeticians were in attendance, and received lots of new ideas of the latest in hair dressing, as well as picking up many other ideas of style that will be of interest to the ladies, and Miss Howard will be glad to tell anyone visiting her shop here of these many interesting things.

WATCHMAN WOUNDED IN GUN FIGHT AT CALERA

Calera, Ala., Sept. 23.—Arthur Seale, night watchman, was seriously wounded and three men were in the county jail at Columbiana as a result of a pistol fight Tuesday. Seale was taken to a Birmingham hospital.

Seale was shot after he arrested Gilbert Myers, 21, Kokomo, Ind., on a charge of attempting to break into a meat market here. After placing Myers in jail, Seale said, he was accosted by two men who fired on him after threatening him for "getting their buddy."

Seale said the first shot broke his right arm and he grappled with one of his assailants and was wounded by five other bullets.

Police Chief Miller led a posse of citizens which took up the chase of the pair and overtook them 18 miles south of Calera, where they surrendered.

They gave their names as Morris Hughes, Long Beach, Calif., and Ludrick Adams, 24, Kokomo, Ind. The men had Seale's pistol in their possession when arrested, Miller said.

The three men were transferred to county jail at Columbiana, by Sheriff Woolley.

Dr. C. O. Lawrence, who attended Seale, said his injuries are dangerous. All but the first shot took effect in his legs and hips, Dr. Lawrence said.

Mrs. Mollie F. Moss left Wednesday for her home in Fitzpatrick, Alabama, after spending some time here with Mrs. Mamie C. Smith. She expects to return soon to Clanton.

N. S. JOHNSON NAMED AS NEW DEM. CHAIRMAN

J. B. Atkinson Resigns Last Saturday As Chairman of Local Committee

At the called meeting of the Chilton County Democratic Executive Committee last Saturday afternoon, at which a large number of Democrats of the county were present, Hon. J. B. Atkinson, who has served as chairman of the Executive Committee for the past four years handed in his resignation.

Following this action, Mr. Atkinson was insisted upon to continue holding the office, but declined and when his name was called again for nomination, he declined, stating that he appreciated very much the honor bestowed upon him by the Democrats of the county.

Dr. Napoleon S. Johnson, widely known citizen of this section of the state, was elected to serve as chairman of the Democratic Executive Committee of the county following Atkinson's resignation, and when asked for a statement by a representative of the News had the following to say:

"I wish to thank the Democrats of Chilton County for the confidence reposed in me when they elected me as Chairman of their Executive Committee. It is a distinguished honor and I appreciate it as such. I am not an experienced politician and will need much council. Fortunately for me I fall heir to a committee composed of men tried and true, and I bespeak from them, as from every voter of Chilton County, who is interested in good government and economy and administration of funds derived from taxes, cooperation and loyalty, that we may reach the goal we have set. We Chilton County folks take our politics straight and a bitter pill that has been for some of us, but never so bitter as this strange new drink composed of blustering words, constipation of ideas and a diarrhoea of language, as Tom Tom puts out, and also the broken promises and oppression known as Hoover Prosperity. I cordially invite every voter of Chilton County, regardless of past party affiliations to come over with us and vote the Democratic Ticket."

Mr. Atkinson, in resigning as Chairman of the Committee gave out the following statement:

"In the General election in 1926, the Democrats of Chilton County polled about 1300 votes and soon thereafter I was elected Chairman of the Executive Committee. In 1928, the Democratic vote in the county was approximately 2200, showing a very substantial gain for the party and had the solid Democratic vote, in the county, in 1928, have worked together the county Democratic ticket would in my opinion have been elected by a substantial majority. Realizing the political situation as it now exists I believe that it is to the best interest of the party and myself, that I resign. I do this with one purpose in view and that is for the best interest of the Democratic Party of Chilton County. The entire membership of the committee has worked in harmony with me during my term as chairman and I want to now thank each and everyone of them and every Democrat who worked to bring the party into power in the county, for their loyal support and to urge them to give the incoming Chairman their full support and the party their loyalty. I have, since the primary of 1928, desired to say something about Democrats voting in the 1928 Republican primary. I urged the Democrats to stay out of the Republican primary (continued to back page)

A Plea

A plea has been issued from the office of the County Welfare Worker of this county for old school books and winter clothing for children whose parents are unable to cope with the coming winter months to keep necessary clothing for their children who are attending school.

Books are needed that can be used in school now. Many families are not able to furnish their children with books, and anyone who has school books or clothing they wish to donate to this cause are requested to bring them to the office of Mrs. C. E. Stapp, county welfare worker, in the building, upstairs, of M. A. Gore, or call her on the phone, No. 41.

Another Year

This week's issue of the News marks the beginning of another year for this newspaper, which is embarking on its ninth year this week.

With the expiration of the year 1930 the News will have been under its present management for four years, during which time it has endeavored to serve the people of the county to the best of its ability. During these years under the present management the News has been able to increase its circulation to such an extent that it now reaches far into the county, covering practically the entire trade territory which is something like tripling its circulation of four years ago.

It is the aim of the News to continue to serve the people of Chilton County in the future in a way that will be helpful to the county.

Quality Lumber means Quality Buildings

A building is no better than the quality of the lumber from which it is built. The cheaper grades of lumber do not possess the quality we would recommend for buildings that endure. Years of experience in the lumber business has proven to us that the better grade is the cheapest in the end.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?

That newspaper advertising is the gateway to better business. It is the demand it creates that makes advertising pay.

Successful business concerns realize the value of advertising and use it persistently.

Many business concerns operate their business at a loss during certain times of the year. It would not be necessary for them to do so if they advertised all the while instead of once in a while.

The most forcible way to secure business is through the printed page. It is the greatest trade builder in existence.

Advertising holds old trade, attracts new trade, and increases sales.

Now is the time for every business to advertise and increase their business.

Every day persistent advertisers are learning to serve the public better, and by so doing they are increasing profits.

No business can get by unless it advertises the best in service and quality. With some concerns business is still Amid his honors, has he forgotten the days and years of just plain work—the years that often seemed dreary but that have brought him now to the top of the ladder? I think not. I think he counts them all worth while, and I rather believe he is thankful for even the set-backs which gave him strength to drive forward again.

I add my tribute to the many being accorded to Mr. Dealey, and to the other Mr. Dealeys whose lives have been given to the up-building of their communities, and who have earned the honored title of "leading citizen," all over the face of this earth.

It will stay that way with them until they wake it up by advertising.

The other night the citizens of Dallas, Texas, held an unusual dinner. It was an occasion of honor for one of their number, who had just passed his seventieth birthday. Letters and telegrams of congratulation and tribute were received from Ex-President and Chief Justice Taft, a governor, several senators, a large body of the Texas Congressmen in Washington, presidents of railroads, heads of great industries all over America, educators, men high in church circles, and so on down to just plain folks.

Perhaps most of those who read this have never heard of George B. Dealey. But mighty few of us have grown up without hearing of The Dallas Morning News. Mr. Dealey's life has been spent in the up-building of this great daily, and now at seventy he pauses to look back from his chair at the desk where he is still the active head of his paper and a power for good among his fellowmen.
